Birmingham, Ala.—By a blow with a six-pound piece of iron, which crushed the back of his skull like aneggshell, C. C. Wright, night watchman at the Southern railroad freight yards at Woodlawn, was murdered Friday night by unknown assailants. The body, found lying under a car on a side switch of the Alabama Great Southern road, was horribly mutilated. The wheels, which were still embedded in the chest, had almost severed the head from the trunk. Indications were that life had been extinct for several hours.

Went to Sleep on the Track.

Gadsden, Ala.—The manner in which K. H. Smith, who was killed at Blue Pond by a train on the Chattanooga Southern railroad has come to light. Smith and a companion had gone fishing the night before, but had returned home. Smith was seen lying on the track apparently asleep by the engineer, who made every effort to stop his train, but failed to do so before running over the man. He was employed as a telegraph operator and was the son of James Smith, of Menloe, Ga.

Has Both Legs Cut Off.

Gadsden, Ala.—David Staton, a negro employed in the Louisville and Nashville yards in Attalla, had both legs cut off by being run over by a car which was being pushed by a switch engine. The man was swinging from one of the cars and leaned too far out and was struck by a telegraph pole, which knocked him to the ground with his legs across the track. The engine was immediately stopped, but not in time to keep from running over him.

Pratt City Goes to Gadsden.

Gadsden, Ala.—Pratt City will play a series of games with the local ball team, beginning next Wednesday, instead of Trion, Ga. The latter team could not come on the dates originally set for them.

Youths in Jail.

Tuscumbia, Ala.—Sheriff A. F. McCloskey arrested three youths of this city on warrants sworn out by W. R. Sevier, charging them with burglarizing his safe several weeks ago, from which $248 was taken. Frank Rousseau, aged 16; Hays Montana, 13, and Charlie Montana, 18, are now in jail awaiting a trial next Monday. Gene Montana, aged 15, is in Memphis, and the sheriff has notified the chief of police of that city to arrest and hold him until the sheriff can reach there. Gene is also said to be implicated.

Sometimes it seems as if the less a woman knows about anything the more she likes to talk about it.

Senator Pettus' Wife Dies in Selma.

Selma.—Mrs. Mary Chapman Pettus, wife of Senator E. W. Pettus, died at her home in this city Sunday morning at 4:30 o'clock after an illness of several weeks. The end was not unexpected and came with Senator Pettus and her children and grandchildren at her bedside.

Mrs. Pettus was Miss Mary Chapman, daughter of Judge Samuel Chapman, and she was born in Huntsville, November 24, 1823. She was married to Senator Pettus on June 27, 1844, and is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Lucy T. Roberts, of Birmingham, and Mrs. Mary N. Lacy, of Selma. The grandchildren are E. Pettus Roberts, John Roberts and Misses Bessie, Mary, Geva, Alice and Agnes Roberts, of Birmingham; E. P. Lacy, Theo Lacy and Sam Lacy, of Selma; E. W. Pettus, Jr., and Miss Alice Pettus, of Selma, the latter being children of the late Francis Pettus, besides thesexz there are numerous nephews and nieces and six grandchildren.

The funeral took place from the family residence at 4 o'clock Monday afternoon.

Verdict Premeditated Suicide.

Birmingham, Ala.—Premeditated suicide is the verdict of Coroner Paris after making an investgation of the death of Jerry Fountain a native of Georgia, who swallowed almost the entire contents of a bottle of morphine in the presence of his wife, from whom he was divorced, and washed the drug down with a pint of beer. Not satisfied with the first teaspoonful, he took a second dose, which he swallowed with milk. Placing the arm of his wife about his neck, he said he was ready to die. From that time until the end came he was unconscious and never uttered another word. Coming here with his parents about twenty years ago from Macon, Ga., Mr. Fountain taught school for a number of years, and at one time was county superintendent of education. He was chief deputy sheriff at Bessemer up to November, 1905, when he resigned to become state president of the Fraternal Order of Eagles.

Failure to effect a reconciliation with his wife is thought to have caused the deed.

Dies from Injuries.

Birmingham.—E. H. Satterfield, a tinner living at 1121 N. Twentieth street, died at St. Vincent hospital from injuries received by being crushed between freight cars. A. C. Cross, recently from Atlanta, who was in company with Mr. Satterfield, was slightly injured about the head. Sunday morning about 9 o'clock it seems the two men stepped in between freight cars standing on the Morris avenue track of the Louisville and Nashville between Eighteenth and Nineteenth streets when an engine unseen by them bumped against the cars. Mr. Satterfield was mashed in the hips.

New Steamboat Line.

Gadsden, Ala.—A new steamboat line has been placed in operation between Decatur and Guntersville. The steamer White Oak, a neat and trim craft, leaves the former city every Friday afternoon and arrives at Guntersville the next morning at 10 o'clock. The line has sprung into instant favor, and is being liberally patronized by the farmers and residents of the rich Tennessee river alley.

Peach Growers Alarmed.

Gadsden.—The peach growers are considerably alarmed on account of the continued wet weather of the past ten days. Some of the unripe fruit has already commenced to rot, and if the rains continue much longer it is feared that the loss will be serious. Too much rain at this season also injures the flavor of the fruit.

Tax Increases.

Gadsden.—Tax Collector A. H. Barnes has made a full settlement of the state taxes of Etowah county for the year 1905 with the officials at Montgomery. The totals for the past year show a considerable increase over the previous year, and it is believed that the present year will show the greatest increase in the history of the county.

Foreigner Hit on the Head.

Gadsden, Ala.—A foreign laborer employed at the Southern Steel Company's plant in this city was struck on the head by one of his companions with a heavy piece of iron. The blow was a hard one and fractured the skull and caused a serious, if not fatal, wound. It is not known how the trouble came up, as the injured man cannot speak a word of English, and it is impossible to even understand his name, but he is thought to be a Pole and one of a colony recently imported by this company.

With 29,300 physicians, Germany has one for every 1,700 inhabitants, has one for every 1,70 inhabitants.

PROGRAM

Chilton County Sunday School Convention, Clanton, July 21-22, 1906.

Saturday, July 21.

10 a. m.—Devotional exercises, N. J. Calloway.

Address of welcome, J. Osmond Middleton.

Response, T. U. Crumpton.

10: 30—"Obstacles Encountered by Superintendents and How They Can Be Overcome," Judge L. H. Reynolds.

10:45—"The Sunday School and the Great Commission," Rev. S. U. Turnipseed.

11:10—"The Necessity for Accurate and Full Reports from Secretaries," Judson Strock.

11:20—One Year's Work—The county president's address; the secretary's report; the county executive committee's report; the district president's report; the enrollment of delegates; the appointment of committees.

Afternoon Session.

2 p. m.—Devotional exercises, Capt. W. A. Middleton.

2:15—"Primary Work," Miss Minnie Kennedy.

2:40—General discussion, "Primary Work."

2:50—"What Is a Sunday School?" Rev. J. A. Jenkins.

Evening Session.

7:30—Devotional exercises, P. C. Dennis.

8:00—"Our State Work," Frank Stillwell.

8:30—"Boys' Reform School," Mrs R. D. Johnston.

Sunday Morning.

9:00—Devotional exercises, Rev. S. M. Adams.

9:30—"Thesis on Temperance," Dr. A. Horn.

10:00—"The Prevailing Cause Which Keeps Adults Away from the Sunday School," Frank Stillwell.

10:30—Pledges for State and county work.

11:00—"The Ideal Sunday School Teacher," Rev. J. A. Jenkins.

11:30—"Teaching," Miss Minnie Kennedy.

Afternoon Session.

2:00—Devotional exercises, Rev. S. U. Turnipseed.

2:15—Selection next place of meeting.

2:30—"The Home Department," Mrs. J. A. Hester.

3:00—"Things Worth While," W. E. Holloway.

The sessions of the convention will be held in the Methodist Church in Clanton. It is earnestly desired that every Sunday School in the county be represented by delegates, whether or not the school is a member of the County Association. The basis of representation is all ministers, all district officers, the superintendent and three delegates from each school.

Please send list of delegates and parties to be entertained to the chairman of the committee on entertainment not later than July 18.

Committee on Eentertainment—Hugh M. Simpson, chairman; Grady Reynolds, Miss Nell Mullins, Frank Thomas, Miss Bessie McDaniel; Miss Minnie Latham.

A. HORN, Chairman.
MISS MARY CARR GIBSON,
tf Secretary.

THE NEW YORK WORLD

Thrice-a-Week Edition.

Read Wherever the English Language is Spoken.

The Thrice-a-Week World hopes to be in 1906 a better paper than it has ever been before, and it has made its arrangements accordingly. Its news service covers the entire globe, and it reports everything fully, promptly and accurately. It is the only paper, not a daily, which is as good as a daily, and which will keep you as completely informed of what is happenng throughout the world.

The Thrice-a-Week World is fair in its political reports. You can get the truth from its columns, whether you are Republican or Democrat, and that is what you want.

A special feature of the Thrice-a Week World has always been its serial fiction. It publishes novels by the best authors in the world, novels which in book form sell for $1 50 each, and its high standard in this respect will be maintained in the future as in the past.

The THRICE-A-WEEK WORLD'S regular subscription price is only $1.00 per year, and this pays for 156 papers. We offer this unequaled newspaper and THE UNION together for one year for $1.50.

The regular subscription price of the two papers is $2.00. tf

LAND FOR SALE.

Eighty acres land in Beat 10, close to Cooper's. For sale cheap. Call on or address L. H. GENTRY,
Mt. Creek, Ala.
tf R. F. D. No. 1.

Professional Cards.

William M. Adams,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW
OFFICE; Room 1, Court House.
"Practices in all Courts
Long time loans negotiated on improved Farm Lands.
CLANTON, - - - ALA.

J. EARLE GOWAN,
DENTIST.
Office in Kicker Building
CLANTON, ALABAMA.

A. C. Smith,
Attorney-at-Law
Practice in All Courts
Office 6th St. opp. Court House
CLANTON, :-: ALABAMA.

N. S. JOHNSON, M. D.
PHYSICIAN & SURGEON
Office at Residence
CLANTON, ALABAMA.

L. V. STABLER, M. D
Physician & Surgeon
Office Over Horn's Drug Store
Thorsby, Alabama

J. Osmond Middleton,
Attorney-at-Law
Practice in all Courts.
Office 6th St. Court House
CLANTON, -:- ALABAMA

DR. E. G. HYMAN
DENTIST
Office in Tipton Mullins' Building
CLANTON

H. C. Junkerman
DENTIST
OFFICE: Franzen Building
Thorsby, Alabama.

G. H. GERALD,
NOTARY PUBLIC
Office at Thorsby Inn.
Deeds, Mortgages, Affidavits and other papers carefully made out.

I. S. Gerald, Notary Public
AT THORSBY SAVINGS BANK.

FREE
to Readers of
THE UNION

To everyone who sends us $1.00 for a year's subscription to THE UNION, new subscriber or renewal, we will give as a premium absolutely FREE,

A Year's Subscription
to
The Southern Ruralist

We have examined the Southern Ruralist and consider it to be the best and most practical farm paper published in the South, and it just suits this locality. Drop by The Union Office when you are in town and see a copy of the Ruralist. It will mean dollars in your pocket to read this paper with The Union for a year. tf.

60 YEARS' EXPERIENCE
PATENTS
TRADE MARKS
DESIGNS
COPYRIGHTS &c.
Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. HANDBOOK on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents.
Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the Scientific American.
A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.
MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York
Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

Italy's peace footing consists of 260,454 officers and men; her war strength is estimated at 44,223 officers and 1,963,424 men.

REMARKS FROM THE PUP.

She's taught me that I mustn't bark
At little noises after dark.
But just refrain from any fuss
Until I'm sure they're dangerous.
This would be easier, I've felt,
If noises could be seen or smelt.

She's very wise, I have no doubt,
And plans ahead what she's about.
Yet after eating, every day
She throws her nicest bones away.
If she were really less obtuse
She'd bury them for future use.

But that which makes me doubt the most
Those higher powers that humans boast,
Is not so much a fault like that,
Nor yet her fondess for the cat,
But on our pleasant country strolls
Her dull indifference to holes!

O if I once had time to spend
To reach a hole's extremest end,
I'd grab it fast, without a doubt,
And promptly pull it inside out;
Then drag it home with all my power
To chew on it in a leisure hour.

Of all the mistresses there are,
Mine is the loviest by far.—
Fain would I wag myself apart
If I could thus reveal my heart.
But on some things, I must conclude.
Mine is the saner attitude.
—Burges Johnson, in Harper's Magazine.

THE DEMON OF ∴ ∴ THE BED HORROR

(Adapted From the Portuguese.)

By WILLIAM S. EIRGE.

I sat down in the desert with Abderah, the Arab, and the Arab told his tale. An illusive mirage had lured the twain, Abderah and myself, into the very Valley of the Dry Bones, an arid and sandy gorge south of Arabia Deserta. Our throats were dry as vellum with thirst, and Abderah's voice had a husky rattle

"It is exactly a year to-day," began Adberah, the prince of his clan, "since Zara, the Beautiful, gave up the ghost, and at every anniversary thereof, I must tell my story or die. I could give no reason," he went on huskily, "no reason, on the oath of a Saracen, why I married the low-born Zara of the desert, of whose parentage I knew nothing, except that she was called Zara, the Beautiful—no reason in the world why I, the prince Abderah, only son of the king, and heir to the kingly domain, should have married the low-born Zara, of whom and whose antecedents nobody knew anything whatsoever, except that she was gifted with strange gifts and had dropped in upon the domain suddenly, as if from another world.

"I did not love her; of that fact I am certain. I did not even respect her; of that fact I am equally certain. I hated her with an unaccountable perversify of hatred; of this third fact I am just as certain as of the two preceding. Three very good reasons why I should not have done what I did. Nevertheless, I did it—did indeed wed her after the manner of my fathers, installing her, devil as she was, in the ancestral palace of an ancient and honorable race of Saracenic kings.

"True she was beautiful—strangely beautiful, in her way; but that was no reason why I should have married an adventuress. It was exactly because she was beautiful in her way that I hated her. There is a beauty of heaven: it pursues, haunts, breaks like a weird music in all prescient dreams. I have conjured up its phantoms with hashheesh, in opium drowse, through slumbrous nights of calm, opening my eyes again upon earth with a wild wish to die. There is a beauty of earth it is like unto fagots under the caldron of passion, like red wine in the cup, like fitful fever in the blood. It is a glittering and sudden tiger, that fever, that springs upon its prey vehemently, feeding thereupon in the jungle of home. There is a beauty of hell, and it stings while it fascinates—stings scorpion like, fascinating, serpent like, with sinuous, loathsome, devilish fascination. This last was the beauty of Zara, the Beautiful; and it stung me, fascinated me—fascinated me though I hated, stung me though I loathed.

"Now I think of it, I fancy the creature's fascination was in that devilish eye of hers. It was—I recollect it distinctly—it was small, scintillant, and shot sudden, furtive rays at its victim; lurid, without white, and all a single round, devilish pupil; bulbously prominent with livid lids, and almost lashless edges; oddly beautiful, strangely fascinating, intoxicating as the eye of an Houri.

"This was Zara's eye, and it fascinated me with an unnatural fascination. I saw it day and night; and the fever of its sting I mistook for passion, though pasison it was not. It was the ain rab that I pursued to an evil destiny.

"There is an imp of the perverse," Abderah went on, his words rattling like dry leaves in his parched throat, "an imp of the perverse, which has more hand in human affairs than humanity in general would be willing to acknowledge.

"It is the logical basis of all tragedy, the prompter of all suicide, the demon of all that is terribly inexplicable, as well as of all that is absurdly comical in human action. In its play it is comedy, and you laugh; in its serious moods it is tragedy, often so original, so motiveless, so apparently put of mere whim, that you stare haggard with horror, yet fascinated as you stare. It is either a Puck or a Mephistopheles latent in in every human heart—either dancing baboon or omnivorous hyena, as may suit the whim of the hour.

"Have you ever been tempted to swallow poison simply because you knew it would kill you, and for no other reason? Have you never been taken with an almost uncontrollable impulse to hurl yourself from a precipice simply because you must not, and because you must not, therefore, you would? Have you never done this or that, done it suddenly, motivelessly, involuntarialy, simply because you did not wish and would not have done it for all the world? Have you never pursued a pet project, toiled ceaselessly day and night unto an end, only to spurn it with your foot at the instant of realizatoin, simply because so to spurn it was to spite yourself utterly? Have you never ascended to dizzy heights and kicked away the ladder at the last moment just because it might prevent all human succor, because, in a word, for that very reason you did it? If you have not you are more or less than human. And this imp of the perverse the presence of some people seems to enrage even to demoniac desperation, while, in the presence of others, it slumbers, at least comparatively.

"In this lies the secret of my espousal of Zara of the desert. I did not love her; did not even respect her; wedded her, nevertheless, not because I willed to wed her involuntarily, but because, with an uncontrollable perversity, I was impelled to wed her against my will. A paradox, to be sure—but then man is a paradox, the one wing of which is human, and the other devil. So paradox let it be. She stung the imp of the perverse, the latent devil in me, into horrible activity; and, for the time, quite against my will, I did, with seeming deliberation, exactly what I would not have done for my soul.

"There was one other peculiarity about Zara, the Beautiful, which has had some hand in convincing me of a certain non-humanity on her part. There is about every person, humanly considered, a certain atmospheric something, a personal aroma, so to speak, which is inseparable from the notion of presence; and if your sense of odor is acute, you will be able to detect a certain individuality of something akin to perfume, a sort of odorless perfume of violets to the oppressive, oozy atmosphere of the upas, are just as indicative of personal idiosyncrasies as appearance and manner may be supposed to be.

"About the creature that I wedded there was nothing of this kind. Cool, aromaless, bloodlessly cadaverous, the secret of her fascination was located in something akin to metallic glitter of presence—akin to the writhing, glittering crawl of the adder, akin to the hacking inhumanity of the laughter of a parrot.

"A mask of a woman, merely," Abderah continued, the words rattling from his throat with accurately-pointed and terrible vehemence; "a mask of a woman, merely a devilish domino. I wedded the low-born Zara of the desert, who came and went at whim, as one having no home upon the earth; and for a brief year only she queened it, the gayest of the gay, the merriest of the merry, the profanest of the profane. It was a ghastly day, the day that I led her to the palace of my race, a day ominous of pestilence and of sudden and epidemic death. Lurid and terrible wonders were in the heavens, like those which have lured our feet into the Valley of the Dry Bones; and stifling and hyena-like siroccos pursued the travellers of the desert with devilish instinct, throttling them while caravans together. Even from the day thereof died my people in ghastly scores, and on the forehead of every one that died was branded a livid blot in the exact shape of a human heart. My father died suddenly, and first of all, the red horror of the brand from temple temple to temple. Zara had no grief at the old man's death. The epidemic, swift-footed and terrible, went abroad among my people. Zara was oppressively merry; and still as faster they died, merrier and merrier yet became the laughter of the queen, until I was likely at last to reign over a vast necropolis. She absented herself for days from the palace, and night unto night I was startled from horrible dreams of the red brand, to find her absent from the camera diletto. And still the epidemic death baffled all skill, and the red brand crawled suddenly upon all foreheads, and was the horror of all hearts.

"I too, became weak, but Zara only laughed mockingly, and absented herself the more from the palace, waxing the more horribly merry the ghastlier I became.

"I dreamed fitfully, and in the horror of my dream the loathsome brand of the red heart, the hideous seal of the epidemic death, was upon my forehead. I awoke, and the queen was not at my side. I heard a gnashing of horrible teeth. I sprang up. I struck a light. I was too quick for her. Great God. She was feeding upon a human heart.

"It has been a year to a day, and still the same lurid and ghastly wonders were in the heavens.

"'Thou has outwitted me, for I would have queened over it a metropolis of the dead. Thou hast, indeed, triumphed in life,' said Zara, dynig, 'but in death would I have gnawed thy heart.'

"So, she died, and the demon of the red horror and the imp of the epidemic death slumbered, and the livid blot in the heavens went out with the closing of her devilish eye."
—Waverley Magazine.

SUBSTITUTE FOR STOCK.

In many recipes stock is called for and stock does not always happen to be on hand. In this case an excellent substitute may be quickly prepared by dissolving a dessert spoonful of fluid beef extract in a half pint boiling water and seasoning it with salt, pepper, two or three drops onion juice and a few drops extract celery, or a little celery salt.

TO PRESERVE RHUBARB.

Canned rhubarb is a convenience for winter and is the easiest of all culinary products to preserve. Wash it, cut it in short pieces, fill a jar with it and stand it under a cold water faucet, where the water will run in and out of it slowly for half an hour. Then screw on the cover. The acid of the stalk is its own preservative.

SALMON COOKED IN COURT BOUILLON.

Lay a two pound slice fresh, firm salmon in the grate of a fish kettle, pour over enough cold water to cover, add two tablespoonfuls vinegar, three sprigs parsely, a sliced onion, three whole cloves, six whole peppers and two tablespoonfuls salt. Let the fish come quickly to the boiling point, then push back where it will simmer gently until the flesh flakes. Serve with a garnish of mushrooms and a rich sauce.

WHITE WEDDING CAKE.

This is a new departure in wedding cakes, but it is said to be eminently delicate and satisfactory. Beat to a soft cream one cup butter and two cups sugar, using an earthen bowl and silver or wooden spoon. Add to the mixture one cup milk and three cups flour sifted three times with one teaspoonful baking powder. Now add the fruit, one pound citron shaved thin, one pound almonds blanched and chopped fine, one medium sized fresh cocoanut grated and one wineglass of the syrup from preserved white cherries. Lastly add the whites of eight eggs whipped to a stiff froth and fold in lightly. Line the cake tins with several thickness of buttered paper, and bake in a slow oven. Ice when cold.

LENTIL CUTLETS.

Soak one cupful dried lentils all night with a cupful dried lima beans. In the morning drain, add two quarts of water, a stalk of celery and half an onion sliced. Cook until soft, remove the seasonings and rub through a puree sieve. Add one cupful stale bread crumbs, one beaten egg, the juice of a half lemon and seasonings to taste. Melt a heaping tablespoonfull of butter in a small saucepan, add to it a tablespoonful flour and pour on, when blended, a third of a cup of milk. Let the mixture cook until thick and smooth then add to the lentil mixture and set aside to cool. Shape into small cutlets, dip in beaten egg, then in fine cracker crumbs and fry a golden brown. Serve with a tomato sauce.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS.

Always slice your onions and cucumbers two or three hours before you put them into a salad and let them lie in cold water.

Turpentine will remove tar from any kind of fabric.

Always wash the dishcloth thoroughly and hang in the sunshine to dry after each using.

Handkerchiefs will have a faint scent of violets if a small piece of orris root is put in the water in which they are boiled.

When roasting or baking meat in the oven place the dripping pan on a dish of water to prevent the gravy burning or boiling away.

Chocolate and cocoa stains can be removed by washing the fabric with soap in tepid water.

If clothes are hung on the line neatly and smoothly much labor will be saved when the time for ironing comes.

A tablespoonful of paraffin added to each three gallons of water when boiling white clothes will help to remove the stains.

Have handy a stone or steel for sharpening knives and keep the knives in good condition. Good tools make rapid work.

If eggs are to be boiled hard, have the water boiling when the eggs are put in it. This will prevent the yolks turning dark.

Add a pinch of salt to cream before whipping and whip it in a pitcher, as it will whip more quickly than in a bowl.

People with poor digestion should drink no water with meals, but take a glassful half an hour before, and drink plentifully an hour or so after each meal.

A child's school lunch basket can be kept sweet and clean by dipping it first into hot salt water, then into cold water about once a month. Dry quickly by the fire or in the sunshine.

A little milk added to the water in which silver is washed will help to keep it bright.

Hold a piece of white cloth back of the eye of a needle and see how quickly the thread will go through.

To make oatmeal water use one cup of oatmeal in a stone jar, one cup of sugar (brown is the best), juice and rind of three lemons, cut thin. Cover this with three quarts of boiling water and let it stand till the sugar is melted. Then strain and put on ice.

SCIENCE AND INDUSTRY

Explosive rock has been reported from the north of the Tauern tunuel in Austria. The rock is in such compression that, without warning, slabs several yards in dimensions will be suddenly hurled from one wall to the other. Fatal accidents have resulted.

In liquefying helium, the last of the gases that have been thought to be permanent, Olszewski has reached a temperature of 271.3 degrees below zero Centigrade. This is a cold about 11 degrees greater than Dewar obtained three years ago in liquefying hydrogen, and is within about 2 degrees of the supposed absolute zero. The question has now been raised whether 273.7 degrees below the freezing point of water is really the absolute zero.

Acetylene is being used as an explosive in Germany, where it has proven disappointing as an illuminant. Each cartridge contains an ounce and three-fourths of calcium carbide, yielding about sixteen quarts of acetylene, and after wetting the carbide the confined mixture of generated gas and air is exploded by an electric spark. In blasting the rock is not thrown out, but is broken up into pieces small enough to be readily removed.

Most persons probably think that winged seeds from trees travel great distances on the wind. But the studies of Doctor Ridley of the Botanic Gardens at Singapore indicate that winged seeds have a far narrower range of flight than do "powder" seeds and plumed seeds. The greatest distance traveled by the winged fruit of a forest tree, observed by Doctor Ridley, was 100 yards. Under the most favorable circumstances, he calculates, it would take this plant 100 years to spread 300 yards, and 1,500,000 years to spread from the Malay Peninsular to the Philippines, if a land connection existed.

A four inch black disc, marked with a white cross and rotated fifty to sixty times a second, has been used by a German physicist at night for studying lightning flashes. Some flashes caused the cross to appear once, others brought it out several times, and repeated observations confirmed the view that the discharge is very variable. The duration of some caused seemed to be about one-thousandth of a second, while in one instance eight partial discharges followed each other at regular intervals of about one-thousandth of a second. Others were shorter, and some were evidently not more than one-thirty-five thousandth of a second. Faraday thought flashes were at least one second long.

In comparatively few cases have the physiological and esthetic effects of electric lighting been duly considered. The Electrical World complains of the injurious results of placing clustrès of vivid incandescent lamps in theatres and amusement halls and in such situations that the spectators' eyes are partially blinded and greatly wearied by them. Ground glass shades supply only a partial remedy. Great possibilities of improvement and of artistic achievement exist by combining proper shading with the concealment of the lamps from direct vision. In streets, as everybody has observed, very little attention has been paid to the physiological side of the lighting problem, and often pedestrians are dazzled, confused and placed in peril by blazing lamps, the light of which streams straight into their eyes.

Philosophers and Traffic.

Many a philosopher in the course of his stargazing has fallen into a ditch—and worse. The fate of Prof. Curie, the discoverer of radium, who, intent upon its possibilities, fell under the wheels of a wagon and was crushed to death, might be paralleled by several instances of the kind from lives of philosophers, notably that of Archimedes of Syracuse, who was so concentrated on a mathematical problem when its Roman besiegers at last burst into that city that he fell under their swords, in spite of his impatient "Noli turbare circulos meos!" Stepniak, too, the Russian refugee, was so engrossed with the study of Nihilist questions in the course of a walk in a London suburb that he was run over and killed by a train at a level crossing.—London Chronicle.

Precocious.

All newspapers containing a reference to the proposed inheritance tax have been carefully withheld from the Rockefeller baby.—Puck.

A company with a capital of $25,000,000 has been organized to build tramways, electric lighting and power plants and railways and docks in Japan.

M. Guesde, a French Socialist, says that when society is properly constituted nobody will have to work more than eleven minutes a day.

A GREAT COMBINATION OFFER

We Will Furnish the "TWICE-A-WEEK" Issue of the

St. Louis Globe-Democrat

With

THE UNION

For

$1.50 Both Papers, one year, only $

The St. Louis Globe Democrat should not be classed with the many weekly papers. It is a high-grade Semi-Weekly, eight or more pages, Tuesday and Friday. It is beyond all comparison the biggest, best and cheapest National News and Home Journal published in the United States. It is Republican in Politics but is above all

A Great Modern Newspaper,

It is not made up indiscriminately from the Daily issue. It is specially edited with special reference to the needs of the Farmer, the Merchant, the professional man who desires to keep thoroughly posted without spending the time to read a large Daily Paper. It also contains a great variety of well selected reading matter, making it invaluable to every member of the family.

This Liberal Clubbing Offer

is open to all old or new subscribers, but may be withdrawn at any time, and must receive the cash with order. Address

THE UNION,
Clanton, Ala.

Ben M. Jacobs & Bros.

Furniture and Rugs.

—SOLE AGENTS—

Globe-Wernicke Elastic Book Cases
Filing Cabinets.

Catalogue for the asking.

BIRMINGHAM, AL

Farmers' Mutual Insurance Associat

OF ALABAMA.

CHARTERED BY SPECIAL ACT OF THE LEGISLATURE
By the People and for the People.

Chilton County Branch

Organized February 3, 1900.

W. M. WILSON, President. WALLACE C. EDLER, Sec'y.-Treas.

INSURES Farmers' dwellings, outbuildings and contents and live stock against loss by fire, wind and lightning. The cheapest, safest and most sensible method of insurance known to man

Average Yearly Cost for Five and a half Years 43-100 of 1 per c

Full particulars furnished upon application to WALLACE C. EDLER, Clanton.

PAUL CALAME,

205 21st Street
Birmingham, Ala.

Practical Watchm and Optician

Eyes Correct Fitted

Mail orders prompt

SUBSCRIBE FOR THIS PAPER

DO YOU WAN

Letterheads, Noteheads, Billheads, Envelopes,

OR ANYTHING ELSE PRINTED?

Then Call at

THE UNION OFFI

and See Fine Work at Low Prices.

500 Noteheads
500 Envelopes
All For $2.00

Good Work on Good Material, done on Good Mac
Don't forget! THE UNION, Clanton, Alabama

Pure Water Prevents Fevers.

DRILLED WELLS FURNISH PURE WA

We guarantee water or no charge made. Estimates given. Address

I. E. SARBER CO.

Thorsby, Ala.

LIFE WORTH LIVING.

The life that I would lead:
...ssage on a grassy hill,
...immortal books to read,
...odland way to ream at will,
...ten spot to turn with spade,
...shelter of a maple's shade
...the life that suits me best;
...daily burgeon of the East,
...ily blossom of the West,
...milky way my nightly feast
...lue of skies my dearest boon
...olace of the afternoon.
...is the life that woos and wins
...iving far from crowd and cares
...me secure from raucous dins,
...realm away from roar and rant
...monarch of a modest hill,
...are and hold the world at will
...bertus Love, in the New Yo...
...un.

...e Millionaire's Honeymoon.

...e bartender peered timidly ...
...he door, like a bather contem...
...a maximum of spine-chilling ...
...a minimum of clothing and co...
"Ugh!" she shivered "Co...
it?"
...here's a knife in the air, the...
replied the policeman, who h...
praying for hours for that de...
pen.
...side there was fresh sawdust ...
floor, the urn was steaming, ...
...e was a smell of hot whisky ...
the atmosphere of luxury to ...
...ggiers who wandered in ...
woman was among the li...
...d, though not of them. S...
...e of better days, of gentility ...
...ntiated her. But she was fall...
the lowest pit. This was the f...
...e she had ever entered a sal...
called for a drink.
...was gin she ordered—a large ...
...d she gulped it down hot. W... emerged into the street her we...
...unted to a nickel and a cent.
that cent a long time, for ...
kept it for luck. And when ...
...kel was spent she would still b...
penny and the same luck.
...he previous day her landlord ...
...d her for arrears in rent.
gone to the court and told ...
...ry.
...hey gave her a quarter and ...
...mething about maing inquiries. ...
not know what they meant; ...
knew that she had twenty ...
...ts and that she was hungry ...
...s always hungry, but she had ...
...ays a quarter. She went stra...
...y and spent fifteen cents in ...
...l swoop in one riotous Lucullan ...
What a feast it was!
...fter it she crawled back, s...
her garret, cast her sewing a...
...d slept. She awoke in the ...
...rning, shivering, and recours...
...uor—something fiery and pot...
...ggested itself. Now she was a...
...ain to her garret, without a wa...
the alcohol in her veins.
...Was she still dreaming when ...
...me a knock at the door. ...
...autiful woman in a rustling ...
...ped anxiously toward her b...
"You are Mrs. Albert Forsb...
...e said, touching her on the ...
...r. "How you frightened me, ...
...ere so still!"
The woman rose from the bed ...
was not a dream.
"I read of your case in the p...
...e visitor went on, "and, oh, ...
...lad I am to be able to help yo...
...is envelope are two £5 note...
...ere is some loose silver. Thi...
...tter to a dressmaker who wil...
...u work. No; don't thank me, ...
...the blessing to be able to he...
...ive. How easily might fate ha...
...ained that you should be in my ...
...nd me in yours. Then you ...
...ave done something to hel...
...ouldn't you?"
She laughed brightly, with ...
...listening in her eyes. It was ...
...o look upon her.
"Goodbye! I shall hear ho...
...et on through my dressmake...
The room seemed to go su...
...ark. She was gone. The run...
...arriage wheels came up fro...
...treet below.
It was early morning at se...
...unbeam and breeze waged a f...
...contest as to which could ...
...pleasanter. Gilbert Rhode J...
...tall, alert figure in white duck...
...on the deck of the great lin...
...a dose, as he said, of the t...
...the scene.
"I'll give the prize to the ...
...he remarked to the woman wh...
...ed gently on his arm.
He gazed at her with proud ...
...tion.
"You are really happy, Bea...
"Really, really!"
In the bright morning light ...
...easy to guess their ages. H...
...would have fixed at twenty-...
...at forty-two. They had been ...
...a week, and were on their hon...
...trip to America. He was a ...
...millionaire.
In the glow of a hot afterno...
...the same day they lounged ...
...chairs. He wa...ading from ...
...book.
"And all these are your re...
...he asked.
"Yes."
"Who is Marcelle Bruniere ...
...a romantic name."
"She is a milliner who wo...
...died but for a fortunate acci...
...was wrongly arrested for t...
...her whole story came out.
..."Surely it was wrongly?"

MBINATION OFFER
e "TWICE-A-WEEK" issue
of the
Globe-Democr
With UNION
For
s, one year, only $1
should not be classed with the many eml-Weekly, eight or more pages, ll comparison the biggest, best and published in the United States. It is e all dern Newspaper.
ly from the Daily issue. It is needs of the Farmer, the Merchant ep thoroughly posted without also contains a great variety of to every member of the family.
l Clubbing Offer
, but may be withdrawn at any time,
ddress
THE UNION,
Clanton, Ala.
cobs & Bros.
e and Rugs.
E AGENTS—
astic Book Cases
Cabinets.
ng.
MINGHAM, AL
Insurance Associat
ALABAMA.
L ACT OF THE LEGISLATURE
and for the People.
ounty Branch
February 3, 1900.
WALLACE C. EDLER,
Sec'y.-Treas.
ings, outbuildings and con
oss by fire, wind and light
most sensible method of i 43-100 of 1 per ce
pon application to
E C. EDLER, Clanton, Practical Watchm
and Optician
Eyes Correct
Fitted
Mail orders promptly
RIBE FOR PAPER
U WAN
s, Noteheads,
Envelopes,
ELSE PRINTED? n Call at
ON OFFIC
Work at Low Prices.
ll For $2.00
ial, done on Good Mach
ION, Clanton, Alabama.
Prevents Fevers.
URNISH PURE WA
r or no charge made.
Address
ARBER CO.

LIFE WORTH LIVING.

the life that I would lead:
cottage on a grassy hill,
immortal books to read,
woodland way to roam at will,
green spot to turn with spade,
shelter of a maple's shade.
the life that suits me best;
daily burgeon of the East,
daily blossom of the West,
silky day my nightly feast, blue of skies my dearest boon solace of the afternoon.
the fe that woos and wins:
it be fe that woos and wins:
Light of from crowd and cant,
Music from raucous dins,
Calm away from roar and rant,
Sequel of a modest hill,
Rare and hell the world at will.
Ethelinda Love, in the New York Sun.

The Millionaire's Honeymoon.

The attender peered timidly out the door like a bather confront-a maximum of spine-chilling sea a minimum of clothing and cour-Then she shivered. "Cold,
it!"
Here's a knife in the air, there whistled the policeman, who had been praying for hours for that door open.
Inside there was fresh sawdust on floor, the urn was steaming, and there was a smell of hot whisky. It was the atmosphere of luxury to the ragpers who wandered in.
A woman was among the little crowd though not of them. Some years of former days, of gentility, different from But she was falling to the lowest pit. This was the first time she had ever entered a saloon and called for a drink.
It was gin she ordered—a large gin and she gulped it down hot. When she emerged into the street her wealth amounted to a nickel and a cent. She kept that cent a long time, for she had kept it for luck. And when the gin was spent she would still have a penny and the same luck.
The previous day her landlord had sued her for arrears in rent. She had gone to the court and told her story.
They gave her a quarter and said something about making inquiries. She did not know what they meant; but she knew that she had twenty-five cents and that she was hungry. She was always hungry, but she had not always a quarter. She went straightway and spent fifteen cents in one glorious in one riotous Lucullan orgy. What a feast it was!
After it she crawled back, sated,
to her garret, cast her sowing aside, and slept. She awoke in the early morning, shivering, and recourse to something fiery and potent—suggested itself. Now she was going back to her garret, without a warmth save the alcohol in her veins.
Was she still dreaming when there came a knock at the door and a fashionable woman in a rustling gown stood anxiously toward her bed?
"You are Mrs. Albert Forshaw?"
she said, touching her on the shoulder. "How you frightened me, lying there so still!"
The woman rose from the bed. No;
it was not a dream.
"I read of your case in the papers,"
the visitor went on, "and, oh, how glad I am to be able to help you. In this envelope are two £5 notes, and there is some loose silver. This is a letter to a dressmaker who will give you work. No; don't thank me. Mine is the blessing to be able to help—to give. How easily might fate have ordained that you should be in my place and me in yours. Then you would have done something to help me, wouldn't you?"
She laughed brightly, with tears glistening in her eyes. It was good to look upon her.
"Goodbye! I shall hear how you get on through my dressmaker."
The room seemed to go suddenly dark. She was gone. The rumble of carriage wheels came up from the street below.
It was early morning at sea, and sunbeam and breeze waged a friendly contest as to which could be the pleasanter. Gilbert Rhode Jeans, a tall, alert figure in white ducks, stood on the deck of the great liner, taking a dose, as he said, of the tonic of
the scene.
"I'll give the prize to the breeze," he remarked to the woman who leaned gently on his arm.
He gazed at her with proud admiration.
"You are really happy, Beatrice?"
"Really, really!"
In the bright morning light it was easy to guess their ages. Hers you would have fixed at twenty-five, his at forty-two. They had been married a week, and were on their honeymoon trip to America. He was a British millionaire.
In the glow of a hot afternoon sun
the same day they lounged on deck chairs. He was reading from a notebook.
"And all these are your retainers?"
he asked.
"Yes."
"Who is Marcelle Bruniere? Quite
a romantic name."
"She is a milliner who would have died but for a fortunate accident. She was wrongly arrested for theft, and
her whole story came out.
"Surely it was wrongly?"
"Yes. It was a case of mistaken identity. It was fully proved."
"And Hester Gwynne. Another pretty name."
In brief chapter heads she recounted her story, too, and that of half a dozen others whose names appeared in the book. He kept turning over the leaves and calling them out.
"What a host of them!" he commented. "Surely you don't act as banker for them all?"
"Ah, no. I could not have afforded, unhappily. Some are dead; some are doing so well as not to need further help; some I have lost sight of."
He closed the book and handed it to her. For a while he was strangely silent. His cigar went out and dropped from his fingers on to the deck.
"And Mrs. Forshaw?" he asked, at last. "Mrs. Albert Forshaw—who was she?"
"A pitiful case, Gilbert, most pitiful. Her husband had deserted her, and she had been trying to exist on fifty cents a week. Think of it, millionaire, fifty cents a week! A woman of some gentility at some time, too, I fancy."
"She belongs to those who are dead, I suppose?"
"Indeed, no; I hope not. It was only two months ago that I knew of her."
His eyes sought the woman by his side. She was intent upon her needlework, beautiful, young, radiant, happy—a woman as "good as gold!"—how much better than his gold?
"What must I do for her sake?" he thought.
New York is a great, rambling place, but to Gilbert Rhode Jeans it was stifling. At times he contemplated a sudden flight, on the pretense of urgent business. She was so happy among the whirl of visits and receptions, and he could not leave her side. No; he must wait and meet the blow. He felt it was inevitable; but, fascinated, he could not retreat.
He listened to his wife's chat as she sat in her boudoir, always thinking what a shock it would be when the blow came.
And one day it came—though it was not exactly the kind of blow he had expected.
There was a prelude to its delivery. It happened in his wife's boudoir, when Mrs. Albert Forshaw, now a successful dressmaker, came to visit her old patroness.
She fell on her knees and kissed her hand, big earnest tears in her eyes.
Her benefactress raised her gently. Could this be the wreck of a woman she had seen lying in the garret?
"I read about your marriage. How I hope you will always be happy!"
"Ah, I am happy; I shall always be happy. I have the dearest husband in the world!"
She laughed gayly in the fullness of her joy, then checked herself remembering the tragedy of the other's life.
"Forgive me for parading my happiness. Your fate was so different. Have you ever heard anything of—of him?"
"No; nothing." Her eyes gleamed. "But if I did! Ah, I have dreamed such revenges!"
She turned aside, hatred, fierce and relentless, imprinted on her face. And as she turned, there was Albert Forshaw, her husband, looking straight at her. It was his portrait on the mantel shelf, and it bore the autograph, "Gilbert Rhode Jeans."
So the great millionaire was Albert Forshaw, a scamp, and a bigamist. What a revenge was here!
But—yes, there was a "but." There was the woman as well as the man—the woman who stood near to her, the woman through whom she was alive to-day, through whom she was well nourished and warmly clothed, through whom she lived no longer in a filthy street.
That scene in the garret! She saw it all again, and heard that gentle voice saying, "How easily might fate have ordained that you should be in my place and I in yours; then you would have helped me, wouldn't you?"
There are moments in life when we seem to go through ages of torment. Here was this woman, goaded one way by the cry of revenge, urged the other by the soft voice of gratitude.
It was the next morning that the blow fell upon him—not the shattering blow he had anticipated, but a blow that left a wound that would not heal.
It came in a long letter. "Your gold is dross," she concluded; "but she is gold, true gold, and shall not be tarnished. Though I have broken my oath to be revenged, I shall take it gladly again if you blot one speck of sunshine out of her life."—Jessie Northlen in Chicago Tribune.

Significance of Colors.

White is the emblem of truth, faith, joy, religious purity and life.
In the judge it indicates integrity; in woman, chastity.
Blue, or the sapphire, expresses heaven, truth from a celestial origin, fidelity, loyalty and constancy.
Red, the ruby, symbolizes passion, fire and divine love.
Green the emerald, is the color of spring, of hope—particularly of hope of victory; fame, and immortality as the color of the laurel and palm.
Violet, the amethyst, emblematizes love and truth, passion and suffering.
Purple is the color of royalty.
Black symbolizes grief, mourning, despair, darkness, earthliness, negation, sin and death.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

Social Unrest.

Its Origin Found in Human Greed, Not in "Intolerable Conditions."

By a Conservative.

COMMENTING on an editorial in The Sun on "The Rising Tide of Socialism," H. P. Hough expresses his opinion of the cause of social unrest by asserting that "present industrial conditions have become intolerable and demand radical treatment. Socialism is offered as a remedy, and all signs point to its adoption, in whole or in part, in the near future."

Mr. Hough and those who share his view of the "present intolerable industrial condition" fail utterly in their diagnosis. Complaints of present conditions come chiefly from the wage earners of the country. Yet their arguments are flatly contradicted by the achievements of which labor unionism boasts, and are clearly destroyed by facts which are beyond denial. The industrial conditions of today are far from intolerable. So far as this country is concerned, it is doubtful if the history of the world shows any period in any nation in which the conditions of the life of the wage earner were so generally tolerable as they are in the United States at the present time.

In all the departments of our national life there are weaknesses, faults and wide divergence from the ideal. So it has ever been and so will it be until the millennium; but a declaration that any of them are intolerable can be made only with a total disregard of facts. There is widespread discontent and unrest, but it does not spring from the conditions under which the life of the wage earner is lived. Never before have wage earners been so well fed, so well and so comfortably housed and clothed as they are in the United States today. Never before have the savings of wage earners been so large in amount in their aggregate, or so large per capita, as they are today. Never before has the man who works bulked so big in the control of affairs. The disease for which socialism is offered as a remedy is imaginary.

There is a disease of which discontent, unrest and socialism are symptoms. It is a moral disease, and it is incurable by statutory laws, by schemes for a cooperative commonwealth, by shorter days of labor, by increased wages, by public ownership or Federal control of industries and transportation, or by any other panacea offered by socialism. Its cause is human greed, envy of those who "have" by those who "have not." Excited and stimulated by demagogues and theorists, this essentially human trait finds its largest expression during a time of prosperity. Out of greed and envy there springs a notion that "those who have" acquired their possessions through some form of dishonesty. The recent exposure of some whose wealth has been obtained by questionable or by criminal methods has stimulated this belief, and the belief has widened until it includes all who are counted rich.

The evil of today exists in the hearts of men and not in "intolerable industrial conditions." Statutory laws may palliate, to some extent, the conditions, but they cannot cure the evil.

"Fraternalism Will Drive Out Graft."

By Dr. Lyman Abbott.

I WANT to give you my interpretation of the future, with whose shaping you will have something to do. In the history of the world there have been three conceptions of the social order. The first of these is autocracy, the second individualism and the third fraternalism.

In the coming age all the creeds and sects will be united, because the coming age is to be a fraternal one. Every age has had its vices and its virtues. The Nineteenth Century has had vices, all due to the same source. The first vice has been that of accumulation; the second vice is the lawlessness of self-will.

We hear of the criminal class. Can you tell me who belongs to the criminal class? Do the insurance directors who bought stocks low and sold them at high prices to the companies of which they were directors? Do the railroad officials who broke the law of the land and now stand convicted? Do the coal carriers who did, by a "gentlemen's agreement," that which was against the law?

There is one remedy for all this. Society should be considered as a unit. Go, young men, go not to see how much you can accumulate, but what you can attain. Already accumulation is on trial.

We have learned that the best interest of the community is not served by each man voting for his own interest. He must look after the national welfare.

The age you enter has been called Socialistic, but that is false; it has been called communistic, but that is false; it is fraternal. The men of the future will recognize the organization of society in the upbuilding of the community, the nation and the Church of God.

Right Thinking and Self-Control

By O. S. Marden.

SOCRATES' features, said Zopyrus, the physiognomist, showed that he was stupid, brutal, sensual, and addicted to drunkenness." Socrates upheld the analysis by saying: "By nature I am addicted to all these sins, and they were only restrained and vanquished by the continual practice of virtue."

Emerson says, in effect, "The virtue you would like to have, assume it as already yours, appropriate it, enter into the part and live the character, just as the great actor is absorbed in the character of the part he plays." No matter how great your weakness or how much you may regret it, assume steadily and persistently its opposite until you acquire the habit of holding that thought, or of living the thing, not in its weakness, but in its wholeness, in its entirety. Hold the ideal of an efficient faculty or quality, not of a marred, or deficient one. The way to reach, or to attain to anything, is to bend oneself toward it with all one's might; and we approximate it just in proportion to the intensity and the persistency of our effort to attain it.

If you are inclined to be very excitable and nervous, if you "fly all to pieces" over the least annoyances, do not waste your time regretting this weakness, and telling everybody that you cannot help it. Just assume the calm, deliberate, quiet, balanced composure which characterizes your ideal person in that respect. Persuade yourself that you are not nervous or excitable, that you can control yourself; that you are well balanced; that you do not fly off on a tangent at every little annoyance. You will be amazed to see how the perpetual holding of this serene, calm, quiet attitude will help you to become like your thought.—Success Magazine.

Hints To Nervous Women.

By Dr. Graeme Hammond.

THERE are many things a neurasthenic woman can do which will mitigate the severity of her symptoms, and perhaps, if the disease is slight, she may recover without the intervention of her physician. In the first place, the original trouble, worry, or anxiety which was responsible for her nervous breakdown, must be done away with, or, if this is impossible, she must school herself not to care, or else remove herself to new scenes and surroundings where her mind will not be harassed. Peace of mind will do more to restore shattered nerves than almost anything else. The next thing is to make the bodily health as good as it can be made under the existing circumstances and surroundings. Sleep and rest are absolutely essential to recovery, and the sufferer should do all she can to secure both. Narcotics, to produce sleep, are not to be thought of. They do not cure anything, and their continual use can only be productive of harm. Tranquilize the mind, banish by force of will unpleasant thoughts, and sleep alone rather than with some one else whose restlessness or deep breathing, to say nothing of snoring, might well banish sleep from the eyes of even Morpheus himself. Sometimes a warm foot-bath before bed, or eating a slice of bread and butter, or drinking a glass of milk will bring sleep to the tired eyes. If, however, these means are inadequate it is better to consult a physician. Normal sleep, and plenty of it, must be secured before recovery becomes possible.—Harper's Bazar.

Cure For Insomnia.

As a cure for sleeplessness, a medical journal suggests that the sufferer should simply clear his or her mind of everything, and then perform a series of gymnastic exercises which, so it is alleged, never fail to produce the desired effect. Now, if one could stop thinking there would be little difficulty about getting to sleep, and to suggest emptying the mind as a cure for insomnia is very much like telling a person with a cold to sneeze or cough, or talk huskily. It is precisely because one thinks that one lies awake, and because one thinks so hard. As to performing gymnastic exercises in the dead vast and middle of the night, there are not a few of us who would infinitely prefer insomnia to the remedy.

Flying fish of two distinct kinds are known to man—namely the flying gurnards and the flying-herringa.

SOUTHERN FARM NOTES.

TOPICS OF INTEREST TO THE PLANTER, STOCKMAN AND TRUCK GROWER.

What an Acre of Ground Does.

A correspondent of the Progressive Farmer gives an interesting account of what one man has done with one acre of land. We certainly agree with the writer that the man had more to do with the remarkable success recorded than did either seed, fertilizer, or soil.

Visitors to the Charleston Exposition interested in agriculture were attracted by a large picture on exhibition in the North Caroline section. This picture represented an old Confederate soldier with his wife and two daughters in their garden gathering peas. The picture was made from a photograph of Mr. Lewis Grady's "Unique Truck Garden" in Kinston, N. C.

A certain seed house has been widely advertising this garden as a specimen of what can be done when their seed are used. A fertilizer company h s been announcing that the results attained by Mr. Grady were due to their fertilizers. The Department of Agriculture of North Carolina assures all visitors to the State Museum that the remarkable yield of vegetables from Mr. Grady's garden is clearly due to the soil of Eastern North Carolina. Some of us who have watched the old man's methods of cultivation have gotten hold of the idea that the man has more to do with it than either of the above.

Mr. Grady's garden occupies just an acre within the corporate limits of Kinston. From the windows of the train on the A. and N. C. Railroad his garden may be seen about a hundred yards to the north of the railway track, perhaps four yards east of the depot. There is nothing unusual about the soil. The fertilizer used is a brand commonly used by the truck growers in this section. After preparing the land in early spring, about the only tool used by Mr. Grady are an ordinary hoe and a smaller hoe of his own manufacture made from a buggy spring bent at a right angle and bolted to a hickory hoe helve.

Mr. Grady told me recently that he had something in his garden to sell every day in the year. He believes in intensive cultivation. He rents the acre of ground, paying $20 per year rent, and nearly every year raises radishes enough in odd corners to pay the rent. One year he sold $23.20 worth of radishes, besides having enough for his family and sending quite a number of bunches to his friends. He has a great diversity of crops. This year he planted his peas January 2d, and will continue to plant something up to next January. Throughout the season as he removes one vegetable from the garden he immediately plants another in its place. He grows in his garden radishes, turnips, mustard, garden peas, beans, corn, okra, limabeans, kale and collards. He keeps his ground highly fertilized and works it thoroughly.

During the past three years his income from this one acre has been as follows: $147.70, $183.50, $181.05.

This strikes me as being fairly good showing for an old crippled Confederate soldier working for a few hours in the morning on one acre of land. He has produced enough vegetable to supply a family of five and then sell in three years $412.25 worth.

Corn, Alfalfa and Live Stock.

On a recent visit south we noted some important agricultural changes taking place in Mississippi, Louisiana and other southern States. The long adherence to the one staple crop, cotton, is giving way to live stock and corn growing. Corn does not yield so many bushels per acre south as in our central and northern States, but this is made up in the luxuriant growth of alfalfa, so rich in nitrogen and essential in live stock growing and the dairy industry, making a balanced ration with corn both for beef cows and dairy cows. With four good crops of alfalfa, which seems to flourish south, even with less corn per acre, will about equal the live stock productions of the central States. Actual tests of this in Mississippi and other southern States have demonstrated this fact, as here and there cattle-growing is made profitable. On a well balanced ration of corn and alfalfa in Mississippi beef cattle, grade Herefords and Shorthorns, on actual feeding tests have been made to gain in periods of eighty and 120 days feeding, 2.80 to 2.98 pounds per day on an average and in the case of some finely bred Herefords in ninety days' feeding three pounds gain per day was made with these foods.

This change which is slowly taking place from the exclusive cotton growing to live stock, both in beef and dairying, means a great deal to the cotton growing States in more ways than one.

1. By such diversified husbandry corn can be produced in the cotton-growing States at a saving of fifty cents a bushel for corn when shipped from the North, means so much less cost per pound in growing cotton, which, of course, must always be a leading crop, there, and will enable that section to grow cotton at six or seven cents a pound more profitably than it does now at ten and twelve cents.

2. Cattle and swine growing will afford ample consumption of the surplus corn and alfalfa, which are shown to be so valuable in the live stock industry.

Southern planters and farmers have these very plain propositions before them, not in theories, but in actual tests here and there in the States, and they cannot too soon make them generally available in their own sure and certain prosperity. They mean a great deal not only for agriculture but business generally for the New South. The State experiment station, in Louisiana, Tennessee and other of these States are doing a splendid work along these lines, and intelligent pratcical planters and farmers are supplementing their work in feeding live stock as stated.—Indiana Farmer.

Fertilizers Factors For Conversion.

To convert:
Ammonia into nitrogen, multiply by	0.824
Ammonia into protein, by	5.15
Nitrogen into ammonia, multiply by	1.214
Nitrate of soda into nitrogen, multiply by	16.47
Nitrogen into protein by	6.25
Bone phosphate into phosphoric acid, multiplied by	0.458
Phosphoric acid into bone potash, multiply by	2.184
Murate of potash into actual potash, multiply by	0.632
Actual potash into murate potash, multiply by	1.583
Sulphate of potash into actual potash, multiply by	0.541
Actual potash into sulphate of potash, multiply by	1.85

For instance, you buy ninety-five per cent. of nitrate of soda and want to know how much nitrogen in it, multiply ninety-five per cent. by 16.47 and you will get 15.65 per cent. nitrogen; you want to know how much ammonia this nitrogen is equivalent to, then multiply 15.65 per cent. by 1.214 and you get 18.99 per cent., the equivalent in ammonia.—Florida Experiment Station Bulletin.

THE CHINQUAPIN.

The chinquapin, or dwarf chestnut, is not as widely distributed as the chestnut proper. The tree is dwarfish in habit. Usually it branches out near the ground, and on average, the trunk does not grow larger than eight or ten inches. I have seen one or two trees considerably larger. The leaf is, in shape nearly like the chestnut, but very much smaller. In its wild state the chinquapin prefers rather poor, sandy land, but it will grow on a variety of soils. The burrs are small and contain only one nut each. The ripening season is about one month earlier than the native chesnut. The nuts fall to the ground in the fall, and if not disturbed, they send a root into the ground before winter. They lie this way until the next spring, and sprout up the next season and make considerable growth. The trees begin to bear early. I have seen bushes not more than three feet high full of matured nuts. The trees thrive in open ground. They are often left along the roadside or on rough, rocky ground, and are a delight to children.—A. J. Legg, Albion, W. Va.

BIRDS TO ENCOURAGE.

The birds that are known to eat the boll weevil deserve to be encouraged within the cotton belt. To be rightly encouraged they ought to be well known. The subject is a new one, and the list of such birds can be enlarged as the information increases. Already known as answering to this view are the Carolina wren, the titlark, the tomtit, western meadow lark, Florida meadow lark, common phoebe, red wing blackbird, white throated sparrow, western Savannah sparrow, brown thrasher, Texas bob white, brewer blackbird, cowbird, jackdaw, mocking bird, butcherbird, killdeer. All these have had their stomachs examined and found to be friends. They deserve to be protected and helped.

The National Game.

It really seems to be a case of Jack Chesbro redivivus.

The Boston Club is said to have offered Toledo $5000 for the fast Indian outfielder, Frank Jude.

In timing the swing of his bat to meet the ball Beaumont, of the Pirates, is an ideal performer with the stick.

Carl Druhot released by Cincinnati to the St. Louis Nationals, has become a winning pitcher for the Cardinals.

Admiral Chouknin Dead.

Vice-Admiral Chouknin, commander of the Russian Black Sea fleet, who was shot at Sebastopol, supposedly by a sailor of the battleship Otchakoff, died next morning without having regained consciousness. The under gardener of Admiral Chouknin's villa is suspected of having knowledge of the murderer, as he has disappeared.

Santo Domingo Rejects Protocol.

Santo Domingo Congress rejected the Dominican-Italian protocol, and complications with Italy are expected to follow.

THE UNION

Published every Thursday at Clanton, Chilton county, Alabama.

Wallace C. Edler, Ed. and Pub.

Subscription price, in advance, per year, $1.

For advertising rates, call at the office, Seventh street, between First and Second avenues.

Entered April 15, 1903, at Clanton, Ala., as second class matter, under act of congress of March 3, 1879.

NOTICE TO CORRESPONDENTS.

All communications to the Union must be signed by the writer's real name as well as that name which they wish to put in the paper. Letters must reach the editor Tuesday morning to get in the same week. While we will publish any and all communications complying with these requirements that do not contain any improper language, we are not responsible for the opinions expressed. tf.

CLANTON, ALA., July 19, 1906.

Union Clubbing List

THE UNION And Yellow Jacket	$1.00
THE UNION And Southern Ruralist	1.00
THE UNION And Union Educater	1.00
THE UNION And Home and Farm	1.00
THE UNION And Weekly Age-Herald	1.25
THE UNION and Weekly Atlanta Constitution	1.25
THE UNION and Twice-a-Week Globe Democrat	1.50
THE UNION and Tri-W'kly Atlanta Constitution	1.50
THE UNION And Tom Watson's Magazine	1.50
THE UNION and Tri-Weekly N. Y. World	1.50
THE UNION And Rural South	1.50
THE UNION And Weekly Advertiser and Map of Alabama, U. S. and world	1.50

If there are any other papers you want call at THE UNION office, and we will get them for you at the lowest rates. tf

ANNOUNCEMENTS.

FOR REPRESENTATIVE.

I am a candidate for Representative of Chilton county in the legislature of Alabama, subject to the action of the People's Primary.

tf J. OSMOND MIDDLETON.

FOR SHERIFF.

I hereby announce myself as a candidate for Sheriff of Chilton county, subject to the action of the People's primary. FELIX J. FITTS.

tf

FOR SHERIFF.

I hereby announce myself as a candidate for Sheriff of Chilton county, subject to the action of the People's primary. FRANK GOODGAME.

FOR SHERIFF.

I hereby announce myself as a candidate for sheriff of Chilton county, subject to the action of the People's primary. D. H. GENTRY.

FOR SHERIFF.

I hereby announce myself as a candidate for Sheriff of Chilton county, subject to the action of the people's primary. LEE HAYES.

tf

FOR COUNTY COMMISSIONER.

I hereby announe myself as a candidate for County Commissioner for the 1st District, subject to the action of the People's Primary.

tf W. H. CONWAY.

FOR COUNTY COMMISSIONER.

I hereby announce myself as a candidate for County Commissioner for the Second District, subject to the action of the People's primary.

tf S. E. WALDRUP.

ANOTHER PATRIOT.

M. F. Lett writes in this issue saying he will not run for representative, thus patriotically clearing the field for the triumphant nomination and election of J. Osmond Middleton. Mr. Lett is a strong man and is always at his post when duty calls him, and will no doubt be of great help to our ticket when it is nominated.

DELAYED.

Several hundred of our patrons did not get their last week's paper until the forepart of this week. This was caused by the non-arrival of one bundle of Unions. You see, THE UNION weekly circulation at present is almost 1,300 copies, and they are divided into two bundles and one went astray. The fault has not been located yet. Another thing we wish to say, you all must get your letters in earlier, say by Tuesday morning. This week we have to leave out several communications which came in late. We want to give all a square deal, and so "first come, first served."

REPUBLICAN CONFERENCE.

Read the report in this paper of the conference held at Birmingham July 11. It shows that the VOTERS, the real strength of any party, are getting together. Any fair minded man will see the evils that arise when a party is under the control of office-holders. The great majority of the men who fill the federal offices in this state are very good men, but human nature is so constituted that it is not right to put such a strain on them as taking full charge of our party. Chilton county has blazed the way. She does not allow any federal office holder to be a member of the county executive committee. The democratic party in this state is sufferig now from the efforts to control that party by the office-holding clique, also from the system of misrepresentation existing which makes a white man in one portion of the state the equal in political power of a half dozen whites in another part.

NOTICE!

Managers, Clerks and Returning Officers of the People's Primary election, to be held August 6, 1906:

BEAT 1, MINERAL SPRINGS.

Managers—J. P. Bean, W. P. Cleckler, D. P. Martin; clerks, C. C. Conway, Sam Driver; returning officer, B. L. Martin.

BEAT 2 (BOX 1) PROVIDENCE.

Managers, W. H. Shaw, Will Sims, J. B. Wiggins; clerks, William Conway, J. E. Cobb; returning officer, Joe Cobb.

BEAT 2 (BOX 2) JEMISON.

Managers, J. M. Honeycutt, E. G. Cofer, John Rodgers; clerks, B. E. Collum, Charles Shaw; returning officer, C. C. Crumpton.

BEAT 3 (BOX 1) BENSON.

Managers, R. J. Williams, Walter Deshazo, Alex Giles; clerks, Marion Wagner, John Deshazo; returning officer, Arn. Calfee.

BEAT 3 (BOX 2) MACEDONIA.

Managers, J. D. Hodgins, Y. O. Freeman, George Dawson; clerks, Monroe Hubbard, Z. J. Jones; returning officer, J. D. Glasscock.

BEAT 4, CLANTON.

Managers, J. W. Littlejohn, J. D. Grant, R. Rutland; clerks, J. Watts Moore, A. G. Dake; returning officer, R. M. Smith.

BEAT 5, VERBENA.

Managers, J. T. Norris, Will Sims, Bird Johnson; clerks, M. Miller, Ephraim Jones; returning officer, W. S. Clark.

BEAT 6, KINCHEON.

Managers, Charles Foshee, B. F. Dobbs, John Edwards; clerks, W. L. Popwell, Charles Huett; returning officer, M. F. Lett.

BEAT 7 (BOX 1) MAPLESVILLE.

Managers, W. Y. Nix, Monroe Merchant, C. J. Coburn; clerks, D. J. Cooley, W. J. Atchison; returning officer, J. H. Grooms.

BEAT 7 (BOX 2) SHOULTS.

Managers, T. J. Littlejohn, J. N. Gentry, Frank Green; clerks, J. H. Green, James Langston; returning officer, John Green.

BEAT 8 (BOX 1) STANTON.

Managers, T. G. Milling, L. L. Lester, W. M. Price; clerks, Wade Harris, D. C. Gaudy; returning officer, John Ramsey.

BEAT 8 (BOX 2) PLETCHER.

Managers, John Kendrick, S. B. Ratliff, Sr., J. A. Poole; clerks, J. T. Anderson, M. Bridges; returning officer, T. C. Abbott.

BEAT 9, THORSBY.

Managers, G. S. Burnett, B. N. Martin, W. P. Murrah; clerks, A. Z. Bear, S. P. Collins; returning officer, Lee Vickers.

BEAT 10, COOPERS.

Managers, J. J. McDowell, J. S. Jones, Joseph Cox; clerks, C. J. Eiland, J. J. Dennis; returning officer, E. N. Wilson.

BEAT 11, FLINT HILL.

Managers, G. W. Pate, John Gore, W. T. Mahan; clerks, Robert Gore, Matt Mahan; returning officer, M. A. Killgore. tf

THE REPUBLICAN CONFERENCE.

The conference of Republicans which assembled in the Birmingham city hall on the afternoon of the 11th was attended by fully one hundred representative party men. The speeches, while breathing determination, were even tempered, and the resolutions were conservative and will appeal to the better judgment of every Republica in the State. The desire for a State convention based upon the Republican voting strength, as indicated by the result at the polls, is practically unanimous throughout Alabama, and every speech and suggestion offered in the conference advocated such a policy.

The only formal speech delivered was that by Mr. James Bowron, of Birmingham, and it is unfortunate that the conference officers failed to take notes of this address. It was a Republican speech delivered by a Republican having a thorough knowledge of his subject, and his defense of the convention of 1902 was clear, logical and convincing.

Probate Judge L. H. Reynolds, of Chilton county, was selected to preside over the conference, and J. R Moore, Esq., of Jefferson county, was elected secretary.

Mr. W. F. Aldrich, of Shelby county, briefly stated the object of the conference, and the following resolutions were offered from the floor and after mature consideration adopted as the sense of the assembly:

"Resolved, That we endorse the national Republican administration and see in the overwhelming prosperity of the whole country the highest and most forceful argument to continue the Republican party in power.

"First—Theodore Roosevelt, our great President, deserves the commendation and support of all citizens for his fearless advocacy of their rights against all unlawful combinations of capital and for applying the laws equally and impartially against all violators regardless of their wealth, position or influence; in securing for the people a law to regulate in a fair and judicial manner the abuses of common carriers. In forwarding the plans for building the great inter-oceanic canal, that this stupendous engineering undertaking may be completed within a reasonable time and confer its inestimable benefits upon our people. In being in fact the President of the whole people.

"Second—That when this conference recesses that it be to meet in Birmingham, Ala., on July 24, 1906, at the city hall at 10 a. m.

"Third—That it is the sense of this conference that a Republican State convention should be called to nominate a State ticket, and the basis of representation should be the vote cast at the last Presidential election for the Republican ticket.

"Be it further resolved by the members of the Republican party of Alabama attending the conference held in Birmingham, Ala., on this 11th day of July, 1906. That they deem it to the best interest of the party that a State convention should be held at the earliest possible date for the purpose of nominating a full State ticket for the approaching general election, and a chairman and State Committee and to transact such other business as the interest of the party may demand.

"That the several Congressional and county committees are urged to forthwith meet and place in nomination candidates for congress and all county offices."

It will be noticed that the conference recessed until July 24 at 10 o'clock. Every Republican who can spare the time from his business should be in Birmingham on the 24th so as to lend his advice and assistance to the State Executive Committee, which has been called to meet in this city on that day.

The Times firmly believes that the State Committee will respond to the just demands of the rank and file of the State. A convention is desired composed of delegates apportioned according to the vote cast in the last national election and a full and open opportunity to nominate a State ticket the election of a committee chairman and an Executive Committee to serve for the next two years. The people are paramount in all party affairs, and as these requests are just and fair, they will be content with nothing less.—Birmingham Times.

CARD FROM JUDGE REYNOLDS.

Editor Union:

As I am going away for a few days, I want to say to the county S. S. convention that is to meet here next Saturday (21st) that I am very sorry that I can't be with you all, but I hope you will have a good time and that every Sunday school in the county will be represented. I feel sure that Clanton will see to it that you are taken care of while in our town. I will say to those that have invited me to lecture to their S. S. that I am sorry that I can't be with you now, but I hope at some time to meet you all. I appreciate your invitations and am sorry I have to leave just now.

Yours respectfully,

L. H. REYNOLDS.

FOR COMMISSIONER.

By solicitation of a number of tax paying citizens of Chilton county, I announce myself as a candidate for county commissioner for the 2d district, subject to the action of the people's primary, August 6, 1906.

SAM PATE.

tf

COMMISSIONER ALEX GLASSCOCK

Jemison, Ala., July 16, 1906.

Editor Union:

Please allow me space in your columns to thank the people of this county for the kind expressions of confidence reposed in me, as evidenced by my election to the office of commissioner. I feel duly grateful for what the people of this county have done for me, and during the time I have served you as commissioner I have endeavored to discharge my duties conscientiously and without partiality or favors to any one.

I have been solicited by a number of my friends to make the race for commissioner this time, but as the people have honored me by electing me to the office for a number of years, I think it best for the party for me to decline being a candidate, and as the time for which I was elected will soon expire, and as I shall not be a candidate for re-election, I desire to thank my friends for what they have done for me in the past, and I assure you that you will ever be remembered by me with a deep and lasting friendship, and that you will in the future as in the past find me contending for the people's rights whenever and wherever opportunity is presented.

Yours for an honest and square deal to all men,

ALEX GLASSCOCK.

CARD FROM Z. J. JONES.

Rundolph, Ala., July 16, 1906.

Editor Union:

Please give me space in the popular Union to say to the people who have solicited me to enter the race for Commissioner from the Second District that I most heartily appreciate this manifestation of your confidence, but I shrink from the grave responsibilities of the Commissioner's work. Also it seemed to be an unsettled question relative to electing Commissioners until the last Union came out, and I did not wish to be at the expense and take on myself the work that belongs to a campaign, to finally learn that it was all needless. So I did not have the time to properly consider the matter.

Last, but not least, on last Saturday I learned that my friend and neighbor, Mr. S. E. Waldrup, would be in the race and that his announcement had done gone in. So, as a matter of course, I could not think of becoming a candidate. In conclusion, I thank you all for your confidence, and you will find me true to your cause, with no tendency to "sour."

Yours for the people,

Z. J. JONES.

THE LIE CAPTURED!

Clanton, Ala., July 16, 1906.

Editor Union:

My attention having been called to a report being circulated by designing parties to the effect that I was the candidate of the Democrats for the purpose of defeating the Populist and Republican parties in this county, and that I intended to defeat them in this campaign, I desire to brand said report as it deserves: It is a lie out of the whole cloth.

It was reported that I made this statement to Capt. J. J. Hawthorne. I copy herein a signed statement of Captain Hawthorne, which speaks for itself:

"Thorsby, Ala., July 12, 1906.

"I understand that a certain report is being circulated over the county, as having emanated from me, that Mr. J. Osmond Middleton told me that he was the candidate of the Democrats for the purpose of defeating the Populist and Republican parties in Chilton county, and that he was going to defeat them in this campaign. In justice to myself and Mr. Middleton, I hereby denounce such report as false. Mr. Middleton did say that he was being endorsed by leading Democrats, but he did not say that he was their candidate for the purpose of destroying the Populist and Republican parties.

"J. J. HAWTHORNE."

This is clear enough, and I am quite sure it is a sweeping refutation of this mendacious rumor.

J. OSMOND MIDDLETON.

BEAT SIX.

Editor Union:

Please allow me space in your valuable paper to thank my friends for their many kind assurances of support in the event that I would come out as a candidate for Representative. While it is a great honor for any man to represent his county in the Legislature, yet I am not financially able to make the race. I appreciate the confidence expressed by my friends, but I won't run. Now, my friends, while I am not in the race, I am in the fight for the success of the People's ticket. We have a brilliant young man who is a candidate for the Legislature, whose character is above reproach, and whose ability is recognized everywhere. J. Osmond Middleton will be the nominee of the People's primary, and he will be elected by an overwhelming majority. With best wishes for The Union and the People's cause, I am yours to count on. M. F. LETT.

A LIE NAILED.

Whereas, certain false reports have been circulated over Chilton county by designing parties against Felix J. Fitts, charging the said Fitts with being a drunkard and an immoral man: we, the undersigned, citizens of Maplesville, Ala., and surrounding district and neighbors of Mr. Fitts, denounce said charges as false and malicious. We have known Mr. Fitts for a long time, and we have always found him to be an honest, courageous, sober and upright gentleman.

H. H. Armstrong,
L. F. Martin,
L. J. Martin,
B. W. Garner, J. P.,
C. N. Parnell, M. D.,
B. O. Glover, P. M.,
P. D. Williams,
G. W. Fox,
R. C. Hanlin, Opr.,
W. D. Lawrence, mcht.,
J. F. Martin, hotel,
R. H. Martin, mcht.,
J. I. Ensign, lumber,
J. Damsky, mcht.,
J. C. Merchant,
T. C. Martin,
B. W. Foshee,
E. F. Barnes, M. & O. R. R.
H. W. Gibson,
J. T. Nix,
J. M. Armstrong,
Jonce L. Gardner,
D. Z. Merchant,
Will Cost,
D. C. Hubbard,
Alex Glasscock,
C. Cost,
A. Patterson,
J. W. Wright,
W. R. Dawson,
J. W. Foshee,
T. C. Perry,
A. B. Claughton, M. D.,
H. J. Foshee,
G. H. Graham,
H. C. Bearden,
J. D. Elam,
W. Y. Nix,
Martin Nix,
Geo. Moore,
J. D. Glasscock,
S. G. Glasscock,
J. C. Veazey,
J. R. Merchant,
M. C. Crumpton,
W. D. Nix,
Y. O. Freeman,
F. M. Langston,
J. F. Dawson,
M. C. Childress,
J. O. Smitherman,
T. M. Driver,
C. W. Reynolds,
T. J. Hubbard, Tax Coll.,
G. C. Shaw,
R. M. Hubbard,
W. A. Reynolds,
J. A. Caddell,
W. E. Thomas,
G. W. Freeman,
G. A. Dawson,
J. D. Hodgens,
D. H. Hodgens,
H. M. Robinson,
E. T. Dawson,
J. H. Hodgens,
G. W. Hodgens,
Z. J. Jones.

EVERGREEN.

I will say a few words about this community, which I think is one of the best I ever saw, and we have so much to be thankful for. Our Sunday school is progressing nicely. The superintendent and teachers are punctual and attentive to their duties, which makes it a grand success. Our summer school opened July 2, with Miss Lottie Johnson, one of the loveliest teachers I ever went to. We have a goodly number enrolled and expect to make our school an unqualified success. We invite any one to visit our school and see what we are doing.

SCHOOL BOY.

BEAT NINE.

Say, boys, I notice that the People's primary is set for August 6, the first Monday in August, just three weeks from today. We all ought to come out and vote on that day, for a nomination by our primary is equivalent to an election in this county. It looks like Mr. Middleton is a sure winner, and he suits our people all right. I don't suppose that we will donate a commissionership to the demmies, as the county has done so well with our people filling the commissioners' seats. As to the Sheriff I don't think that any one really doubts the nomination of Felix J. Fitts by a good majority. Mr. Fitts sure deserves something, for he has always been a good, hard worker for the people's rights. Mr. Fitts don't believe in mistreating a Democrat, but believes in treating them as such. If anybody knows of Mr. Fitts failing to do his duty in any election, I wish they would let it be known to the people. Mr. Fitts, in the election of 1904, when it seemed likely that there would have to be something like war if our men got justice, he was up and doing. Mr. Fitts wired Lee Vickers at Clanton to know how the county had gone, but was wired back that Mr. Vickers was not in Clanton, which was false, as Vickers at that very time was at the court house. When Mr. Fitts received this news he thought there must be something wrong, so he went to Jemison, and, learning there of the trouble at Thorsby, he went to that place to help our people if help was needed. Fitts' friends don't apprehend any danger of him being defeated in the primary, and it will be easy going at the November election. NON-DEMOCRATICC.

SURE FOR FITTS.

Maplesville, July 10, 1906.

Editor Union:

As politics are getting warm and I see letters in The Union from different parts of our county, I thought I would give you a few dots from this neck of the woods. We are getting ready for the primary, and the boys who are wanting to be Sheriff must get a lively move on them. Now, we have not got a word to say against any of them, for their friends say that they are all right, and they must be, for they are running on the People's ticket. Some of the candidates we know and some we don't know, but, boys, we tell you now that if you expect to outrun Felix J. Fitts you had better get up soon and go in a gallop, for Fitts is sure a hustler and winner, in proof of which he is going to get the good part of the Democratic vote in Beats 7 and 8. I was in a crowd not long ago and heard them talking about Fitts, and a Democrat said, "Fitts is the man for Sheriff, and he looks like one." Now, it has been reported on Mr. Fitts that he was drinking and getting drunk. I want to say that it is false. I have been in his company at least once a week ever since he has been at Maplesville and have known him for years before that time, and I never saw him take a drink or be under the influence of liquor in my life. So I think if you elect Fitts Sheriff you will never regret it; but, boys, if any of you should outrun him I will stay with you as long as there is a pea in the dish. How is this? One man offered a few days ago to bet a $5,000 stock of goods against $25 that Fitts would be the next Sheriff of Chilton county, and this man was a Democrat, too. Now, if any one doubts any part of what I have said, just come over and I will prove it to you. Yours for the people, W. Y. NIX.

What the surgeos make on the Fourth of July the insurance companies lose.

NEED MORE.

Well, here I come again, [illegible] so lucky before. All [illegible] freshed since the rain [illegible] good here. W. C. Jones and [illegible] ited Sebe Riggins' family [illegible] and Mrs. George Sorrow [illegible] are visitors here this week [illegible] glad to see them. Rev. [illegible] filled his regular appointment [illegible] erty Sunday. Taete was [illegible] out. Mrs. Ann Eiland, of [illegible] visited Mrs. Dora Jones [illegible] hear some mighty warm [illegible] me about the F. E. and [illegible] If you want success [illegible] ings regular; don't miss [illegible] and red bugs are pesky [illegible] don't need any more [illegible] and I'll quit, and try [illegible] before I come again. [illegible] to the UNION I am the [illegible]

BARBECUE AT TYLE

On Friday, July 27, 1906, [illegible] body invited.

G. W. Williams, C. E. [illegible] Col. J. H. Strange and J. [illegible] committee.

NOTICE TO CANDIDATES.

Under section 11 of an act [illegible] late Primary Elections [illegible] Alabama," approved [illegible] we hereby request each [illegible] furnish any one of the [illegible] on or before the 14th [illegible] list of names to be appointed [illegible] ors, clerks and returning [illegible] the various voting [illegible] pointments will be as nearly [illegible] divided as possible among the [illegible] candidates. Respectfully,

A. C. SMITH,
J. D. [illegible],
T. J. [illegible],
W. J. [illegible],
J. N. DENNIS,
G. W. THOMAS,
Sub-committee.

tf

PRIMARY ELECTION.

Notice is hereby given that [illegible] ple's primary election will be held [illegible] the 6th day of August, 1906, [illegible] various voting places in [illegible] ty for the purpose of nominating [illegible] didates for the offices to be [illegible] said county in the November [illegible]

All qualified voters who will [illegible] port the nominees of this primary [illegible] invited to participate.

W. R. JACKSON,
Chairman Republican Ex. [illegible]
A. C. SMITH, Secretary.
W. H. SHAW,
Chairman Populist Ex. [illegible]
J. D. COLLINS, Secretary.

tf

PRIMARY REQUIREMENT.

In accordance with section [illegible] the primary election law, any [illegible] desiring to submit his name [illegible] voters in the People's Primary [illegible] tion should, not later than [illegible] before August 6, 1906, appoint [illegible] chairman of the sub-committee [illegible] writing of the fact that he is a [illegible] date in order that his name may be placed on the ballot.

There will be two county commissioners to elect in the November election, one in the first district composed of beats 1 and 2, and one in the second district composed of beats 8 and 9.

A. C. SMITH,
Chairman Sub-Committee.

tf

CHILDREN'S DAY

At Mount Pleasant Church, five miles northeast of Jemison, on Saturday, July 21, 1906. Everybody invited to come and bring their dinner and spend a good time. We would be glad to have our editor and Probate Judge present. Every come and spend the day.

A. C. ROBINSON,
Superintendent.

tf

CHILDREN'S DAY.

At Cedar Grove Church on July 28, 1906, in Beat 9, a fine program of recitations and music will be rendered by the pupils. Sunday school workers, Editor of The Union, Probate Judge and all good people are invited and will be made heartily welcome.

J. W. HAYS, Superintendent.
MISS ALMA CHILDRESS, Secretary.

PROGRAM

Chilton County Singing Convention at Pleasant Grove Church (6 miles West of Jemison) July 28, 1906.

SATURDAY.

9 a. m. Devotional exercises—[illegible] Wright.

9:30. Welcome address—[illegible] Thomas.

Response—J. Toy Williams.

10 a. m. Methods of Teaching Primary Pupils in the Singing School—Jas. Franklin, C. L. Glasscock.

10:30. Ways to Improve Music in the S. S.—M. C. Crumpton, T. J. [illegible] ron.

11. Music; Its Influence for Good—J. H. Thomas, J. T. Williams and G. Cofer.

1:30 p. m. Singing led by Prof. D. Durham.

2 p. m. Music in the Home—J. Gore and J. B. Northcutt.

2:30. Election of officers, etc.

3:30. Singing led by James Franklin and J. L. Hurst.

SUNDAY.

9 a. m. Devotional exercises—[illegible] Grant.

Singing the remainder of the day, led by the leaders present. All singers and lovers of music are invited. Bring your books, "Singing for Joy," and let's sing for joy.

J. C. VEAZEY, Chairman.

tf

AND COUNTY OFFICIALS.
Circuit Court.
Term—Third Monday in May.
Term—Fourth Monday in Nov.
[illegible] L. Brewer, Tuskegee.
[illegible]—W. B. Bowling, Dadeville.
Sam W. Collins.

Chancery Court.
Term—Second Monday in [illegible]
Term—Second Monday in Sept.
[illegible]lor—Hon. W. W. Whitesides.
[illegible]—Mrs. S. A. Stewart, Clanton.

County Court.
Monday in each month.

Commissioners' Court.
Monday February, first Monday, first Monday June, second Monday July, second Monday August, [illegible]day November.

COUNTY OFFICERS.
[illegible] of Probate—L. H. Reynolds.
[illegible]er—W. T. Callen.
[illegible]—J. M. Morgan.
[illegible]—W. M. Adams.
[illegible]ssessor—L. B. Pounds.
[illegible]llector—T. J. Hubbard.

County Commissioners.
[illegible]istrict—W. H. Conway.
[illegible] District—Alex Glasscock.
[illegible] District—R. P. Kendrick.
[illegible] District—Moses Robinson.

[illegible]upt. of Education.
W. Moore, Clanton.

County Surveyor.
[illegible] Dahl, Calera.

State Senator.
[illegible]. R. Oliver, Calera.

COUNTY CHURCHES.
[illegible]SSIONARY BAPTIST.
[illegible]ANY—Rev. J. L. Neeley, pastor. Sunday and Saturday before. L. Hand, clerk.

[illegible]SALEM—Rev. M. J. Parrish. [illegible]. B. Popwell, clerk.

[illegible] CREEK—Rev. J. L. Busbey. First Sunday and Saturday [illegible]. W. E. Thomas, clerk.

[illegible]NS CHAPEL—Rev. J. H. [illegible] pastor. Third Sunday and before. J. D. Collins, clerk.

[illegible] HILL—Rev. J. H. Thomas. First Sunday and Saturday [illegible]. W. Scott, clerk.

[illegible]ONIA—Rev. J. H. Thomas. Fourth Sunday and Saturday 2:30 p. m. H. H. Armstrong.

[illegible]ANT GROVE—Rev. J. H. [illegible] pastor. Fourth Sunday and before at 11 a. m. D. H. [illegible] clerk.

[illegible]DENCE—Rev. W. W. Robinson. Second Sunday and Saturday before. Riley Robinson, clerk.

[illegible]OTH (Bibb Co.)—Rev. J. H. [illegible] pastor. Second Sunday and before. D. C. Smitherman, [illegible]

[illegible]RIMITIVE BAPTIST.
[illegible]L—Elder J. P. Mobles, pastor. [illegible]nd Sunday and Saturday before. [illegible]T. Abernathy, clerk.

[illegible]THODIST EPISCOPAL.
[illegible] MOUNT—Rev. A. T. Vanstor. Second Sunday. Sing- second and fourth Sunday. Prayer meeting every Wednesday night. Ladies' prayer meeting Saturday afternoon.

[illegible]TERNAL SOCIETIES.
Masonic.
[illegible] R. A. Chapter, No. 116—[illegible]urday, Clanton.

[illegible] Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No. [illegible]th Saturday, Cooper.

[illegible] Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No. [illegible] Saturday, Clanton.

[illegible] Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No. [illegible] Saturday, Billingsley.

[illegible] Lodge, A. F. and A. M. [illegible]-Saturday on or before full [illegible]rbury.

[illegible] Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No. [illegible]rday on or before full moon.

I. O. O. F.
[illegible] Lodge—First and third Sa[illegible]

[illegible] Lodge, No. 304—Second and [illegible]turdays.

[illegible]oodmen of the World.
[illegible]ck Camp, No. 190—First and [illegible]days.
[illegible]e Tribe No. 33—2nd and 4th [illegible] sleeps. Visiting chiefs cordially invited. J. M. Grant, Sachem. [illegible]rish, C. of R.
[illegible] I. O. R. M.
[illegible]me Tribe, No. 96—First and [illegible]days sleep. Visiting chiefs [illegible]rdially invited. R. B. Langston, [illegible]. Patton, Sachem.

NEED MORE.

Well, here I come again, as so lucky before. All fowl freshed since the rain. Hea good here. W. C. Jones and wi ited Sobe Riggins' family Sund and Mrs. George Sorrell, of W are visitors here this week. W glad to see them. Rev. A. L. P filled his regular appointment at ers Sunday. There was a large out Mrs. Ann Elland, of Cedar visited Mrs. Dora Jones Sunday hear some mighty warm talk a me about the F. E. and C. U. if you want success attend the ings regular, don't miss one. and fed hogs are plentiful here. don't need any more. My pen s and I'll quit, and try to get a ne before I come again. With best to the UNION I am the same

BUTTERF

BARBECUE AT TYUS.

On Friday, July 27, 1906 body invited.

G. W. Williams, C. F. Boone, Col J. H. Strange and J. H. Wi committee.

NOTICE TO CANDIDATES.

Under section 11 of an act "To R late Primary Elections in the Sta Alabama," approved October 1, we hereby request each candidat furnish any one of the sub-commi on or before the 14th day of Ju list of names to be appointed ins ors, clerks and returning officers the various voting places, which pointments will be as nearly eq divided as possible among the va candidates. Respectfully,

A. C. SMITH,
J. D. COLLINS,
T. J. DORMINY,
W. J. FOSHEE,
J. N. DENNIS,
G. W. THOMAS,
Sub-Committ

tf

PRIMARY ELECTION.

Notice is hereby given that the ple's primary election will be hel the 6th day of August, 1906, at various voting places in Chilton C ty for the purpose of nominating didates for the offices to be fille said county in the November elec

All qualified voters who will port the nominees of this primary invited to participate.

W. R. JACKSON,
Chairman Republican Ex. Co
A. C. SMITH, Secretary.

W. H. SHAW,
Chairman Populist Ex. Co
J. D. COLLINS, Secretary.

tf

PRIMARY REQUIREMENTS.

In accordance with section 12 the primary election law, any per desiring to submit his name to voters in the People's Primary tion should, not later than 15 d before August 6, 1906, apprise chairman of the sub-committee writing of the fact that he is a ca date in order that his name may placed on the ballot.

There will be two county com sioners to elect in the November tion, one in the first district posed of beats 1 and 2, and one in second district composed of beat and 9.

A. C. SMITH,
tf Chairman Sub-Committe

CHILDREN'S DAY

At Mount Pleasant Church, five m northeast of Jemison, on Saturd July 21, 1906. Everybody invited come and bring their dinner and h good time. We would be glad have our editor and Probate Ju present. Every come and spend lay.

A. C. ROBINSON,
tf Superintendent.

CHILDREN'S DAY.

At Cedar Grove Church on July 906, in Beat 9, a fine program of re ations and music will be rendered t he pupils. Sunday school workers tor of The Union, Probate Judge a ll good people are invited and will made heartily welcome.

J. W. HAYS, Superintendent.
MISS ALMA CHILDRESS, Secy.

PROGRAM

milton County Singing Conven Pleasant Grove Church (5 m West of Jemison) July 28-29.

SATURDAY.

9 a. m. Devotional exercises—J. Wright.
9:30. Welcome address—J. Thomas.
Response—J. Toy Williams.
10 a. m. Methods of Teaching S ary Pupils in the Singing Sch as. Franklin, C. L. Glasscock.
10:30. Ways to Improve Music he S. S.—M. C. Crumpton, T. M. on.
11. Music; Its Influence for Go H. Thomas, J. T. Williams and Cofer.
1:30 p. m. Singing led by Prof. Durham.
2 p. m. Music in the Home—J. ore and J. B. Northcutt.
2:30. Election of officers, etc.
3:30. Singing led by James Fra n and J. L. Hurst.

SUNDAY.

9 a. m. Devotional exercises—J. rant.

Singing the remainder of the d by the leaders present. All s s and lovers of music are in ring your books, "Singing for J d let's sing for joy.

J. C. VEAZEY, Ch

tf

AND COUNTY OFFICIALS.

Circuit Court.
Term—Third Monday in May
Term—Fourth Monday in No

L. Brewer, Tuskegee.
W. B. Bowling, Dadeville.
an W. Collins.

Chancery Court.
Term—Second Monday in
Term—Second Monday in Sep

ller—Hon. W. W. Whitesides.
—Mrs. S. A. Stewart, Clan

County Court.
Monday in each month.

Commissioners' Court.
Monday February, first Mon
, first Monday June, second July, second Monday August, day November.

COUNTY OFFICERS.

of Probate—L. H. Reynolds.
—W. T. Callen.
—J. M. Morgan.
—W. M. Adams.
Assessor—L. B. Pounds.
Collector—T. J. Hubbard.

County Commissioners.
District—W. H. Conway.
District—Alex Glasscock.
District—R. P. Kendrick.
District—Moses Robinson.

Supt. of Education.
J. W. Moore, Clanton.

County Surveyor.
R. Dehl, Calera.

State Senator.
W. R. Oliver, Calera.

COUNTY CHURCHES.

ISSIONARY BAPTIST.
ANY—Rev. J. L. Nocley, pas
Sunday and Saturday be
L. Hand, clerk.

SALEM—Rev. M. J. Parrish,
E. B. Popwell, clerk.

CREEK—Rev. J. L. Busbey,
First Sunday and Saturday
W. E. Thomas, clerk.

NS CHAPEL—Rev. J. H.
pastor. Third Sunday and before. J. D. Collins, clerk.

HILL—Rev. J. H. Thomas,
First Sunday and Saturday
G. W. Scott, clerk.

DONIA—Rev. J. H. Thomas,
Fourth Sunday and Saturday
3:30 p. m. H. H. Armstrong,

ANT GROVE—Rev. J. H.
pastor. Fourth Sunday and before at 11 a. m. D. H.
clerk.

CENCE—Rev. W. W. Robin
tor. Second Sunday and Sat
fore. Riley Robinson, clerk.

ROTH (Bibb Co.)—Rev. J. H.
pastor. Second Sunday and
before. D. C. Smitherman,

PRIMITIVE BAPTIST.

EL—Elder J. P. Mobles, pas
ond Sunday and Saturday be
T. Abernathy, clerk.

ETHODIST EPISCOPAL.

T MOUNT—Rev. A. T. Van
pastor. Second Sunday. Sing
second and fourth Sunday
Prayer meeting every Wed ight. Ladies' prayer meeting
turday afternoon.

ATERNAL SOCIETIES.

Masonic.
R. A. Chapter, No. 116—
turday, Clanton.

le Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No. rth Saturday, Cooper.

e Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No.
rt Saturday, Clanton.

y Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No.
rt Saturday, Billingsley.

n Lodge, A. F. and A. M.,
—Saturday on or before full arbury.

n Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No.
turday on or before full moon.

n Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No.
nday on or before full moon.

I. O. O. F.
n Lodge—First and third Sat

n Lodge, No. 304— Second and Saturdays.

Woodmen of the World.
Jack Camp, No. 190—First and ondays.

rie Tribe No. 18—2nd and 4th ay sleeps. Visiting chiefs cor invited. J. M Grant, Sachem;
arrish, C. of R.

I. O. R. M.
ree Tribe, No. 90—First and ndays sleep. Visiting chiefs
y invited. B. B. Langston, C.
. E. Patton, Sachem.

REWARD! REWARD!

Lost, a white and liver colored Setter Dog, about 15 months old, (large to age), near Rodgers' Cemetery, June 19th. I will pay a liberal reward for his return to me at Clanton, Ala

tf. W. H. SARTOR.

REMOVAL SALE! GREAT BARGAINS!

Having sold my property in Clanton, I am now selling out my stock of general merchandise, shoes, clothing etc., at very low prices. I also have 8 horses, 11 vehicles, harness, etc., for sale cheap. Now is your time to get real bargains. High-class goods at low prices. Come early and take your choice.

Yours for trade,

tf. J. WILEY SMITH

CLANTON COTTON MARKET.

Total receipts to July 18, 1906, 6,515.
Price same date, 10 12c.
Receipts same time in 1905, 7,990.
Price same date, 10 1-4c.

LOCAL AND PERSONAL.

Quite a number of Clanton people went to Picket Springs Friday with the Methodist S. S. Judge Reynolds has been untiring in his efforts to build up the S. S. of his church, as well as aiding in the cause of general S. S. work in our county.

Miss Emma Sims, of Selma, who has been visiting Miss Carrie Littlejohn, returned home Monday. Elbert Littlejohn carried her through the country to Maplesville, where she took the train.

T. W. Robbins was in Clanton Monday. His stepson, Tom Headley, who has been very ill, is on the mend now.

Hon. L. B. Pounds will go to Auburn to attend the Farmers' school next week, he having been delegated by his local of the Farmers' Union (Mt. Pleasant) to attend that function and report the proceedings for the benefit of the members of the union. It would do a world of good to any of our farmers to attend this "round up" at Auburn. You have got to use your head in farming as well as your hands if you want to succeed. The institute holds July 23-28, inclusive.

W. L. McDowell was in Clanton Monday, whence he started out with Candidate Goodgame on a canvassing trip. By the way, Mr. Goodgame has got almost to the 40 mark in the subscriptions he has brought into the UNION. Good boy, Frank.

H. W. Varden was a pleasant visitor Monday.

Wm. Mims, of beat 11, was in Clanton Monday.

M. L. Bates, R. F. Littleton, Henry Robinson and Andrew Davis have gone on a trip through South Alabama looking over the prospects down there for brave hearts and strong muscles.

J. J. Mims was a welcome caller Monday.

Tax Collector Hubbard and son, Munroe, were in Clanton Monday. Mr. Hubbard has made his yearly settlement with the state some time since, though owing to the work put on him by Tax Commissioner Van Derveer, he was not among the first five as usual.

J. N. Dennis was in Clanton Tuesday and left a fine watermelon in THE UNION office. Mr. Dennis is one of the best all round farmers in our county. He is using his head.

G. C. Shaw, the livery man of Jemison, was in town Tuesday. If you want a good team go to Shaw for it when you are in the neighborhood of Jemison.

J. M. Grant and family, of Maben, Miss., are here on a visit to his father, our valued citizen, J. J. Grant.

Don't forget J. Wiley Smith's sale. They do say that his shoes beat the town for quality and price. Try him. He wants to close out the stock and you can get genuine bargains. This is no "fake front sale."

C. C. McDowell was a pleasant visitor Tuesday, leaving a subscription with us to send THE UNION to his brother, "Billy," at Dunham, Ala., where the young man has got a first-class position and is doing well and likes the country.

G. Silas was a pleasant visitor Tuesday.

Judge L. H. Reynolds and W. A. Reynolds left for Colorado Monday. They will be away about 20 days and intend to take everything in, including Pike's Peak. Here's wishing them a pleasant journey and safe return.

Why don't the city authorities cut the weeds and cart away the trash in the streets of our town? Good health as well as good looks demand it. This wet spell will breed musquitos as well as disease.

J. L. Winslow, of Thorsby, "the sweet potato king," is to give a talk on sweet potatoes to the assembled farmers at Alburn next week.

Mrs. Jessie Barnett, of Montgomery, was a guest at the Hotel Wilson Tuesday night.

Attorney Tipton Mullins, who is very ill, was taken to Chattanooga this week for treatment.

Samuel Pate and John Collins were in Clanton Wednesday. Mr. Pate has announced as a candidate for commissioner of the second district.

F. J. Fitts, a candidate for the shrivalty, was in Clanton the forepart of this week, and says his prospects are very good, and that he intends to land the nomination if hard and honest work will do it.

John Garner was in Clanton several days the past week. He is getting ready to move to Florida and says he will try that climate for a year. Mr. Garner also has a good deal to say about the remarkable effects of the water.

MARRIAGE LICENSES.

Albert McGee and Miss Mabel Olga Perry.

THE S. S. CONVENTION.

The County S. S. convention will open at Clanton Saturday, the 21st, and promises to be a successful gathering; though the action of the democrats in calling a political meeting on the same date is not relished very much, and has already had the effect of keeping some away from our town on that day, who otherwise would have liked to participate in the S. S. work, as they don't wish to be counted as attending the democratic powwow.

THE BARNETT IMBROGLIO.

The legal fight between Dr. Barnett, of Verbena, and his wife, Mrs. Jessie Barnett, for the custody of their child little William Forbes Barnett, took on a new phase Wednesday morning when Mrs. Barnett, accompanied by her Clanton attorney, J. Osmond Middleton, and Sheriff Morgan, went to Verbena and got the child. As announced in the state press last week, Dr. Barnett went down to Montgomery and took the child by force and stealth. Mrs. Barnett's attorney at once took legal steps to obtain the custody of the child, and success has crowned his efforts.

NOTICE!

All stockholders of the Farmers' Warehouse and Fertilizer Company, of Thorsby, Ala., are hereby called to meet in Thorsby on July 23, 1906, in annual meeting. The charter and by-laws of this corporation require the stockholders to meet annually and to elect directors and transact other proper corporate business at such meeting. All stockholders are requested to be present at said meeting. Take due notice and govern yourselves accordingly.

J. BICE, President.

Thorsby, Ala., July 18, 1906.

At the county union held at this place on May 17, 1906, the union passed a resolution to build a union warehouse, and appointed a committee to select a suitable place for same. Said committee recommended to the county union held at Union Grove in June that a union warehouse be built at Thorsby, Ala. We, the undersigned subscribe the following amounts; provided $5,000.00 can be raised by Monday, July 23, 1906, to be decided at the annual meeting of stockholders at Thorsby:

Mount Pleasant Union	$500 00
Collins Chapel Union	300 00
L. H. Reynolds	1,000 00
Sam W. Collins	100 00
J. A. Bean	25 00
W. J. Bean	25 00
B. N. Martin	75 00
G. W. Phalin	50 00
W. P. Murrah	25 00
Steve Pate	25 00
J. R. Billingsley	25 00
J. W. Collins	25 00
L. J. Jones	25 00
T. M. Driver	25 00
J. T. Mims	25 00
T. J. Collins	50 00
R. H. Bean	25 00
J. R. Martin	50 00
C. M. Johnston	25 00
T. W. Childress	25 00
W. R. Robinson	25 00
J. P. Barrett	25 00
H. F. H. Hartelius	25 00
J. D. Collins	25 00
G. C. Michelson	25 00
G. W. Freeman	25 00
E. H. Adams	25 00
J. R. Parnell	50 00
J. J. Stanley	50 00
J. W. Hays	50 00
W. F. Maddox	25 00
T. J. Martin	25 00
W. C. Edler	50 00
J. Bice	275 00
I. S. Gerald	50 00
J. F. Peterson	125 00
J. H. Benson	25 00
P. K. Villadsen	50 00
Gust. Berlin	50 00
R. W. Scott	25 00
G. H. Gerald	50 00
C. L. Forsman	50 00
J. W. Littleton	25 00
A. Eiland	50 00
L. V. Stabler	50 00
A. Horn	25 00
W. C. Martin	25 00
Martin Franklin	25 00
J. G. Hayes	50 00
Charles Eiland	25 00
J. R. Collins	25 00
J. H. Eiland	25 00
D. H. Gentry	50 00
I. N. Gentry	200 00
—.— Killingsworth	50 00
J. L. Vines	25 00
John A. Carlson	25 00
J. H. Thomas	25 00
W. E. Thomas	25 00
Total	$4,275 00

Everybody is invited to come on Monday and take stock.

J. BICE.

HAPPY HOME.

Health here is good at present and plenty of rain. I'd be glad to see a piece from Sandtown, as that is a pretty country. Mrs. Bussey spent Sunday at Mrs. Pink Shaw's. Lee Vickers was a welcome visitor Saturday. M. H. Bussey says that THE UNION is the best thing for farmers. J. M., with the best of company, was to the singing at Unity and reports a nice time. Chickens are plenty, there not being many preachers around yet. With best wishes to THE UNION and its readers.

NOBODY'S DARLING.

WATSON'S MAGAZINE.

The leading exponent of Jeffersonian Democracy, edited by Hon. Thos. E. Watson, of Georgia, the Father of Rural Free Delivery; author of "The Story of France," "Life of Napoleon," "Life and Times of Thomas Jefferson," "Bethany" and other books. Mr. Watson was the People's party nominee for Vice-President in 1896, and for President in 1904. He is today heading a middle-class reform movement which is bound to sweep the country in a short time.

Watson's Magazine is not a Socialist publication. It does not stand for collective ownership of all the means of production. Mr. Watson believes in public or government ownership of railroads, telegraphs and telephones; in municipal ownership of street railways, gas electric lights, water works, etc.; and he believes in private ownership of all industries not natural monopolies.

The middle class—the home owners, farmers, small business men and property owners—won Jefferson's victory in 1800; won Jackson's victory over Nick Biddle's money power in 1832; won Lincoln's victory in 1860. But each time after the flush of victory had died away they became careless of their rights and went to sleep. They have slept a good portion of the time since 1865, but—

Watson's Magazine is waking them up. Another great victory is in the air. Keep in touch with the movement.

Fifteen cents a copy at news stands; $1.50 a year by mail. Sample copy for four 2-cent stamps and four names of reading friends. Address,

TOM WATSON'S MAGAZINE,
121 West Forty-second Street,
New York City.

SPECIAL CLUBBING RATE.

WATSON'S MAGAZINE AND THE UNION A YEAR FOR ONLY $1.75. WHY NOT SAVE THE 75 CENTS? LEAVE ORDERS AT THIS OFFICE.

tf

F. E. & C. U. O A.

A resolution was adopted at the last county meting of the Farmers' Union requiring the county lecturer to visit each local in the county at least once every year. Locals who want me to lecture to them will please write me, giving their location, so as to enable me to make a tour of the county in July and August. Address

C. N. EILAND,
tf Route 4, Clanton, Ala.

SPECIAL OFFER! !

The Union, Weekly Montgomery Advertiser, and a great white and black map of Alabama, United States and world, three in one, with a picture of every president from Washington to Roosevelt, all for $1.50.

FOR SALE.

160 acres land, 65 acres in cultivation; two miles south of Calera; good dwelling and outbuildings; good and lasting water; very good soil. Will be sold at a bargain.

H. M. BUSBEY,
tf Calera, Ala.

Notice No. 20906.

NOTICE FOR PUBLICATION.

Department of the Interior, Land Office at Montgomery, Ala., July 9, 1906.

Notice is hereby given that the following-named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim, and that said proof will be made before Clerk of Circuit Court, at Clanton, Ala., on Sept. 1, 1906, viz.: George W. Pate. Homestead entry No. 34394, for the E 1-2 of Ne 1-4, E 1-2 of Se 1-4 of Section 2, Tp. 23, in R 15 E.

He names the folowing witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of said land, viz.:

Rolffee F. Bates, of Clanton, Ala.; John Davis, of Clanton, Ala.; William L. Littleton, of Shelby, Ala.; and William M. Willis, of Shelby, Ala.

ROBERT D. JOHNSTON,
Register.

NOTICE.

Blank Deeds, Mortgages, and all official forms for Justices of the Peace, etc., for sale at The Union Office. Only best approved forms are used. Come in and give us your order. tf.

A trip abroad is a nice thing to brag about, but the real enjoyment of it is getting home to good things to eat.

E. G. Rollins & Co.

—DEALERS IN—

General Merchandise, Clothing, Shoes and Fancy Groceries.

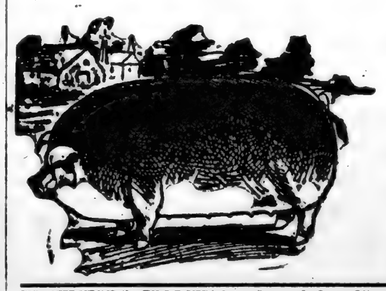
CLANTON, :-: ALABAMA.

WOODLAWN FARM.

Barred Plymouth Rocks

PURE BRED

Setting of 15 fresh eggs for 50c. Packing for shipping 10c extra.



PURE BRED

Duroc Jersey Hogs.

Write us for prices before you buy. Address,

W. Y. NIX,
Maplesville, Alabama.

A. A. JACKSON

Lomax, Alabama.

General merchandise, corn, hay, shorts, shoes, men's hats, Ladies hats. Best quality and lowest prices in all goods.

Highest Market Price Paid for Chickens and Eggs.

J. E. Littlejohn

Clanton, Alabama.

General Merchandise, Corn, Hay, etc.

SHOES

The most for the money in town. Come and see us and we will do you good. :-: :-: :-: :-: :-:

FOR SALE

At all times, high grade hogs and pigs, Berkshire and Poland China, crossed.

M. J. BARRETT,
tf Thorsby, Ala.

BUSINESS PROPOSITION

The best whiskey in the country is here. If you don't believe it, try me.

J. M. COLLINS,
Palace Saloon, Calera, Ala.
tf.

CRAWFORD & SAMMONS Blacksmiths Horseshoers & wheel wrights. At the "Old Vine stand" Clanton, Ala. Horse-shoeing 80 cent; Shrinking Buggy tires 50 cents; New tires 65 cents. Other work in proportion. Come and see us. tf.

MONEY TO LOAN

On real estate. Call or write me at my abiding place with Mr. G. W. Foshee, one mile northeast of Clanton, R. F. D. No. 1. Come during banking hours, as I keep my money in the bank.

tf JAMES GLASS.

FOR SALE!

300 acres land, 150 acres in cultivation. All in Sec. 6 T., 20, R., 14, 9 miles S. W. of Clanton. Good dwelling house and out buildings and 3 good tenant houses. Good and lasting well of water. This good farming land will be sold at a bargain. Call and see,

tf J. H. CARTER,
Clanton, R. F. D. No.

GINNING SEASON 1906-7

We have engaged Joe and Walter Maddox to run and operate our gins for the coming season. We have the best machinery and with these men to operate it, we can guarantee entire satisfaction to those who patronize us. Bring us your cotton.

Respectfully
Chilton Warehouse & M,f,g. Company. tf.

FOR SALE OR RENT!

Land for sale, or to rent. One, two, three and four horse farms; two miles north of Jemison. Call on or address,

J. C. DUBOSE,
tf. Jemison, Ala.

SHEEP WANTED!

I want to buy sheep, will pay cash. If you have any to sell address,

W. A. MARTIN,
R. F. D. No. 5, Clanton.

CHANCE OF A LIFE-TIME!

Five native cows, better than the average, all nearly fresh.

Must go at once to make room for Jerseys. Also 16 three-quarter blood. Poland China pigs, ready for delivery June 25th. Fine as silk going at $3.00 each. First come, first served.

M. J. BARRETT,
tf. Thorsby, Ala.

THE PULPIT.

A SCHOLARLY SUNDAY SERMON BY THE REV. R. M'DONALD.

Subject: "Beauty: How to Keep It."

BROOKLYN, N. Y.—Sunday evening the Rev. Robert MacDonald, pastor of the Washington Avenue Baptist Church, preached to young women. His subject was "Beauty: How to Keep It." His text was from Proverbs iv., 23. "Keep thy heart with all diligence, for out of it are the issues of life." Mr. MacDonald said:

What has such a text to do with beauty? Everything. The source is the heart. Beauty of character depends on quality of heart. Every thought, desire, sentiment, ambition, that enters the heart is sooner or later expressed in character and conduct. All the life issues radiate from that center. And when the writer of the Proverbs tells us to keep the heart with all diligence, he speaks the foundation word of all wisdom and carries us back to the primary cause of truth or error, righteousness or sin. We have already seen in this series that beauty of character is a divine possession, existing only where truth holds sway. And that we can never satisfy the claims of Almighty God until we give back to Him that which is possible to us all—beauty of character, instead of illformed, homeup, unsymmetrical lives. What Michael Angelo said once to a young artist about his statue applies to us all. "Do not trouble too much about the light on your statue. The light of the public square will test its value." So the light of the public square beyond, which is the light of God's countenance, the unerring light of judgment, will be the test of our characters. All modelling, all building, should be with the light of eternity's public square in mind. We are all under obligation, a contract based on and rooted in our very constitution, to build for eternity, inasmuch as the Creator has marked out a celestial destiny for us all, and it ought to be our chief business to conform to that gracious provision which will mean realization along all infinite lines throughout the eternal years. Be careful, then, oh, be careful, what influences you bring to bear upon the formation of your characters. No outward embellishing, no exterior molding, will suffice. It depends upon what you receive in your heart whether your character will be perverted and deformed, or true, well proportioned, beautiful.

Numberless are the precepts that suggest themselves just here. All the Christian virtues bound toward us to offer their assistance to help us keep that we have striven so hard to acquire. We gladly accept their help, but instead of packing your memories with these multitudinous aids to the retaining of this high possession, let us fasten our thought on a few foundation principles.

The first I would suggest is self-control. No beauty of character can be where there is no self-control. Daniel Webster was once asked which he thought the greatest virtue. It was just after one of his most powerful speeches, but in which, interrupted and contradicted by the opposing counsel, he lost his temper, and also the case he was pleading. That evening, in the course of conversation, he was asked the question, and answered, "Self-control, and it is the most difficult, too." 'Tis true, young women. It is an underlying principle, including a host of greater virtues. Who has not felt sorely the need of greater self-control. Patience is represented in the Scriptures as the very fruitage of Christianity, but patience is only a constituent part of self-control—namely, self-control in pain, in affliction. Very Christ-like it is. Endurance of wrong treatment. Misunderstanding. So easy to complain, and be disagreeable when the sky is dull, and the way drear. I refer not to that patience that springs from our natural disposition, which is purely temperamental. Constitutional heroism is good, but it does not stand the strain. A patience that fails at the hardest point, is weak all through. Nothing short of the Christ type of patience will suffice.

But not only self-control in pain, also in pleasure, another name for which is temperance. Young ladies need to be temperate as well as young men. I am not referring to the liquor question, although never more need than to-day for temperance there, but to the whole problem of living. To be temperate in thought, in speech, in desire, in act instead of extravagant. It is so easy to let pleasure run away with us and cause us to think life has no value beside. Dissipation is only extravagance in pleasure. The curb has been thrown off our necks. Pleasure was given too much license. We entertained it too freely, endowed it with our own personality, and before we were aware of it, it took us up in its arms and ran away with us. We handed the control of the situation over to it. We became dissipated. We are lost. Self-control in pleasure as well as in pain is the demand. Temperance as well as patience.

But a second requirement is self-command. This may be regarded as intensified self-control. Self-control is passive. Self command is active. The other is to force yourself on. Patience and temperance are good, indispensable to beauty of character. Forbearance and forgiveness are harder still. We speak from experience in saying so. Controlling your speech, withholding the adverse criticism when just dying to speak, to give your adverse opinion. We often think we are not saying anything worth while unless we criticise. Forbearance of the senseless gossip, and the retailing of slander. Forbearance of the disagreeable person.

Then forgiveness of that which it is natural for you to resent. We like to hold spite. They injured me. I must get even with them. And we never thought that the getting even with one who has injured us means to get uneven with ourselves and uneven with God. "I will never forgive," spells human nature. But it also spells basest sin. Not until we can stand with Jesus and say, "Father, forgive them," have we any beauty of character worthy the name. To hate is human; to forgive is divine. To remember that is to help yourself over many a hard place of temper and hatred. It is an axiom that no beauty of character can be where no spirit of forgiveness abides in the heart. Hatred, anger, tying yourself up into a knot, kills beauty. Forgiveness expands the heart, opens the mind, exalts the spirit. Then beauty exists. Would you be able to command self? Get rid of sin. Bring in a stronger will. God's, to reinforce your own.

A third necessity in the retaining of beauty is self-forgetfulness. This is a passive quality, as is self-control. It is also negative. But it is neither passive nor negative until certain active graces and positive virtues enter in and make it so. I mean by self-forgetfulness the becoming oblivious to those desires and demands of your nature, the remembrance of which make you self-contained and ill at ease, even miserable and sinful. To become so, possess faith, belief in some personality greater than yourself. Belief in any objective fact or person more important than yourself, and they all are, for you are a very insignificant factor in the life problem, a mere atom in the midst of the sensualities, will produce self-forgetfulness. The greater the object of faith the greater the oblivion of self; for it gives self a chance to expand along the line of the other person's excellence, and gradually a newer, larger self takes the place of the old in your consciousness. It is a foregone conclusion that faith in God, through Jesus Christ, enlarges and regulates the life as can no other person, for you are immediately given the worthiest possible object on which to fix your attention.

Then trust. Do not be afraid to trust somebody. Test, then trust. More loss comes to us mortals through under trust than through over trust. It is hard to believe it, just as hard to believe as to believe that sins of omission are more unpardonable at the hand of God than sins of commission. Sins of omission are so vague and attenuated that they cut little or no figure in our consciousness. We need to be preached to that these are the great lack among mortals in the consciousness of Almighty God. The higher and grander the object of your trust, the more beautiful the character fashioned. Really remarkable that we are so constructed that we can trust beyond sense perceptions. It shows us to be spirit more than aught else. The heart in us all was destined before the foundation of the earth to be God's guest chamber. Forbid him entrance, entertain less important guests, and the spirit is burdened, and the heart is sad. It is His residence, by both creation and redemption. And still we are such foolish children not to yield to God and find rest, eternal rest, infinite calm, that no turmoil in time or eternity can overthrow. All this helps us to see why trust in Jesus produces beauty in the life. He was the beautiful life "par excellent." All the virtues blossomed and emitted fragrance in Him.

Of course, self-forgetfulness is enhanced and made more sure through love. And faith and trust always blossom into love exercised toward a spiritual object. Love is the peerless transformer of our life. All else is medial. Love only is ultimate. Love only is all-powerful to mold like unto itself. Love God and you become God-like. Self slips out the same door that God comes in. They pass each other on the threshold. The evicted tenant goes out bruised, defeated, friendless. The victor, ruler of our fate, comes in with all strength of cheer and grace of countenance, and all wealth of blessing in His outstretched hands. No trouble henceforth to forget self, and no difficulty to be beautiful. In forgetting self we forget our weakness and failures, our disappointed hopes and sorrows. Then the soil is ready for the good seed to be sown, for truth and righteousness to grow, for beauty to blossom.

This array of foundation principles is hardly complete without self-surrender. The give-up principle in life counts for all. The reason we do not find is because we are afraid to lose. We fail to take hold of truth because we fail to let go of ourselves. Through obedience we become divine. Ah, you say, you are beguiling us into religion. Just so. Did you dream you could possess beauty of character without being religious? We desire to proclaim nothing other than the old gospel. But to set it before you in new dress and under an attractive, bewitching title. A man hearing the second sermon of this series forced his way to the pulpit after it was done, and exclaimed, "I thought you would be sensational. The subject looked it, but you everlastingly preached Christ to-night. I am both disappointed and pleased." Yes, That's where the effectiveness of the gospel comes in. It refuses to be suppressed. No topic, if the preacher be true, can strike home, however roundabout the journey it takes, without meeting Christ somewhere in the way. And when the meeting takes place, Jesus always gains the central place, and glides into our consciousness as the hope of glory. Christ's place of residence is in the heart. He is the God-destined Master of Ceremonies. He directs the life issues that emanate from that citadel of attack and defense. Let Him in and all is well. Then it is easy to keep the heart with all diligence. Remember, the heart's emphasis is always right. Emerson said another lasting thing. What the heart deems great is great. The Master of Men as our Master will see to it that all the life issues will be true and beautiful. Sorrow will not corrode those outgoing tides of affection. Sin will not weaken them. Death will not obliterate nor overwhelm them. Nor eternity exhaust them. God will recognize the beauty and exclaim, "Well done; enter into the joys of thy Lord."

Wesley's Motto.

John Wesley's motto: "Get all you can; save all you can; give all you can" should be taken to heart by everyone who wants to become efficient in the service of God and to know the joy of fellowship with God in Christ.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

INTERNATIONAL LESSON COMMENTS FOR JULY 22.

Subject: Jesus Teaching How to Pray, Luke xi., 1-13—Golden Text, Luke xi., 1—Memory Verses, 9, 10—Topic: How to Supplicate—Commentary.

I. Christ teaching His disciples to pray (vs. 1-4). 1. "Was praying." It was the habit of Christ to pray. "When He ceased." Perhaps He was praying such a powerful prayer as to arouse the feeling that they knew not how to pray aright. "As John also taught." Each new dispensation may not only have its new unfolding of truths, but its new revelations may open new modes of access, and new topics of prayer and modes of worship. A different prayer was offered in the Mosaic ritnal from the patriarchal form. John opened up a new scope of prayer, and this new dispensation requires of Jesus to set the range of prayer in accordance with the new range of truth, and the new position of man with God.

2. "Say." The beauty and value of the lessons in the Lord's prayer arise from, 1. The tone of holy confidence—it teaches us to approach God as our Father (Rom. 8:15), in love as well as holy fear. 2. Its absolute unselfishness—it is offered for all the brotherhood of man. 3. Its entire spirituality—of seven petitions, one only is for any earthly boon, and that only for the simplest. 4. Its brevity and absence of all vain repetitions (Eccl. 5:2). 5. Its simplicity, which requires not learning, but only holiness and sincerity for its universal comprehension. For these reason the fathers called it the "epitome of the gospel." "Our Father." An expression of love and condescension. "Which art in heaven." In the former clause we express His nearness to us, in this His distance from us. This phrase in the Scriptures seems used to express, 1. His omnipresence (1 Kings 8:27). 2. His majesty and dominion (2 Chron. 20:6). 3. His power and might (Psa. 115:3). 4. His omniscience (Psa. 33:13-15). 5. His infinite purity and holiness (Isa. 57:15). "Hallowed be Thy name." The "name" stands for the man himself—his character, his ability, his possessions. "Thy kingdom come." The kingdom of His power, His gospel. His grace and His glory. "Thy will be done." The will of God is infinitely good, wise and holy. "As in heaven." By the angels and all the hosts of heaven. "So in earth." By mortals.

3. "Give us." The good things of this life are the gifts of God. "Day by day." In the order in which our needs are felt. "Our daily bread." Life's most common necessity. Strength to gain it, skill to earn it, power to eat—all are from God.

4. "Forgive us our sins." Sin is here represented as a debt. "We also forgive." Else how could we entreat Thee for pardon. "Not into temptation." As the prayer for daily bread raises us above care for to-day, and the prayer for the forgiveness of sins is meant to quiet us concerning the past, so is the prayer against temptation a weapon for the uncertain future, that we may not fall again under the might of evil. "Deliver us from evil." From all the wicked fascination and miserable results of sin, from its blindness and insensibility, from its unspirituality and rebellion, from its hardness and its punishment; from all that dishonors God and ruins the soul, from its guilt, its power, its shame and its doom.

II. The parable of the importunate borrower (vs. 5-8). 5. "He said." Although idle repetitions in prayer are forbidden, yet persistency and importunity in prayer, wrestling with God and not letting Him go until He has blessed us, are here distinctly taught. See Luke 18:1-8. "Midnight." In those hot countries it is common, where it can be done safely, to travel in the night. "Lend me." It was usual with the Jews to borrow bread of one another.

6. "Friend—is come." Benighted, belated and who has lost his way. A strong reason why he should have prompt relief. 7. "Trouble me not." The trouble made him insensible both of the urgency of the case and the claims of friendship. "In bed." We learn from travelers that it is usual in the East for a whole family to sleep in the same room, each laying his mattress on the floor. "I cannot." Without exertion, which was equal to, "I will not." 8. "His importunity." Literally, his shamelessness; that is, his unblushing persistence.

III. The disciples urged to persistency in prayer (vs. 9-13). 9. "I say unto you." We have it from Christ's own mouth, who knows His Father's mind. "Ask—seek—knock." In everything, by prayer and supplication, we are to make our requests known unto God; then we are to "seek"—continue to ask and knock at the door of His mercy.

10. "Everyone—receiveth," etc. Christ promiseth to hear and answer. No soul can pray in vain that prays as God has directed. 11, 12. "If a son shall ask," etc. From that which the friend will do, the discourse of the Saviour rises even to that which one could expect of a "father," and from that which an imperfect earthly father does even to that which the perfect Father in heaven bestows.

13. "Being evil." Sinful people are ready and anxious to give good gifts to their children. "How much more." How much more will one whose nature is love and who is infinitely holy and good give good things to them that ask Him. "Holy Spirit." The essence of all good gifts which the Father in heaven can bestow on His praying child, "To them that ask." The asking must be hearty, sincere, earnest, fervent and in faith.

Pope Pius X. Ill.

Rome.—Alarm has been caused throughout the world by the reported illness of Pope Pius X. The physicians at the Vatican, however, deny that it is serious, and hope that if the Pope can be persuaded to take sufficient rest he will speedily recover. His duties as head of the Roman Catholic church are very arduous, and he permits himself little relaxation.

The Greenland whale often lives 400 years.

A Great Woman Rules China

MARVELS WORKED BY THE DOWAGER EMPRESS IN SIX YEARS.

In 1900 She Was Described as a Fiend Incarnate—Now She is Leading in the Task of Reconstructing the Chinese Nation and is Foremost in Reform.

Six years ago the foreigners living in Pekin were in imminent danger of annihilation at the hands of a fanatical horde spurred into their fury by a savage and heartless ruler, writes the Pekin (China) correspondent of the New York Sun. It is said of her in those days that, while in the midst of a social chat, she could, and frequently did, without a perceptible quiver or change or expression, consign subjects to the most horrible death, and then proceed with the conversation as though nothing of moment had happened. If the rumors afloat concerning this remarkable woman, the greatest in Chinese history—if not in world history—have any foundation in fact, Lady Macbeth, holding in her white hands the bloody dagger, has in her Majesty the Empress Dowager an equal.

Six years ago death was the penalty for even associating with a foreigner. A Chinese interpreter who refused to flee southward from Pekin through Honan province with his employer started to return to the city. The Boxers met him, discovered evidences of his occupation on his person, and hacked him to pieces.

Six years ago foreign devils and their associates were eagerly hunted by savages, brandishing swords dripping with the blood of innocent children, and the possession of property captured from the ruins of the home of an unfortunate foreign devil was the cause of great rejoicing and gave the possessor immunity from the marauding bands who relentlessly obeyed the commands of a heartless monarch.

Six years have worked marvels—if the predictions written in 1900 are any criterion—both in regard to the Chinese people and in regard to their august ruler, who is no longer looked upon as a fiend incarnate, but as one of the most capable and diplomatic rulers of the world.

With the exception of one viceroy—possibly one or two others—she was the first to realize the seriousness of the mistake in 1900, and accordingly planned for a reconstructive reformation. Her task was one that might well stagger the most astute statesman.

Macao, Hongkong, Wei-hai-wei, Tsing-tau, and Port Arthur were in foreign hands; a section of the city of Pekin, a mile long and half a mile wide, bordering on the Imperial City and inside the Tartar Wall, was ceded by the treaty of 1900 to the foreign powers then in possession, and the same treaty stipulated that the foreign powers were permitted to station troops both in legation quarters and along the railway to the coast.

Manchuria and Korea were swiftly gliding away in the embrace of a marvellously innocent looking animal. The press of Europe clamored for the dismemberment of the empire as the only safe solution.

Apparently undaunted by the stupendous task, the Empress Dowager began laying the foundation for China's future greatness. The anti-foreign feeling as such has been gradually dying out, with occasional flarings up in the south of the dying embers, and a new and more effective programme has taken its place, namely, that by following Japan's example China is destined to become one of the leading nations of the world.

Accordingly there is scarcely a department of the Government which has not a foreign staff of advisers—especially is this true in the case of officials who have not received a foreign education. Foreigners are in demand as instructors in the colleges and universities, and native Christians who have received a modern education in the mission institutions are not sufficient in number to supply the demand.

By imperial edict vast numbers of Buddhist temples have been ordered to be used for modern public school buildings, and in one district the magistrate issued a circular requesting the people to stop spending money in foolish worship of idols and instead to put the money they are accustomed to use in this way into the modern public school fund. Compulsory education has been recommended to the Board of Education. Reorganization on modern lines is taking place in every department of Government, and schools for the education of girls are springing up in many of the large cities.

In line with her policy of adopting what is best from foreign countries, the High Commissioners have been sent abroad to study the science of modern government, and upon their return it is expected that the draft of a constitutional form of government, which has been under process of formation for the past two years, will be speedily concluded.

An even more significant indication of the Government's persuasive policy has been shown by the Empress Dowager in encouraging financially the establishment of the Union Medical College in Pekin, which is but one department of a union educational institution in North China participated in by all the Protestant mission societies in Pekin, namely, Church of England Mission, London Mission, Methodist Episcopal Mission, American Board Mission, and Presbyterian Mission. At the opening ceremonies, which took place February 19 last, she sent as her special representative His Excellency Na Tung, Generalissimo of Pekin, honorary chairman of the occasion.

Every official board was represented among the twenty or thirty high Chinese officials who were present, and Wu Ting Fang was doubtless responsible for the presence of all the high officials on the Board of Punishments. Among the list of distinguished Chinese we mention the following: Prince Pu Lun, Jungching, president of the Board of Education; Sun Saou, president of the Board of War; General Chiang, Lien Fang, and Tong Shao-yi, of the Wai Wu Pu (Foreign Office); Wu Ting Fang and Hu Yu Fen, Board of Punishments, and Sun Chia Nai, the first president of the Board of Education.

For the first time in Chinese history imperial recognition was unstintingly given to missionary enterprise—and fully half the number of the high officials present drove to the hospital in their own foreign carriages. This latter fact is not without significance when we reflect that only two or three years ago one of these same officials was reprimanded by the Empress Dowager for using a means of conveyance that was unknown to his ancestors.

During these days if you pick up a daily paper you will notice headlines, "Improvement of Prisons," "A New Normal School"—for Chile, under Viceroy Yuan Shi Kai; "Wireless Telegraphy"—for Pekin and Poating-fu; "Naval Colleges"—to be established at Chefu and Shanghai, with preliminary foreign instructors; "Police for Urga"—organizing on a modern basis.

Chao Ehr Sun, governor-general at Mukden, has asked the throne for a large corps of foreign educated Chinese to assist him in the reconstruction of the Government in Manchuria, and Yuan Shih Kai, China's foremost statesman, viceroy of Chili province, now has an army of 60,000 soldiers as a guarantee of peace and protection in his province, and the throne has ordered the other viceroys to follow his example as fast as possible.

If there is one person in China today who can be trusted with the lives of foreigners, that person is Yuan Shih Kai, who in 1900 maintained peace and absolute safety in Kwangtung province while the Boxers raged on all sides, and who used his foreign drilled soldiers in behalf of the foreigners. Because the Government is in sympathy with such progressive men as the viceroy of Chili, the powers are gradually becoming convinced of China's being able in the near future to maintain her integrity. It is this confidence in the Government and Yuan Shih Kai that caused the diplomatic corps in Pekin to recommend the withdrawal of the foreign troops stationed in various parts of Chili province.

In the above we have scarcely touched upon the actual advancement that has been made, but enough has been mentioned to convince those who are interested that there is much to be said that would lead the careful and candid observer to suspect that the commandant in Pekin who on a certain night had four sentries patrolling around his quarters, while one sentry's post extended into the legation compound, must certainly have had visions that were not induced by a calm study of the situation; and yet there is something taking place in China which those of a nervous disposition regard with no small degree of apprehension.

Commendable Blindness.

To succeed in business we must shut our eyes to diversions; in learning we must shut our eyes to amusements; in the family and in society we must shut our eyes to the faults of our friends; in religion we must shut our eyes to the examples of most professed Christians; no man can see beauty, be happy or gain power who does not know how to shut his eyes. Blessed be blindness;—From a Sermon by Frank Crane, Worcester, Mass.

The Eternal Feminine.

The pot may call the kettle black, but if she is a female pot she will argue that black is becoming to her her anyhow.

There never was a wedding at which some woman didn't size up the bride and say: "Well, there's no accounting for tastes."

It is becoming to be a well known fact that trained nurses are peculiarly subject to attacks of appendicitis, although the cause is not very clearly explained.

News of the Week

WASHINGTON.

Secretary Shaw offered $30,000,000 bonds of the Panama Canal loan, to bear interest at the rate of two per cent. and mature August 1, 1906.

The government received reports that hostilities have broken out between Salvador and Guatemala.

The crop report issued by the department of Agriculture estimates the acreage of corn planted at 95,535,000 acres; increase 1,000,000.

The Commissioner of Fisheries reports that the value of the fishery products taken and sold by United States fishermen in 1905 was $15,000,000.

OUR ADOPTED ISLANDS.

Lieut. Tallmadge H. Bean, of the Second Infantry, committed suicide by shooting himself through the head at the Army and Navy Club, Manila, P. I.

Okomotu, Japanese, and a native of Colon, a native of Porto Rico, both of whom killed their wives, were hanged at Honolulu, Hawaii. The Japanese, in a speech from the gallows, begged the pardon of his government for having disgraced the nation.

Members of the Philippine Commission returned to Manila from their summer session at Baguio.

Commissioner Worcester is slowly recovering from a severe attack of pneumonia at Manila, and the commisisoners are taking hold of their duties.

Justice MacLeary, of Porto Rico, obtained a license to marry his divorced wife in Philadelphia.

Montalon, the most notorious outlaw in the Island of Luzon, who is credited with numerous murders, outrages on women and mutilation of prisoners, surrendered to Col. Bandholtz, of the constabulary at Bataogas.

An extraordinary session of the Legislature at San Juan, P. R., convened to appropriate money for the purchase of the pier of the New York & Porto Rico Steamship company in San Juan harbor.

DOMESTIC.

The Carnegie and the Bethlehem Steel Companies will take the naval armor plate contracts on the same terms offered by the Midvale Company in order that the plants should not be idle.

A woman who gave her name as "Esac"—Case spelled backward—made a determined effort to kill President Roosevelt at Oyster Bay, but was stopped by his guards.

Harvey L. Shaffer, uncle of Alonzo S. Phipps, was killed in an automobile accident at Sayville, Long Island.

President Winthrop, of the Board of Education, says the statement made by Prof. W. Stull, of Shippensburg, Pa., that positions in New York State schools are purchased untrue of Manhattan.

Mrs. Frederick Hoare, a daughter of Judge Dunne, and her bridegroom was killed in an automobile English railway wreck, not in New York City with the bride.

The marriage of Thomas Fortune Ryan, son, Jr., may reconcile the father and his son.

Mrs. Samuel Greenbaum, wife of a New York Supreme Court justice, was struck by a golf ball and may lose the sight of one eye.

J. Bruce Ismay, head of the International Mercantile Marine Company, arrived in New York City on the Oceanic and announced that two ocean liners are to be built.

Ex-Judge Hargis, on trial at Beattyville, Ky., for complicity in the murder of B. Marcum, denied the charges and villified the State's witnesses and the prosecuting attorney.

Chicago packers deny the charges of Massachusetts Health Bureau which reported finding sulphites in meat products.

Curtis Jett testified in the Hargis murder trial at Beattyville, Ky., that he killed J. B. Marcum but that the latter was his deadly enemy.

W. M. Oler, President of the American Ice Company, has issued a statement in defence of the company.

A Mexican Central Railroad official in New Orleans said a new organization, opposed to the present policy, was spreading and that the sentiment throughout the country was

FOREIGN.

Serious charges in connection with the classification of American goods made by the Association of Rhenish and Westphalian manufacturers.

Ex-President Tomas Regalado was killed in a fight between Salvadorean and the Guatemalan troops in which the former were defeated.

William J. Bryan, in an address in London, denied that he had become more conservative in his views.

Tartars attacked a mosque and pillaged the city of Van, in Asiatic Turkey.

Eighty British warships, which cost $50,000,000 to build, are sold to the junkman a few days later for $400,000.

Forty thousand Hebrew men, women and children, fled from Kishineff saw, fearing massacre.

Iquique, Chile, a seaport town, was swept by fire.

John D. Rockefeller, Sr., declares his belief that talk of his retiring from France is "all poppycock" and announced his sailing for America.

A memorial service for those killed in the wreck of the Empress was held at St. Paul's Cathedral, London.

The body of Louis Paul Dessar, a painter of New York, who lost his life while mountain climbing, has been recovered at Davos, Switzerland.

...LY WORN OUT.

...ed by Years of Suffering ... Kidney Trouble.

...W. Hogan, former post-... Indianola, now living at Austin, Texas, writes: "I was afflicted for years with pains across the loins and in the hips and shoulders. I had headache also and neuralgia. My right eye, from pain, was ... use to me for years. The ... flow of urine kept my system ...ted, causing nervous chills ...t sweats. After trying seven ...climates and using all kinds ...cine I had the good fortune ... of Doan's Kidney Pills. This ... has cured me. I am as well ... I was twenty years ago, and ...ght is perfect."

...by all dealers. 50 cents a ... Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, ...

...Y FOR OLD STATE HOUSE

...e Hartford Building Was Erected.

...oking over some old papers ...e has in his possession, Town ...Joseph O. Goodwin, of East ...d, came across a copy of a ... of 1704, the exact date not be...own, states the New Haven ...r. It contains a number of in...g news items and matters of ... interest. Of especial interest ... time was an advertisement of ...y for the benefit of the state ... which was about to be built ...tford. The advertisement fol...

...managers of the lottery grant...the legislature of this state, to...building a state house in Hart...resent to the public the follow...eme:

...rize of $8,000	$8,000
...rize of $4,000	4,000
...rize of $2,000	2,000
...rizes of $1,000	2,000
...rizes of $500	4,000
...rizes of $200	5,200
...rizes of $100	5,000
...rizes of $50	4,000
...rizes of $40	6,000
...rizes of $30	8,000
...rizes of $20	80,000
...rizes of $10	135
...st drawn blank
... prizes.	$123,335
... blanks.

...tickets at $5 each is not two ...anks to a prize.

...ject to a deduction of 12 1-2 per ...

...drawing of the lottery shall ...ence as soon as three-fourths of ...kets are sold. A list of the for... numbers shall be printed in ...n, Hudson & Goodwin's paper at ...rd and forwarded to all agents ... this state, who may dispose of ... Those prizes not demanded ... months after the drawing shall ...mpleted, will be considered as ...ously given for the benefit of the ...y.

NOADIAH HOOKER,
JOHN CHESTER,
JOHN CALDWELL,
Managers.

...population of Morocco can only ...essed. No census has ever been ... The best authorities estimate ...nhabitants to number about 7,...0.

...haps the public printer would do ... with important public docu... If not compelled to deal with so ... trash.

OUTDOOR LIFE

Not Offset the Ill Effects of ...ee When One Cannot Digest It.

...farmer says:

...t was not from liquor or tobacco ...for ten years or more I suffered ... dyspepsia and stomach trouble; ... were caused by the use of cof... until I got so bad I had to give ...ffee entirely and almost give up ...e. There were times when I ... eat only boiled milk and bread ... when I went to the field to work ... to take some bread and butter ... to give me strength.

... doctored with doctors and took ...et everything I could get for my ...ach in the way of medicine, but ... got any better it only lasted a ... while until I was almost a ...ing skeleton.

...One day I read an ad. for Postum ... told my wife I would try it, and ... the following facts I will make ...avit before any judge:

... quit coffee entirely and used ...tum in its place. I have regained ... health entirely and can eat any... that is cooked to eat. I have ...eased in weight until now I ...gh more than I ever did; I have ... taken any medicine for my stom... since I began using Postum.

... I believe Postum will almost ...t an iron wedge.

...My family would stick to coffee ...rst, but they saw the effects it ... on me and when they were feel... ...had they began to use Postum, ... at a time, until now we all use ...tum.". Name give by Postum ... Battle Creek, Mich.

...en days' trial of Postum in place ...coffee proves the truth, and easy ... pleasant way. "There's a rea...

...ook in pkgs. for a copy of the ...ous little book, "The Road to ...ville."

News of We

WASHINGTON.

Secretary Shaw offered $30,000,000 bonds of the Canal loan, to bear interest rate of two per cent. and to August 1, 1906.

The government recognized that hostilities have broken tween Salvador and Guatemala.

The crop report issued by partment of Agriculture shows the acreage of corn planted 95,535,000 acres; increase.

The Commissioner of Fisheries ports that the value of the ducts taken and sold by States fishermen in 1905 was 000,000.

OUR ADOPTED ISLAND

Lieut. Tallmadge H. Brew the Second Infantry, committed cide by shooting himself in at the Army and Navy Club Manila, P. I.

Okomotu, Japanese, and Colon, a native of Porto Rico of whom killed their wives hanged at Honolulu, Hawaii Japanese, in a speech from lows, begged the pardon of government for having disgraced nation.

Members of the Philippine mission returned to Manila, summer session at Baguio.

Commissioner Worcester is recovering from a severe attack pneumonia at Manila, and the commissioners are taking a rest their duties.

Justice MacLeary, of Porto obtained a license to marry vorced wife in Philadelphia.

Montalon, the most powerful law in the Island of Luzon, who is credited with numerous ders, outrages on women and tilation of prisoners, surrendered Col. Bandholtz, of the constabulary at Batangas.

An extraordinary session Legislature at San Juan, P. I. vened to appropriate money purchase of the pier of the York & Porto Rico Steamship pany in San Juan harbor.

DOMESTIC.

The Carnegie and the Bethlehem Steel Companies will take naval armor plate contracts same terms offered by the Company in order that these should not be idle.

A woman who gave her name "Esau"—Case spelled backward made a determined effort to see President Roosevelt at Oyster but was stopped by his guards.

Harvey L. Shaffer, uncle of S. Phipps, was killed in an automobile accident at Sayville, Long land.

President Winthrop, of the of Education, says the attacks made by Prof. W. Steel, of burg, Pa., that positions in York State schools are purchased untrue of Manhattan.

Mrs. Frederick Henry Prime, daughter of Judge Dugro, bridegroom was killed in the English railway wreck, arrived New York City with the body.

The marriage of Thomas Fortune son, Jr., may reconcile the and his son.

Mrs. Samuel Greenbaum, of a New York Supreme Court was struck by a golf ball and lose the sight of one eye.

J. Bruce Ismay, head of the national Mercantile Marine Co. arrived in New York City on Oceanic and announced that ocean liners are to be built.

Ex-Judge Hargis, on the stand at Beattyville, Ky., at for complicity in the murder B. Marcum, denied the charges villified the State's witnesses prosecuting attorney.

Chicago packers deny allegations of Massachusetts Health which reported finding adulterants in meat products.

Curtis Jett testified in the murder trial at Beattyville, that he killed J. B. Marcum because latter was his deadly enemy.

W. M. Olor, President of the American Ice Company, has a statement in defence of the pany.

A Mexican Central Railway official in New Orleans said a reorganization, opposed to government policy, was spreading anti-American sentiment throughout the country.

FOREIGN.

Serious charges in connection the classification of American are made by the Associated Rhenish and Westphalian Coal

Ex-President Tomas Regalado killed in a fight between Honduras and the Guatemalan forces in which the former were defeated.

William J. Bryan, in an address in London, denied that he had become more conservative in his views.

Tartars attacked a mosque and pillaged the city of Van, in Asiatic Turkey.

Eighty British warships will cost $50,000,000 to build, and the junkman a few days after $400,000.

Forty thousand Hebrew men, women and children fled before saw, fearing massacre.

Iquique, Chile, a seaport town, was swept by fire.

John D. Rockefeller, Sr., in his belief that talk of his coming from France is "all politics announced his sailing for America.

A memorial service for those killed in the wreck of the Scotia was held at St. Paul's Cathedral, London.

The body of Louis Betts, the painter of New York, who took his life while mountain climbing, has been recovered at Berne, Switzerland.

...ERLY WORN OUT.

...ged by Years of Suffering ...m Kidney Trouble.

J. W. Hogue, former postmaster at Indianola, now living at Austin, Texas, writes: "I was afflicted for years with pains across the loins and in the hips and shoulders. I had headache also and neuralgia. My right eye, from pain, was ...e to me for years. The ...e of urine kept my system ...ployed causing nervous chills ...t sweats. After trying seven ...t remedies and using all kinds ...medicine I had the good fortune ...of Doan's Kidney Pills. This ...has cured me. I am as well ...as I was twenty years ago, and ...ough is perfect."

...by all dealers. 50 cents a ...ster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, ...

...AY FOR OLD STATE HOUSE

...he Hartford Building Was Erected.

...king over some old papers ...he has in his possession, Town ...Joseph C. Goodwin, of East ...d came across a copy of a ... of 1794 the exact date not be... ...ears since the New Haven ...r. It contains a number of ...ng items and matters of ...interest. Of especial interest ...time was an advertisement of ...ery for the benefit of the state ...which was about to be built ...ford. The advertisement fol...

...managers of the lottery granted ...the legislature of this state, to... ...building a state house in Hart... ...present to the public the follow...heme

...ize of $8,000	$8,000
...ize of $4,000	4,000
...prize of $2,000	2,000
...prizes of $1,000	2,000
...prizes of $500	4,000
...prizes of $200	5,200
...prizes of $100	5,000
...prizes of $50	5,000
...prizes of $40	4,000
...prizes of $20	6,000
...prizes of $10	80,000
...not drawn blank	135
...prizes,	$133,325
...blanks.

...tickets at $5 each is not two ...blanks to a prize.

...ject to a deduction of 12 1-2 per ...

...drawing of the lottery shall ...ence as soon as three-fourths of ...tickets are sold. A list of the for... ...numbers shall be printed in ...Hudson & Goodwin's paper at ...ford and forwarded to all agents ...of this state, who may dispose of ...Those prizes not demanded ...months after the drawing shall ...completed, will be considered as ...ually given for the benefit of the ...

NOADIAH HOOKER,
JOHN CHESTER,
JOHN CALDWELL,
Managers.

...population of Morocco can only ...guessed. No census has ever been ...The best authorities estimate ...inhabitants to number about 7,...

...suggests the public printer would do ...with important public docu... ...is not compelled to deal with so ...crowds.

OUTDOOR LIFE

Will Not Offset the Ill Effects of Coffee When One Cannot Digest It.

A farmer says:

"It was not from liquor or tobacco ...for ten years or more I suffered ...dyspepsia and stomach trouble; ...were caused by the use of coffee ...until I got so bad I had to give ...coffee entirely and almost give up ...tea. There were times when I ...could eat only boiled milk and bread ...when I went to the field to work ...and to take some bread and butter ...to give me strength.

"I doctored with doctors and took ...almost everything I could get for my ...trouble in the way of medicine, but ...I got any better it only lasted a ...while until I was almost a ...living skeleton.

"One day I read an ad. for Postum ...and my wife I would try it, and ...to the following facts I will make ...affidavit before any judge:

"I quit coffee entirely and used ...Postum in its place. I have regained ...health entirely and can eat anything ...that is cooked to eat. I have ...increased in weight until now I ...weigh more than I ever did; I have ...not taken any medicine for my stomach ...since I began using Postum. ...Now I believe Postum will almost ...pull an iron wedge.

"My family would stick to coffee ...at first, but they saw the effects it ...had on me and when they were feeling ...bad they began to use Postum, ...and by a time, until now we all use ...Postum." Name given by Postum ...Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

"There's a reason" for the ...ten days' trial of Postum in place ...of coffee proves the truth, and easy ...to quit in a pleasant way. "There's a reason."

Look in pkgs. for a copy of the famous little book, "The Road to Wellville."

VIRTUE OF STICKING TO IT.

A Salesman Tells How He Got Two Customers Worth Having.

"Stick to it," said the salesman, "is my motto. It's a good one in any business. This is how it works out:

"I represent a wholesale provision firm, dealing only in the finest grade of goods, with high class buyers. Among my best customers in and about New York are the railroads.

"One of the first important sales I made was to the buyer for the dining service of one of the biggest roads running into the city. I went straight to the big man's office, told him what I had and did my best to make a sale.

"Nothing doing. My eloquence did not impress the big man a bit. Finally, he ordered me out of the office. By that time he was mad and I was mad, but he had the bulge on me and, escorted by an attendant, I went.

"But I was bound to land that fish. It was in the midforenoon that we had our stormy interview, but I waited at the main door of the office, until I saw my man go out to dinner; then I followed him.

"He went to an exceedingly swell dining place, but I walked in at his heels and took a seat at the table with him. He appeared not to recognize me when I spoke to him, but as soon as I opened up on the provision line he spotted me.

"'Oh,' he exclaimed, and I trembled; then suddenly his frown melted into a smile and a twinkle in his eye told me I'd won.

"'You've got me,' he owned up, and before we left the table he'd given me a big order.

"Ever since then he's been one of my best and pleasantest customers. I simply tired him out, wore him down.

"There's another big railroad with which I do a big business that was still harder to land. Every Saturday I called on the manager of the dining system, only to be told that I was wasting time.

"Well, I kept on wasting it, every Saturday regularly for two years. Finally, the manager gave me an order just to get rid of me. The goods did the rest, and that railroad accounts for a big chunk of my commission today.

"Stick to it does the business—nerve and a little tact in using it.—New York Sun.

WORDS OF WISDOM.

Fame is the perfume of heroic deeds.—Socrates.

That man is lost who is lost to shame.—Plautus.

War loves to seek its victims in the young.—Sophocles.

There is nothing that travels so fast as slander.—Cicero.

In a single enemy thou hast more than enough.—Ali Ben Abi Taleb.

It isn't always the clock with the loudest tick that keeps the best time.

Everybody exclaims against ingratitude. Are there so many benefactors?—Bougeart.

There was a time when the world acted on books; now books act on the world.—Joubert.

Be pleasant every morning until 10 o'clock and the rest of the day will take care of itself.

You had better return a fan gracefully than give a thousand pounds awkwardly.—Chesterfield.

If your spirits are low, do something, and if you have been doing something, do something different.—E. E. Hale.

Magnanimity is sufficiently defined by its name; yet we may say of it that it is the good sense of pride and the noblest way of acquiring applause.

The better you are the better you ought to be, especially in charity to those who are without any protecting of good.

Children are unconsicious philosophers. They refuse to pull to pieces their enjoyments to see what they are made of.

The most cheerful and courageous men and women are those who have faced the worst that life can bring, and have seen through the darkness of sin and sorrow to the mystery of the light behind.

Speak naught but what may benefit others or yourself; avoid trifling conversation.—Franklin.

Lose no time; be always employed in something useful; cut off all unnecessary action.—Franklin.

Lesser things will drop out as the hand closes upon the larger duty or the greater blessing, just as the hand that reaches out to grasp the great strong oak lets go its hold on the blade of grass it had gathered.—Phillips Brooks.

Aged Woman Wins Prizes.

An old fiddlers' contest was held at the opera house, says a Paris, Ill., despatch to the Terre Haute, Ind., Star, and about twenty fiddlers took part. There were about fifty prizes awarded, the most valuable being a suit of clothes, which was won by Dell Mason, of Paris, who was considered the best all-around fiddler. He also won a violin.

A feature of the contest was the performance of Mrs. Daugherty, of Danville, who is sixty-eight years old, but who won six prizes by her fiddling, singing and dancing.

Three out of every fifteen shops in the West End of London, says the Graphic, are owned by men or women in society, who either keep them under assumed names or have a large financial interest in them.

THE PERFECT PEARL.

Said to Have Been Made by a French Chemist.

A French chemist, M. Tecla by name, has recently succeeded after eleven years of research in discovering a process to scientifically produce a pearl that would equal the product of nature. The fact that rubies and pearls have been scientifically produced has stimulated manufacturers of these precious stones to seek a duplicate of the pearl, the popularity of which has been growing steadily in public demand.

To this end perfect specimens of the pearl have been continuously sought after, and in many cases fabulous amounts are frequently paid for a faultless stone. It is said that through a secret known only to himself M. Tecla has succeeded in attaining his ambition to produce what is apparently a genuine pearl at one-sixth the cost of the Orient specimen, a calcareous concretion, indestructible and of the adamant quality and exact weight of the real stone, with a skin of fine and delicate texture and of a clear, almost translucent color, with the subdued irridescent sheen so dear to judges of these fascinating gems. M. Tecla has only recently finished the experimental stage and it will be quite some time before his results will be brought before the public.—London Spectator.

WISE WORDS.

One to-day is worth two to-morrow.—Franklin.

Thev that won't be counseled can't be helped.—Franklin.

Mind must subdue. To conquer is its life.—Bailey (Festus).

Making a life is greater than making a living.—Chicago Tribune.

Work is not a man's punishment; it is his reward and his strength.—George Sand.

Buy what thou hast no need of and ere long thou shalt sell thy necessaries.—Franklin.

It is better to have to do disagreeable work than to have nothing to do.—Bishop Spalding.

The poorest education that teaches self control is better than the best that neglects.—Sterling.

Some one asks whether success is most due to luck, pluck or brains. The answer is easy—all three.

What a man can do is his greatest ornament, and he always consults his dignity by doing it.—Carlyle.

Is not genius rather the capacity for doing without eating in order to have the means of advertising.—Puck.

There is no place like the top, especially when it is narrow and will not hold many at a time.—Anthony Hope.

When trouble goes hunting him a man may dodge it, but when a man goes hunting trouble it hasn't one chance in a thousand of escaping him.

We refuse sympathy and intimacy with people, as if we waited for some better sympathy and intimacy to come. But whence or when? To-morrow will be like to-day. Life wastes itself while we are preparing to live.—Emerson.

Beau of Fort Sheridan.

Once a man who had the reputation of never having been beaten for the position of orderly came from another regiment. Private Haarscher and the newcomer, as luck would have it, were detailed for guard the same day. The whole garrison turned out to see which one the adjutant would pick for the coveted place. To all outward appearance there was no difference in the neatness and soldierly appearance of the two men.

The officer spent about twenty minutes examining the rifles, belts, cartridge boxes and brasses of the two soldiers. There was absolutely nothing to choose between them in point of neatness of appearance. Finally, as a last resort, the adjutant unbuttoned the blouse of the new claimant for orderly honors. He found a somewhat faded but absolutely clean undershirt.

The officer passed to Haarscher and undid three buttons of his blouse. Haarscher had on a brand new suit of silk underwear that must have cost him a month's pay. It was the other man on that day who walked past post in the hot sun, while Haarscher did "lolling duty" in the shade in front of the commandant's quarters. He was a Frenchman through and through, and he was more proud of it than of anything else save the American citizenship which he had won by enlisting under the American flag.—Chicago Post.

The fluffy maiden who comes to work in a pink silk shirtwaist maybe knows how to keep her mouth shut. Then, again, maybe she doesn't know—when not to talk business.

There is hardly any surer way to live to be very old than to be rich and have a lot of poor relatives waiting for you to die.

The first known mention of a Christmas tree by a German writer was 1605.

FITS, St. Vitus' Dance: Nervous Diseases permanently cured by Dr. Kline's Great Nerve Restorer. $2 trial bottle and treatise free. Dr. H. R. Kline, Ld., 931 Arch St., Phila., Pa.

Of all cities Rome has most frequently been in the hands of enemies.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup for Children teething, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, allays pain, cures wind colic, 25c a bottle.

The Mayor of Chicago receives a salary of $10,000.

Cured at Once.

So says all who take Dr. Biggers Huckleberry Cordial for Dysentery, Diarrhoea and Children Teething. At Druggist 25c and 50c.

An Old Friend.

The late Sim Reeves was fond of telling a story that related to an early engagement in Glasgow, which was arranged through a metropolitan agency. One of the items on the program was "Hall, Smiling Morn," and of course Mr. Reeves was put down for the solo portion. The chorus consists of an echo, and the London agent assured the solist that a satisfactory choir had been engaged.

The whole matter was settled hurriedly. Mr. Reeves was at first disinclined to accept, as other engagements prevented him from reaching Glasgow in time for a rehearsal with the choir.

"Don't worry about that, my dear sir," said the agent. "You will find the choir perfect."

The concert was a success and in due course "Hall, Smiling Morn" was called for. When the soloist came to the lines requiring an echo he delivered them in his best manner—"At whose bright presence darkness flees away." Imagine his horror when the echo repeated his words in the broadest Scotch:

"Flees awa', flees awa'!"

Yet Sims Reeves averred that not a person in the audience smiled or appeared to see anything incongruous. When he talked over the matter with a bailie after the concert, the good man assured him.

"That's just nothing at all. You were a little wrong in your pronunciation and the echo was correct. You see, it was a Scottish echo."

Said About Women.

Who trusts himself to woman or to waves should never hazard what he fears to lose.—Oldmixon.

It is vanity that renders the youth of women culpable and their old age ridiculous.—Mme. de Sonza.

There are three things that women throw away—their time, their money and their health.—Madame Geoffrin.

The pleasant man a woman will desire for her own sake, but the languishing lover has nothing to hope from but her pity.—Steele.

Before marriage, woman is a queen; after marriage, a subject.—De Maintenon.

True modesty protects a woman better than her garments.—Anonymous.

Woman is the sweetest present that God has given to man.—Guyard.

Coquetry is the desire to please, without the wants of love.—Rochepetre.

Japanese children have the most wonderful dolls' houses in the world. These are most completely furnished have little cages for chirruping insects instead of birds and even tiny book cases filled with dolls' poetry books about the size of an ordinary postage stamp.

With 29,200 physicians, Germany has has one for every 1,700 inhabitants, has one for every 1,70 inhabitants.

BOY'S TERRIBLE ECZEMA.

Mouth and Eyes Covered With Crusts—Hands Pinned Down—Miraculous Cure by Cuticura.

"When my little boy was six months old he had eczema. The sores extended so quickly over the whole body that we at once called in the doctor. We then went to another doctor, but he could not help him, and in our despair we went to a third one. Matters became so bad that he had regular holes in his cheeks, large enough to put a finger into. The food had to be given with a spoon, for his mouth was covered with crusts as thick as a finger, and whenever he opened the mouth they began to bleed and suppurate, as did also his eyes. Hands, arms, chest and back, in short, the whole body, was covered over and over. We had no rest by day or night. Whenever he was laid in his bed we had to pin his hands down, otherwise he would scratch his face, and make an open sore. I think his face must have itched most fearfully.

"We finally thought nothing could help, and I had made up my mind to send my wife with the child to Europe, hoping that the sea air might cure him, otherwise he was to be put under good medical care there. But, Lord be blessed, matters came differently, and we soon saw a miracle. A friend of ours spoke about Cuticura. We made a trial with Cuticura Soap, Ointment and Resolvent, and within ten days or two weeks we noticed a decided improvement. Just as quickly as the sickness had appeared it also began to disappear, and within ten weeks the child was absolutely well, and his skin was smooth and white as never before. F. Hohrath, President of the C. L. Hohrath Company, Manufacturers of Silk Ribbons, 4 to 20 Rink Alley, South Bethlehem, Pa. June 5, 1905."

Force of Habit.

"That new farm hand of yours used to be a bookkeeper."

"How do you know?"

"Every time he stops work for a minute he tries to put the pitchfork behind his ear."

The Faith of the Boy.

The four-year-old son of a certain western senator had a very high opinion of the importance of his father, says the American Spectator. The latter tells how, on one occasion in their western home, the lad came across a magazine in which, by some chance, there were engraved side by side portraits of the president and the senator sentioned.

When the lad caught sight of his father's features he broke into a broad smile. "That's a good picture of you, daddy," he said.

"Very good, my son."

"Who's the man next to you, daddy?" asked the youngster.

"Why, my son!" exclaimed the senator; "don't you know? That is one of the greatest men of the world, a man more powerful than a king. That, my son, is President Roosevelt."

The lad again looked at the picture of the president. Then, after a thoughtful pause, he observed:

"Say, daddy, the people in the east will be awful proud when they see the president's picture next to yours, won't they?"

The first all-steel passenger car for a railroad ever made in the United States was shipped by the Pressed Steel Car Company last week to Atlantic City, where it was exhibited at the convention of the master car builders. The car will be taken to Washington, where it will begin active service immediately on the Southern railway. The car is the first of an order of three which was placed by the Southern as an experiment. If these three prove to be successful the entire passenger equipment of the Southern will be replaced by steel cars.

A Minnesota clam fisher stepped from poverty to riches in one moment a week ago Sunday, when his wife discovered in a clam he had fished up a perfect fresh water pearl worth probably $100,000. It weighs 85 grains, diamond weight. The Minnesota clam is likely to become extinct in a short time now.

Senator Tillman says he loves music, flowers and women. Nobody will be likely to thik less of him for that.

Positions $5,000 GUARANTEED BY A BANK DEPOSIT
R. R. Fare Paid. Notes Taken
800 FREE COURSES
Board at Cost. Write Quick
GEORGIA-ALABAMA BUSINESS COLLEGE, Macon, Ga.

The press agent of the boll weevil is again at work.

CAPUDINE CURES INDIGESTION and ACIDITY It acts immediately—you feel its effects in 10 minutes. You don't have to wait a week to know its good. It cures HEADACHES ALSO by removing the cause. 10 cents.

YOU CANNOT CURE all inflamed, ulcerated and catarrhal conditions of the mucous membrane such as nasal catarrh, uterine catarrh caused by feminine ills, sore throat, sore mouth or inflamed eyes by simply dosing the stomach.
But you surely can cure these stubborn affections by local treatment with Paxtine Toilet Antiseptic
which destroys the disease germs, checks discharges, stops pain, and heals the inflammation and soreness.
Paxtine represents the most successful local treatment for feminine ills ever produced. Thousands of women testify to this fact. 50 cents at druggists.
Send for Free Trial Box
THE R. PAXTON CO., Boston, Mass.

Medical Department
TULANE UNIVERSITY OF LOUISIANA
Its advantages for practical instruction, both in ample laboratories and abundant hospital materials, are unequaled. Free access is given to the great Charity Hospital with 900 beds and 30,000 patients annually. Special instruction is given daily at the bedside of the sick. The next session begins October 18, 1906. For catalogue and information, address
PROF. S. E. CHAILLE, M. D., Dean,
P. O. Drawer, 261, NEW ORLEANS, LA.

Dropsy CURED Gives Quick Relief.
Removes all swelling in 8 to 20 days: effects a permanent cure in 30 to 60 days. Trial treatment given free. Nothing can be fairer. Write Dr. H. H. Green's Sons, Specialists, Box B Atlanta, Ga.

80 Bushels Winter Wheat Per Acre
That's the yield of Salzer's Red Cross Hybrid Winter Wheat. Send 2c in stamps for free sample of same, as also catalogue of Winter Wheats, Rye, Barley, Clovers, Timothy, Grasses, Bulbs, Trees, etc., for fall planting.
SALZER SEED CO., Box A. C. LaCrosse, Wis.

Am. 29, 1906.

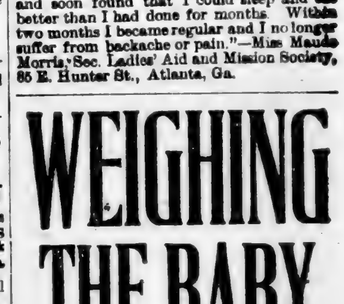
WANTED Address of (1) persons of part Indian blood who are not living with any tribe, (2) of men who served in the Federal army, or (3) the descendants of such soldiers of Revolutionary descent. MATHAR MAYFORD, Washington, D. C.

Wintersmith's CHILL TONIC
CURES CHILLS
AND ALL MALARIAL FEVERS.
Has been a standard household remedy for over 40 years. Pleasant to take, leaves no bad effects like quinine; harmless for children. Guaranteed by all druggists. Put up in 50c and $1 bottles. Sent express paid on receipt of price, if not on sale at the home drug store. Address
ARTHUR PETER & CO., General Agents, Louisville, Ky.

Plantation Chill Cure is Guaranteed
To Cure, or Money Refunded by Your Merchant. So, Why Not Try IT? Price, 50c, Retail.

What is a Backache?
IT IS NATURE'S WARNING TO WOMEN
Diseases of Woman's Organism Cured and Consequent Pain Stopped by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"It seems as though my back would break." Women utter these words over and over again, but continue to drag along and suffer with aches in the small of the back, pain low down in the side, "bearing-down" pains, nervousness and no ambition for any task.



They do not realize that the back is the mainspring of woman's organism, and quickly indicates by aching a diseased condition of the female organs or kidneys, and that the aches and pains will continue until the cause is removed.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been for many years the one and only effective remedy in such cases. It speedily cures female and kidney disorders and restores the female organs to a healthy condition.

"I have suffered with female troubles for over two years, suffering intense pain each month, my back ached until it seemed as though it would break, and I felt so weak all over that I did not find strength to attend to my work but had to stay in bed a large part of the first two or three days every month. I would have sleepless nights, bad dreams and severe headaches. All this undermined my health.

"We consulted an old family physician, who advised that I try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I began taking it regularly and soon found that I could sleep and eat better than I had done for months. Within two months I became regular and I no longer suffer from backache or pain."—Miss Maude Morris, Sec. Ladies' Aid and Mission Society, 85 E. Hunter St., Atlanta, Ga.

WEIGHING THE BABY

Physicians, Pharmacists, and Nurses endorse Cuticura Soap because of its delicate, medicinal, emollient, sanative, and antiseptic properties derived from Cuticura, the great Skin Cure, united with the purest of cleansing ingredients and most refreshing of flower odors. For preserving, purifying, and beautifying the skin, as well as for all the purposes of the toilet and bath, Cuticura Soap is priceless. Absolutely pure and may be used from the hour of birth.

Sold throughout the world. Cuticura Soap, 25c. Ointment, 50c. Resolvent, or Pills, 50c. (in form of Chocolate Coated Pills, 25c. per vial of 60), may be had of all druggists. Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., Sole Props., Boston, Mass. "All About the Skin, Scalp, and Hair," Mailed Free.

Stylish Clothing For Young Men.

Make up your mind to have the best suit possible this season, it must be smart, the very latest weave and color. You can have all these things if you get an I. & S. Bing Suit.

Latest Ideas in Furnishings

Our line for spring wear is now complete, the styles are decided and we are showing absolutely correct styles. New Dress Goods, New Waist Goods, New Hats, New Shirts, New Neckwear.

Spring Models in Footwear

See our new line of Star Brand Oxfords for men, women and children. Our stock is complete and the prices are right. Let us show you the goods.

J. C. JONES,

Clanton, - - Alabama.

Wouldn't You Like

BETTER WHISKIES FOR LESS MONEY?

than the kind youvl been getting? Then send your orders to us

THE BIG MAIL ORDER HOUSE

The house that sells nothing but the purest goods and guarantees every article it sells. If it's drugs or whiskies you want

WE CUT THE PRICE.

	Our Price.	Regular Price
Shehan's Canada Malt Whiskey	75	1 00
Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey	75	1 00
Weller's Pure Malt Whiskey	75	1 00
Mason's Old Kentucky Rye	50	75
Dan Patch Virginia Rye	60	1 00
Private Stock Virginia Rye	65	1 00
J. Martin's Five-year-old Virginia Rye	75	1 00
Asa Holt Rye Whiskey	76	1 00
Old Style Country Club Rye Whiskey	85	1 25
Richmond Club Virginia Rye	1 00	1 50
Stewart's Old Virginia Rye	1 25	2 00
Paul Jones Four Star Rye	84	1 50
Murray Hill Club	1 00	1 50
Hunter's Baltimore Rye	1 00	1 50
Golden Cream Rye	1 00	1 50
I. W. Harper Rye	1 00	1 50
Wilson Whiskey	85	1 50
J. M. Atherton bottled in bond	1 00	1 50
Mammoth Cave bottled in bond	1 25	1 75
Old Jordon bottled in bond	1 50	2 00
Green River, the whiskey without a headache	1 00	1 25
Old Shades Mountain Corn	50	75
Old Mountain Due Corn	75	1 00
Old Lincoln County	65	1 00
Old Holland Gin	50	75
Old Crown Gin	75	1 00
Old Peach or Apple Brandy	50	75
California Sherry or Port	50	75

Mellow Old Liquors and Wines by the Gallon in Jugs.

	Per Gallon		Per Gallon
Old Sand Mountain Corn	$2.00	Old Mason's Pure Rye	$2.00
Old Mountain Due	3.00	Private Stock Virginia Rye	2.50
Old Tennessee	2.00	J. Martin's 5-year-old Va. Rye	3.00
Old Holland Gin	2.00	Old Style Country Club	3.40
Old Crown Gin	3.00	Old Lincoln County	2.50
Old Peach or Apple Brandy	2.00	Richmond Club Virginia Rye	4.00
Old California Port or Sherry	1.50	R. A. Stuart's Old Va. Rye	5.00

COLLIER DRUG COMPANY,

The Big Cut Rate Drug Store

2012 FIRST AVENUE. BIRMINGHAM, ALABAMA.

Imported Jack "LIJE"

Fee $8.00, Insured

Stands for service at his owners', JOHN THAMES, 5 mile East of Rocky Mount Church, Beat 1.

ABOUT REGISTERING.

Extracts from the general election law of Alabama:

Section 2. The following persons shall be disqualified both from registering and voting: All idiots and insane persons; those who were by reason of conviction of crime disqualified from voting at the time of the ratification of the constitution on November 28, 1901; those who have been since November 28, 1901, or who shall be convicted of treason, murder, arson, embezzlement, malfeasance in office, larceny, receiving stolen property, obtaining money under false pretenses, perjury, subornation of perjury, robbery, assault with intent to rob, burglary, forgery, bribery, assault and battery on wife, bigamy, living in adultery, sodomy, incest, rape, miscegenation, crime against nature, or any crime punishable by imprisonment in penitentiary, or for anw infamous crimes or crime involving moral turpitude; also any person who has been since November 28, 1901, or who shall be convicted as a vagrant or tramp, or of selling or offering to sell his vote or the vote of another, or of making or offering to make false returns in any election by the people or in any primary election to procure the nomination or election of any person to any office, or of suborning any witness or registrar to secure the registration of any person as an elector, provided that any person who is disqualified from voting by reason of conviction of any of the offenses mentioned in this section, except treason, whether the conviction was had in a State or Federal court, has been pardoned, may be restored to his citizenship with right to vote by the Governor, approved by the Board of Pardons and specially expressed in the pardon.

Sec. 7 1-2. The following persons and no others, who, if their place of residence shall remain unchanged, will have, at the date of the next general election the qualifications as to residence prescribed by section 1 of this act, shall be qualified to register as electors, provided they shall not be disqualified under section 2 of this act:

1st. Those who can read and write any article of the constitution of the United States in the English language, and who are physically unable to work; and those who can read and write any article of the constitution of the United States in the English language, and who have worked or been regularly engaged in some lawful employment, business or occupation, trade or calling for the greater part of the twelve months next preceding the time they offer to register, and those who are unable to read and write, is such inability is due solely to physical disability; or,

2nd. The owner in good faith in his own right, or the husband of a woman who is the owner in good faith in her own right, of forty acres of land situate in this State, upon which they reside; or the owner in good faith in his own right, or the husband of any woman who is the owner in good faith in her own right, of real estate situate in this State, assessed for taxation at the value of three hundred dollars or more or the owner in good faith, in his own right, or the husband of a woman who is the owner in good faith, in her own right, of personal property in this State assessed for taxation for three hundred dollars or more; provided, that the taxes due upon such real or personal property for the year next preceding the year in which he offers to register shall have been paid, unless the assessment shall have been legally contested and and undetermined.

Sec. 15. Any elector who registered prior to January 1, 1903, who has changed the county of his residence shall be registered on application on production of his certificate, unless he has since become disqualified.

Sec. 16. When the certificate of any elector who was duly registered has been lost, mutilated or destroyed, on application stating that the certificate has been lost, mutilated or destroyed, and verified by affidavit, and it appears of record that such applicant has been registered, the Judge of Probate of the county of registration or the Secretary of State shall issue to the applicant a certificate that he was duly registered as an elector. Such certificate shall be issued free of charge to the elector. The Secretary of State shall, at the expense of the State furnish the Judge of Probate blank certificates for use as provided in this section.

The certificate of the registrars or the Judge of Probate or of the Secretary of State shall be sufficient to establish the fact of such registration.

* * * * * * * * * * *

Be sure and register when the registrars are in your beat, as the only excuse for not doing so is by reason of sickness of yourself or in your family or by absence from the county. Everybody can register this summer who will be qualified by residence or age by the 8th day of November. Poll tax paying has nothing to do with registration; you can register now and pay your poll tax afterwards, but you cannot vote unless you are both registered and have paid your poll tax (if any is due). The period of residense necessary to register is two years in the State, one year in the county and three months in the beat. If you have moved from one beat to another in the county less than three months before election day, you can vote in your old beat, so you don't lose your vote by changing beats. Any one who desires to register on property qualification should take with him his last assessment sheet and tax collector's receipt to show to the registrars as proof that you are possessed of such property and pay taxes on it. You can register under ANY of the following heads:

1. If you own forty acres or more land in this State, and reside upon it.

2. If your wife owns forty acres or more land in this State, upon which you reside.

3. If you own real estate in this State that is assessed for taxation at $300 or more.

4. If your wife owns real estate in this State assessed for taxation at $300 or more.

5. If you own personal property in this State assessed for taxation for $300 or more.

6. If your wife owns personal property in this State assessed for taxation for $300 or more.

7. If you can read and write any section of the constitution of the United States.

Don't give up your life certificate that you got in 1902; you only have to show it to the registrars in case you have moved to this county from some other county.

THE UNION will furnish any one information on any special points that they may be in doubt upon, and stands ready to help any one to get all the rights he is entitled to under the laws of Alabama. If you think you are entitled to register and the registrars should refuse you, take a couple of good men with you so you can have witnesses as to such refusal and the reasons given by the registrars, and thereby be enabled to take your case upto high authority. tf

REGISTRATION NOTICE.

In accordance with the provisions of section 6 of an act "To further regulate elections in the State of Alabama," aprpved October 6, 1903, the Board of Registrars of the county of Chilton, Alabama, do hereby give notice that the following appointments are set for the purpose of registering those qualified under the law to register as electors:

Beat No. 11, at Flint Hill, on July 2 and 3, 1906.

Beat No. 1, at Mineral Springs, on July 4 and 5, 1906.

Beat No. 9, at Thorsby, on July 6 and 7, 1906.

Beat No. 2, at Jemison, on July 9 and 10, 1906.

Beat No. 2, at Ocampo, on July 11, 1906.

Beat No. 2, at Providence, on July 12, 1906.

Beat No. 3, at Macedonia, on July 13 and 14, 1906.

Beat No. 3, at Benson, on July 16 and 17, 1906.

Beat No. 7, at Maplesville, on July 18 and 19, 1906.

Beat No. 7, at Shoults, on July 20 and 21, 1906.

Beat No. 8, at Stanton, on July 23 and 24, 1906.

Beat No. 8, at Valley Creek Church, on July 25, 1906.

Beat No. 8, at Riderville, on July 26, 1906.

Beat No. 8, at Pletcher, on July 27 and 28, 1906.

Beat No. 6, at Harris' store, on July 30, 1906.

Beat No. 6, at Kincheon, on July 31, 1906.

Beat No. 10, at Cooper, on August 1 and 2, 1906.

Beat No. 5, at Verbena, on August 3. 1906.

Beat No. 5, at Soldiers' Home, on August 4, 1906.

Beat No. 4, at Clanton, on August 6, 7 and 8, 1906.

Beat No. 4, at Clanton, on Aug. 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 1906, for the purpose of purging the registration list.

Beat No. 4, at Clanton, on Aug. 27, 28, 29, 30, 31 and Sept. 1, 1906, for the purpose of considering the case of each elector whose name it is proposed to strike from the registration list and determine same.

Beat No. 4, at Clanton, on Sept. 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 1906, for the purpose of registering voters.

Beat No. 4, at Clanton, on Friday and Saturday before the election in November, 1906.

R. H. GAINES,
B. L. JONES,
P. M. MOORE,
Board of Registrars Chilton County.
tf

Stallings Speaks in Gadsden.

Gadsden, Ala.—Jesse F. Stallings, candidate for alternate United States senator, delivered a speech in this city on Tuesday morning at the court house and in Attalla in the evening of the same day.

Babe Drinks Gasoline.

Cincinnati, O.—Spencer Hill, the 2-year-old son of Roland Hill, met a horrible death as the result of drinking a quantity of gasoline.

In Russia an extensive domestic industry is carried on in making wooden spoons, of which as many as 30,000,000 are made annually. They are nearly all of birchwood.

SHOES! SHOES! SHOES!

I am now closing out my spring and summer line of SHOES regardless of cost. Come one and all and I will please you with prices and quality.

J. W. SMITH,
tf. Clanton.

Thorsby, Alaba

Business Directory.

Commercial Club
OF THORSBY
DEFINITE and RELIABLE information furnished to parties who desire to locate in the South.

A. HORN
LICENSED PHARMACIST.
Drugs, Stationery and Toilet Articles.

City Bakery
BREAD, CAKES and PIES
of all kinds, fresh every day.
K. A. EKBLAD

A. M. Johnson
Groceries and Delicatessen

E. H. Adams
General Merchandise.

J. R. PARNELL
General Merchandise.

J. L. FOSS
Meat Market.

Thorsby Winery Co.
Lofthus & Brunberg, Props.

Thorsby Real Esta
CORPORATED.
J. M. BARRETT, P
G. H. GERALD, SEC.
G. C. MICHELSON, T

OLAF SCH
Watchmaker & Jewe
FRANZEN, BUIL
Full line of watches etc. Repair work guara

A. Langville &
Blacksmith and Horseshoer
—DEALER IN—
WAGONS AND BUG

P. C. SMIT
Brown Leghorn Fowl
Eggs.
BERKSHIRE P

The Thorsby
G. C. Michelson, P
Good Beds and Mea

J. J. Stanl
General Merchan

MRS. MARY R. RASB
General Merchandi

J. BICE
Charcoal Oven

Cor. 2nd Ave and 7th St.

THE BIG STORE,

—Is at The Head of The Procession.—

Dry Goods, Clothing, Hats, Sho
FURNITURE,
COFFINS AND BURIAL NECESSITI
W. I. MULLINS,
Clanton. Alaba

Recent Triumphs of Arbitrati

By B. F. Trueblood.

ANY one who has carefully followed the arbitration movement during the decade since 1895, including the work and results of the Hague Conference, knows that arbitration can no longer be spoken of as an experiment. It is now the settled policy of the civilized nations when disputes arise between them, and is universally recognized in international law. War, instead of being the general practice of nations, as it was a century ago, when serious disputes arose between them, is no longer resorted to except in rare instances, and in most of these instances the causes run far back into the past, and have created strong prejudices and deeply rooted feelings of hatred and animosity which do not readily yield to rational pacific treatment. During the decade of which we are speaking there have been four wars—the China-Japan War, the Spanish-American-Philippine War, the Boer War, the Russo-Japanese War; or nine, if we add to these the Boxer Conflict in China, the German War in Southwestern Africa, still going on, the Venezuelan Blockade, the Thibet Expedition, and the bloodless Panama Revolution. During this same period there have been more than a hundred settlements by arbitration. All of these have been important, and some of them of a very difficult and delicate character; as, for example, the boundary dispute between Chile and the Argentine Republic, the British-Venezuelan Boundary Controversy, the Alaska Boundary Controversy, and the North Sea incident between Great Britain and Russia, which, though adjusted by a Commission of Inquiry, was really an arbitration of the first order.

The True Solution of the Liquor Proble

By Winthrop More Daniels.

THOSE who want in a nutshell the well-sifted results of the most painstaking study of the liquor question by competent, disinterested and philanthropic experts will do well to canvass The Report on the Liquor Problem by the Committee of Fifty. No real evil is exaggerated, and nothing is set down in malice. The sociological damage of drink is not minimized, and its relation to crime and pauperism is discussed temperately but most convincingly drawn. The physiological effects of liquor are set forth in such fashion that no physician can take exception to the exposition. At the same time, the pseudo-scientific character of much temperance instruction in the public schools is unmasked. The real aspect of the matter is treated with breadth and sanity. Not the mere suppression of the saloon, but the devising of healthful substitutes for the saloon is the desideratum. Nor is the heart of the difficulty left untouched in the masterly exposition of the cure. We are brought up with the old-fashioned but eternally valid doctrine that the ultimate remedy is found "only in the souls of individual men. . . There is no salvation for the mass as a mass." It is a homely truism, but an eminently reassuring one, to hear that the forces that make for the development of personality are, in the last analysis, the forces that are doing the most to overcome the evils of the liquor

T

VOL. IV.

ATTENTION!

e annual meeting of the rs Mutual Insurance iation of Alabama (Chil- ounty Branch) will be the court house in on at 10 a. m. on Satur- Aug. 4, 1906. A full ance of Directors and ers is requested.
W. M. WILSON, President.

HILLTON COUNTY SUNDAY CHOOL CONVENTION.

nual convention of the Coun- ay School Association was ccessfully held in Clanton and 22. About 75 delegates esent representing 29 Sunday The devotional exercises of ions were led by W. J. Cal- udson Strock, P. C. Dennis, dams and Rev. L. U. Turnip rogramme, heretofore publish- followed more or less accu- very helpful talks were made L. U. Turnipseed, Judson nd Rev. J. A. Jenkins, one tate officers. Dr. A. Horn's Temperance presented th a very scientific and inter ay. Miss Minnie Kennedy's a convention is always an n and her beautiful manner ing children gives valuable uctive help. Mrs. J. A. Hes d very interestingly of the partment work, a very impor- od of bringing all the people e circle of Sunday school in Mr. T. G. Milling, of Valley resident of the Maplesville gave an interesting history perience with the home de- Eventually we hope to see give practical help to all the strict presidents made encour- orts of their district work. rsby and Maplesville districts nvention every quarter; the r have found it best, as yet, only two a year. Now that "Banner County," the standard nt to reach means "Banner" throughout Chilton. statistics show there are 61 schools at work with an en- of 3,000 officers, teachers ls. Five schools have home ns, Clanton Baptist and Valley Creek, Sardis and enerosity of the schools and duals interested in the work e the financial condition of lation properous. Since July, 00 has been paid for state 0 for county expenses, leav- treasury a balance of $1250. his year we expect to raise ll purposes.

early resolutions of thanks red to the citizens of Clan- their cordial hospitality, to n Simpson and members of tainment committee for their ssful efforts to add to the and pleasure of the dele- the editors of the UNION Banner" for their usefulness in publishing programs and articles relative to the Sun ol association.

ecent, Mr. T. U. Crumpton's earnest work has been of in good to the association esignation was received with egret. Mr. Judson Strock, of one of the best friends the n has in the county, was sident and Dr. A. Horn, vice president. The secre re-elected. The executive T. U. Crumpton, Maples- rman; N. J. Calloway, Clan e L. H. Reynolds, Clanton; er, Maplesville, and W. H ilson.

SECRETARY.

SOUTH BESSIE.

for Kilgore! He has the

How it rains.

e not intruded our thoughts ny UNION readers for some e will venture in again.

e been somewhat on the some days, and during our we took in Rocky Mount. Prof. Beeson, of Mississippi me good sermons on Chris- fection, Repentance and tion. At the conclusion el Harps, who has just re- m the Bible school and Sal- k camp meeting at Cincin- ed a really good discourse, ave Faith in God."

Miss. J. P. Barrett, of ed the family of T. J.

Alaban
Directory.
Thorsby Real Estat
INCORPORATED
J. M. BARRETT, Pres
G. H. GERALD, SEC.
G. C. MICHELSON, T
OLAF SCHI
Watchmaker & Jewele
FRANZEN. BUILD
Full line of watches j etc. Repair work guaran
A. Langville &
Blacksmith and
Horseshoer
—DEALER IN—
WAGONS AND BUGG
P. C. SMIT
Brown Leghorn Fowls
Eggs.
BERKSHIRE PI
The Thorsby
G. C. Michelson, Pr
Good Beds and Meals
J. J. Stanle
General Merchandi
MRS. MARY R. RASBE
General Merchandise
J. BICE
Charcoal Ovens
STORE,
The Procession.
ng, Hats, Sho
TURE,
IAL NECESITIES
ULLINS, Alabam
phs
f Arbitrati
tion
quor Proble

THE UNION.

EQUAL RIGHTS TO ALL, SPECIAL FAVORS TO NONE.

VOL. IV. CLANTON, ALA., JULY 26 1906 NO. 18

ATTENTION!

annual meeting of the ...s Mutual Insurance ...ation of Alabama (Chil... County Branch) will be ... the court house in ... a. m. on Saturday, Aug 4 1906. A full ...ance of Directors and ...ers is requested.

W. M. WILSON,
President.

CHILTON COUNTY SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION.

...ntion of the Coun... School Association was ...ssfully held in Clanton ...nd 22. About 75 delegates ...ent representing 29 Sunday ... devotional exercises of ... were led by W. J. Cal... Strock, P. C. Dennis, ... and Rev. L. U. Turnip... ...gramme heretofore publish... ...lowed more or less accu... ...helpful talks were made ... Turnipseed, Judson ... Rev. J. A. Jenkins, one ... officers. Dr. A. Horn's ... Temperance presented the ... a very scientific and inter... Miss Mount Kennedy's ... invention is always an ... and her beautiful manner ... children gives valuable ... help. Mrs. J. A. Hes... ...interestingals of the ... were very impor... ...ging all the people ... Sunday school in... T. G. Milling, of Valley ... of the Maplesville ... an interesting history ... ence with the home de... Eventually we hope to see ... practical help to all the ... presidents made encour... ...of their district work. ...d Maplesville districts ... quarter; the ... has found a host as yet, ... two a year. Now that ... Chilton County," the stand... ...such reports Banner" ...about "Hill-o" ...tables show there are 61 ... with an en... officers, teachers ... schools have home ... Clanton Baptist and ... Creek, Sardis and ... ...ority of the schools and ... interested in the work ... financial condition of ... properous. Since July, ... paid for state ... expenses, leav... balance of $12.50. ... to raise ... resolutions of thanks ... Clan... cordial hospitality, to ... members of ... their ... the ... the UNION ... affiliat... ...ssions ... ...ssociation ... Mr. ... Strock, of ... ...ceived with ... ...officers, ... the ... was ... A. Horn, ... secre... ... Maples... ... Clan... ... W. H ... SECRETARY.

SOUTH BESSIE.

... has the ... not intruded our thoughts ... UNION readers for some ... we will ren... in again. ... been somewhat on the ... some days, and during our ... we took in Rocky Mount, ... Prof. Beeson, of Mississippi ... some good sermons on Chris... perfection. Repentance and ... At the conclusion ... Harps, who has just re... the Bible school and Sal... camp meeting at Cincin... ...ered a really good discourse, ... "Have Faith in God." ... Mrs. J. P. Barrett, of ... visited the family of Z. J. ... to S. E. Waldrup's, to E. Z. Nix's and to W. M. Merchant's. There will be church service at the Freeman school house from next Friday night, the 27th, to Sunday night, inclusive, by James Denham and others.

Mr. and Mrs. Jones attended church service at Rocky Mount Friday.

With good will to all, we give due notice that in regard to party affiliation we republicans and populists are not led or controlled by any office-seeker, politician or candidate, but we the rank and file are running this thing, and all who wish anything at our hands must sail under our colors. We hoist our colors and the candidate must come to us. We are not servants of any particular one, so we clear any office seeker of the charge of controlling us.

Prof. Walker has been absent from his school here for two weeks. During his absence Prof. Robert Jones, of Stanton, and Ira Dunsmore, the noted "boy orator," have had charge of the school.

Let all the candidates and officers be strictly temperate men. That is good for us all.

"ONE OF THE BOYS."

Mount Pleasant Church, July 23, '06.
Editor Union:

Please give us a little space in your valuable paper. We are having plenty of rain and our farming neighbors are wishing for sunshine, but let us not become discouraged. The Lord knows best. Well, we had somewhat of a time at our children's day. Everybody seemed to be well pleased with our efforts. Our program represented 45 recitations and 15 songs in the forenoon and the afternoon's time was taken up in singing. We had the honor and pleasure of the Mars Hill class with us. Those folks can sure sing. Bros. E. G. Coffer and J. W. Gothard carried the flags in the line of march. Our old and respected friend, W. T. Mathas, assisted in waiting on the school at the spring. We had quite a nice time. Your correspondent was somewhat disappointed in not seeing our editor's face among the congregation.

Well, crops are very good around these parts. Of course, this rainy spell will no doubt damage the cotton crop to some extent, but maybe the wet spell will give our candidates a chance to get around. Mr. D. N. Gentry passed through our parts last week and he says the outlook is very good. Brethren, let us ask God for divine guidance in the selection of our officers and let us keep ourselves clean in those matters. Let's alo stand pat to the paper that has proved true (THE UNION).

Success to THE UNION and its host of readers and hurrah for the republican party.

STUMPS HILLS.

BEAT TWO ITEMS.

Editor Union:

Please allow me space in your columns to say a few words. Health is fairly good in our community at present. There is a number of candidates in our community now. There was a Democratic meeting at Kalona the 19th, and it was just a sight to see Gulledge patting them fellows on the back and telling them what he would do if they would vote for him, (and you know they believed it). Say, Mr. Gulledge, I want to know if you are running a free hotel. I want some of you democrats that believe that to go down to the free hotel and see how you come out. I can tell you, Mr. Gulledge, you come to the wrong place we are Fitts and Middleton men strictly.

Success to THE UNON and ...s many readers.

PECK'S BAD BOY.

PLEASANT GROVE.

Dear Editor:

Please allow me a small space in your paper to say a few words in regard to the Chilton county singing convention, which is to be held at this place next Saturday and Sunday, 4 1-2 miles southwest of Jemison. We are anticipating a nice time and invite one and all to attend and take part in this work. We would say to young men who drink to please leave their pocket bottle and its contents at home, and don't bring along any gun, as we won't need them in this meeting. Bring your song books, "Singing for Joy," and other late books of the A. J. Showalter Co. Yours truly.

JAMES FRANKLIN LEE.

Strike of Car Men Ended.

Princeton, Ind.—The strike of the car men on the Louisville-St. Louis division of the Southern railway ended Friday night. The strike was over the reinstatement of seven men, all of whom were reinstated, although not at this city. The strike lasted two weeks and involved 200 men.

ALABAMA GLEANINGS.

Items of Interest Gathered as They Transpire Over the Entire State.

MR. BOWRON SLATED.

Republicans Considering Birmingham Man for Governor of State.

Birmingham, Ala.—Interest in the meeting of the state executive committee of the republican party of Alabama is running high among the Birmingham Republicans. There are thirty-four members of the committee and it is stated that unless some providential hindrance occurs that every member will be present at the meeting. The Charles H. Scott boom for the gubernatorial nomination, which was launched here informally on July 4, seems to be quiescent. His supporters may be organizing some deep laid plot which will land the nomination for him ,but if such is the case the plot is so very deep laid that it is making absolutely no fuss.

Considerable interest is displayed in the suggestion that certain friends of Mr. James Bowron will put him forward for ... nomination. Mr. Bowron has for a ...mber of years been prominent in the party in Alabama. In this connection an argument arose among several who were discussing the matter in the government building. The statement was offered by one member of the party that Mr. Bowron would be ineligible, as he was not an American by birth. Another stated that this was not a requisite. The dispute was settled by a reference to the constitution of Alabama, wherein the requirement is given as ten years' residence in the state. Mr. Bowron is entirely eligible, as he has been a resident of the state for a much longer time than that.

FRISCO FREIGHT DERAILED.

Negro Brakeman Was Scalded and He Died While Being Brought to Birmingham.

Birmingham, Ala.—Local freight train No. 250 of the 'Frisco system, becoming derailed about three miles north of Guin, tore up the track for several hundred yards. Head Brakeman Walter Wright, a negro, was scalded and died while being brought to Birmingham. The fireman, also a negro, badly scalded, was taken to St. Vincent's hospital. The engineer was not hurt, nor were any others of the crew injured.

The exact particulars as to the damage are not known at the dispatcher's office, but it is said the engine was practically wrecked, and it is reported that about ten eighty-pound rails and 250 ties would be necessary to put the track in such shape that trains can pass. Traffic in consequence has been somewhat delayed temporarily.

Preparing for Farmers' Convention.

Bessemer, Ala.—Chairman Gardiner Goodwin, of the entertainment committee for the farmers ' convention called a meeting of his committee in the Trotter building for Monday afternoon. Since the committee was appointed considerable work has been done and more than a hundred delegates have been arranged for. The work of the committee formally began after the meeting on Monday afternoon, when the city was divided into sections and a thorough canvass made until homes were secured for the 450 visitors who will attend the convention. The hotels were approached to make special rates and everything possible done to make the visit of the farmers a pleasant one to both visitors and hosts.

Gallows Is Being Prepared.

Cullman, Ala.—The gallows upon which John Williams, who murdered Senator Hipp last spring, is to be hanged is in course of erection and will be in readiness by July 27, the date fixed for the hanging. The governor named Monday, July 23, as the date he will hear the application for commutation of sentence to life imprisonment. A number of lawyers from Cullman and Decatur, representing the prosecution and the defense, will appear before the governor.

Found Dead in Cell.

Selma, Ala.—In his cell in the city prison Friday morning there was found dead Martin O'Mara, a white man, who in the police court Thursday morning had been convicted of having been drunk and who was fined $5. The man came to this city several days ago from Lamison, where he was employed as a lumberman in a saw mill. He had been drunk for some days before he came to Selma, and after reaching here kept up the spree.

Crops Damaged by Rains.

Gadsden, Ala.—Farmers coming into the city from different parts of the county say that several thousand acres of corn have been ruined by the recent overflows and back water. The worst damage seems to have been done on the Coosa river south of this city, where the banks of the river are lower and the overflow quicker. Great damage has also been done throughout the Wills Creek valley, which is one of the richest and largest corn producing sections of the county. The corn is in the roasting ear state and spoils very easily. It is impossible to even save the fodder, as it is scalded by the hot sun and is covered with mud. The Coosa river is now falling slowly.

Will Build Foundry Plant.

Gadsden, Ala.—The Gadsden Foundry Company have let the contract for a modern brass and iron foundry. The plant will be situated on Sixth street and the Southern railway. This company has been leasing the foundry department of the Proctor Foundry and Machine Company, but so great has been the increase in business during the past six months the company has been compelled to build its own plant. The main building will be 35x100 feet, and in addition there will be boiler, pattern and finishing rooms.

Change in Officials of Armour Plant.

Anniston, Ala.—A change of officials at the local branch of the Armour Packing Company has taken place, G. E. Uffner taking charge as manager, while E. G. McLin became cashier. Mr. McLin is a former newspaper man, having been connected with the reportorial force of the Nashville American for several years. The enterprise has been operated for some time under the name of Anniston Produce Company, but from now on it will be run directly by the Armour Packing Company. The Anniston Produce Company, Mr. C. C. O'Bryant manager, will continue to transact business from the same old stand for thirty days, when it is said they will move into a building of their own.

Negro Boy Is Drowned.

Gadsden, Ala.—Andrew Gamble, a 14-year-old negro boy, was drowned in the back waters of the Coosa river. Gamble and two other little negroes were caught in the act of stealing watermelons belonging to the watchman of the Louisville and Nashville bridge, who started to chase them out. Gamble ran into a ravine filled with back water and it proved too deep for him, and he drowned before assistance could reach him.

Big Barbecue at Gurley.

Huntsville, Ala.—The largest political barbecue yet held in Madison county took place at Gurley, where speeches were made by Dr. R. M. Cunningham, candidate for governor; H. C. Compton, candidate for associate railroad commissioner; N. M. Rowe, A. D. Kirby, Capt. John W. Grayson and Earl Smith, candidates for the legislature. Railroad rate reform, state politics and the local dispensary question were thoroughly threshed over.

Three Thousand Want Jobs.

Washington, D. C.—Applicants for positions as meat inspectors were examined Saturday in 198 cities of the country. The examination was conducted by the civil service commission, and approximately 3,000 men struggled with problems of good meat and bad. Of the whole number of men who took the examination perhaps NEWS—FIVE B5 only 500 will be needed immediately. It is expected by Secretary Wilson that he will have no serious difficulty in securing from among those who were examined Saturday the requisite number of competent inspectors. A considerable proportion of those who took the examination probably will pass, but the selection for immediate service will be made from among those having the highest average. Those who pass will be placed on the eligible list and may be called into service later.

Secretary Wilson expects to have his force of inspectors ready to begin work by August 1.

Montgomery, Ala.—The grand jury has indicted the Beauvoir Club and the Standard Club, the leading social organizations of the city, on charges of violating the Sunday law by selling intoxicants on Sunday.

"Human Fly" Is Dead.

Madison, Wis.—Charles Bliss, known a generation ago as the "human fly," died here. He was 80 years old. Bliss originated the trick of walking on the "ceiling." He traveled for years with the Dan Rice shows.

Paragould, Ark.—Word has been received here of the death of Mrs. Amelia Tompkins, 70 years of age, near Lorado, twenty miles distant, from having driven two ten-penny nails into

DOUMA DISSOLVED

Bloodshed is Feared. Sets Russia Back Two Years. Ukases.

THE TROOPS ARE NOW MASSED.

With Stroke of Pen Czar Tears Down the Work of the Past Two Years.

St. Petersburg.—Russia's first experiment in parliamentary government came to an ignominious end with the promulgation of two imperial ukases, the first dissolving the present parliament and providing for the convocation of its successor on March 5, 1907, and the second proclaiming the capital of Russia and the surrounding provinces to be in a state of extraordinary security, which is infinitesimally different from all martial law. This measure is safety is to provide for the outbursts which undoubtedly will be provoked by this daring measure. It is but a step to dictatorship.

The text of the two ukases, both of which are addressed in the stereotyped form to the ruling senate, are as follows:

Text of Ukases.

"According to paragraph 105 of the fundamental law, we order the imperial parliament dissolved, and fix the time for the convocation of the newly elected parliament for March 5, 1905.

"Regarding the time for the new elections to the imperial parliament we will later issue special indications.

"The ruling senate will not fail to take proper measures to place this into effect. NICHOLAS."

The text of the second ukase follows:

"In consideration of a report of the council of ministers presented to us regarding the necessity in the future for the preservation of order and public safety in the city and province of St. Petersburg, we consider it necessary to declare in the above city and provinces, instead of the state of reinforced security which now prevails there, a state of extraordinary security. The prefect of the city and the governor of the province are entrusted with the rights thereto appertaining.

"The ruling senate will not fail to take proper measures to place this into effect. NICHOLAS."

"Peterhof."

Sets Russia Back Two Years.

With these pithy, but momentous, orders Emperor Nicholas by a stroke of the pen set Russia back to where she stood two years ago, and in the full grip of autocracy and irresponsible government, wiping out for six months at least the whole structure of parliament, elected at such cost.

There is little doubt that the order for the convocation of the new assembly will still further postpone the time unless the new parliament promises to be more amenable than the present.

The delay in fixing the time for the new election seems to indicate a decision to change the present basis of suffrage, with which the advisers of the emperor hope to swamp the educated liberals, the socialists and the workmen with the vast mass of the peasantry.

When Will It Break?

The only uncertainty is the coming storm—when and where it will break. The advocates of the "mailed fist" believe that by dissolving parliament and provoking a collision now they will find the revolutionary leaders not prepared for an uprising as at Moscow, whereas further delay would nearly give the revolutionists the time needed to organize and to continue corruption of the army.

The constitutional democratic caucus adjourned before the news of the dissolution of parliament was received, but the information had already reached the leaders of the party. The Associated Press is informed that a meeting was summoned to discuss procedue and whether they shall attempt to take the French third estate, to continue existence as a revolting body in defiance of the sovereign's will.

Favored the Revolutionists.

St. Petersburg.—The arrests made in the office of the Mislauj were not connected with press offenses, but because of the sitting of the central committee of the revolutionary party, which was being held there.

Sailors Threaten Revolt.

Sebastopol.—A meeting of 2,500 sailors from the warships here drew up economic demands for presentation to Professional Cards.

William M. Adams,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW
OFFICE; Room 1, Court House.
"Practices in all Courts
Long time loans negotiated on improved Farm Lands.
CLANTON. ALA.

J. EARLE GOWAN,
DENTIST.
Office in Kicker Building
CLANTON, ALABAMA.

A. C. Smith,
Attorney-at-Law
Practice in All Courts
Office 6th St. opp. Court House
CLANTON, :-: ALABAMA.

N. S. JOHNSON, M. D.
PHYSICIAN & SURGEON
Office at Residence
CLANTON, ALABAMA.

L. V. STABLER, M. D
Physician & Surgeon
Office Over Horn's Drug Store
Thorsby, Alabama

J. Osmond Middleton,
Attorney-at-Law
Practice in all Courts.
Office 6th St. Court House
CLANTON, -:- ALABAMA

DR. E. G. HYMAN
DENTIST
Office in Tipton Mullins' Building
CLANTON

H. C. Junkerman
DENTIST
OFFICE: Franzen Building
Thorsby, Alabama.

G. H. GERALD,
NOTARY PUBLIC
Office at Thorsby Inn.
Deeds, Mortgages, Affidavits and other papers carefully made out.

I. S. Gerald, Notary Public
AT THORSBY SAVINGS BANK.

FREE
to Readers of
THE UNION

To everyone who sends us $1.00 for a year's subscription to THE UNION, new subscriber or renewal, we will give as a premium absolutely FREE,

A Year's Subscription
to
The Southern Ruralist

We have examined the Southern Ruralist and consider it to be the best and most practical farm paper published in the South, and it just suits this locality. Drop by The Union Office when you are in town and see a copy of the Ruralist. It will mean dollars in your pocket to read this paper with The Union for a year. tf.

60 YEARS' EXPERIENCE
PATENTS
TRADE MARKS
DESIGNS
COPYRIGHTS &C.
Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion, free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. HANDBOOK on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents. Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the Scientific American.
A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.
MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York
Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

LAND FOR SALE.

A GREAT COMBINATION OFFER

We Will Furnish the "TWICE-A-WEEK" Issue of the

St. Louis Globe-Democrat

—With—

THE UNION

—For—

$1.50 Both Papers, one year, only $1.50.

The St. Louis Globe-Democrat should not be classed with the many cheap weekly papers. It is a high-grade Semi-Weekly, eight or more pages, every Tuesday and Friday. It is beyond all comparison the biggest, best and cheapest National News and House Journal published in the United States. It is strictly Republican in Politics but is above all

A Great Modern Newspaper.

It is not made up indiscriminately from the Daily issue. It is carefully edited with special reference to the needs of the Farmer, the Merchant and the professional man who desires to keep thoroughly posted without sparing the time to read a large Daily Paper. It also contains a great variety of well selected reading matter, making it invaluable to every member of the family.

This Liberal Clubbing Offer

is open to all old or new subscribers, but may be withdrawn at any time, and we must receive the cash with order. Address

THE UNION,
Clanton, Ala.

Ben M. Jacobs & Bros.,

Furniture and Rugs.

—SOLE AGENTS—

Globe-Wernicke Elastic Book Cases and Filing Cabinets.

Catalogue for the asking.

BIRMINGHAM, ALA.

Farmers' Mutual Insurance Association

OF ALABAMA.

CHARTERED BY SPECIAL ACT OF THE LEGISLATURE

By the People and for the People.

Chilton County Branch

Organized February 3, 1900.

W. M. WILSON, President. WALLACE C. EDLER, Sec'y.-Treas.

INSURES Farmers' dwellings, outbuildings and contents and live stock against loss by fire, wind and lightning. The cheapest, safest and most sensible method of insurance known to man

Average Yearly Cost for Five and a half Years 43-100 of 1 per cent.

Full particulars furnished upon application to WALLACE C. EDLER, Clanton, Ala.

PAUL CALAME,

205 21st Street
Birmingham, Ala.

Practical Watchmaker and Optician

Eyes Correctly Fitted

Mail orders promptly filled

SUBSCRIBE FOR THIS PAPER

DO YOU WANT

Letterheads, Noteheads, Billheads, Envelopes,

OR ANYTHING ELSE PRINTED?

Then Call at

THE UNION OFFICE

and See Fine Work at Low Prices.

500 Noteheads
500 Envelopes
All For $2.00

Good Work on Good Material, done on Good Machines.
Don't forget! THE UNION, Clanton, Alabama.

Pure Water Prevents Fevers.

DRILLED WELLS FURNISH PURE WATER

We guarantee water or no charge made.
Estimates given. Address

I. E. SARBER CO.

Thorsby Alabama.

LONDON'S DOG CEMETERY.

One Graveyard Wherein the Tombstone Epitaphs Are All True.

There is a cemetery in London where all the epitaphs that are written on the tombstones are true. Of course, it is not a cemetery for human beings, for when they die, no matter how base the lives they have lived, the inscriptions on their tombs usually have a tone of euphemistic eulogy. This is a dog cemetery. It is located in a little secluded spot, right in the heart of the great city. People, even strangers, when they read these epitaphs, often shed tears, for they know they are true. Marble never marks the resting place of a dog that is not worthy of all that is written about him. Here are some of the inscriptions one may read:

"Curly—He pined for his mistress, and died a faithful friend."

"She brought the sunshine into our lives, but took it away with her."

"To our gentle, lovely little Blenheim—Jane."

"Dear old Topsy, for over sixteen years the faithful friend of Sir —— and his family. Loved, lamented and respected."

"There are men, both good and wise, who say that dumb creatures we have cherished here below shall give us kindly greeting when we have passed the Golden Gate."

"Our Robin—Only good night, dear one! She talked with soft brown eyes more eloquent than speech."

And there are hundreds of other heartfelt expressions of tender sentiment. Nothing there is conventional. The reader knows they are genuine. —The Technical World.

WISE WORDS.

Fear the fortune that makes you forget your God.

They who seek God's work find God in their world.

It takes more trouble to conceal a sinister life than to act uprightly.

It's a poor kind of a barber who cannot make up a passable prophet to-day.

There is no use in a thing being touching unless it have a purpose in teaching.

God does not furnish foundations on which to rest, but ones on which to build.

Hypocrites usually burst their borrowed hides by overloading their stomachs.

When a man gets red cobwebs on his cheeks the world takes him at his face value.

Strife over words is often mistaken for strenuous work, but only by the strife-makers.

Facility in sentencing others is often offered as a substitute for our own fidelity in service.

The man with a large sense of his own importance is likely to be distinguished for general impotence.—Ram's Horn.

The know-nothing, the do-nothing and the be-nothing scheme of life can only end in outer darkness and ineffable distress.—Joseph Parker.

Game in the Philippines.

Seventeen deer and twenty-five wild hogs, making a total bag of forty-two is the result of one party's holiday hunting trip.

A party left Manila on Wednesday last for Jalajala and after the exciting experience of grounding in the Pasig on one or two occasions reached that point on Thursday morning. The party was joined at Jalajala by Governor Cailles, of Laguna, and his secretary, together with 130 beaters and sixty dogs. An early start was made for La Punta district and a bag amounting to twelve deer and hogs secured that day.

On Friday morning the party was joined by Major Bishop and son, Dr. McVeigh, M. Chandler and Lieutenant Jones and the hunting for that day was carried on in the same district. The morning bag amounted to nine and the evening bag to three. During the evening hunt the largest buck during the trip was secured. This buck put up a very hard fight and was killed after a gallant fight on the beach.

Saturday morning the party moved to the Nagiabas district, where they secured the largest bag, one of eighteen head.—Manila Times.

Stung.

In the cross-examination of a woman called to the witness stand in a recent trial at Pittsburg one of the first questions put to the lady was:

"At what time in the night was it that you saw the prisoner in your room?"

"About 2 o'clock," said the witness.

"Was there a light in the room at that time?"

"No; the room was quite dark."

"Could you see your husband at your side?"

"No, sir."

"Then, madam," observed the attorney, his eye gleaming with triumph, "you will kindly explain to this intelligent jury how it was that you could see the prisoner and yet could not see your husband?"

"Because my husband was at his club," quietly responded the lady.—Harper's Weekly.

The labor members of the British Parliament have resolved to begin a pro-Zulu campaign throughout the country. They hold that Natal and not the Zulu is responsible for the recent rebellion.

THE PULPIT.

AN ELOQUENT SUNDAY SERMON BY REV GEORGE THOMAS DOWLING.

Subject: "The Secret of Peace."

BROOKLYN, N. Y.—Dr. Thomas Edward Dowling, minister in charge of St. James's P. E. Church, St. James place and Lafayette avenue, preached Sunday morning on the subject, "The Secret of Peace," a study of the Shepherd Psalm. Dr. Dowling said:

Thirty centuries ago there lived in Palestine a king, who in his boyhood had been a shepherd lad. And in his old age, when he had seen life, with its sorrows and its joys, this king, David, sang a song, which it takes less than two minutes deliberately to repeat.

Three thousand years have gone since then; and to-day everything he owned has turned to dust except his songs. The throne on which he sat—dust; the palace where he dwelt—dust; the harp which his fingers were accustomed to sweep, the banner with which he led the hosts of Israel, his chariots, and his charioteers—all dust! But to-day that song goes singing its way to the universal heart, in the cottage of the poor and the mansion of the rich, in the home of the learned and of the unlearned, because it sings of what all the world is hungering for—peace.

When Edward Irving swept through the gates it was with this song upon his lips. Luther called it the "Little Bible," and so it is, for it contains in miniature the whole book. Henry Ward Beecher, who once made Brooklyn famous, that greatest preacher the world has ever known since Paul stood on Mars Hill, called it "the nightingale's song," because it sings to us in the darkness. Listen while I repeat it to you, that it may once again sing its way into your heart. (Dr. Dowling here repeated deliberately the Twenty-third Psalm.)

Now I yield Him not simply admiration, but adoration. It is the difference between "He leadeth," and "He leadeth me." If you would know what God may be to you, learn to appropriate Him. Learn to think of Him simply not as a God, but your God; not simply as a friend, but your friend; not simply as a shepherd, but your shepherd.

Now, when you receive a gift there are three things which you do with it. You accept it, you examine it, and you use it. And the gift which this royal shepherd poet of three thousand years ago makes to us in this Shepherd Psalm may prove more precious to you than any which you have ever received, if you deal with it in just that way; the way of appropriation, of appreciation and of application.

As you notice how very easy it is to appropriate it, because it abounds with those personal and possessive pronouns, in which, Martin Luther said, the preciousness of the Bible consists: "The Lord is my shepherd." "He leadeth me." "Yea, though I walk through the valley."

What a great difference there is between the mere apprehension of a fact and the appropriation of that fact, between knowing it and claiming it. When you see a child in a runaway, you are moved; but suppose it is your child. There is the same difference that there is between the stately mansion of a stranger and the little cottage in which your mother rocked you in her arms and crooned to you the songs of your babyhod. So, my friends, you never can judge of a religion until it has been transmuted into a personal experience, until it has become your religion. A historical Christ is, at the most, only a Christ. I can look upon Him with admiration. Ah! but when He has become mine, and I have heard His voice, and felt His touch, He is no longer simply a Christ but the Christ.

And then, when you have appropriated this psalm, seek to appreciate it. Notice, to begin with, the perfect spirit of trust which breathes through it all. See how much it has to say about Him and how little about ourselves. Mark how every verse tells us what He is doing.

My dear people, that is the whole secret. The secret of peace is the putting of God between our troubles and ourselves. I know the dark hours which have come into some of your lives; I know your perplexities; for though you are strangers to me as yet, the experience of human hearts is just the same the whole world over, and the joys and the sorrows of the men and women whom I learned so well to know and to love on the Pacific shores are just the joys and the sorrows which you are having today. I know of the hour when some young mother in this congregation sat sobbing by the side of her little one, whispering blindly, "I do not know why she should be taken from me; I cannot understand it." Well, my dear child, do not try to understand it, for you never can here. Some day I shall preach to you on "Things to be Waited For," and one of the things to be waited for is the understanding of these mysteries of life. And yet we may know that while we are waiting we may be waiting in companionship with Him who understands it all. And there is no other help for us in our dark hours, except in placing Him between our troubles and ourselves.

Wilbur Chapman tells us of a little drummer boy in our civil war who was taken into the hospital mortally wounded, and so they sent for his mother from a distant city. But when she came they said to her, "You cannot go in; he's too sick; he couldn't stand the shock." And so she stood by the door waiting and weeping and listening. And when she heard him sigh, she said to them, "Let me go in; I won't speak to him. I'll just sit by his bedside." And so they permitted her to pass quietly into the darkened room and sit beside him. But as she sat there the mother love was too strong, and, reaching out her hand, she laid it gently upon his aching forehead. He did not open his eyes, but he knew that touch. She saw his lips move, and, stooping down to him, she heard him say: "I knew you'd come to me; I knew you'd come to me." And if you are only willing to welcome Him who loves you more than you ever loved your little one, you may know that He will come to you, and "as one whom his mother comforteth," so will He comfort you.

And notice the blessings which he brings when He comes. As David expresses it in this psalm, "they that belong to Him shall find that their cup 'overfloweth'"; not only abundance, but redundance. It has sometimes seemed as though there were a mixture of figures here, and that as the psalmist neared the end of his song the scene changed from the open fields of the flock to the guarded household of the guest.

But this is not so. One of the most important duties of the shepherd is to find a feeding place for his sheep, where they shall not be injured by poisonous herbs, and where he may defend them against the jackals and the wolves that prowl around. Our Shepherd will protect us and provide for our wants, not only in the seclusion of the fold, but while we are still, if need be, out in the world. And so David, sings, "Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies."

Then follows the closing scene of the day. The sun is setting, and the flock is being brought home. But some of them have been wounded, and some of them are weary. And so the shepherd stands at the door of the sheepfold, rodding the sheep, as it is termed; holding them back with his rod, permitting them to enter one by one. Here one has been bruised or torn by the briars, and from the horn filled with olive oil he bathes the wounded head. And one is tired and worn, and, dipping into the vessel the large two-handled cup, he gives him a drink. Thus the shepherd cares for his sheep clear on till the very hour of the homecoming. Nothing is forgotten. And so the psalmist sings, still with the picture of the shepherd in his mind, "Thou anointest my head with oil; my cup runneth over." But I am anticipating.

"The Lord is my Shepherd; I shall not want." What? Rest. "He maketh me to lie down in green pastures." But the green pastures have to come first. There is the contemplative life, and the active life. And, my brethren, we need the first; that is the meaning of these services; that is the meaning of Sunday; that is the meaning of Lent. It is a mistake for us to suppose that we can get on in the right life without these green pasture experiences. Somebody says, "I judge of a man by what he does." Yes; but what a man does grows out of what that man is. And here in these contemplative hours we find Christian manhood and womanhood in the making.

And then, there is the leadership: "I shall not want"—guidance; "He leadeth me." That is the other side of the Christian experience; the active side. The purpose of these green pastures is to send us forth to use the strength which here we get.

And in this leadership of His there are two facts which I would have you remember. He goes before us: "He leadeth." He will select no path which his sheep cannot travel. But remember also that the sheep must follow after: we must select no path which He cannot travel.

"He leadeth me in the paths of righteousness," not always by the side of still waters, not always in green pastures— sometimes the sheep track may lie across the wilderness; but if we are following him we may know that they are always "paths of righteousness"—right paths, and that they lead toward home.

And finally, "I shall not want" companionship. "Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil; for thou art with me." He who is following the Master shall find death itself only a shadow; and who shall be afraid of a shadow? And though the valley may be there and the darkness, He shall lead us out, as He leads us in. Death is not a blind pocket; it is not a place of tarrying, only of transition. I shall walk "through the valley of the shadow of death."

And now, having appropriated this psalm, having sought to appreciate it, let us try to apply it. I mean to-day, here and now, and to-morrow, and to-morrow, and to-morrow, every day. For you observe that until we reach the very last verse it is all in the present tense. He is not speaking of any distant elysium, far away in the future. "The Lord is my shepherd; he maketh me to lie down in green pastures; He leadeth me beside the still waters." All the blessings which I have described may be yours now. Will you take them for yours, and apply them to the problems of your life to-day? Oh, learn to practice the presence of God. Try to think of Him as really at your side. Speak to Him when you are in trouble or perplexity. Suppose you make a test of this Shepherd psalm only for to-day. Suppose you say: "From now until the hour when I fall asleep at night I will seek to live with this thought supreme: that God is mine, and that He loves me, and is leading me." See what it will mean to you in peace and comfort and joy. And then realize that if you can do it for one day, you can do it for every day, and the problem of your life's meaning is solved. And when the last valley shall have been passed, and passed through, and you are drawing near to that fold, which James Lane Allen describes as "the final land where the mystery, the pain, and the yearning of this life will either be infinitely satisfied or infinitely quieted," though you shall have changed your place, you will not change your company; He who was with you here will be with you there, and this song shall still go singing its way on and up into the eternal light: "Goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life, and I dwell in the house of the Lord forever."

All Pervasive.

There is not room enough in all created things for the soul of man—which, like a ship in a narrow river, hath not room to turn, and besides is ever and anon striking ground and foundering in the shallows. Jesus Christ is in every way adequate to the vast desires of the soul; in Him it hath sea room enough, there it may spread all its sails with no fear of touching the bottom.—John Flavel.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

INTERNATIONAL LESSON COMMENTS FOR JULY 29.

Subject: Jesus Dines With a Pharisee. Luke xiv., 1-14—Golden Text, 11—Memory Verses, 13, 14—The Believer's Social Duties.

I. The true idea of Sabbath observance (vs. 1-6). 1. "Chief Pharisee." It has been suggested that this ruler had been a member of the synagogue with a country home in Bethany, to whom Jesus went to eat bread." Our Lord had been invited, and, when He was invited, it was as proper for Him to go on the Sabbath as on any other day. "They were watching Him." They were maliciously watching Him.

2. "A certain man." This man must have been brought there by his friends to see in order to test Christ's power to heal Him." Before the company had taken their seats at the table. "Dropsy." A disease in which the body or some part of it is filled with water.

3. "Jesus answering spake." Jesus knew they were deceptively silent, but not ready to meet them. "Is it lawful?" The teachers of the law had a question present: "Is it lawful?" Jesus was in a dilemma: as lawyers and rabbis well know, but if they answered in the affirmative they would be condemning Him and His work, while to answer in the negative would be to show a lack of love and lay themselves open to a charge similar to that recorded in chapter 13:15. It was considered unlawful that to walk upon the grass in one's shoes was a violation of the Sabbath.

4. "Held their peace." Were condemn, unwilling to commit themselves. Their silence was our Lord's opportunity for justification. If the question was unlawful why was it? "Took him." Took hold of him. Acts 20:20; 1 Tim. 6:12. "Healed him." Showing the opinion of Jesus that healing on the Sabbath was lawful. "Let him go." Dismissed him. Jesus went back to the Pharisees. Their pharisaical hatred was worse than the poor man's disease.

5. "Fallen into a pit." Has swallowed them completely by the mire. Appealing to the fact that they on the Sabbath day would have mercy on a beast in distress. Read Matt. 12:11, 12; Luke 13:14-17. 6. "Could not answer." Silent, but not convinced. They were silenced, was unanswerable. If they would not deliver an ox or an ass from the pit on the Sabbath, by what reasonable or common sense could they say that it was lawful to save a man from disease?

II. A parable of humility. 7. "A parable." The scramble for precedence as they went in to the feast, their places at the table gave our Lord opportunity to teach a lesson of humility. "When He marked." Noticed, escapes the eye of the Lord. "How they chose out." To take the highest seats when it is not our due is presumption, to obstinately refuse it when it is due is another instance of the same. The feast was private and conducted in the chief rooms." The chief seats. The guests reclined on couches around the table which formed three sides of a hollow square. On each couch were three places. The middle place was the most honorable.

8. "Bidden—to a wedding." Jesus speaks of a "marriage feast" because the rules of propriety would be more carefully insisted on than at a dinner not down." The pride that seeks humility violates the spirit of the following. 9. "He that bade" the host who has authority to decide matters. "With shame." Soon or later. "With shame." Sooner or later pride will have a fall.

10. "In the lowest room." The lowest place was occupied very frequently. The lowest place was permanent, not temporary, but higher." The way to rise is to go low. What Christ commanded he himself did. "Then shalt thou have worship." "Have glory." Honor, reverence, respect and homage in the presence of the company. "Whosoever exalteth," etc. Now comes the great principle illustrated by the parable. Humility is the highest promotion in the kingdom of God. The one who is proud and seeks to be honored above others, shall be abased, humbled, both by God and man.

III. A lesson on our duty to the poor (vs. 12-14). 12. "Call not thy friends." The second parable is not a command, but is a sharp rebuke on a custom of the day which is almost always followed, that of the choice of guests. "Thy friends, nor thy neighbors." "He that hath pity upon the poor, happy is he" (Prov. 22:9).

13. "Call the poor." The duty to the poor are not forbidden. He that is merciful to the poor lendeth to the Lord. Here the Saviour here commends the duty which He has Himself fulfilled in the most illustrious manner.

14. "Shalt be blessed." The poor who have been fed will bless the giver, and so will the Lord. "Recompensed at the resurrection of the just." There is to be a future reward. We are all hastening on toward the day of resurrection. At that time God will reward those who have done good for His sake, without the hope of any earthly recompense.

At last a modern invention has come to grapple with the problem of bringing the primitive method of launching a boat from a vessel at sea to a condition more in accord with the twentieth century. The present system, clumsy in fine weather, is one of deadly peril in storms. Even alone the launching of the lifeboat reaches its highest danger, has been described as "a disgrace to marine engineering." Mr. Hall, a Swedish engineer, has made it his task to remove the reproach. His apparatus, which has been subjected to many practical tests, has a simple arrangement in the "chocks," the drawing of a bolt sets them free, which permits the boat to glide into the water, while there are horizontal bars which keep the boat from crashing against the ship's side. As passengers or crew can be got into the boat before it leaves the davits, the boat is lowered and clear immediately upon reaching the water, which removes another danger.

Marie's Beautiful Lady

By Lucretia Macy Gardner.

Ever since the eventful day in Niccoli's life when a purse lay at her feet, as if in answer to her little sister's cry, "to bring her a pair of red slippers," Marie Norton, the owner of the "beautiful lady," was always called by Marie "My Beautiful Lady."

Is it not strange the little sister looked upon her as her good fairy, and the command of their benefactress the child was wafted to a room in the hospital where the canary bird in his gilded cage made the hours glad with his song, and helped her to forget, at times, aching head and spine. For, in spite of the best medical skill, the road to recovery promised to be long and tedious. Even when Miss Norton reported to the doctor the result of the consultation of the surgeons, she said, "How would you like to live with me for a while,—do my errands, dust my room and"—

"Oh, your maid?" gasped Marie, as such bliss were too great to mention lightly.

"Why, yes, perhaps; but I think I would rather call you my companion. And now let us talk about school. It does not seem quite the thing for you not to go to school any more, do you think so?"

"I've been to night school since you went to the hospital, but Mrs. Lee asked the other evening if I didn't go daytimes; I guess I look stupid and sleepy."

"Oh, don't say that! Of course you must be tired after your long day at the dress maker's. By the way, I forgot to tell you of the talk I had with Miss LaMonde yesterday. She has agreed to lend you to me for a little rest and change. She tells me you are willing you always are to do whatever she wishes."

Marie's long lashes hid her eyes; but Miss Norton saw her choke back a sob, and she hastened to say: "I want you right away, for you know there is going to be a vacation for ten days at the public school. I will ask Mrs. Fallon to take care of any furniture you may have in your room, and I'll pay you your rent. Then we'll begin all over, as the children say.

Truly a new page was turned in the life of the two children of the tenement; and while it might be easy to imagine something more hilarious than spending Christmas in a hospital, the change from a dreary room where even the sunlight dreaded to enter, to the Broad Street Sanatorium, with its sun parlors on every floor, seemed to Anita like transporting to heaven.

Meanwhile the older girl responded like a new flower to her new atmosphere of loving care, and one day while dusting the reception room, her voice broke forth into such a burst of melody that Marie's beautiful lady came to the stairs, and listened to the Italian, suggestive of sunny Italy, and in their lack of training. It was a simple street song; but the voice hinted of great possibilities. Miss Norton called Marie to her and said: "If you will do your best at school, and the teachers are satisfied with your work, I'll teach you (Anita) on the piano, and my friend Miss Arthold will give you singing lessons. How does that sound?

"But Anita—you know I want to be care of her, and I mustn't use much time! I can't take every thing from you!"

The last words sounded like a wail. Marie slipped to the floor, burying her head in her hands, and sobbed as the beautiful lady had never before heard her. "Per-haps you'll be sorry some day—that you've been so good to me!" she stammered.

"Why, who on earth has put that into your head? Has some one been saying disagreeable things to you?"

All questioning was useless, but Miss Margaret Norton was very good at guessing. "Ah," she exclaimed, "is it that that silly Janey has been disturbing you, she is so jealous! But now listen, dearie; it takes two to make a bargain, and you and I are two! Why, child, what should I do in this lonely house without a young girl to keep me company? Who would brush my hair every night, and tell me how Molly and that pony Fritz recite their lessons, while I laugh away my blues? Who, dear, but you? It's our little secret; and when Anita is discharged from the hospital, she shall come here, and you and I will teach her all we know."

The magic wand was again waved, and peace restored. Marie proved most tractable and found a sympathetic audience when she confided to her beautiful lady that she just hated geometry, and did not see the use of proving one line was longer than another when her own eyes told her so. The argument that Miss Norton had used was heard.

In the midst of discouragements several red-letter days stood out prominently—when Marie began French and Italian; the April morning when Anita left the hospital, able to walk like other people; and the sweet June day when her beautiful lady was present to congratulate her upon graduating the third in her class, and to tell her that it was decided that she was

...HE SUNDAY SC...

...NTERNATIONAL LESSON CO...
FOR JULY 29.

...bject: Jesus Dines With a Ph...
Luke xiv., 1-14—Golden Text, Luke...
11—Memory Verses, 13, 14—Tex...
Believer's Social Duties—Co...

I. The true idea of Sabbath ob...nce (vs. 1-6). 1. "Chief Pharisee" ...n been suggested that this man ...n been a member of the Sanh...ith a country home in Perea ...at bread." Our Lord had no ...nd, when He was invited to go ...rus as proper for Him to go ...abbath as on any other day. ...ere watching Him." R. V. ...alliciously watching Him. ...2. "A certain man." This man ...ve been brought there by the ...ce in order to test Christ. ...Him." Before the company had ...eats at the table. "Dropsy." ...ase in which the body or some ...is filled with water. ...3. "Jesus answering spake." ...new they were deceptive, and ...eady to meet them. "The law." ...The teachers of the law who ...resent. "Is it lawful," etc. ...a dilemma; as lawyers they ...now, but if they answered ...firmative they would endanger ...nd His work, while to answer ...egative would be to show their ...f love and lay themselves liable ...harge similar to that given in ...er 13:15. It was seriously ...not to walk upon the grass with ...hoes was a violation of the Sa... "Held their peace." Unable to ...emn, unwilling to concede. ...ilence was our Lord's complete ...stification. If the contemplated ...le was unlawful why did not ...reat religious authorities forbid ...Took him." Took hold of him ...6:20; 1 Tim. 6:12). "Healed ...Showing the opinion of Jesus ...ealing on the Sabbath day. ...im go." Dismissed Him and ...ack to the Pharisees, whose ...monious hatred was worse than ...our man's disease. ...5. "Fallen into a pit." Jesus ...hem completely by calling ...o the fact that they on the ...ay would have mercy on a ...istress. Read Matt. 12:10-12; ...3:14-17. 6. "Could not answer ...again, but not convinced. The ...was unanswerable. 'If they would ...ver an ox or an ass from a ...he Sabbath, by what reason or ...non sense could they say it was ...d to save a man from his affl... 11. A parable of humility (vs. ... "A parable." The selfish ...or precedence as they were ...their places at the table gave Je... ...opportunity to teach a lesson in ...ay. "When He marked." Noting ...apes the eyes of the Lord. "Ro... ...hose out." To take the highest ...when it is not our due is public ...o obstinately refuse it when ...s another instance of the same ...though private and concealed. ...chief rooms." The chief seats. ...The guests reclined on couches ...the table which formed three ...hollow square. On each side ...were three places. The middle ...was the most honorable. ...8. "Fadden—to a wedding ...speaks of a "marriage feast" ...because the rules of procedure ...be more carefully insisted upon ...not down." The pride that ...nility violates the spirit of this ...ing. 9. "He that bade." The ...who has authority to decide ...er. "With shame." Sooner ...pride will have a fall. ...10. "In the lowest room." The ...place was occupied very often ...owest place was permanent. ...higher." The way to rise is by ...ow. What Christ commanded He ...self did. "Then shalt thou have ...ship." "Have glory." R. V. ...reverence, respect and honor ...reserve of the company. 11. ...soever exalteth," etc. Now follows ...great principle illustrated by the ...ple. Humility is the passport ...motion in the kingdom of God. ...one who is proud and seeks to be ...ered above others, shall be abased ...humbled, both by God and man. ...III. A lesson on our duty to the ...vs. 12-14). 12. "Call not thy friends." ...The second parable is to the ...s a sharp rebuke on account of ...which is almost always connected ...the choice of guests. "Nor thy ...relations." "He that giveth ...shall surely come to want." ...13. "Call the poor." Feasts ...are not forbidden. He that ...the poor lendeth to the Lord." ...the Saviour here commends to ...He has Himself fulfilled in ...illustrious manner. 14. "Shalt be blessed." The ...who have been fed will bless the ...so will the Lord. "Resurrection ...just." There is to be a future ...are all hastening on toward the ...rection. At that time God ...ward those who have done ...His sake, without the hope ...earthly recompense.

At last a modern invention ...gun to grapple with the ...bringing the primitive ...launching a boat from a ship ...at sea to a condition more ...the twentieth century. The ...system, clumsy in fine weather ...one of deadly peril in storm ...alone the launching of the ship ...boat reaches its highest ...has been described as "a ...marine engineering." M. ... Swedish engineer, has made ...to remove the reproach. ...ratus, which has been exhi... ...many practical tests, has a ...rangement in the davits ...drawing of a bolt sets them ...permits the boat to glide ...while there are horizontal ...keep the boat from crashing ...the ship's side. As passengers ...crew can be got into it ...leaves the davits, the boat ...clear, immediately ... ...water, which rushes ...

...THE MID-DAY SUN.

...to hide his splendor, till the day ...Has passed away; ...shade of any tree or flower ...To mark the hour, ...the sound of bells, and a wave ...the western grave. ...—Harper's Magazine.

...rie's Beautiful Lady

By Lucretia Mary Gardner.

...the eventful day in ...life when a purse lay ...feet as if in answer to her ...cry, "to bring her ...of red slippers," Mar... the owner of the lost ...was always called by Marie ...Lady. ...range the little sister ...her as her good fairy; ...mmand of their bene... ...hild was wafted to a ...the hospital where ...in his gilded cage made ...ood with his song, and ...forget, at times, aching ...For, in spite of the ...the road to recov... ...to be long and tedious; ...when Miss Norton reported to ...the result of the consultation ...the surgeons, she said, "How ...would you like to live with me for ...while,—do my errands, dust a ...and ...your maid?" gasped Marie, as ...bliss were too great to men... ...rightly ...Why, yes, perhaps; but I think ...would rather call you my compan... ...And now let us talk about school. ...does not seem quite the thing for ...not to go to school any more, do ...think so?" ...'ve been to night school since ...went to the hospital, but Mr. ...asked the other evening if I ...didn't go daytimes; I guess I look... ...rapid and sleepy." ...don't say that! Of course you ...are tired after your long day ...the dress maker's. By the way, I ...to tell you of the talk I had ...Miss LaMonde yesterday. She ...agreed to lend you to me for a ...rest and change. She tells me ...willing you always are to do ...every she wishes." ...Marie's long lashes hid her eyes; but ...Miss Norton saw her choke back a ...and she hastened to say: "I want ...right away, for you know there ...to be a vacation for ten days at ...school. I will ask Mrs. Fallon to ...care of any furniture you may ...to save from your room, and I'll ...your rent. Then we'll begin all ...as the children say. ...Truly a new page was turned ...the life of the two children of the ...heroes; and while it might be easy ...imagine something more hilarious ...than spending Christmas in a hospital ...the change from a dreary room ...even the sunlight dreaded to ...go to the Broad Street Sanatorium, ...its sun parlors on every floor, seemed ...to Anita like transporting to heav...

Meanwhile the older girl responded ...to a new flower to her new atmosphere ...of loving care, and one day ...while dusting the reception room, her ...voice broke forth into such a burst ...of melody that Marie's beautiful lady ...came to the stairs, and listened to the ...trills suggestive of sunny Italy ...in their lack of training. ...It was a simple street song; but ...there tinted of great possibilities, ...and Miss Norton called Marie to her, ...and said: "If you will do your best ...at school, and the teachers are satisfied with your work, I'll teach you to ...play on the piano, and my friend Miss ...Arundi will give you singing lessons. How does that sound. ...But Anita—you know I want to ...take care of her, and I mustn't use ...much time! I can't take every... ...thing from you!" ...The last words sounded like a wail ...and Marie slipped to the floor, buried ...her head in her hands, and sobbed as ...her beautiful lady had never before ...heard her. "Per-haps you'll be sor-ry ...some day—that you've been so good ...to me!" she stammered. ...Why, who on earth has put that ...idea into your head? Has some one ...been saying disagreeable things to ...you?" ...All questioning was useless, but ...Margaret Norton was very good at ...guessing. "Ah," she exclaimed, "I ...rather think that silly Janey has been ...disturbing you, she is so jealous! But ...now listen, dearie; it takes two to ...make a bargain, and you and I are ...one two! Why, child, what should I ...do in this lonely house without a ...young girl to keep me company? Who ...could brush my hair every night, and ...tell me how Molly and that polly ...must recite their lessons, while I ...brush away my blues? Who, dear, but ...you you? It's our little secret; and, ...when Anita is discharged from the ...hospital, she shall come here, and ...you and I will teach her all we know." ...The magic wand was again waved ...and peace restored. Marie proved ...most tractable and found a sympathetic audience when she confided to ...her beautiful lady that she just hated ...geometry, and did not see the use of ...proving one line was longer than the ...other when her own eyes told her—an argument that Miss Norton had often heard. ...In the midst of discouragements ...several red-letter days stood out prominently—when Marie began French ...and Italian; the April morning that ...Anita left the hospital, able to walk ...like other people; and the sweet June ...day when her beautiful lady was the ...first to congratulate her upon graduating the third in her class, and to tell ...her that it was decided that she was to ...go to Italy in September with Miss ...Bartholdi.

"But you—oh, I do so want to learn to sing! But how can I leave Anita and you?" The young girl put her arms around Miss Norton in spite of the warning "not to crush her lace," and said such pretty words to her, it would have been perplexing to determine which cheeks were the brighter.

Marie felt as if under some wizard's spell when she found herself one October morning in the presence of Signor Monaldi, the famous teacher, who saw great possibilities in the sweet voice from over the sea, and arranged a most arduous program for Miss Bartholdi to follow.

Just as the future looked most bright, there came a letter to her teacher that dashed Marie's hopes in an instant. Rumors of great treachery on the part of Miss Norton's business advisor threatened utter financial ruin. Marie grasped the situation, and said: "There is just one step for me to take! I must go back to her. Please don't say a word, Miss Bartholdi, or I might be weak and easily tempted. My beautiful lady! Just think, where should Anita and I have been without her! It's my turn now, and I can teach music, and pay her back a little of all we owe her!"

"Poor child, music lessons! How little she realizes what that means!" Miss Bartholdi was wise enough to make only mental comments, and and waited for the first outburst of excitement to be over, then, taking the girl'shand in hers said: "I have something in my mind that may work out all right for you. Just be patient one more day, and I will report if there is a ray of encouragement."

Only the previous day while she was giving Marie her lesson, two gentlemen stood close to the portiere and listened from their safe hiding place to the bird-like freshness of the voice. One of the audience reported most enthusiastically to Miss Bartholdi, later in the afternoon: "You should have seen my friend! Why, Miss Bartholdi, he just could not wait for her to finish, but whispered, 'Tell me her name,' and, when I talked with him after you had left the studio he said: 'Niccoli? Niccoli? My mother had a brother who went to America somewhere—that's her family name; but it's just a coincidence probably!' And Signor Monaldi turned to Marie's teacher with a very wise expression, and murmured as a final word, "It may be a good plan to have the young lady meet Signor Buonetti!"

What wonder that the words had been constantly in her mind; and, acting upon the adage that two heads are better than one, a conference with him resulted in an invitation for them to escort Marie to the studio of Signor Buonetti.

When the latter heard the name of Marie's father, Giovanni Niccoli, he took her hands in his, and said: "You are my own cousin, the only one left of my family; and I must not let such a sweet girl slip away away from Italy, the land of the prima donna! Now, Miss Bartholdi, will you cable Miss Norton, at my expense, that her ward has found an Italian cousin over here, and ask her to take passage in the next steamer, with Anita and any papers she has in regard to the two?"

Signor Monaldi could scarcely restrain himself, but made a great effort to be calm until they had left the studio far behind, when he said: "That man, Miss Bartholdi, is immensely rich! He has only one hobby; he is a great collector of valuable paintings and gems." Then, turning to Marie, he added, with true Italian warmth of feeling, "Now, Miss, your art can be made perfect; the future looks rosy!"

Upon receipt of the cable, Margaret Norton and Anita felt as if their good fairies were helping them out of their troubles, and the delicate face of Marie's sister, with its pink flush of delight, reminded one of the dainty arbutus, as they took passage upon the great ocean steamer that looked like a palace to one of the travellers.

What followed seemed, indeed, like a chapter from real fairyland. Miss Bartholdi removed to another apartment; and Margaret, Marie, and Anita set up a modest establishment which promised to be permanent. At the first moment, however, that Signor Buonetti saw Marie's beautiful lady, he appreciated the fact that she was a rare gem, and his heart went out to her even as Margaret's found Marie. When in course of time Marie realized that through her had come the greatest happiness her beautiful lady had ever imagined, the latter said: "You have always talked about bread cast upon the waters, but I never supposed it would be returned away over here in Italy! Think what has come to me because of this Italian cousin of yours!"

Marie's wedding gift, earned from a first appearance before a critical musical audience, was a King's Daughter cross, set with pearls, while inscribed on the other side the dates 1898-1905, following the letters M. B. L. which stood not only for Marie's Beautiful Lady, but Marie's Bright Light, significant of the day when her own cross slipped from her jacket, reflecting its gleam upon the gray wall, and sent its abiding light deeper still into the heart of this daughter of the King. —The Christian Register.

All High Flyers.

"Are you interested in airships, Mrs. Getemoff?"

"Heirships! I am, indeed, Mr. Swatley. I have three unmarried daughters."—Boston Transcript.

The name California first appeared in an anonymous Spanish romance published in 1510. It told of an Amazon queen, Calafia, whose realm was called California.

WOMEN ON OUR JURIES.

THEY WOULD BE SURE TO CONVICT GUILTY SISTERS.

So Frederick Upham Adam Declares —Criminal System is Wrong—Author of "Bottom of the Well" Makes Scathing Attack Upon It.

In his recently published novel, "The Bottom of the Well," Frederick Upham Adams makes a scathing attack on the jury system, and turns his batteries of sarcasm on those impressionable New York jurymen who find it impossible to convict a pretty woman regardless of the weight of testimony pointing to her guilt. The author places these sentiments in the mouth of "Amos Buckingham," the eccentric millionaire, who was suspected, arrested, tried and convicted for his own murder—a striking situation intended to show the worthlessness of circumstantial evidence. In his address to the trial judge, Amos Buckingham says:

"A juror should have intelligence: he should be a man of reading and one almost abreast of his times—we disqualify him for those very traits. We make jury service a perquisite for dullards and incapables. We drag the ignorance of an emotional and unintelligent community for the twelve men who know the least of what men should know, and then commission them to pass on questions of life or death! If a guilty woman with a pretty face smiles at them and rustles her silk skirts in their ears, no testimony is damning enough to convict her. To be accepted as a juror in a metropolitan murder trial is a disgrace from which a self-respecting man shrinks and attempts to evade."

Mr. Adams was asked if these were his views, or whether they were written for the purpose of accentuating the strange character of the fictitious "Amos Buckingham."

"The paragraph cited expresses fairly well views I have held for years," said Mr. Adams. "Our entire system of trying persons accused of high crimes is a mockery of justice and intelligent foreigners are unable to understand why we cling to it. Our judicial machinery is cumbersome, expensive, and faulty in every essential particular. It is impossible to make a defense of the jury system as exemplified in modern practice and results. The average metropolitan jury is composite of ignorance and emotionalism. The jurymen are swayed by a mawkish sentimentality rather than by a proper conception of the demands of justice. Recent verdicts in which women have been tried offer encouragement and incentive to those of the 'weaker sex' who find themselves tempted to commit murder in requittal for real or fancied wrongs. Any one who has kept track of the murder trials of the past twelve months can instance a dozen or more cases in which pretty murderesses have been exonerated by jurymen who were influenced by their eyes, rather than their ears, in arriving at a decision."

"When asked to suggest a remedy for this state of affairs Mr. Adams said:

"The proper remedy will be found in the abolition of the jury system and in delegating the right of decision to the trial judge. The worse of judges are better than the best of juries in all such cases as we are now considering. If we insist on preserving our antiquated jury system, I suggest that it be modified so that a woman accused of murder shall be tried by a jury of her peers—in other words, by a jury of women."

"But will not women jurors be too likely to convict one of their sex?"

"Not unless the one accused is shown to be guilty by the evidence," replied the author. "If murder is to be considered a capital crime, murderers should be convicted and punished, and no discrimination should be shown because of sex. There is valid reason for asserting that women are better qualified to judge of the guilt of an accused woman than are men. Beyond doubt there would be more verdicts of guilty, and that is just what we need at the present time.

"The wholesale acquittal of depraved women and adventuresses has had a demoralizing effect on the morals of the entire community, and calls for some drastic remedy. A guilty woman would not escape at the hands of a jury of women. I do not believe in the death penalty, but do hold that murderers of both sexes should be put where society is safe from a repetition of their crimes. At present we reward women criminals with a notoriety dear to their hearts.

"Turn them over to the tender mercies of their own sex, and the female murderer will no longer fill the pages of sensational papers."

LOST BIRD FOUND IN OREGON.

She Is a Waif of the Battle of Wounded Knee.

Lost Bird has been found; that is, her whereabouts is known. She is in Oregon, far from the maddening crowd and further still from the alfalfa covered plains of her childhood. Lost Bird is an Indian maiden, comely as Indian maidens go, but more Caucasian than Indian in her ideas and mode of living, for it has been more than fifteen years since Lost Bird was last in the wigwam of her father.

Lost Bird was a waif of battle. In the winter of 1890-9, when her people, the Rosebud agency Sioux, were mowed down by the bullets of the paleface soldiers at Wounded Knee, Lost Bird was left, a helpless, blanket bound papoose, in the deserted tepee of her parents. With the American troops was a citizen soldier, Gen. Leonard Wright Colby, a lawyer of Beatrice, Neb. He took the Indian baby home with him, and he and his wife adopted her. They called her Lost Bird, because the name seemed appropriate.

Yesterday the Sioux chief Little Cloud, leading a band of warriors, made a raid on the residence of Gen. Colby, at Beatrice. He had been in the Wounded Knee fight and when he fled before the pursuing bluecoats his girl papoose was left behind. Little Cloud heard recently that his daughter had been taken away from the Rosebud agency by Gen. Colby, and it so happened that the circus with which Little Cloud is doing Wild West stunts was billed to appear yesterday at Beatrice.

So Little Cloud, gathering his warriors, started off to abduct Lost Bird from the Colby residence. Waving tomahawks, the Indians made a forcible entry into the home of the Nebraska General. But Lost Bird was not there. Neither was General Colby. The day before he had been married to his second wife and was off on his wedding trip. It is supposed that he had received warning of Little Cloud's intention.

But where was Lost Bird? The question was answered today by officials of the United States Indian Bureau. She is out in Oregon—nobody could remember the post office address—with Mrs. Clara Bewick Colby, the divorced wife of the General, whom he had married in 1871. When Lost Bird was taken from the Rosebud agency the Colbys were living together. In addition to being a citizen-soldier at that time, Gen. Colby was an Assistant Attorney-General of the United States, stationed in Washington. So Lost Bird was brought to the capital by the General and his wife.

The Colbys remained here until a change of administration left Gen. Colby without an office. Then they went back to Beatrice and took Lost Bird with them. That was in 1893. Subsequently Gen. Colby served two terms in the Nebraska State Senate. He had been in the civil war when a mere boy and had served as Lieutenant, Captain, Colonel and Brigadier-General of the Nebraska State troops. It was while an officer of the Nebraska militia that he participated in the Wounded Knee campaign and found Lost Bird. In the Spanish-American war President McKinley commissioned him a Brigadier-General of Volunteers in recognition of his services in organizing the Cuban-American Volunteer Legion. From 1901 to 1903 he was Adjutant-General of Nebraska. Mrs. Colby was also prominent. She took a deep interest in the cause of woman suffrage and favored dress reform. At one of the congresses of women's organizations here she put forth the merits of Turkish trousers as a garb for her sex. Domestic difficulties between the Colbys resulted in a divorce. Gen. Colby remained in Nebraska. Mrs. Colby kept Lost Bird and for a time lived in Washington. Recently she wrote to the Indian bureau with reference to an application for an allotment of Indian funds for her foster child. The letter was sent from Oregon.—Washington correspondent of the New York Sun.

One Week's Barter.

There never was a more conscientious person than Mrs. Foster, but she enjoyed shopping, hunting bargains and exchanging goods. It was as a result of these combined tastes that she was one day confronted by an ethical problem which she turned over to her husband.

"It's like this, Henry," she said, in her most earnest manner. "I don't wish to feel that I have overreached Jameson & Clark, and yet it sounds almost as if I had.

"A week ago to-day I bought one of those new dish-pans for one dollar and seventy-five cents. It was a good bargain, but when I got it home I saw our old one really did well enough, after all, so I sent it back and was credited with the money, to exchange.

"The next day I went in and bought some cake-tins for thirty cents and a granite-ware saucepan for forty-five cents, and took home a one-dollar pitcher 'on approval' for Norah to see if the nose worked well.

"Norah didn't care for it—the nose was too sharp and narrow—so I returned it on Friday, expecting of course to get another with a broader nose, and they were having a special dish-pan sale, and the one I'd had before was put down to a dollar.

"Well, of course that was too good a bargain to lose, so I took one. But ever since Friday I've felt a little worried, because it seems—well, Henry, you see how it seems."

Our Point of Danger

At what point shall we expect the approach of danger? Shall we expect some transatlantic military blow? Never! All the armies of Europe, Asia and Africa combined, with all the treasures of the earth, our own excepted, in their military chest, with a Bonaparte for commander, could not, by force, take a drink from the Ohio, or make a track on the Blue Ridge, in a trial of a thousand years.

At what point, then, is this approach of danger to be expected? I answer, if it ever reach us, it must spring up among us; it cannot come from abroad. If destruction be our lot, we must ourselves be its author and finisher. As a nation of freemen, we must live through all time or die by suicide.—Abraham Lincoln.

Two syndicates have been formed to exploit the petroleum deposits in the Bethlehem, Boshof, Ficksburg, Harrismith, Heilbron, Kroonstad, Ladybrand and Lindley districts of the Orange River Colony.

Poverty would soon die out if babies were permitted to select their parents.

THE CALL OF THE DESERT

PROSPECTORS WHO CAN'T KEEP AWAY FROM IT.

Grub Stakers Who are Always Searching for Mines and Sometimes Finding Them But Who Rarely Profit From Them—Luck in the Panamint Region.

"Say, boss, kin I talk to you for jest a minute?"

The speaker, writes the Los Angeles (Cal.) correspondent of the New York Sun, was a tall, thin man with gray hair and whiskers, his face the color of tanned hide. His eyes were intensely blue and had a shrewd, good natured expression, and his face while stern was wrinkled in just the places to indicate a habit of laughter. He was leaning on the marble of the cashier's window in a large bank.

"Is it grub stake, or porterhouse, or both?"

"Yes; all," said the man, laughing. "You're a guesser from Panamint."

"I can't talk to you now, but I will meet you at the restaurant around the corner in half an hour," said the cashier.

In the restaurant later the grub staker joined him, dead broke, dry, hungry, but good natured.

"I've been down the Panamint way," he explained after he had cleared out the big bowl of soup. "Every blame fool is going there to try and see what Scotty's got, but my hands are up.

"I lost my best burro there and I've had enough; but I've got something good down in San Diego county, and that's what I want."

"Did you ever make a stake?" asked the cashier.

"Found the Red Rose."

"What!"

"Fact and I kin prove it. D'ye know Col. A. C. Beltmer?"

"Why, yes, he banks with us," replied the cashier.

"Well, ask him who found the Red Rose mine, and while you're about it you might also ask him who was fool enough to sell for a thousand dollars, as I'm that man. You've heard the old saying that a sucker's born every day, eh? Well, I'm the Friday sucker; I was born that day, sure."

"I was strapped, and I sold out for a thousand dollars. You see a poor man makes a find; how's he, without a cent, to get the attention of men with money or to get within a mile of them?

"When I struck the Red Rose I was a hundred miles out on the desert. All I had on earth was four pounds of bacon and a pound of coffee. Some chaps came along and offered me that money for my claim and I took it.

"I went to Los Angeles, walked into a barber shop, and got a bath and a shave, then went to a store and told a man to fit me out from head to foot, and I vow when I went out I didn't know myself. I bought a bag and went over to the hotel and entered my name as John Handy, Red Rose, San Bernardino county, took the best room gave the bell boy a dollar, and the next morning read in the paper that 'Col. John Handy, the millionaire mine owner from Red Rose, was in town.'

"Well I gained twenty pounds in the next two weeks and at the end of the month I was broke. No, no; I did'nt drink it up. I ran across the wife of an old pardner. She was scrubbing floors in schools, and she is 65 years old. I staked her with $500, hired a little house for her so she could rent a room or two and that cleaned me out.

"Then I got a stake from a restaurant man, the next day I was walking to the desert; and, d'ye know, there's something about the desert that kind of locoes a man? This time I'll let you into it.

"You know they have been finding some queer stones down at Mese Grande Pala and different places in San Diego county; and last week I was sitting in a bar room at Daggett, out on the desert when a man came in, the picture of hard luck, but when he came to pay up he unrolled from a bag a lot of curious stones and offered to sell them to me. One was the most beautiful blue you ever saw

"Where is it? I sold it for $20 at Indio one night. I wanted a burro, and I struck an Indian and bought his burro for the stone and $10; he wanted it for his squaw.

"It might have been worth $1,000 for all I know, but the point is this.

"The man I bought it from gave me a map of the place where he found it: here it is. He said he knocked it out of the side of a cliff with a stone, and there was a lot of it all broken up and no good.

"I kept a little piece and showed it to a travelling jeweler and he told me that if I knew where the mine was I was in luck and would make my fortune; so there you are. The stone has probably been knocked and hammered with rocks, and all you want is to put in a small blast and get in to it where it's good.'

"How much of a stake do you want?" asked the cashier.

"Grub," was the reply, "grub for two months and some new tools. Hundred dollars will do it."

"All right," said the cashier, "I'll go you; sign this," and he drew up the following:

I, John Handy, agree to divide with anything I may find from January 11, 1905, to March 11, 1905, on account of grub stake of $100 provided by——

The prospector signed the paper and said he would make it six months. The cashier took him to an outfitter's and next day the man left for the desert. All of which is the story of the discovery of one of the best tourmaline mines in southern California.

There are scores of grub stakers wandering over the desert; poor souls, men on small salaries, grub stake men.

These men often keep themselves poor, hoping against hope; many men have spent their lives wandering over the desert without making a valuable strike. Again some of the best mines have been found in this way.

The big Cajon Pass and the pass of San Gorgonio, leading down to the deserts of California and Mojave, are the highways for the grub staker, and hardly a day but you may see him following the track or on the road, and at the desert towns, as Baning, Doggett and Indio, he may be seen.

The desert, while forbidding, has valuable mines, and it is the grub staker's roaming ground, and along its pathways you cay see his bones bleaching in the sun or his grave marked by a rude cross. The desert has many phases. Now it is sand, again alkali, again wide stretches of sandy billows, or you may find it a waving field of flowers, again mounds of gravel; but there are mountains always in sight, as this section of the desert is flat, a sandy waste surrounded by mountains, bare, barren, rocky, heat blasted, yet invested with all the splendors of color the mind can imgine.

QUAINT AND CURIOUS.

A new prize of $10,000 is offered in France for the invention of a dirigible balloon.

Fine specimens of cotton fabrics are often found in Peruvian tombs dating back to the time of the Incas.

For the saving of would-be suicides the municipality of Rome has decided to employ police motor boats on the Tiber.

Out of 300,000 newspapers compressed by hydraulic machinery an Austrian has constructed a yacht sixteen feet long. Every part, including the masts and sails, is of paper.

Dr. Harward Turner, Clifton, Bristol, England, made a will containing the strange direction that no person benefiting under it should attend his funeral, "under pain of forfeiture of his interest."

Court suits, such as the one that John Burns, M. P., has reluctantly donned, cost at least $150. The sword, with cut steel hilt, costs $19; the "dress breeches, lined silk, cut steel buttons," $23.50.

Bohemia is the country of long courtships. In no other part of the world are they so abnormally drawn out. It is not rare to hear of engagements which have extended 15 to 20 years. An old man died recently in Prague at the age of 99, who had been courting a sweetheart for 62 years.

Albert Shipley, a Parkerford (Pa.) barber, will not have to lie awake any more meditating on what put his piano out of tune. William M. Binder, a tuner of this place, discovered a mouse nest in the instrument. The mice had eaten or so damaged fifty of the felt-covered hammers that they could not strike a note.

B. F. Armstrong, of Brownsville, a professional snake and wild animal collector, has more than a ton of rattlesnakes at his camp, situated near Corpus Christi, Tex. He sells his snakes by weight instead of by number. He is preparing to make a big shipment to northern and eastern points. He also supplies large quantities of rattlesnakes for a snake oil factory that is in operation at Corpus Christi, Tex.

Jack, a dog at the Palace theatre, London, known to theatre people all over the world, died the other day, and his death was announced with an official eulogium. He watched the stage door when the doorkeeper was away, and ran and got him if the bell rang, and had been trained to fall on and extinguish any burning substance he saw, such as a piece of paper. He was choked to death by a piece of money he was taking to a restaurant to buy his dinner with.

The first Atlantic cable was laid by the Atlantic Telegraph company, formed by Cyrus W. Field. William Thomson (Lord Kelvin) and John Pender were in the directorate. The cable was successfully laid after two breaks and the first message was sent on Aug. 17, 1858; the cable became useless for messages after Sept. 1, and after Oct. 20 no signals passed. The cable was laid by the Niagara of the American navy and the Agamemnon of the British navy.

Misplaced Pride.

"The late General Joseph Wheeler," said a Southerner, "was one of the bravest men who ever lived. He was wounded three times during the civil war and sixteen horses were shot under him.

"Yet it was not his military, but his literary achievements that he took most pride in. He knew this was foolish, but he could not help it. He said once to me, apologetically, that he was not the only man whose pride was misplaced.

"He said that, in a certain engagement in his youth, he once heard a private swearing and cursing most frightfully.

"Lieutenant Wheeler, as he was then, went up to the private and said sternly:

"'Where did you learn to swear like that?'

"The private at this question smiled modestly.

"'Ye can't learn it,' he answered. 'It's a gift.'"

THE UNION

Published every Thursday at Clanton, Chilton county, Alabama.

Wallace C. Edler, Ed. and Pub.

Subscription price, in advance, per year, $1.

For advertising rates, call at the office, Seventh street, between First and Second avenues.

Entered April 15, 1903, at Clanton, Ala., as second class matter, under act of congress of March 3, 1879.

NOTICE TO CORRESPONDENTS.

All communications to the Union must be signed by the writer's real name as well as that name which they wish to put in the paper. Letters must reach the editor Tuesday morning to get in the same week. While we will publish any and all communications complying with these requirements that do not contain any improper language, we are not responsible for the opinions expressed. tf.

CLANTON, ALA., July 26, 1906.

Union Clubbing List

THE UNION And Yellow Jacket	$1.00
THE UNION And Southern Ruralist	1.00
THE UNION And Union Educator	1.00
THE UNION And Home and Farm	1.00
THE UNION And Weekly Age-Herald	1.25
THE UNION and Weekly Atlanta Constitution	1.25
THE UNION and Twice-a-Week Globe Democrat	1.00
THE UNION and Tri-W'kly Atlanta Constitution	1.50
THE UNION And Tom Watson's Magazine	1.00
THE UNION and Tri-Weekly N. Y. World	1.00
THE UNION And Rural South	1.00
THE UNION And Weekly Advertiser and Map of Alabama, U. S. and world	1.00

If there are any other papers you want call at THE UNION office, and we will get them for you at the lowest rates. tf

ANNOUNCEMENTS.

FOR REPRESENTATIVE.

I am a candidate for Representative of Chilton county in the legislature of Alabama, subject to the action of the People's Primary.

tf J. OSMOND MIDDLETON.

FOR SHERIFF.

I hereby announce myself as a candidate for Sheriff of Chilton county, subject to the action of the People's primary. FELIX J. FITTS.

tf

FOR SHERIFF.

I hereby announce myself as a candidate for Sheriff of Chilton county, subject to the action of the People's primary. FRANK GOODGAME.

FOR SHERIFF.

I hereby announce myself as a candidate for sheriff of Chilton county, subject to the action of the People's primary. D. H. GENTRY.

FOR SHERIFF.

I hereby announce myself as a candidate for Sheriff of Chilton county, subject to the action of the people's primary. LEE HAYES.

tf

FOR SHERIFF.

I hereby announce myself a candidate for sheriff of Chilton county, subject to the action of the people at the November election, 1906.

ROLLEFFE BATES.

adv (tf)

FOR COUNTY COMMISSIONER.

I hereby announe myself as a candidate for County Commissioner for the 1st District, subject to the action of the People's Primary.

tf W. H. CONWAY.

FOR COUNTY COMMISSIONER.

I hereby announce myself as a candidate for County Commissioner for the Second District, subject to the action of the People's primary.

tf S. E. WALDRUP.

FOR COMMISSIONER.

By solicitation of a number of tax paying citizens of Chilton county, I announce myself as a candidate for county commissioner for the 2d district, subject to the action of the people's primary, August 6, 1906.

SAM PATE.

tf

THAT MASS MEETING.

Clanton, Ala., July 21, 1906.

Editor Union:

I tell you, you should have been at the great Democratic rally and mass meeting which was held at the court house today. This great and memorable meeting was simply the outcome and result of a call by the chairman of the Democratic executive committee, ostensibly for the purpose of making nominations for county officers with a wide open invitation to Populists and Republicans to participate in said meeting (for it seems that even Democrats realize that without the Pops and Reps they can do nothing.) There was possibly 150 all [illegible] of the meeting was postponed [illegible] another day, as evidently this great call was largely ignored not only by Pops and Reps, but by most of the Demmies themselves.

Well, Elijah Deason (sometimes called Judge) was elected to preside, and in a speech of acceptance, amidst stammers and blushes most heartily assured the assembly of his loyalty and great desire for the party to prevail. Something similar to what he used to say when he was a Pop.

Well, there were certainly some unique features about that meeting. There was Col. Sam Arledge, for instance, who furnishes spice and variety, but making no regular speech. Then there was Col. Knox, and some fellow remarked in the rear that Knox should have been chairman because of valuable services in the past.

Yes, they were now organized and ready for business without a program, but they began to resolute (in fact, it was a resoluting body) and upon a call for a rising vote on some question by the best count there was between 50 and 60 present with sufficient resolution to rise.

Then came the speech-making, led by Mr. Craig, candidate for congress, opening up the way with "white supremacy" and about the boys with straight eyes and blue hair. Then he lunged his pitch fork into the tariff hay stack and flung the straw clear across the Atlantic ocean and finally in his deductions showed that it cost much more to live under republican than democratic rule, and we said of course, for when the demmies were in we could live on thin soup and wore patched "britches" and those that could not get shoes could go barefooted.

Well, to cheer us some he said Billy Bryan was sure coming home again and he and Joe Folk would join forces and go into the trust-busting business right, at which there was applause from all but some, among whom we noticed that Mr. F. A. Gulledge did not cheer, for they do say he voted for Palmer and Buckner, anyhow, when Billy was up before. Yes, this was surely a great day, for all this was enlivened by the squeaking strains of a two-hand string band by two dusky sons of Ham seemingly under the especial management of Mr. Gulledge, the farmer candidate for the legislature, who seems to have been very successful in farming the farmer. Well, this was not all, but ye scribe began to feel an inner craving for bacon and beans, which no amount of democratic bombast could supply, so we went out to get a good dinner before the demmie soup bowl is passed around. Well, yes, there was something said about Adams and harmony, but, well, we didn't stay, for we did not want our stomach turned just then. Yours,

X-RAY.

CONSOLATION LETTER.

To the dear children and loved ones of a mother who passed from this earthly tenement to a life of immortality at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Mattie Higgins, near Poplar Springs, July 21, 1906: Dear bereaved ones: You have my heartfelt sympathy in your great sorrow. I know it is hard to give up our loved ones, but Christ came into this world for a purpose and when his great purpose was completed he said: "It is finished." We know the work of the dear old sister was finished to the glory of God and Christ has called her home after blessing her through four score and seven years. We believe the dear old mother is waiting for her loved ones upon the golden strand, where the angels sing their sweet heavenly songs to those who have gone on to rest after spending their life here on earth as Mrs. Devaughan did. We know God saw fit to call her away, for God's ways are always perfect. The memory of your mother, dear friends, will always be cherished in this community. Her friends are praying that God will comfort you. Your sincere friend.

S. E. PATTERSON.

MACEDONIA FOR FITTS.

Editor Union:

Please give me a little space in your valuable paper for a few words from this part of beat 3. Politics are getting warm around here, and it does seem like every one is interested about our sheriff, and that is as it should be, I think. We should try and get a man that is true to the people's cause, that has ever been so, and that is Felix J. Fitts. I have known him ever since he came to this county and he is all right, truthful honest and brave. To know him is to love him. Everything solid for Fitts around here. Success to THE UNION and its readers.

J. D. GLASSCOCK.

PLETCHER.

Mr. Editor:

Please give me a little space in your good union paper. We've had plenty of rain and crops are looking well. We're glad to see the good people around Pilgrim's Rest church repairing and fixing up the Master's House and they intend to paint the building and carpet the floor. Well, politics are dull down here. I've not seen but one candidate yet, but I keep my eyes open and on the lookout for [illegible] certainly glad he got Mr. Middleton out for Representative. Hurrah for middleton! Well, the F. E. and C. U. of A. seems to move along very well, although I am not much of a farmer myself, but I notice the other boys seem to be much interested in the work. Now, brethren, let's all work together in union, be as one, stand together for our rights The fight will soon be on hard, so stand firm to your post. With best wishes to THE UNION and its many readers.

IT'S ME.

HURRAH FOR FITTS!

Active, Ala.

We are all Fitts boys over here, and are going to carry our box solid for him. Some one has circulated a report that Fitts was a "booze fighter," so I will say to the people that I have known him since he was three years old, and have never seen him under the influence of liquor. He is always strictly sober and straight and the people's friend and when he is sheriff he will be sheriff and don't you forget it. Now, boys, let's all turn out and roll up the biggest majority for Fitts that any candidate has ever got in old Chilton. He is the right man for the place and the Sheriff's office is the most important to us in the county. Let's elect a man who has been tried in our ranks and not found wanting, and who will fill the place with honor to himself and to the county. Respectfully,

J. T. GREEN,
Beat 7, Box 2.

STRONG FOR GENTRY.

Thorsby, Ala., July 25, '06.

Editor Union:

As there has been so much said about the other candidates, I thought I would say a few words in regard to Mr. D. H. Gentry, one of the candidates for sheriff. As Mr. Tom C. Perry is so sure that Mr. Fitts will be the nominee, and he may be, but if he is we will have as good a sheriff as the people over in the west part. But we will mix it with you all, for we are all pretty solid for Gentry around here. And now, let me say to the voters that D. H. Gentry is a worthy man and if elected will make us a good sheriff. And I will say in conclusion that owing to a lot of sickness in his family he is a needy man; and I think it is right to help a man that has had so much misfortune when it don't cost us anything. And now let me say that Mr. Gentry is where he was raised and where he has ever stood for the people's rights. So with best wishes I will close.

B. N. MARTIN.

FROM BEAT 1.

Editor Union:

While we have several candidates for the office of sheriff, and all good men, and have nothing to say against any of them, I do want to say one thing for Mr. Lee Hayes I have seen him tried, I had some work for the sheriff to do, hunting my dog, which the most of the voters in Chilton county know about. I started out looking around and talking to my friends and they would advise me to get the papers and put them in Mr. Hayes' hands, and said that he would get the dog. So I went to Sheriff Morgan, got the papers and went to Mr. Hayes on Friday evening, July 7, 1905, about 4 o'clock. Mr. Hayes and I started, and on Saturday evening, July 8, 1905, about 5 o'clock, he had turned the dog over to me and I had him in my possession. Mr. Hayes found the dog in Woodlawn on 63d street about 5 miles above Birmingham. So you see that he will do the work when papers are put in his hands. We know that he has been sheriff before and always discharged his duties as sheriff. Why not elect him again?

J. M. ROBINSON,
Jemison, Ala., Route 2.

NOTICE!

It being rumored over the county that Lee Hayes, while sheriff, never kept the jail in order, I wish to state that I lived near the jail when Hayes was sheriff and said rumor is a mistake. I know of my own knowledge the jail was neatly kept and the prisoners well fed.

W. M. WILSON.

TO THE PEOPLE.

Clanton, July 23, 1906.

Editor Union:

Please allow me space to say a few words to the people of Chilton county. It is now well known throughout the county, I presume, that I am a candidate for sheriff of Chilton county, subject to the action of the people's primary election on August 6th. When the populist party sprang up I identified myself with it, and have given my support and influence in behalf of every ticket nominated by it in this county, though I am a republican in belief, warp and filling. I do not deem it necessary to say what I have done, or what I have not done. My political and moral record should be well known in our county, I having been born and raised here. Now, fellow citizens, I am before you and will be very grateful to receive the nomination at your hands, as this is [illegible] bow my head in humble submission to your verdict, and will do (as I have in the past) all that lies within me to elect your choice and our entire ticket from head to foot. Hoping that all our people will turn out to the primary and vote for the man of their choice, I am very respectfully,

J. F. GOODGAME.

NEED MORE.

Mr. and Mrs. George Sorrell, who have been visitors here the past week, returned to their home in Wylam Sunday. Mrs. M. J. Farley, of East Lomax, spent Sunday here with her parents. Mrs. T. P. Smith has been quite sick, but is on the mend. Mesdames Geo. Sorrell, J. H. Jones and W. C. Jones spent Saturday afternoon with Mrs. H. C. Maddox here and all had a good time. The Jackson and Jones saw mill sure does make the hustle between the showers. S. S. at Mt. Pleasant is doing nicely with a large attendance.

BUTTERFLY.

CEDAR GROVE.

Thorsby, Ala., July 23, 1906.

Dear Editor Union:

Please put the following in the Union this week:

CHILDREN'S DAY.

The following program was very ably rendered by the Sunday school of Cedar Grove last Saturday:

Welcome, address by Mr. Simpson Collins; "The Command," by Miss Ollie Mims; "Little Light," by Miss Media Collins; "Oh, Tell," by Miss Annie Patterson; "A Cry from the Congo," by Miss Roberta Collins; "Wander," by Arthur Marcus; a recitation by Freddie Patterson. Next was a song by the school. Then "A Message from O'er the Sea," delivered by Misses Media Hays and Thulie Baker; "Jesus Lives," by Miss Alma Childress; "Little Things," by Miss Maimie Patterson; "A Prayer," Miss Bettie Patterson; "Easter Joy," by Miss Minnie Scott; "The Last Gift," by Miss Arsula Collins. Then we had another song, and next was a recitation by Miss Daisy Hudman. No. 15 was "A Letter," delivered by Dewey Collins; recitation by Willie Scott; No. 17 was a piece delivered by Messrs. Henderson Hays, Nathan Mims, Miss Alma Mims and others. Next was singing by school. No. 19 was delivered by Misses Belle Mims, Ollie Mims and Maimie Collins; "Flowers," by Louie Price; "The Great Physician" and "A Wish," by Mr. Edgar Collins. No. 24, "Don't Drink, My Boy, Tonight," by Henderson Hays. Next, and best of all, was about a 30 minutes' lecture on Sunday school work by our next representative, Hon. J. Osmond Middleton, after which we adjourned for dinner. Had plenty of dinner for all and several baskets of fragments left over.

After dinner we assembled again to carry out the afternoon's exercise. First on program was "Welcome," by Jadie Price. Then "The Dead Sea," by Miss Zenie Hudman; "Little Boys Make Men," Jocie Price; "The Drink," Acie Collins; "The Tree of Life," Isaac Hudman; "This Day," Joe Mims; a recitation, by Miss Delene Mims. Then singing by the school and "New Life," Miss Callie Hays; recitation by Miss Roberta Hudman; recitation by John Hudman; "Missionary," Miss Velvie Mims; recitation, Snoton Hays, and the last thing was a recitation by Miss Charlotte Mims.

A large crowd attended the services and all who could get in the house seemed to enjoy the exercises very much. I must say for the participants that a better program could not have been rendered by any school with as little practice.

Everybody had a nice time and all behaved exceedingly well with the exception of one poor little Clantonian. Everybody else seemed to be in high spirits without. He had spirits within. Such a young man's absence is always appreciated more than his presence in all decent places, and especially at Cedar Grove. With best wishes for THE UNION and its readers, I am yours sincerely,

J. W. HAYS, Supt. S. S.
ALMA CHILDRESS, Sec'y.

THE SINGING AT FAIRVIEW.

The all-day singing at Fairview last Sunday was an unqualified success. There was a large attendance, a fine dinner, perfect order and to crown all, good singing. Mr. Mims was president of the gathering aided by a committee composed of J. J. Gallman, Bob Atkinson and Will Roper. Among the leaders of the singers were G. W. Melton, Tom Littlejohn, D. T. Melton, Elbert Littlejohn and Joe Malone. During the evening session a duet was rendered by J. E. and Tom Littlejohn, which was much appreciated by the audience.

STRAYED OR STOLEN.

From near my residence on June 25, one iron gray mare colt, one year old; one iron gray horse colt, with star on face, and scar on left hind leg above hock, one and a half years old. Any information leading to their recovery will be liberally rewarded.

C. C. MARTIN,
tf Calera, Ala., Rte 1.

Thorsby, July 23, 1906.

Editor Union:

Please allow me space for a few words to the voters of this county. I have known D. H. Gentry ever since I was old enough to know anybody, and have lived a door neighbor to him several years. He is all right, quiet, sober, a good neighbor and a true populist voter and has been ever since the party was organized. I believe Gentry will make as good sheriff as any man in the county. I feel sure he is fully qualified in every respect to fill the office. If he should be the nominee, he would sure be elected in November. I believe he will appreciate it as much as any man the people could elect. If the people in other parts of our county are like they are in beats 9 and 1, Gentry will be the nominee by a big majority. With best wishes to THE UNION and its readers,

D. C. HONEYCUTT.

THORSBY.

The Norwegian Ladies' Aid meets with Mrs. Husby this week Thursday. All are invited.....Rev. and Mrs. Diener, of Leechburg, Pa., are here for a short visit.....Clay Lewis, of Prattville, spent Saturday here visiting Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Stanley. He left here for Memphis, Tenn.....Miss Nannie Shivers left for her home in Montevallo Saturday morning..... "Busy Bees" meet with Miss Ruth Helland Friday afternoon.....Mrs. S. A. Thorson and children came down from Calera Tuesday for a visit with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Turnquist.....Emil Malmquist is back from his visit to Birmingham.....Miss Sarah Yaeger, of East Lake, is visiting friends here.....Mrs. John Winslow and Miss Alma Hovey attended the County Sunday School Convention at Clanton Saturday and Sunday..... Mrs. Fannie Honeycutt left for Longview Saturday for a few weeks' visit with relatives.....Glenn and Opal Warnick came down from Powderly Saturday for a visit with their uncle, M. Carr, and family.....Rev. Diener held services at the Swedish church Sunday evening.....Thorsby Fruit and Truck Growers' Association has shipped seven carloads of peaches and grapes to Chicago the past few days. The association expects to ship Concord grapes in carload lots in a few days.....Mr. A. Horn, Susan and Philip, attended the Sunday school convention at Clanton.....There is to be an educational rally here next Tuesday at the Thorsby institute grounds. There will be public speaking in the afternoon. At 5:30 a 25c supper will be served on the grounds for the benefit of the school. A concert will be given in the evening by Birmingham talent. It is hoped that every one will come and help. Prospects for the school are very bright.....Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Wilson, of Atlanta, are visiting at the Thorsby Inn.....L. T. Murfee, of Marion Military Academy, Marion, Ala., stopped here Tuesday for a short visit.....E. C. Silsby, from Talladega, spent a few days the first of the week in the interests of the Thorsby institute.....Mrs. James Bosworth, of Birmingham, is visiting friends and relatives here.

ANON.

NOTICE!

At Thorsby, Ala., May 17, 1906, the County Union passed a resolution to build a union warehouse and a committee was appointed by said meeting to select a suitable place for the warehouse; and the committee recommended that a warehouse be built at Thorsby and reported same to the County Union held at Union Grove June 21st, and said resolution was adopted by the County Union and ordered or suggested that the members of the union go to work and get up stock or take subscription for stock in said warehouse; and a sufficient amount has been raised to build the warehouse, so all subscribers will take due notice.

A MEETING IS CALLED for August 4, 1906, at Thorsby, Ala., 10 a. m. and all, both new and old, stockholders and persons who have subscribed for stock or authorized same to be subscribed will meet at Thorsby, on above date, organize, elect directors, and attend to such other business as is proper to be done at said meeting.

And all are expected to pay up at said meeting, or before that time, if they wish. And it is desired that all FARMERS and all persons in sympathy with the farmers will take stock in said warehouse and let's make the capital stock $10,000 instead of $5,000.

J. BICE. Pres.

July 24, 1906. tf

BLUE DARTERS PLAYED DOUBLE-HEADER.

The Blue Darters, by not having three of their regular team with them at Billingsley, met their first defeat (in two seasons) by the Jones team, score 13 to 4. Headley, throwing his arm down some time ago, was afraid to go in the box at first, but caught the first four innings and on seeing that the game was rotten, he goes in the box and strikes out 7 men, only 3 scores were made off him. I think he will be in good trim by the 27th. The game between the Blue Darters and Miltons was of more interest, the

The Blue Darters will p[lay] ond team Blue Darters [on] their ground, and the [27] 27th at Tyus. All are invited and bring your baskets something good to eat [as] ing to be a picnic the joyful day with [us]

CAPT. OF BLUE [DARTERS]

Yours with best wishes to a grand success with your UNION,

BEAT 1

Editor Union:

Here I come again [with] mittance.

Rev. T. J. Leabett[e] lar appointment at [C]day to a large and [appreciative] gation. We all had a [good] children's day service [Sunday].

Mrs. Arnold Riggs[, of] ham, is visiting friends in this vicinity.

wife were guests at [dinner] day.

Miss Ila Gentry [and] trude Collins Sunday.

Miss Hattie Little [spent] day night and Sunday [with] Eiland.

Mr. and Mrs. Lee [Hayes] the latter's parents Sunday.

Mrs. Pate Robinson [and son] of Clanton, spent [a few days] last week with Mrs. J. N. Littlejohn and [family]. Hill, spent Sunday with parents, Mr. and Mrs. [Edwards].

Frank Pounds [visited] folks.

Miss Dallie Chi[ldress] beat line and look[s] since the return.

I hear it has been a letter from beat [2] union in regard to [a] ence to A. J. Lumpkin. me space to say here [and] it is untrue. I have [known] him to be a perfect man. While of course I met him a few times, [never] anything amiss of him. I said only at the [time] hits the right one [and] to hurt.

I am very sorry to [see] took it as an offense, [and if] offended any one by [what] sincerely beg their pardon. going to offer any [excuse] opinion of the slanderer or der-monger, for I believe [they] most contemptible people [on] Well, my letter is getting [long] I will step out and come [again].

NOBODY'S [FRIEND]

PLEASANT GROVE.

Dear Union:

I wish to say a few words [to] paper concerning our candidates sheriff and commissioners. As sheriff, this part of the county Felix J. Fitts, who is up [for] man and a fine looking one, a perfect gentleman and is not a [two] faced man. He has but the one he shows it to you every time him, and would make us as [good] officer as we could get. He is [attending] ual to business and is not a [loafer] and if we will elect him Chilton ty can not beat it. Felix is [honest] and stands true to his party works to build up in place of [pulling] down. So let's elect Fitts for iff.

Sam Pate has been [elected] missioner and is all right. We he believes in taking care of the ty's money in place of spending.

Success to the UNION. Respectfully,

J. D. GLASSCOCK.

THE NEW YORK WORLD

Thrice-a-Week Edition.

Read Wherever the English Language Is Spoken.

The Thrice-a-Week World has been in 1906 a better paper than it has ever been before, and it has made arrangements accordingly. Its news service covers the entire globe. It reports everything fully, promptly and accurately. It is the only paper, daily, which is as good as a daily which will keep you as completely informed of what is happening throughout the world.

The Thrice-a-Week World is famous for its political reports. You can get the truth from its columns, whether you are Republican or Democrat, and that is what you want.

A special feature of the Thrice-a-Week World has always been its serial fiction. It publishes novels by the best authors in the world, many of which in book form sell for $1.50 each, and its high standard in this respect will be maintained in the future as in the past.

The THRICE-A-WEEK WORLD'S regular subscription price is only $1 per year, and this pays for 156 papers. We offer this unequaled newspaper and THE UNION together for one year for $1.50.

The regular subscription price of these two papers is $2.00.

MONEY TO LOAN

On real estate. Call or write me at my abiding place with Mr. G. G. Chilton, one mile northeast of Clanton, R. F. D. No. 1. Come during business hours, as I keep my money in the bank.

tf JAMES GLASSCOCK.

I. E. SARBER CO. Thorsby Alabama.

country. They hold that Natal [illegible] not the Zulu is responsible for the [illegible] to him, she heard him say: "I knew [illegible] spread all its sails with no fear of [illegible] touching the bottom.—John Flavel.

water, which removes [illegible]

...Darters.

...The Blue Darters will ...
...nd team Blue Darters ...
...their ground, and the ...
...27th at Tyus. All are invited ...
...and bring your baskets ...
...omething good to eat, as there ...
...ng to be a picnic there, and ...
...he joyful day with us.
CAPT. OF BLUE DARTS.

...Yours with best wishes to ...
...grand success with your ...
...ENNON,
J. J. HEAD.

BEAT 9.

...dron Union:
...Here I come again knocking ...
...ntlance.
...Rev. T. J. Ledbetter filled his ...
...ppointment at Cedar Grove ...
...to a large and attentive ...
...We all had a nice time ...
...ath's day service Saturday.
...Mrs. Arnold Riggins, of ...
...visiting friends and ...
...its vicinity. Dr. B. ...
...were guests at J. A. Hayes ...
...
...Miss Pie Gentry visited Miss ...
...Collins Sunday.
...Miss Hattie Littlejohn spent ...
...night and Sunday with the ...
...
...and Mrs. Lige Burnett ...
...the parents Sunday.
...Mrs. Pate Robinson and ...
...ston, spent the latter ...
...with Mrs. J. G. Hayes.
...Littlejohn and wife, of ...
...ent Sunday with the ...
...Mr. and Mrs. A. Eiland.
...s is visiting ...
...
...Childress crossed ...
...and looks more ...
...return.
...has been ...
...from beat nine on last ...
...in regard to supper had ...
...to A. J. Lumpkin. Please ...
...to say here and now ...
...I have always ...
...a perfect Christian ...
...While of course I have ...
...from a few times, still I never ...
...thing amiss of him. I threw ...
...said only at the slanderer, and ...
...the right one it is always ...
...part.
...am very sorry to think that ...
...sk, it as an offense, and if I ...
...ended any one by what I ...
...merely beg their pardon. I am ...
...ng to offer any apologies for ...
...nion of the slanderer or the ...
...monger, for I believe they are ...
...st contemptible people on ...
...ll, my letter is getting length...
...will step out and come again.
NOBODY'S PET.

PLEASANT GROVE.

...r Union:
...wish to say a few words in ...
...ce concerning our candidates ...
...riff and commissioners. As ...
...riff this part of the county is ...
...N. L. Fitts, who is an upto...
...n and a fine looking one, ...
...fect gentleman and is not a ...
...ed man. He has but the one ...
...shows it to you every time you ...
...r, and would make us as good ...
...cer as we could get. He is ...
...to business and is not a lazy ...
...if we will elect him Chilton ...
...can not beat it. Felix is ...
...stands true to his party. ...
...es to build up in place of ...
...So let's elect Felix for ...

...m Pate has been tried for ...
...sioner and is all right. We ...
...es in taking care of the ...
...money in place of spending ...
...ness to the UNION. Respe...
C. D. HODGENS.

THE NEW YORK WORLD

Thrice-a-Week Edition.

...d Wherever the English Langu...
Is Spoken.

...he Thrice-a-Week World hopes ...
...n 1906 a better paper than it ...
...been before, and it has made ...
...ngements accordingly. Its ...
...ice covers the entire globe, and ...
...rts everything fully, promptly ...
...rately. It is the only paper, ...
...y, which is as good as a daily, ...
...h will keep you as completely ...
...ed of what is happening ...
...the world.
...e Thrice-a-Week World is ...
...olitical reports. You can get ...
...from its columns, whether ...
...Republican or Democrat, and ...
...hat you want.
...special feature of the ...
...k World has always been ...
...fiction. It publishes novels ...
...best authors in the world, ...
...h in book form sell for $1.50 ...
...its high standard in this ...
...be maintained in the future as ...
...past.
...e THRICE-A-WEEK WORLD ...
...ar subscription price is only ...
...ear, and this pays for 156 ...
...offer this unequaled ...
...THE UNION together for one ...
...1.50.
...e regular subscription price of ...
...papers is $2.00.

MONEY TO LOAN

...eal estate. Call or write me ...
...biding place with Mr. ... ...
...one mile northeast of ...
...D. No. 1. Come during ...
..., as I keep my money in the ...
JAMES ...

...water, which ...
...great ...

...Court.
...Third Monday in ...
...Fourth Monday in ...

...L. Brewer, Tuskegee.
...W. B. Bowling, Daleville.
...W. Collins.

Chancery Court.

...Two—Second Monday in ...

...—Second Monday in Sep...

...—Hon. W. W. Whitesides, ...
...—Mrs. S. A. Stewart, Clan...

County Court.

...Monday in each month.

Commissioners' Court.

...Monday February, first Mon...
...d, first Monday June, second ...
...July, second Monday August, ...
...day November.

COUNTY OFFICERS.

...of Probate—L. H. Reynolds.
...—W. T. Callen.
...—J. M. Morgan.
...—W. M. Adams.
...ssessor—L. B. Pounds.
...llector—T. J. Hubbard.

County Commissioners.

...District—W. H. Conway.
...District—Alex Glasscock.
...District—R. P. Kendrick.
...District—Moses Robinson.

Supt. of Education.

...W. Moore, Clanton.

County Surveyor.

...R. Dahl, Calera.

State Senator.

...W. B. Oliver, Calera.

COUNTY CHURCHES.

...SSIONARY BAPTIST.
...NY—Rev. J. L. Neeley, pas...
... Sunday and Saturday be...
... L. Hand, clerk.

...SALEM—Rev. M. J. Parrish, ...
... B. Popwell, clerk.

... CREEK—Rev. J. L. Busbey, ...
...First Sunday and Saturday ...
...W. E. Thomas, clerk.

...NS CHAPEL—Rev. J. H. ...
...pastor. Third Sunday and ...
...before. J. D. Collins, clerk.

... HILL—Rev. J. H. Thomas, ...
...First Sunday and Saturday ...
...C. W. Scott, clerk.

...DONIA—Rev. J. H. Thomas, ...
...Fourth Sunday and Saturday ...
...3:30 p. m. H. H. Armstrong, ...

...SANT GROVE—Rev. J. H. ...
... pastor. Fourth Sunday and ...
... before at 11 a. m. D. H. ...
... clerk.

...IDENCE—Rev. W. W. Robin...
...r Second Sunday and Sat...
...fore Riley Robinson, clerk.

...BOTH (Bibb Co.)—Rev. J. H. ...
... pastor. Second Sunday and ...
... before. D. C. Smitherman, ...

PRIMITIVE BAPTIST.

...EL—Elder J. P. Nobles, pas...
...ond Sunday and Saturday be...
...T. Abernathy, clerk.

METHODIST EPISCOPAL.

...Y MOUNT—Rev. A. T. Van...
...pastor. Second Sunday. Sing...
... second and fourth Sunday ...
...n. Prayer meeting every Wed...
...night. Ladies' prayer meeting ...
...turday afternoon.

FRATERNAL SOCIETIES.

Masonic.

...n R. A. Chapter, No. 116—...
...turday, Clanton.

...e Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No. ...
...th Saturday, Cooper.

...n Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No. ...
...t Saturday, Clanton.

...y Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No. ...
...t Saturday, Billingsley.

...n Lodge, A. F. and A. M., ...
...-Saturday on or before full ...
...bury.

...n Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No. ...
...day on or before full moon.

I. O. O. F.

...n Lodge—First and third Sat...

...n Lodge, No. 104—Second and ...
...turdays.

...odmen of the World.
...Jack Camp, No. 190—First and ...
...days.

...ee Tribe No. 48—2nd and 4th ...
...y sleeps. Visiting chiefs cor...
...vited. J. M. Grant, Sachem; ...
...rish, C. of R.

I. O. R. M.

...ee Tribe, No. 90—First and ...
...days sleep. Visiting chiefs ...
...vited. E. B. Langston, C. ...
...R. Patton, Sachem.

F. E. & C. U. OF A.

Chilton Co. Division Officers.

J. H. Thomas, President, Jemison, Rte. 1.
J. W. Hayes, Vice Pres., Thorsby, Rte 1.
J. N. Dennis, Sec-Treas., Clanton, Rte 6.
G. W. Thomas, Chaplain, Clanton, Rte 2.
J. W. Sorrell, Bus. Agent, Jemison, rte 4.
C. N. Eiland, Lecturer, Clanton, rte 4.
N. A. Dobbs, Asst. Lect., Clanton, Rte 3.
W. J. Bean, Conductor, Clanton, Rte 4.
W. F. Culpepper, Doorkeeper, Clanton, Rte 3.
W. A. Barnett, Ex. Committee, Jemison, Rte 2.
E. H. Mims, Ex. Committee, Clanton, Rte 1.
J. Wiley Foshee, Ex. Committee, Clanton, Rte 4.

BARBECUE AND DINNER AT ROCKY MOUNT SCHOOL HOUSE.

There will be an all-day educational and union rally at the new school house at Rocky Mount, 4 miles from Jemison, on August 10, 1906. J. A. Skaggs will superintend the barbecuing of the meat and dinner will be served on the ground. B. E. Collum will be in charge of the lemonade, ice cream, etc., which will be sold and the profits go to the school. W. L. MacAdory, Supt. of Jefferson Co.; J. W. Morris, Supt. of Chilton Co.; Probate Judge L. H. Reynolds and others will speak. F. B. Williams is the teacher at this school house. Everybody is invited to come, especially the surrounding districts. Come and spend an enjoyable and profitable day. tf

PRIMARY ELECTION.

Notice is hereby given that the people's primary election will be held on the 6th day of August, 1906, at the various voting places in Chilton county for the purpose of nominating candidates for the offices to be filled in said county in the November election.

All qualified voters who will support the nominees of this primary are invited to participate.

W. R. JACKSON,
Chairman Republican Ex. Com.
A. C. SMITH, Secretary.
W. H. SHAW,
Chairman Populist Ex. Com.
J. D. COLLINS, Secretary.
tf

PRIMARY REQUIREMENTS.

In accordance with section 12 of the primary election law, any person desiring to submit his name to the voters in the People's Primary election should, not later than 15 days before August 6, 1906, apprise the chairman of the sub-committee in writing of the fact that he is a candidate in order that his name may be placed on the ballot.

There will be two county commissioners to elect in the November election, one in the first district composed of beats 1 and 2, and one in the second district composed of beats 3 and 9.

A. C. SMITH,
tf Chairman Sub-Committee.

Notice No. 20906.

NOTICE FOR PUBLICATION.

Department of the Interior, Land Office at Montgomery, Ala., July 9, 1906.

Notice is hereby given that the following-named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim, and that said proof will be made before Clerk of Circuit Court, at Clanton, Ala., on Sept. 1, 1906, viz.: George W. Pate, Homestead entry No. 34394, for the E 1-2 of Ne 1-4, E 1-2 of Se 1-4 of Section 2, Tp. 23, in R 15 E.

He names the folowing witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of said land, viz.:

Rolifee F. Bates, of Clanton, Ala.; John Davis, of Clanton, Ala.; William L. Littleton, of Shelby, Ala.; and William M. Willis, of Shelby, Ala.

ROBERT D. JOHNSTON,
Register.

STUMP'S HILLS.

Editor Union:

The time is drawing nigh when we will all have to make up our mind who we all will have for our next sheriff. I am no politician, but I think a good way to decide this matter is to pick out a man that hasn't had democrats writing letters of endorsement for them. I have been noticing this campaign very close and I haven't seen anything that the democrats have said in favor of Goodgame; for that reason, together with many others I shall vote for J. F. Goodgame. Yours for the people,

M. A. KILLGORE.

Of 100,000 children ten years old 31,000 will survive to the age of seventy-three.

Lost, a white and liver colored Setter Dog, about 15 months old, (large to age), near Rodgers' Cemetery, June 19th. I will pay a liberal reward for his return to me at Clanton, Ala
tf. W. H. SARTOR.

REMOVAL SALE! GREAT BARGAINS!

Having sold my property in Clanton, I am now selling out my stock of general merchandise, shoes, clothing etc., at very low prices. I also have 8 horses, 11 vehicles, harness, etc., for sale cheap. Now is your time to get real bargains. High-class goods at low prices. Come early and take your choice.

Yours for trade,
tf. J. WILEY SMITH
CLANTON COTTON MARKET.

Total receipts to July 25, 1906, 6,534.
Price same date, 10 3-8c.
Receipts same time in 1905, 8,017.
Price same date, 10 1-4c.

LOCAL AND PERSONAL.

W. M. Wood, of Blount Co., who has been visiting his uncle, Munroe Wood, near Clanton, left for his home Saturday.

R. W. Scott and son, Willie, were in Clanton Friday.

W. H. Sorter is advertising for a lost dog, if any of our readers have the least idea of the whereabouts of the dog, they would do a good deed by letting Mr. Sorter know of it.

N. G. Ward, son Charles and sister, Miss Ida, went off to Blount Co., Saturday, for a couple of weeks' visit.

R. L. Barrett and A. B. Frith with their wives were in Clanton Saturday, attending the S. S. convention. Mrs. Frith was formerly Miss Ida Barrett.

Rolleffe Bates was in town Saturday.

J. H. Duncan was in Clanton Saturday.

Rev. W. P. Lowery was in town Saturday.

Mrs. Devaughan died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Mattie Higgins, near Poplar Springs, Saturday, and was buried in Poplar Springs cemetery on Sunday.

W. J. Mims was in Clanton Monday.

A. C. Oates, aged 70 years, died Sunday and was buried in Clanton cemetery Monday with Masonic honors.

J. M. Robinson, of Rushton, was a pleasant visitor Monday.

F. M. Littlejohn, wife and baby were Clanton visitors Monday.

R. C. Riggins brought THE UNION Tuesday a vegetable monstrosity. It looks like it belongs to the gourd family and is 5 feet long, 1 1-4 inches in diameter, green with white longitudinal stripes, and is a very snaky looking figure. Come in and look it over and give it a name.

C. F. Wheelock, of the Fixico Mining Co., spent Tuesday night at the Hotel Wilson. Look at the advertisement of a saw mill outfit this company has for sale cheap.

Frank Goodgame is hustling for votes as candidate for sheriff and incidentally gets a good many subscribers for THE UNION, for which we return him hearty thanks.

The Oak Grove Musical Institute will close its summer session with a grand concert on Friday, August 3rd, beginning at 8 p. m. Everybody is invited. J. B. N.

Miss Carrie Oates, of Montgomery, is visiting with the family of E. G. Rollins. J. S. Rollins has returned from a very pleasant visit to relatives at Mountain Creek.

MARRIAGE LICENSES.

J. F. Wright and Miss Lillie Bell Jones. A. P. Long and Miss Sallie Williams.

FOR SALE!

A saw mill outfit consisting of engine, boiler, saw mill, Challoner shingle mill, three Challoner shingle presses, one small planer and matcher. All in first class condition. Will sell on easy terms, or exchange for other property, except saw mill outfit.

C. E. Wheelock, Mgr.
Fixico, Ala.

SANDTOWN.

Editor Union:

Here I come for the first time. We are having plenty of rain now. Our Sunday school is progressing nicely. Mr. W. A. Campbell, Lloyd McCord and Rufus King made a visit to Lamar and Pickens counties last week, and report a nice time. With best wishes to THE UNION and its readers.

SALAMANDER.

Managers, Clerks and Returning Officers of the People's Primary election, to be held August 6, 1906:

BEAT 1, MINERAL SPRINGS.

Managers—J. P. Bean, W. P. Cleckler, D. P. Martin; clerks, C. C. Conway, Sam Driver; returning officer, B. L. Martin.

BEAT 2 (BOX 1) PROVIDENCE.

Managers, W. H. Shaw, Will Sims, J. B. Wiggins; clerks, William Conway, J. E. Cobb; returning officer, Joe Cobb.

BEAT 2 (BOX 2) JEMISON.

Managers, J. M. Honeycutt, E. G. Cofer, John Rodgers; clerks, B. E. Collum, Charles Shaw; returning officer, C. C. Crumpton.

BEAT 3 (BOX 1) BENSON.

Managers, R. J. Williams, Walter Deshazo, Alex Giles; clerks, Marion Wagner, John Deshazo; returning officer, Arn. Calfee.

BEAT 3 (BOX 2) MACEDONIA.

Managers, J. D. Hodgins, Y. O. Freeman, George Dawson; clerks, Monroe Hubbard, Z. J. Jones; returning officer, J. D. Glasscock.

BEAT 4, CLANTON.

Managers, J. W. Littlejohn, J. D. Grant, R. Rutland; clerks, J. Watts Moore, A. G. Dake; returning officer, R. M. Smith.

BEAT 5, VERBENA.

Managers, J. T. Norris, Will Sims, Bird Johnson; clerks, M. Miller, Ephraim Jones; returning officer, W. S. Clark.

BEAT 6, KINCHEON.

Managers, Charles Foshee, B. F. Dobbs, John Edwards; clerks, W. L. Popwell, Charles Huett; returning officer, M. F. Lett.

BEAT 7 (BOX 1) MAPLESVILLE.

Managers, W. Y. Nix, Monroe Merchant, C. J. Coburn; clerks, D. J. Cooley, W. J. Atchison; returning officer, J. H. Grooms.

BEAT 7 (BOX 2) SHOULTS.

Managers, T. J. Littlejohn, J. N. Gentry, Frank Green; clerks, J. H. Green, James Langston; returning officer, John Green.

BEAT 8 (BOX 1) STANTON.

Managers, T. G. Milling, L. L. Lester, W. M. Price; clerks, Wade Harris, D. C. Gaudy; returning officer, John Ramsey.

BEAT 8 (BOX 2) PLETCHER.

Managers, John Kendrick, S. B. Ratliff, Sr., J. A. Poole; clerks, J. T. Anderson, M. Bridges; returning officer, T. C. Abbott.

BEAT 9, THORSBY.

Managers, G. S. Burnett, B. N. Martin, W. P. Murrah; clerks, A. Z. Bear, S. P. Collins; returning officer, Lee Vickers.

BEAT 10, COOPERS.

Managers, J. J. McDowell, J. S. Jones, Joseph Cox; clerks, C. J. Eiland, J. J. Dennis; returning officer, E. N. Wilson.

BEAT 11, FLINT HILL.

Managers, G. W. Pate, John Gore, W. T. Mahan; clerks, Robert Gore, Matt Mahan; returning officer, M. A. Killgore. tf

SPECIAL OFFER! !

The Union, Weekly Montgomery Advertiser, and a great white and black map of Alabama, United States and world, three in one, with a picture of every president from Washington to Roosevelt, all for $1.50.

FOR SALE.

160 acres land, 65 acres in cultivation; two miles south of Calera; good dwelling and outbuildings; good and lasting water; very good soil. Will be sold at a bargain.

H. M. BUSBEY,
tf Calera, Ala.

PROGRAM

Chilton County Singing Convention, Pleasant Grove Church (5 Miles West of Jemison) July 28-29.

SATURDAY.

9 a. m. Devotional exercises—J. S. Wright.

9:30. Welcome address—J. H. Thomas.

Response—J. Toy Wiliams.

10 a. m. Methods of Teaching Primary Pupils in the Singing School—Jas. Franklin, C. L. Glasscock.

10:30. Ways to Improve Music in the S. S.—M. C. Crumpton, T. M. Pyron.

11. Music; Its Influence forGood—J. H. Thomas, J. T. Williams and E. G. Cofer.

1:30 p. m. Singing led by Pres. R. D. Durham.

2 p. m. Music in the Home—J. L. Gore and J. B. Northcutt.

2:30. Election of officers, etc.

3:30. Singing led by James Franklin and J. L. Hurst.

SUNDAY.

9 a. m. Devotional exercises—J. J. Grant.

Singing the remainder of the day, led by the leaders present. All singers and lovers of music are invited. Bring your books, "Singing for Joy," and let's sing for joy.

J. C. VEAZEY, Chairman.
tf

NOTICE.

Blank Deeds, Mortgages, and all official forms for Justices of the Peace, etc., for sale at The Union Office. Only best approved forms are used. Come in and give us your order tf

E. G. Rollins & Co.

—DEALERS IN—

General Merchandise, Clothing, Shoes and Fancy Groceries.

CLANTON, :-: ALABAMA.

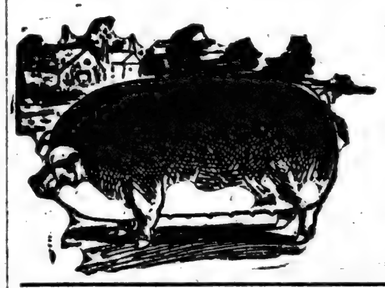
WOODLAWN FARM.

Barred Plymouth Rocks

PURE BRED

Setting of 15 fresh eggs for 50c. Packing for shipping 10c extra.

PURE BRED



Duroc Jersey Hogs.

Write us for prices before you buy. Address,

W. Y. NIX,
Maplesville, Alabama.

A. A. JACKSON

Lomax, Alabama.

General merchandise, corn, hay, shorts, shoes, men's hats, Ladies hats. Best quality and lowest prices in all goods.

Highest Market Price Paid for Chickens and Eggs.

J. E. Littlejohn

Clanton, Alabama.

General Merchandise, Corn, Hay, etc.

SHOES

The most for the money in town. Come and see us and we will do you good. :-: :-: :-: :-: :-:

FOR SALE

At all times, high grade hogs and pigs, Berkshire and Poland China, crossed.

M. J. BARRETT,
tf Thorsby, Ala.

BUSINESS PROPOSITION

The best whiskey in the country is here. If you don't believe it, try me.

J. M. COLLINS,
Palace Saloon, Calera, Ala.
tf.

F. E. & C. U. O A.

A resolution was adopted at the last county meting of the Farmers' Union requiring the county lecturer to visit each local in the county at least once every year. Locals who want me to lecture to them will please write me, giving their location, so as to enable me to make a tour of the county in July and August. Address

C. N. EILAND,
tf Route 4, Clanton, Ala.

CRAWFORD & SAMMONS Blacksmiths Horseshoers & wheel wrights. At the "Old Vine stand" Clanton, Ala. Horse-shoeing 80 cent; Shrinking Buggy tires 50 cents; New tires 65 cents. Other work in proportion. Come and see us. tf.

SHOES! SHOES! SHOES!

I am now closing out my spring and summer line of SHOES regardless of cost. Come one and all and I will please you with prices and quality.

J. W. SMITH,
tf. Clanton.

GINNING SFASON 1906-7

We have engaged Joe and Walter Maddox to run and operate our gins for the coming season. We have the best machinery and with these men to operate it, we can guarantee entire satisfaction to those who patronize us. Bring us your cotton.

Respectfully
Chilton Warehouse & M,f,g. Company. tf.

FOR SALE OR RENT!

Land for sale, or to rent. One, two, three and four horse farms; two miles north of Jemison. Call on or address,

J. C. DUBOSE,
tf. Jemison, Ala.

SHEEP WANTED!

I want to buy sheep, will pay cash. If you have any to sell address,

W. A. MARTIN,
R. F. D. No. 5, Clanton.

FOR SALE!

300 acres land, 150 acres in cultivation. All in Sec. 6 T., 20, R., 14, 9 miles S. W. of Clanton. Good dwelling house and out buildings and 3 good tenant houses. Good and lasting well of water. This good farming land will be sold at a bargain. Call and see,

tf J. H. CARTER,
Clanton, R. F. D. No.

A DAY IN JUNE.

"Bury me not in a vault of gray, (Stones they are cold," said she).
"Shroud me not at the close of day,
(Twilight is mystery).
But bear me out when the sun is high
And the poppies blossoming red,
For I would not lose one day in June,
Even when I am dead.

"Place no cross on my silent breast,
(Tapers are tall and grim).
Chant no prayer for my soul's good rest;
(Silence is sweeter hymn).
But let a thrush sing in a greenwood tree,
Let roses wreath my head,
For I would not lose one day in June,
Even when I am dead."

But she died when the snow was drifting high (Chill was the wind with grief).
Fire ravens fled from the wintry sky—
(Where is the greenwood's leaf?)
And they bear her out to the vault of gray,
A frost wreath round her head
So she did not lose one day in June
Even when she was dead.
—The Dreamer, in Town Topics.

Abdul's Ambition

BY JULINA O. HALL.

The Nile boat Amanatis was "tying up" for the night at Esneh. It was nine o'clock, and even the great, glorious Egyptian afterglow that lights up the land and the river for an hour after sunset had died down into the common gray of evening.

The dragoman was courteously helping me up the rough bank, with the torch-bearers ahead and my companions behind. Inasmuch as the great Temple of Khnum has been but partly uncovered and can be seen only by lantern-light, it mattered not whether our visit was by day or night.

"Will you go to see the temple, lady?" said a soft voice in my ear. Every word was spoken with a clear, slightly hesitating articulation.

"That is my intention," I answered, wearily.

"May I go with you?" the speaker continued, and I saw by the torch-light that the boy who addressed me was unlike the young Arabs who everywhere press upon you their services as guides.

"It is not necessary," I replied. "We have a guide; this man will do for me everything I need done."

"I beg your pardon, madam. I only wished to talk with you to improve my English language."

I turned to see more clearly what manner of boy this could be, whose finished articulation of each vowel and consonant made me feel that it behooved me to improve my own "English language." He was dressed in clean white robe and red fez, with an English-made jacket, for the air was cool. His features were delicate, and he seemed of pure Arab blood.

"Certainly you may; but tell me where you learn such good English." My heart was going out toward a boy who sought language-practice when he ought to be abed and asleep.

"In the government school," he answered.

"How long have you studied it?"

"This is my second year."

I questioned him about his other studies. He professed great interest in geography. "Because you can learn about all the countries in the world," he added, with great enthusiasm. "Will you tell me," he continued, with a fascinating trace of shyness, "what city you come from?"

"I live in Washington. Did you ever hear of it?"

"Washington is the capital of the United States. It is on the Pot-o-mac River, and is the seat of the national government."

"But I once lived in Boston," I added experimentally.

"Boston exports manufactured goods," he replied promptly, "and I think, hides and tallow," he added, doubtfully.

"Yes," I said, with a cheerful confidence that the Hub of the Universe could expert anything she wished.

I should have been glad had the way to the temple been longer. The gate that admitted us to the sacred precincts excluded the natives, and all not provided with six-dollar government permits to see Egypt's wonders.

I inspected from the high entrance-level the wonderful and varied capitals, and descended to the vestibule floor, and even saw the whole mass of ancient masonry flash up into unaccustomed brilliancy under the glare of magnesium light which we carried for the purpose, and which not only revealed the finer touches of the engraver's chisel's, but threw upon the startled bats a strange light that made them gleam for an instant like butterflies; but all the time my interview with the little alien who spoke my tongue so sweetly was revolving itself entertainingly just beneath the surface of my consciousness.

In accordance with my wish I found him awaiting me when we left the enclosure.

"Tell me about yourself," I said hurriedly, for the walk back to the boat was short.

"My father is a goldsmith," he began.

"And you will be a goldsmith when you grow up, I suppose."

"I can if I like, but I want to be educated to become an English gentleman."

He could not read from my mind the words memory flashed across it about certain charges that leopards and Ethiopians are incapable of. Under my encouragement he continued to talk of himself.

Next year he expected to be promoted and sent to a higher school up the river at Assuan. If so, he would be the youngest boy ever sent from Esneh. Then he would be homesick, but he would not give up. As we reached the gangplank of the Amanatis he asked if I would some time be willing to write him a letter in English. I promised, and redeemed my promise under the shadow of Magdalen Tower in Oxford, England, whence I sent him much matter in clear English print.

In parting, I offered him a dime as a souvenir. To my surprise, he declined it with dignity.

"It is a shame for me—" He hesitated. "It is a shame for a boy in our school to take money from strangers."

Then I apologized. "I do not offer it to you as I would give to boys who ask for it. It was a little offering of friendship, since I had nothing else to give you."

He allowed me to put it into his hand, but he did not move from the spot, and looked really troubled. A tall man in a turban stooped and spoke to him, and they both disappeared in the darkness. In a moment our dragoman sought me in the cabin, and summoned me to the railing. Then the small Egyptian gentleman presented to me a gay little banner of worsted woven-work, and his face was luminous, notwithstanding its dark tints, with the satisfaction of a restored self-respect. Our gifts were only an exchange.

As I withdrew to the quiet side of the deck, I met the New York banker who had been so sadly annoyed by the bakshish beggars ever since we entered the Khedive's kingdom.

"There is a little brown native out here who won't take money as a gift," I said.

"Where? Where? Point him out to me!" he said, in his heavy, brusque voice. "He must be more of a rarity than a crocodile in these parts.

"Here, boy, do you speak English?"

"I beg your pardon, sir?" and no drawingroom ever echoed a more courteous request for repetition.

"I see you speak English! Come up here. I've got something for you."

"What is it, sir?" and he moved no step nearer as he asked.

"Just a little bakshish. Come and get it."

"Thank you! I don't take money from strangers."

The banker's gruff voice broke into laughter. "Upon my word! But never mind; you're all right! Come and shake hands with me."

The boy advanced with not a trace of self-consciousness, and smiled most engagingly as he felt his slender hand so warmly clasped.

"Is there anything you want that you haven't got?" and the question was prompted by a wish on the man's part to do something handsome by this self-respecting son of the Nile.

"Oh, yes, sir!"

"What is it?"

"I should like, most of anything, a geography printed in English."

"You just write your name and address, and if you don't get the book as soon as the mail can bring it, it won't be my fault."

Again, as he had done for me, the boy took from the pocket of his English jacket a notebook and pencil, wrote, "Abdul Atalla, Esneh, Upper Egypt, Africa," tore out the leaf, and presented it.

Then followed the good-nights and salaams and good-bys, but the banker exclaimed as he walked the deck, "The blessed little monkey! He shall have all the English geographies our London house can send him, and if they want to train up a corresponding clerk for their Oriental business, he's just their ticket! He'll be an English gentlemen yet."
—Youth's Companion.

London's Lost Gorilla.

Poor Martha! She has passed from the tribulations of an uncongenial world to hang by the tail, we trust, in some paradise of apes. For Martha was the last of the gorillas that the Zoo has vainly tried to foster. Arriving moribund, she was spared no delicacy or attention that could fan a fitful spark of vitality into a steady flame. Night and day they watched and tended her. But either the shock of the voyage had been too much for her or the poor soul beat so hard against the bars of captivity that the small heart was broken. At least she has followed Venus and Chloe and Miss Crowther, and the Zoo must now search for some more fortunate successor. Martha's is indeed a tragic loss, for gorillas are as scarce as they are difficult to keep healthy in captivity. They are attractive beasts, despite their reputation, and we look forward to the success at Regent's Park, which, we are sure, is only postponed by this series of disasters.—St. James' Gazette.

Cabman's Superstitions.

A cabman never likes to drive a red tie the first thing in the morning. It means he will have bad luck all day.

A white top hat brings luck; so does a man who hails a cab with his hand touching a lamppost. An old gentleman with plaid trousers is as good as £2 any day.—Grand Magazine.

There are eighty State, private and savings banks and trust companies, and thirty national banks in Idaho.

Orchard and Garden

BUYING FERTILIZERS.

While barnyard manure is, and will remain for all time, the main reliance of the farmer for fertilizing, not enough animals are kept on the ordinary farm to furnish enough manure to keep the cultivated land, to say nothing of the pastures, up to the standard of fertility necessary for the production of profitable crops; he must therefore buy fertilizers. Chemical plants food, known as fertilizers, are now manufactured and sold under guarantee at prices considerably less than the raw materials can be bought for, to say nothing of the cost of mixing, if time is of any value. These commercial fertilizers are usually reliable and well worth their cost. If the farmer does not apply the fertilizers properly, or does not procure the kinds most suitable for his soil and crops, he may be disappointed and will condemn the manufacturer, but the farmer can rely upon the fact that everythig that goes into fertilizer has a market value of its own and cannot be sold at a price lower than the relative value of its ingredients. It is easier to sell each ingredient separately than to have the labor of preparing a great many of them into something that sells for less. The farmer should endeavor to know the nature of the plant foods composing the fertilizer, estimate its value and make allowance for commissions, labor, transportation, bags, etc., as fertilizers vary greatly, not even several lots of Peruvian guano being the same grade. It has been demonstrated, in all experiments made, that the farmer who uses fertilizers with his barnyard manure secures larger yields of crops, retains the fertility of his soil and the cost of fertilizer is but a small sum compared with the gain from its use. Every farmer should make his manure more valuable by adding to it additional plant foods which can now be purchased cheaper than when the sources of plant foods were not so numerous.—The Epitomist.

AGRICULTURAL NOTES.

Linseed meal, cottonseed meal, bran and other feeding stuffs serve admirably as fertilizers for crops, but it will pay beter to feed such materials to stock and use the manure.

It is difficult to estimate the value of manure, as its quality depends upon the kind of food provided. Experiments show that when cows are well fed and kept on air-tight floors they voided manure valued at ten cents per day. Horses kept in the same kind of stalls produced manure valued at four cents per day, two-fifths being voided in the fields. Sheep produced manure valued at a cent and a half a day, per sheep and swine produced manure valued at half a cent each. This shows that the manure from all kinds of stock is a valuable portion of the receipts.

To keep seed potatoes from sprouting, during the warm days of winter ventilate the cellar well and they will remain in good condition. One reason why potatoes keep so well in New England is that the climate is favorable, the seed being less liable to warm conditions than in other parts of the country. As near 40 degrees temperature as possible should be observed and dampness should be avoided. Seed for early planting may be spread out and allowed to sprout, but should be planted immediately.

A southern farmer says that good results are obtained by feeding sunflower seeds to horses, hogs and other stock. The feeding of this, however, requires judgment, as the seeds are very rich and should be mixed with bran.

TOO MUCH CORN FOR SWINE.

Every winter or rather at the end of every winter we hear tales of rheumatism in swine, intense indigestion, bowel trouble and all sorts of diseases for which no cause can be found, yet in the majority of cases it is plainly too much corn. It is, of course, quite natural to feed heavily of corn, because it is the cheapest thing we have to feed swine, but what profit is there in it when it is overdone? We had some fine half-grown pigs who had several attacks of severe indigestion, and we cut out the corn for a week. In its place we fed bran, mixed with chopped vegetables, and fed warm; this was given morning and night, and at noon the animals were given a lot of second-grade hay and a few sweet potatoes. Not a full ration by any means, and the pigs fell off in weight, but at the end of the week the trouble was gone and they would eat anything offered them. From then on the corn ration was cut down so that it was about one-half a full ration, and we used more bran, skim milk, root crops and roughage, and we can not see but what the animals are all that any ration would have made them, and they are certainly in excellent condition to be corn-fattened when the time comes.—Indianapolis News.

MONEY IN BROOD SOWS.

Some recent sales of some very common sows and pigs for what seems to me to be very high prices opened my eyes to the possibilities of this business and I recall several other times when they sold very high. Some of these sows brought several times what they would if fed out. For instance, sows weighing from 150 to 190 pounds with litters of from six to nine pigs bring $20 to $25 while a few with larger litters ruled higher. Fattened out they would not have brought over ten or twelve dollars and would have consumed a great deal more of feed. If we would select some of the sows out of the herd that we are to feed and breed them to a good boar, considerably more money could be made with less feed and less work. Often too, we can buy some fine old brood sows that are on their way to market and could be bought low for they are considerably lower on the market. Many a good brood sow is consigned to the slaughter house before her uselessness along this line is ended.—Kentuckian in the Epitomist.

BUTTER MAKING IN THE FARM.

If butter is made on your farm have only those cows that produce good milk and cream; keep them clean, healthy and well fed. Make it your business to use the Babcock test just as often as necessary, and as soon as any cow shows that she is unprofitable to you, get rid of her and replace her with an animal that comes up to the standard. Cleanliness in handling the cream is also a very important matter, and it pays well to have just those sort of implements to work with that will allow of your finishing your product with the least chance of any dirt or dust getting into it. Do not keep the cream too long, but churn about every other day and do this churning in a room that is suited for this kind of work. It is a poor plan to make the kind of butter that can only be exchanged at the store for some sort of merchandise, and which at times is hard to get rid of even in that way. Above all bear in mind that system is necessary in all things, and this probably applies more to the making of butter than to anything else.

VALUE OF SILAGE.

A man in Pennsylvania says that an acre of corn silage is equal to five acres of blue grass pasture. Frank Duff, of Rogersville, Pa., says that it increases the value of the corn crop 33 per cent., as compared with feeding the corn and stover separately. S. E. Young, of Sweetwater, claims that his one hundred ton silo is worth $50 per year to him. Another good farmer in the same neighborhood says that his 350 ton silo is worth $200 a year to him. H. B. Gurler, the famous dairyman of DeKalb, Ill., who furnishes certified milk that sells for 12 cents a quart, says that he could not keep cows without the silo. W. G. Lenoir, of Philadelphia, says that a silo doubles the feeding value of the corn crop. In commenting upon these remarks the Inland Farmer says:

We have yet to hear of a careful, painstaking farmer, who gives his personal attention to the making and feeding of silage who has been dissatisfied with the results. The silo has stood the test of time and won out on its merits, and we predict that the time is coming when it will be indispensable to good stock farming.

QUITE TRUE.

At one of the Missouri horticultural meetings a speaker, in the course of his remarks, said that "good orchardists are not growers of fruit merely from a remunerative standpoint, but find in the work much pleasure and satisfaction of the aesthetic taste. There is a charm for them in the study of the growth of the trees, in watching the various changes with the seasons and in noting the effect of each on the growth of the trees."

The Simple Servian.

Servia's laborer is at heart a simple, prosaic fellow. His attire is coarse almost to the point of ungainliness. Rough brown trousers of homespun, a coat a shade or two darker and edged with a strip of black fleece, a peaked woollen cap and his cane, and you have the picture. He is a farmer, on a small scale, and his hobby is raising hogs, which he turns into the forests or fields to fatten on mast. In fact, there is a tradition that the family of the present king sprang from a great hog-raising noble a century or two ago, and so the people imitate the royal example. The rural life in Servia is primitive. At sun-up folk rise, take their raki or schnapps, and go to the fields to work. Their meal is brought to them at noon and again in the evening, for they often work until sunset. And so life goes on and on.

As to politics they really care little. When all the world looked on aghast at the Macbethian plot that startled Servia from its dozing—the murderer of a king and queen and a handful of courtiers—the peasant shook his head at the bad business and left it to his duly elected representative in the Sobranje, or Parliament, to decide who should next be king and how the culpable were to be punished.

Servia is suffering from a plague of butterflies and the government has offered a reward for their extermination. The fields throughout the country are white instead of green, because of the clouds of insects.

There are men who would rather be attached to a ball and chain than to an apron string.

You can buy a lot of trouble with a $2 bill—if you invest it in a marriage license.

About the only sure way to keep a secret is to not have a secret.

FOR PHONETIC SPELLING.

ENGLISH AUTHORITY SIDES WITH AMERICAN REFORMERS.

Back to the Old-Time Style—Modern Methods the Result of Awkward Lack of Early Printing Facilities Rather Than Historical Development.

Andrew Carnegie, Mark Twain and the other leaders of the recent agitation in the United States in favor of phonetic spelling will be glad to hear that they have an ally on the other side of the water in the person of Prof. W. W. Skeat, of Cambridge University, who is undoubtedly one of the greatest living authorities on the English language. Up to now, the American suggestions regarding the reform of spelling have been subjected to wholesome ridicule in England, but possibly some of the writers who made merry over them will conclude to change their tune after reading the vigorous address in support of the American arguments delivered by Professor Skeat before a gathering of the British Academy at Burlington House.

Besides being Professor of Anglo-Saxon at Cambridge, Dr. Skeat is the founder and president of the English Dialect Society, and the titles of his works on English literature occupy something like ten pages in the catalogue of the British Museum Library. So it was rather striking to find him beginning his address to the British Academy by declaring that all of what he called the "scientic arguments" were on the side of those who want to reform the spelling of English, and that dense ignorance was the chief characteristic of those who opposed it. Etymology and phonetics, Prof Skeat said were the two sciences which the British Press, in particular, could not understand to be such, and he went on to assert that the English language as at present spelt was full of the most absurd contradictions, warranted neither by history nor by common sense.

Then he proceeded to give a number of examples of useless letters in spelling, and declared that the final "e" in have, live, solve, adze, awe and axe—words that he would spell hav liv, solv, adz, aw and ax—was the chief delinquent. It had, Professor Skeat said, no right to its place. It had been introduced at the end of "have" at the time when that word was spelt "haue," and its purpose then was to distinguish the otherwise undistinguishable u and v. Again, the letter "o" in comfort, which historically should be "cumfort"—in donkey, which should be "dunkey" and in money, which should be "muney" was another unjustifiable innovation, called into being because in script the Normans did not like an "m" or "n" to follow a "u" because of the want of legibility.

Professor Skeat also provided a surprise by ridiculing the idea that the shortening of "labour" to "labor" was an American innovation. "Labor," he said, is found in the 504th line of "The Pearl," which was written before Columbus discovered America and indeed before he was born. Similarly he went on, there were the best of philological reasons for spelling "arrive" with only one r; affair—which was the French a faire—with only one f; attack as "atak;" commence without its double m, and lamb, limb and plumber with their b. In conclusion the Professor showed by philological science that the spelling of language was altered originally to conform with phonetic utterance and contended that we ought to reform and alter it now according to the same principle. Thus, he said, a race gradually would spring up which would perceive that the best spelling for a given word was that which gave most reasonably the sound of it.

Apropos, another interesting question of spelling suddenly has come up, and that in connection with Mark Twain's recent gift of the manuscript of his magazine article on "Joan of Arc" to the municipal museum at Rouen, the ancient town in which the French heroine met her death. It is demanded by a well-known English antiquarian why both British and American writers spell the maid's name as 'Joan 'd Arc" when, as he points out, we have the authority of Michelet, the historian; of Dean Kitchin, and other historians that the young woman's name was actually Jeanne Darc. "Not only," says this writer, "were her parents peasants, but there was no Arc anywhere near of which she could be "d." He adds, "though it is easy to see how the mistake originally arose, the twentieth century, in the interests of accuracy, should not countenance it."—Philadelphia Record.

ALL RASCALS, SAYS G. B. SHAW.

Takes to Task an Audience of Well to Do Londoners.

"A great proportion of the people in society are rascals; in fact, we are all more or less rascals." The dictum is George Bernard Shaw's. It was uttered in the course of an address to well to do persons on behalf of a crusade against the evils of lead glazing among the pottery workers, writes the London correspondent of the New York Sun.

Mr. Shaw asked his hearers if they cared whether the plates from which they ate had given some poor wretch paralysis from lead poisoning, adding, sarcastically:

"If you care you are getting on."

His faith in the real sympathy of his nearers was evidently weak. He proceeded to denounce the rascality of the employers of industry. He said:

"Even you good people, what you facetiously call means are more or less great deal of the means made in a rascally way, which I see in so many and costumes before me."

Mr. Shaw forcibly pain eries of the poor and life of the rich, throwing away about £ ly on extravagances of much of the money which wanted at home, being From this it was a natural to a Pharisaic Shavism.

"I am now in a position life of pleasure lived by rich. I possess all the comitants for it, but I ly rather sweep a cross heaven, I have strength enough and sense enough the life which I live."

His socialistic leanings the compass. He touched ciety's most dangerous and coming to the climax said it was cowardly to not one note of concern in behalf of the poor tinned the meat it was consumer and the meat clared that these meat mean more than has been What if the workmen in houses purposely poisoned in an effort to break property owners for their brothers' welfare? improbable.

When a man thinks wrongs of society that bomb, regardless of his must be in earnest. The the man who perpetrated outrage were not those man. In his ignorance thought he was doing his fellow men. "I should see," added Mr. Shaw, society as anxious to better ditions of our proletariat."

PLACER GOLD VARIES

Other Minerals Carried Nuggets of More Precious Metal.

Placer miners are frequently, and not infrequently because of the varying mineral as given by the the Mint, says Dennis H the Chicago Mining World time the miner will receive ounce for shipment. A later he will receive $19 a second shipment. He cause, on first thought, it ly a case of "short" both shipments were of same digging and in the season. He is confident "leak" somewhere, and shipping to a smelter to the Mint, or if the change to the smelter tain at a later date that not lie with the buyers, gold itself. For there in the quality of placer difference exists in the or along a single gulch

The writer had occasion an investigation in this cause of complaint to World entered by a placer the Mint was giving him ance" on shipments. investigation it was learned varying values of placer gets, and even finer dust, coarseness or fineness of In other words, it is the the metal that decides its was found that in the the nuggets uncovered near of the creek are of better those found at the source son for this is not far to former have travelled have been longer separated parent vein. They are purer, smoother, more compact finer grain. Also they are quality, and are of greater

The absolute value of only be determined after melted and refined. And is based on the value of and by "pure" is meant free other metals. One cubic gold weighs 10,1283 ounces is worth $209.38. A single worth $20.67. Very few ceive $20.67, or even $ for their product; even bricks from the quartz to bring that price.

Drowning of the

Fred Taylor and Ra residing east of Savan while out hunting in a Seneca River, had a narrow They were drifting down lor was steersman. When Central bridge, the current preventing him from guiding safely under and it crashed of the stone piers with partly wrecking the boat both men and guns into water. After struggling they succeeded in gaining on the overturned boat and send up loud cries, as they their brothers' welfare. A. C. Carr, engineer York Central's pumping cated a few hundred feet scene, heard the cries of securing a sledge-hammer a boathouse and was soon to the rescue, overtaking clinging to the capsized a mile below the bridge. both dragged into his boat hausted condition after the minute ice-water bath. grip on the boat twice the bottom, but each time to reach the floating boat hold anew. Both men frightened and the two probably remain in the some time.—Rochester Advertiser.

Tulane University
OF LOUISIANA
NEW ORLEANS.
R. CRAIGHEAD, L. L. D., Pres.
The University of Louisiana, founded in 1834, is the legitimate head of the University of Louisiana, in the logical head of the system of public educational institutions.
Courses are offered in Languages, Sciences, Law, Medicine. Splendid department of Tulane makes loud. Unrivaled opportunities for instruction in Mining and Industrial Chemistry. Unrivaled opportunities for research. Scholarships in academic department. Board and accommodations in dormitories. Next session begins October 1st. For Catalogue Address
R. K. BRUFF, Secretary.

APUDINE
CURES INDIGESTION and NERVOUSITY headaches also by druggists the cause. 10 cents.

Vitus Dance, Nervous Diseases permanently cured by Dr. Kline's Great Nerve Restorer. $2 trial bottle and treatise free. Dr. R. H. Kline, Ltd., 931 Arch St., Phila., Pa.

Biggers Huckleberry Cordial convince the most skeptical when it comes to curing Diarrhoea, Dysentery, Chills, Nothing, etc. 25c and 50c per bottle.

VEGETARIAN ATHLETES.

Inland They are Smashing Records Made by Meat Eaters.

It would almost seem that athletic feats are set up by meat eaters in order that they may be knocked down by vegetarians, says the London Daily

Last year George Allen knocked seconds off the walking record from Land's End to John O'Groats, and now G. A. Olley has lowered the cycling record over the same course by eleven hours, which is a feat not likely to remain unequalled for some-time to come.

Such training is indispensable to severe athletic feats, and a most important part of that training depends upon diet. It is not true that everything, but it is so much these repeated victories by vegetarians are the best advertisement they have.

The grand challenge has not yet been won by a vegetarian crew, or prize diamonds by a graminivorous team, but it certainly seems that the really active man whose indigestion is equal to it keeps himself in good condition without tasting meat.

How much intellectual vegetarians like George Bernard Shaw owe to the fact that they eat or do not eat is a question that will take longer to find out. At any rate, the day has gone by when vegetarianism was looked upon as a mild but fairly certain form of suicide.

BACK TO PULPIT

Food Did For a Clergyman.

The minister of Elizabethtown tells how Grape-Nuts food brought him back to his pulpit: "Some 5 years ago I had an attack of what seemed to be La Grippe, which left me in a complete state of collapse and I suffered for some time with nervous prostration. My appetite failed, I grew weak until I was a mere skeleton, was a burden to me, I lost interest in everything and almost in life. My body save my precious wife.

"Then on the recommendation of friends I began the use of Grape-Nuts food. At that time I was a miserable skeleton, without appetite and hardly able to walk across the room; had ugly dreams at night, a disposition to entertain or be entertained and began to shun society. I finally gave up the regular ministry, indeed I could not collect my thoughts on any subject, and became almost a hermit. After I had been using the Grape-Nuts food for a short time I discovered that I was taking on new life and my appetite began to improve; I began to sleep better and my weight increased steadily; I had gained some 50 pounds, but under the Grape-Nuts food regime I have regained almost my former weight and have steadily improved in every way.

"I feel that I owe much to Grape-Nuts and can truly recommend the food to all who require a powerful and building agent delicious to taste and always welcome." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. There is a natural road to regain health. Sometimes it is by use of a dish of Grape-Nuts and cream, morning and evening. Or have the food made into some of the many delicious dishes found in the little recipe book found in pkgs.

"There's a reason."

Ten days' trial of Grape-Nuts helps nature. Read the little book, "The Road to Wellville," which will be sent for a copy of the

"Even you good what you facetiously means are more or great deal of the
made in a rascally which I see in so many and costumes before me."

Mr. Shaw forcibly
eries of the poor and life of the rich, saying throwing away about ly on extravagances of much of the money which is wanted at home, being
From this it was a natural to a Pharisaic Shawism:

"I am now in a position to life of pleasure lived by rich. I possess all the comforts for it, but I would rather sweep a crossing heaven. I have strength enough and sanity enough to the life which riches

His socialistic denunciation the compass. He dubbed ciety's most dangerous and coming to the Chicago did it was curious to one note of concern
in behalf of the poor turned the meat. It was consumer and the beef itself clared that these meat mean more than has been What if the workmen in the houses purposely poisoned in an effort to wreak property owners for their their brothers' welfare? That improbable.

When a man thinks so wrongs of society that he bomb, regardless of his own must be in earnest. The the man who perpetrated the outrage were not those of a man in his ignorant thought he was doing his fellow men. "I should see," added Mr. Shaw, " society as anxious to better ditions of our proletariat."

PLACER GOLD VARIES IN

Other Minerals Carried in Nuggets of More Precious Metal.

Placer mines are frequently zled, and not infrequently because of the varying value mineral as given by the
the Mint, says Dennis H.
the Chicago Mining World. time the miner will receive ounce for shipment. A few later he will receive $19 or a second shipment. He is cause, on first thought, it seems ly a case of "short allow both shipments were of gold same diggings and removed season. He is confident
"leak" somewhere, and if he shipping to a smelter he to the Mint, or if the Mint change to the smelter, only fain at a later date that the not lie with the buyers, but gold itself. For there is a in the quality of placer gold difference exists in the same or along a single gulch or

The writer had occasion an investigation in this cause of complaint to the World entered by a placer
the Mint was giving him " ance" on shipments. Thro investigation it was learned varying values of placer gold gets, and even finer dust, coarseness or fineness of
In other words, it is the
the metal that decides its was found that in the same the nuggets uncovered near of the creek are of better
those found at the source.
son for this is not far to former have travelled far have been longer separated parent vein. They are there er, smoother, more compact finer grain. Also they are quality, and are of greater

The absolute value of a only be determined after it melted and refined. And is based on the value of und by "pure" is meant free other metals. One cubic inch gold weighs 10.12883 ounces is worth $209.38. A single worth $20.67. Very few ceive $20.67, or even $20 for their product; even the bricks from the quarts mi to bring that price.

Drowning of the

Fred Taylor and Raymo residing east of Savannah while out hunting in a Seneca River, had a narro
They were drifting down lor was steersman. When Central bridge the current preventing him from guiding safely under and it crashed of the stone piers with partly wrecking the boat, both men and guns into water. After struggling they succeeded in gaining on the overturned boat and send up loud cries, as they ing carried along by the rent. A. C. Carr, engineer York Central's pumping cated a few hundred feet scene, heard the cries of securing a sledge-hammer
a boathouse and was soon to the rescue, overtaking clinging to the capsized
a mile below the bridge.
both dragged into his boat hausted condition after the minute ice-water bath.
grip on the boat twice the bottom, but each time to reach the floating boat hold anew. Both men frightened and the two probably remain in the
some time.—Rochester
vertiser.

Tulane University
OF LOUISIANA
NEW ORLEANS.
B. CRAIGHEAD, L. L. D., Pres.
...University of Louisiana, founded in ... the typical head ... of public educational institu... Languages, Sciences, ... Splendid department ... Medicine. Tulane makes lead... for instruction in ... Unrivalled opportu... and Industrial Chemis... department. ... in practical operations in dermato... Next week in August. October 1st.
E. B. BRUFF, Secretary.

APUDINE
URES ... it is immediately ... you feel its effects in 10 ... minutes. You don't ... have to wait a ... week to know it is good. It cures ... HEADACHES ALSO by ... the cause. 10 cents

...few Christians 'ud keer 'bout ... of 'tawn't for dat advertise... sweet milk and golding

...got my 'pinion on any niggah ... too triflin for pick up ernuff ... his family from gwine hongry.

...er 'oman's married she haster ... give back de compliments her ... botch her wid.

...Vitus Dance, Nervous Diseases per... cured by Dr. Kline's Great Nerve ... $2 trial bottle and treatise free. ... Kline, 931 Arch St., Phila., Pa.

...preachers keeps dey religion ... de pockets uv dey Sunday ... de watch.

...Soothing Syrup for Children ... softens the gums, reduces inflamma... allays pain, cures wind colic. 25c a bottle

...ldn't mock in no white 'oman's ... what expected de ravens ter ... chillun'

...Biggers Huckleberry Cordial ... cures the most skeptical when it ... is cramps Diarrhoea, Dysentery, Chil... Cholera, etc. 25c and 50c per bottle.

...er nearly close congregation ... warnidge de preacher de corn... de collection plate.

VEGETARIAN ATHLETES.

...gland They are Smashing Rec... ...ds Made by Meat Eaters.

...ould almost seem that athletic ... are set up by meat eaters in ... that they may be knocked down ...tarians, says the London Daily ...

...year George Allen knocked ...ays off the walking record ...Land's End to John o'Groats. ...w G. A. Olley has lowered the ...ed cycling record over the same ...by eleven hours, which is a feat ...likely to remain unequalled ...me time to come.

...t training is indispensable to ...severe athletic feats, and a most ...tant part of that training de... upon diet. It is not true that ...everything, but it is so much ...ose repeated victories by vege... are the best advertisement ...ause has.

...grand challenge has not yet ...on by a vegetarian crew, or... ...diamonds by a graminivorous ..., but it certainly seems that the ...ally active man whose indiges... ...s equal to it keeps himself in ...condition without tasting meat. ...much intellectual vegetarians ...George Bernard Shaw owe to the ...they eat or do not eat is a ...that will take longer to ...out. At any rate, the day has ...by when vegetarianism was ...rown as a mild but fairly cer... form of suicide.

BACK TO PULPIT

...Food Did For a Clergyman.

...minister of Elizabethtown tells ...State Notes' what brought him ...to his pulpit: "Some 5 years ...had an attack of what seemed ...La Grippe, which left me in a ...ete state of collapse and I suf... for some time with nervous ...ation. My appetite failed, I ...flesh until I was a mere skeleton, ...was a burden to me, I lost inter... in everything and almost in ...body save my precious wife.

"Then on the recommendation of ...friends I began the use of ...Grape-Nuts food. At that time I was ...erable skeleton, without appe... and hardly able to walk across ...room; had ugly dreams at night, ...disposition to entertain or be en... ...ained and began to shun society. ...finally gave up the regular min..., indeed I could not collect my ...ghts on any subject, and became ...ost a hermit. After I had been ...g the Grape-Nuts food for a short ...I discovered that I was taking ...new life and my appetite began to ...prove; I began to sleep better and ...weight increased steadily; I had ...some 50 pounds, but under the ...food regime I have regained al... ...my former weight and have ...ally improved in every way.

"I feel that I owe much to Grape-...and can truly recommend the ...to all who require a powerful ...building agent delicious to taste ...always welcome." Name given ...Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

"The natural road to regain health, ...hold it, is by use of a dish of ...Grape-Nuts and cream, morning and ...at. Or have the food made into ...one of the many delicious dishes ...found in the little recipe book found ...in pkgs.

"Ten days' trial of Grape-Nuts helps ...." "There's a reason."

...Look in pkgs. for a copy of the ...little book, "The Road to ...."

...ater, WHICH ...

SANDWICH FILLING.

An enthusiastic member of the New York Mycological Club is authority for the statement that the fat, white puff ball, sliced, makes a delicious sandwich filling.

ASPARAGUS FRITTERS AND SALAD.

Asparagus fritters are recommended for luncheon. Make a batter of two eggs, a cup of flour, a little baking powder, one tablespoonful of melted butter, salt, and enough milk to make the batter thin. Cut up cold asparagus in inch pieces and add to the batter. Fry in deep fat. Cold asparagus with French dressing is a most acceptable salad. Serve on lettuce leaves, with slices of hard boiled egg, and add a few capers for piquancy.

SPANISH CREAM.

To one pint of milk add one-half box of gelatine; let it heat slowly until the gelatine is dissovled. When at a boiling point stir in quickly the yolks of three eggs and a cup of sugar, and when the mixture thickens stir in the whites of the eggs, beaten to a stiff froth. Remove from the stove, flavor and pour into a mould to cool.

SALMON COOKED IN COURT BOUILLION.

Lay a two pound slice fresh, firm salmon in the grate of a fish kettle, pour over enough cold water to cover, add two tablespoonfuls vinegar, three sprigs parsley, a sliced onion, three whole cloves, six whole peppers and two tablespoonfuls salt. Let the fish come quickly to the boiling point, then push back where it will simmer gently until the fish flakes. Serve with a garnish of mushrooms and a rich sauce.

ROLLED OATS BREAD.

This recipe for rolled oats bread is contributed by a housewife. Scald one cup Quaker rolled oats with one pint boiling water. Let stand one hour. Add one teaspoon salt, one-half scant cup molasses, one tablespoon lard, one-half yeast cake dissolved in one-third cup water, four or more cups flour or enough to make a dough rather softer than ordinary bread. Stir with spoon. Raise until it doubles its bulk, then shape into loaves or biscuit.

THREE DAINTY SALADS.

Cucumber Salad—Peel and slice the cucumbers and set away on the ice until thoroughly chilled. Drain and mix with chopped onion or small pieces of the large white onion. Serve with a French dressing.

Cherry Salad—Maraschino cherries, stuffed with hazel nuts. Serve very cold on lettuce leaves, with mayonnaise dressing.

Cottage Cheese Salad—Mold soft cottage cheese into balls the size of a bird's egg. Arrange them carefully with cucumber dice and a little chopped onion. Serve with French dressing.

TOMATO SAUCE FOR SPAGHETTI.

Boil and strain one can tomatoes. Chop one small onion fine and brown in pan with two slices of fat salt pork or two tablespoonfuls olive oil or butter. Five minutes before the browning is accomplished throw in a handful of dried mushrooms that have been scalded, strained and chopped. These add greatly to the flavor. Add to the tomatoes four whole cloves, a lump of sugar, salt and paprika or cayenne to flavor, mix together, strain, then thicken lightly with browned flour and cook two minutes. Pour over the spaghetti and add grated Parmesan cheese.

RYE FRITTERS.

Rye fritters make a delicious breakfast dish. Make a batter of an egg, two cupfuls of sour milk, a pint and a half of rye flour, a cupful of Indian meal, half a cupful of molasses, a scant level teaspoonful of soda and a saltspoonful of salt. Beat the mixture thoroughly, dip it with a tablespoon from the bowl and drop into smoking hot fat. Dip the spoon into the hot fat before dipping it into the batter and the batter will slide from it easily. Take up less than half a tablespoonful each time, in order to have small cakes. Be sure the cakes are cooked through. Drain them on brown paper, roll them in sugar and serve with maple syrup.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS.

When burning vegetable refuse in stove or furnace, put a handful of salt into the fire with it and there will be no unpleasant odor.

The pulverized washing powders last much longer if used from a talcum powder shaker. A baking powder can with holes punched through the lid may be utilized for the purpose.

Closely woven wool goods, like silk, should be loosely rolled around a pasteboard tube and covered with thin paper when laid away for a time. This will avoid the deep creases sure to accumulate from the weight of the folds. Silk will crack if left long in folds.

There will be less need of dusting if the broom is dampened in hot soapsuds where it is considered better to use it uncovered. It also helps to occasionally dampen the brush of the carpet-sweeper—but it should be immediately taken out after using and thoroughly dried.

RADIUM IN MEDICINE.

Useful in Therapeutics, But Not as Much as Asserted.

Wild claims have been made regarding the efficacy of radium emanations as a cure-all in thereapeutics, and on the other hand the reaction against its use has been from time to time equally violent. The contribution of Dr. Myron Metzenbaum to the Medical Record regarding the known medical value of radium is therefore timely and of importance to those interested in its use. The writer bases his conclusions upon an exhaustive survey of medical literature on the subject and two years' clinical experience with the substance, and offers the following conclusions:

"That lupus responds promptly to the action of radium, and that this result is obtained as readily as with the Finsen light or the X-rays, and that these results seem permanent. That small affectations of the epithelium, without glandular involvement, heal rapidly under the action of the radium rays, provided the tubes of radium can be brought into intimate contact or close proximity to the diseased area. Large epitheliomatous areas of the mucous membranes may not be influenced to any marked degree, probably because in large areas the disease is not only superficial, but the deeper tissues are involved as well. Epitheliomata on the skin respond far more rapidly than those of the mucous membranes; this is probably because the skin is kept dry and is not irritated by moisture or friction of the parts. The healing of epitheliomata under the action of the radium rays seems to be permanent. The rodent ulcers about the face and head respond better to the action of radium than to any known agent excepting the X-rays, and the results are better than those usually obtained by surgical interference. Deep-seated, malignant growths seem beyond the influence of the radium rays, and even when an incision is made into the growth and the tube of radium is inserted into its interior (as in the case of the late President Harper, there is then only a histological change in that part of the growth surrounding the tube of radium, as is demonstrated by a microscopical study of the tissue. Even if the radium rays exerted any beneficial influence on truly malignant, deep-seated growths, the fact could not be used to any great advantage in these cases, for the local action would be so pronounced as to cause an ulceration of the skin before it could influence the growth beneath.

"In certain cases of total blindness, possibly where some of the fibres of the optic nerve still remain intact, a sensation of light may be noted when a tube of radium of high activity is placed in front of the eye or against the temporal region. But thus far radium has given no beneficial results in the treatment of blindness. When tubes of radium are applied to old scars resulting from healed lupoid ulcers, it causes them to lose their rough and fibrous appearance and renders the area quite smooth and pliable."

CARE OF THE EYES.

A Few Rules Which Each and All Should Observe.

While trying to beautify the eyes in many ways is altogether harmful, there are a number of rules which, if perseveringly regarded, will be of the greatest benefit.

The enormous increase in cases of imperfect sight can be noted on every hand. Two out of every three women nowadays are obliged to wear glasses. Yet the women who rejoice in perfect vision go on their way disregarding the first principles of sight culture. There are a few simple rules which, if taught in the nursery, would strengthen eyes which in later years cause their owners acute suffering. Even the girl who is obliged to wear pince-nez will notice a great improvement in her sight by learning and taking to heart the following simple rules:

1. When you are reading hold the book some distance from your eyes, and gradually bring it nearer until you discover at what angle the print appears the largest.
2. Always read with your back to the light.
3. Hold your book in a sloping position, and when writing arrange your paper also on the slope.
4. Avoid reading in a moving vehicle.
5. Directly your eyes begin to smart and burn, if you are undertaking some fine needlework, put it away. Lie back in a chair. Close your eyes. Lay a handkerchief soaked in cold water on the eyes. Remain in this position for ten minutes.
6. Tired eyes may be bathed in hot water with good effect. It may contain a little salt or foracic acid. Any ailment requiring stronger treatment should be attended to by a physician. —Philadelphia Record.

Biggest Horse.

Snyder, the biggest horse in the world, is owned in Cleveland, O. The horse is a Percheron gelding, foaled in 1900. He is the tallest horse in the world, standing twenty-one hands (seven feet) and weighs 2700 pounds—probably the heaviest horse in the world.

TERRIBLE TO RECALL.

Five Weeks in Bed With Intensely Painful Kidney Trouble.

Mrs. Mary Wagner, of 1367 Kossuth Ave., Bridgeport, Conn., says: "I was so weakened and generally run down with kidney disease that for a long time I could not do my work and was five weeks in bed. There was continual bearing down pain, terrible backaches, headaches and at times dizzy spells when everything was a blur before me. The passages of the kidney secretions were irregular and painful, and there was considerable sediment and odor. I don't know what I would have done but for Doan's Kidney Pills. I could see an improvement from the first box, and five boxes brought a final cure."

Sold by all dealers. 50 cents a box. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

Hogs or Hippopotami.

They tell a story of a real estate man escorting a prospective buyer through some southeastern Texas swamp-land.

"What are those dark marks on the trees," asked the prospective buyer.

"Oh, that's where the hogs rub their backs against the trees," said the agent. "Now you see this land will raise——"

"But what made these marks here?" —the train was moving rapidly.

"Oh the hogs—Now, as I was saying——"

"Look here," said the revolting victim, "either the hogs down here are seven feet high, or else you keep hippopotamuses, and this is a lake on a vacation."—The World's Work.

School "Hygiene."

The humanizing of the elementary school has in Neufchatel reached a point which may safely be said to be in advance of anything yet attempted in any other country. A list of districts is mentioned in the Cantonal newspapers in which, in the public schools, there is included in the "curriculum" the gratuitous and compulsory administration of cod liver oil to all children for whom the school doctors prescribe it. Contrary to the usual experience of private families in such a case, the public administration of the oil in school is stated to be attended by no refractory symptoms. They are disciplinarians in Switzerland.

Flew Hawk on a Kite Line.

Last fall some boys who live in Caribou, Me., caught a large hawk in a trap, after he had killed a hen and failed to carry it away. A short time after there was a local fair over in New Brunswick. The managers offered five dollar prizes for the kite-flying machine, or any other old thing that would go the highest. The boys took the hawk and succeeded in making him go up the 1,600 feet of kite line. They got the prize and sold him for $5.—Maine Woods.

French farmers are glad to get $1.93 for 100 litres (about twenty-six gallons) of common red wine.

UNABLE TO WALK.

Terrible Sore on Ankle Caused Awful Suffering—Could Not Sleep—Cured by Cuticura in Six Weeks.

"I had a terrible sore on my ankle, and had not walked any for eleven months. I tried nearly everything without any benefit and had a doctor, but he didn't seem to do any good. He said I would have to have my limb taken off, and that I would never walk again. I suffered awful, and at night I could not sleep at all. I thought there was no rest for me, but as soon as I began to use Cuticura Soap and Ointment it commenced healing nicely. I bathed the ankle with warm water and Cuticura Soap, and then applied Cuticura Ointment to the affected part, and laid a cloth over the sore to hold it in place. After two weeks I could walk around in my room real good, and in six weeks' time my ankle was entirely cured, and I was walking around out of doors. Mrs. Mary Dickerson, Louisa C. H., Va., April 22, 1905."

The Sea Disgorging Its Spoil.

The great work of resuscitating San Francisco has obscured another remarkable American exploit, which is rapidly approaching completion. This is the salvage of Galveston, which flourishing port was swamped by the sea in 1900. Since that time a great sea wall over four and a third miles in length has been built completely round the front of the town, facing the Gulf of Mexico. It is seventeen feet high and sixteen feet thick at the base and five feet across at the top, being substantially protected from undermining by an "apron" of stone and sheet piling. But perhaps the most interesting part of the work of reconstructing the town is the raising of the protected district. This huge enterprise, reports the British Consul in April, is about a quarter completed, and the details afford every evidence of American ingenuity. A feature of the scheme is to bring sand from the gulf itself, and to pump it through pipes on to the land. This is making the sea disgorge its spoils "with a vengeance." —London Chronicle.

THE SLEEP OF HIBERNATION.

How It Differs from Repose—The Shock That Causes Death.

The sleep of hibernation is a very different matter from the sleep of repose. If it be complete, respiration can no longer be detected. A torpid bat when disturbed will heave a sigh or two, and, being left alone, again to all appearances ceases to breathe.

Submerged in water of a temperature slightly higher than his own, the hedgehog not only continues to live, but appears to suffer neither inconvenience nor harm. Enclosed in an airtight receptacle, his atmosphere undergoes a change so slight that it cannot be imputed to breathing. But circulation does not cease. As respiration diminishes the irritability of the muscles of the heart increases, and thus, without the stimulus of oxygen, although much more slowly, the heart continues to beat. In the absence of the fresh air drawn into the lungs in times of activity, uncleansed and unrevigorated and venous blood passes on to fill the whole system of circulation.

A profound lethargy ensues, only distinguishable from death by the slight beating of the heart. The waste is very small. The fat accumulated during the plenty of summer and autumn supplies all expenditure until the coming of spring, when earlier or later the hibernating animal, having no capital in reserve, begins to suffer the pangs of hunger. In response to the demand respiration very slowly increases. His oxidized blood flows more quickly and his energy returns.

Then the bat flies forth once more from the hollow tree in the wood, to find the warm dusk teeming with insect life, and the hedgehog comes, it may be from the cavity under the gnarled roots below, to find beetles, worms and slugs once more among the spring grass. Hibernation has saved him from starvation; but if his nook had not been snug and wisely chosen, it could not have preserved him from death from frost.

The hiding-place also must be secret and free from intrusion, for the hibernating animal cannot bear to be suddenly aroused. Even the little dormouse, which comes out at intervals to feed, when in deep sleep does not survive too hasty an awakening. The heat of the hand gradually passing through the nest or to be carried indoors to the warmer temperature of a room is well enough.

He awakes refreshed, full of activity, and with a disposition speedily to become tame and make friends. But if you warm him suddenly back to life before he had gradually breathed the torpor out of his blood and established an equilibrium between his respiration and muscular irritability, his heart will beat at a tremendous rate, and in a few minutes he is dead.—London Spectator.

When a woman marries a man's troubles begin.

Medical Department

TULANE UNIVERSITY OF LOUISIANA

Its advantages for practical instruction, both in ample laboratories and abundant hospital materials, are unequaled. Free access is given to the great Charity Hospital with 900 beds and 30,000 patients annually. Special instruction is given daily at the bedside of the sick. The next session begins October 18, 1906. For catalogue and information, address

PROF. S. E. CHAILLE, M. D., Dean,
P. O. Drawer, 261, NEW ORLEANS, LA.

A PRETTY MILKMAID

Thinks Peruna Is a Wonderful Medicine.

MISS ANNIE HENDREN.

MISS ANNIE HENDREN, Rockyn, Wash., writes:

"I feel better than I have for over four years. I have taken several bottles of Peruna and one bottle of Manahin.

"I can now do all of my work in the house, milk the cows, take care of the milk, and so forth. I think Peruna is a most wonderful medicine.

"I believe I would be in bed to-day if I had not written to you for advice. I had taken all kinds of medicine, but none did me any good.

"Peruna has made me a well and happy girl. I can never say too much for Peruna."

Not only women of rank and leisure praise Peruna, but the wholesome, useful women engaged in honest toil would not be without Dr. Hartman's world renowned remedy.

The Doctor has prescribed it for many thousand women every year and he never fails to receive a multitude of letters like the above, thanking him for his advice, and especially for the wonderful benefits received from Peruna.

YOU CANNOT

CURE

all inflamed, ulcerated and catarrhal conditions of the mucous membrane such as nasal catarrh, uterine catarrh caused by feminine ills, sore throat, sore mouth or inflamed eyes by simply dosing the stomach.

But you surely can cure these stubborn affections by local treatment with

Paxtine Toilet Antiseptic

which destroys the disease germs, checks discharges, stops pain, and heals the inflammation and soreness.

Paxtine represents the most successful local treatment for feminine ills ever produced. Thousands of women testify to this fact. 50 cents at druggists.

Send for Free Trial Box

THE R. PAXTON CO., Boston, Mass.

WINTER Wheat, 60 Bushels per acre. Catalogue and samples free. Salzer Seed Co., Box A. C., La Crosse, Wis.

Am. 30, 1906.

If afflicted with weak eyes, use Thompson's Eye Water

Wintersmith's CHILL TONIC

A BOTTLE WILL BREAK YOUR CHILLS

CURES CHILLS
AND ALL MALARIAL FEVERS.

Has been a standard household remedy for over 40 years. Pleasant to take; leaves no bad effects like quinine; harmless for children. Guaranteed by all druggists. Put up in 50c and $1 bottles. Sent express paid on receipt of price, if not on sale at the home drug store. Address

ARTHUR PETER & CO., General Agents. Louisville, Ky.

CENTRAL COLLEGE

TUSCALOOSA, ALABAMA

Number of pupils limited. Healthful locality. President with family in same building. Personal attention. Expenses reasonable.

DEPARTMENTS

Music, Piano, J. P. Ludebuhl, of Berlin Conservatory, director.
Voice, Miss Desha, College of Music, Cincinnati.
Stringed instruments, Miss Carter, Conservatory, Kansas City.
English, Miss Brown, Harvard, and Emerson School of Expression.
Mathematics, Miss Bullock, University of Alabama.
Latin, Mrs. Donoho, fifteen years a successful Teacher.
Modern Language, Miss Robinson, Leipsig, Germany.
Art, Miss Shelton, University of Va., and New York Art School.

Expenses, $210.00 pays for board, fuel, lights, laundry, physical culture, sight singing, books, physician's attendance, uniform, incidental fee, and tuition in Literary Department.

The above with piano or voice, with practice one hour per day, $260. With violin, mandolin or guitar, $290. With art $320.

Reputation for thoroughness and faithfulness. Religious influences positive.

Write for catalogue to Miss Amelia Dershide.

B. F. GILES, -:- -:- -:- -:- PRESIDENT.

Birmingham Seminary,

BIRMINGHAM, ALA.

IDEAL SCHOOL FOR GIRLS AND YOUNG LADIES.

Limited number boarding pupils. Unexcelled city advantages. Refined, christian home life. High standards, superior faculty. For catalogue and further information address

MISS LOULIE COMPTON, 1721 Fifth Avenue, Birmingham, Ala.

You Look Prematurely Old

Stylish Clothing For Young Men.

Make up your mind to have the best suit possible this season, it must be smart, the very latest weave and color. You can have all these things if you get an I. & S. Bing Suit.

Latest Ideas in Furnishings

Our line for spring wear is now complete, the styles are decided and we are showing absolutely correct styles. New Dress Goods, New Waist Goods, New Hats, New Shirts, New Neckwear.

Spring Models in Footwear

See our new line of Star Brand Oxfords for men, women and children. Our stock is complete and the prices are right. Let us show you the goods.

J. C. JONES,

Clanton, - - Alabama.

Wouldn't You Like

BETTER WHISKIES FOR LESS MONEY?

than the kind youvl been getting? Then send your orders to us

THE BIG MAIL ORDER HOUSE

The house that sells nothing but the purest goods and guarantees every article it sells. If it's drugs or whiskies you want

WE CUT THE PRICE.

	Our Price.	Regular Price
Shehan's Canada Malt Whiskey	75	1 00
Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey	75	1 00
Weller's Pure Malt Whiskey	75	1 00
Mason's Old Kentucky Rye	50	75
Dan Patch Virginia Rye	60	1 00
Private Stock Virginia Rye	65	1 00
J. Martin's Five-year-old Virginia Rye	75	1 00
Asa Holt Rye Whiskey	75	1 00
Old Style Country Club Rye Whiskey	85	1 25
Richmond Club Virginia Rye	1 00	1 50
Stewart's Old Virginia Rye	1 25	2 00
Paul Jones Four Star Rye	84	1 50
Murray Hill Club	1 00	1 50
Hunter's Baltimore Rye	1 00	1 50
Golden Cream Rye	1 00	1 50
I. W. Harper Rye	1 00	1 50
Wilson Whiskey	85	1 50
J. M. Atherton bottled in bond	1 00	1 50
Mammoth Cave bottled in bond	1 25	1 75
Old Jordon bottled in bond	1 50	2 00
Green River, the whiskey without a headache	1 00	1 25
Old Shades Mountain Corn	50	75
Old Mountain Due Corn	75	1 00
Old Lincoln County	65	1 00
Old Holland Gin	50	75
Old Crown Gin	75	1 00
Old Peach or Apple Brandy	50	75
California Sherry or Port	50	75

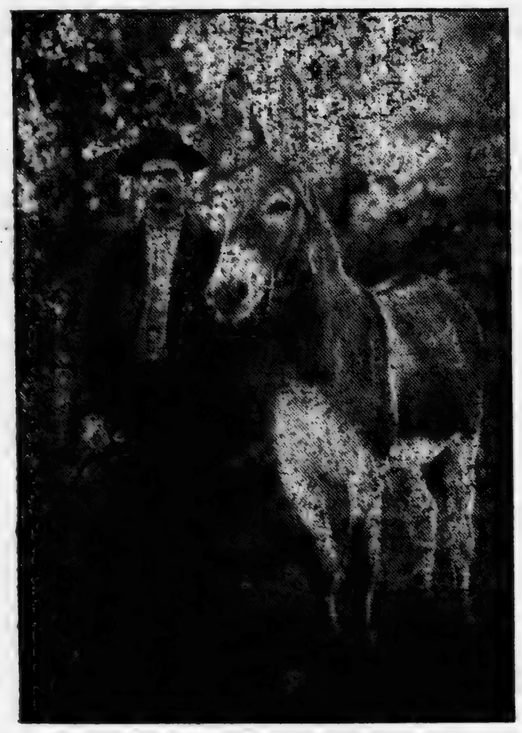
Mellow Old Liquors and Wines by the Gallon in Jugs.

	Per Gallon		Per Gallon
Old Sand Mountain Corn	$2.00	Old Mason's Pure Rye	$2.00
Old Mountain Due	3.00	Private Stock Virginia Rye	2.50
Old Tennessee	2.00	J. Martin's 5-year-old Va. Rye	3.00
Old Holland Gin	2.00	Old Style Country Club	3.40
Old Crown Gin	3.00	Old Lincoln County	2.50
Old Peach or Apple Brandy	2.00	Richmond Club Virginia Rye	4.00
Old California Port or Sherry	1.50	R. A. Stuart's Old Va. Rye	5.00

COLLIER DRUG COMPANY,

The Big Cut Rate Drug Store

2012 FIRST AVENUE, BIRMINGHAM, ALABAMA.



Imported Jack "LIJE"

Fee $8.00, Insured

Stands for service at his owners', JOHN THAMES, ½ mile East of Rocky Mount Church, Beat 1.

ABOUT REGISTERING.

Extracts from the general election law of Alabama:

Section 2. The following persons shall be disqualified both from registering and voting: All idiots and insane persons; those who were by reason of conviction of crime disqualified from voting at the time of the ratification of the constitution on November 28, 1901; those who have been since November 28, 1901, or who shall be convicted of treason, murder, arson, embezzlement, malfeasance in office, larceny, receiving stolen property, obtaining money under false pretenses, perjury, subornation of perjury, robbery, assault with intent to rob, burglary, forgery, bribery, assault and battery on wife, bigamy, living in adultery, sodomy, incest, rape, miscegenation, crime against nature, or any crime punishable by imprisonment in penitentiary, or for anw infamous crimes or crime involving moral turpitude; also any person who has been since November 28, 1901, or who shall be convicted as a vagrant or tramp, or of selling or offering to sell his vote or the vote of another, or of making or offering to make false returns in any election by the people or in any primary election to procure the nomination or election of any person to any office, or of suborning any witness or registrar to secure the registration of any person as an elector, provided that any person who is disqualified from voting by reason of conviction of any of the offenses mentioned in this section, except treason, whether the conviction was had in a State or Federal court, has been pardoned, may be restored to his citizenship with right to vote by the Governor, approved by the Board of Pardons and specially expressed in the pardon.

Sec. 7 1-2. The following persons and no others, who, if their place of residence shall remain unchanged, will have, at the date of the next general election the qualifications as to residence prescribed by section 1 of this act, shall be qualified to register as electors, provided they shall not be disqualified under section 2 of this act:

1st. Those who can read and write any article of the constitution of the United States in the English language, and who are physically unable to work; and those who can read and write any article of the constitution of the United States in the English language, and who have worked or been regularly engaged in some lawful employment, business or occupation, trade or calling for the greater part of the twelve months next preceding the time they offer to register, and those who are unable to read and write, is such inability is due solely to physical disability; or,

2nd. The owner in good faith in his own right, or the husband of a woman who is the owner in good faith in her own right, of forty acres of land situate in this State, upon which they reside; or the owner in good faith in his own right, or the husband of any woman who is the owner in good faith in her own right, of real estate situate in this State, assessed for taxation at the value of three hundred dollars or more or the owner in good faith, in his own right, or the husband of a woman who is the owner in good faith, in her own right, of personal property in this State assessed for taxation for three hundred dollars or more; provided, that the taxes due upon such real or personal property for the year next preceding the year in which he offers to register shall have been paid, unless the assessment shall have been legally contested and and undetermined.

Sec. 15. Any elector who registered prior to January 1, 1903, who has changed the county of his residence shall be registered on application on production of his certificate, unless he has since become disqualified.

Sec. 16. When the certificate of any elector who was duly registered has been lost, mutilated or destroyed, on application stating that the certificate has been lost, mutilated or destroyed and verified by affidavit, and it appears of record that such applicant has been registered, the Judge of Probate of the county of registration or the Secretary of State shall issue to the applicant a certificate that he was duly registered as an elector. Such certificate shall be issued free of charge to the elector. The Secretary of State shall, at the expense of the State furnish the Judge of Probate blank certificates for use as provided in this section.

The certificate of the registrars or the Judge of Probate or of the Secretary of State shall be sufficient to establish the fact of such registration.

* * * * * * * * * *

Be sure and register when the registrars are in your beat, as the only excuse for not doing so is by reason of sickness of yourself or in your family, or by absence from the county. Everybody can register this summer who will be qualified by residence or age by the 8th day of November. Poll tax paying has nothing to do with registration; you can register now and pay your poll tax afterwards, but you cannot vote unless you are both registered and have paid your poll tax (if any is due). The period of residence necessary to register is two years in the State, one year in the county and three months in the beat. If you have moved from one beat to another in the county less than three months before election day, you can vote in your old beat, so you don't lose your vote by changing beats. Any one who desires to [illegible] should take with him his last assessment sheet and tax collector's receipt to show to the registrars as proof that you are possessed of such property and pay taxes on it. You can register under ANY of the following heads:

1. If you own forty acres or more land in this State, and reside upon it.
2. If your wife owns forty acres or more land in this State, upon which you reside.
3. If you own real estate in this State that is assessed for taxation at $300 or more.
4. If your wife owns real estate in this State assessed for taxation at $300 or more.
5. If you own personal property in this State assessed for taxation for $300 or more.
6. If your wife owns personal property in this State assessed for taxation for $300 or more.
7. If you can read and write any section of the constitution of the United States.

Don't give up your life certificate that you got in 1902; you only have to show it to the registrars in case you have moved to this county from some other county.

THE UNION will furnish any one information on any special points that they may be in doubt upon, and stands ready to help any one to get all the rights he is entitled to under the laws of Alabama. If you think you are entitled to register and the registrars should refuse you, take a couple of good men with you so you can have witnesses as to such refusal and the reasons given by the registrars, and thereby be enabled to take your case upto high authority. tf

REGISTRATION NOTICE.

In accordance with the provisions of section 6 of an act "To further regulate elections in the State of Alabama," aproved October 6, 1903, the Board of Registrars of the county of Chilton, Alabama, do hereby give notice that the following appointments are set for the purpose of registering those qualified under the law to register as electors:

Beat No. 8, at Pletcher, on July 27 and 28, 1906.

Beat No. 6, at Harris' store, on July 30, 1906.

Beat No. 6, at Kincheon, on July 31, 1906.

Beat No. 10, at Cooper, on August 1 and 2, 1906.

Beat No. 5, at Verbena, on August 3, 1906.

Beat No. 5, at Soldiers' Home, on August 4, 1906.

Beat No. 4, at Clanton, on August 6, 7 and 8, 1906.

Beat No. 4, at Clanton, on Aug. 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 1906, for the purpose of purging the registration list.

Beat No. 4, at Clanton, on Aug. 27, 28, 29, 30, 31 and Sept. 1, 1906, for the purpose of considering the case of each elector whose name it is proposed to strike from the registration list and determine same.

Beat No. 4, at Clanton, on Sept. 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 1906, for the purpose of registering voters.

Beat No. 4, at Clanton, on Friday and Saturday before the election in November, 1906.

R. H. GAINES,
B. L. JONES,
P. M. MOORE,
Board of Registrars Chilton County.
tf

WATSON'S MAGAZINE.

The leading exponent of Jeffersonian Democracy, edited by Hon. Thos. E. Watson, of Georgia, theFather of Rural Free Delivery; author of "The Story of France," "Life of Napoleon," "Life and Times of Thomas Jefferson," "Bethany" and other books. Mr. Watson was the People's party nominee for Vice-President in 1896, and for President in 1904. He is today heading a middle-class reform movement which is bound to sweep the country in a short time.

Watson's Magazine is not a Socialist publication. It does not stand for collective ownership of all the means of production. Mr. Watson believes in public or government ownership of railroads, telegraphs and telephones; in municipal ownership of street railways, gas electric lights, water works, etc.; and he believes in private ownership of all industries not natural monopolies.

The middle class—the home owners, farmers, small business men and property owners—won Jefferson's victory in 1800; won Jackson's victory over Nick Biddle's money power in 1832; won Lincoln's victory in 1860. But each time after the flush of victory had died away they became careless of their rights and went to sleep. They have slept a good portion of the time since 1865, but—

Watson's Magazine is waking them up. Another great victory is in the air. Keep in touch with the movement.

Fifteen cents a copy at news stands; $1.50 a year by mail. Sample copy for four 2-cent stamps and four names of reading friends. Address,

TOM WATSON'S MAGAZINE,
121 West Forty-second Street,
New York City.

SPECIAL CLUBBING RATE.

WATSON'S MAGAZINE AND THE UNION A YEAR FOR ONLY $1.75. WHY NOT SAVE THE 75 CENTS? LEAVE ORDERS AT THIS OFFICE. tf

I've got my 'pinion ev any nigguh what's too triflin' ter pick up grand

Thorsby, Alabam

Business Directory.

Commercial Club
OF THORSBY
DEFINITE and RELIABLE information furnished to parties who desire to locate in the South.

A. HORN
LICENSED PHARMACIST.
Drugs, Stationery and Toilet Articles.

City Bakery
BREAD, CAKES and PIES
of all kinds, fresh every day.
K. A. EKBLAD

A. M. Johnson
Groceries and Delicatessen

E. H. Adams
General Merchandise.

J. R. PARNELL
General Merchandise.

J. L. FOSS
Meat Market.

Thorsby Winery Co.
Lofthus & Brunberg, Props.

Thorsby Real Estate
(INCORPORATED)
J. M. BARRETT, Pres.
G. H. GERALD, Sec.
G. C. MICHELSON, Treas.

OLAF SCHI
Watchmaker & Jewele
FRANZEN, BUILD
Full line of watches etc. Repair work guara

A. Langville &
Blacksmith and Horseshoer
—DEALER IN—
WAGONS AND BUGG

P. C. SMIT
Brown Leghorn Fowls
Eggs.
BERKSHIRE PI

The Thorsby
G. C. Michelson, P
Good Beds and Mea

J. J. Stanle
General Merchand

MRS. MARY R. RASB
General Merchandi

J. BICE
Charcoal Ovens

Cor. 2nd Ave and 7th St.

THE BIG STORE,

—Is at The Head of The Procession.—

Dry Goods, Clothing, Hats, Sho
FURNITURE,
COFFINS AND BURIAL NECESSITIES
W. I. MULLINS,

Clanton. Alaba

Earth's Age Now Put at Over 100,000,000 Years

By Charles Rollin Keyes.

THE best geological estimates of the age of our [illegible] close agreement. From the time when the [illegible] stratified rocks begin to the present, the [illegible] thing over 100,000,000 years. While some of [illegible] vary considerably both above and below the [illegible] tioned, the general results are not materially [illegible]

A generation ago, calculations of the earth's [illegible] for the most part, vary much less than one-half of the given above. Dana, for instance, computed the [illegible] Paleozoic time at about 30,000,000 years; of Mesozoic time, 9,000,000; of Cenozoic time, 3,000,000 years, making in all 48,000,000 years.

Recently, however, there has been found beneath the vast [illegible] quence an assemblage of rocks of enormous extent. All geologists [illegible] agreed in placing the time equivalent of these pre-Cambrian clastics [illegible] at least, to the entire time that has elapsed since the beginning of the [illegible] ozoic era. Taking into consideration this fact, even Dana's estimate [illegible] doubled, and reaches very nearly the 100,000,000 mark.

Biologists tell us that at the beginning of Paleozoic time life in [illegible] was already nine-tenths differentiated. There must have been a period [illegible] prior to this during which organic forms flourished, and during which [illegible] ments were laid down, that was very, very long. This early period, [illegible] was not ten times as long as from Cambrian times to the present, as [illegible] ures cited might suggest, but it certainly was at least two or three times [illegible] long.

From all these different sources one can arrive at a comparative [illegible] If we consider the ratios, we get for Archeozoic time 23, for Proterozoic [illegible] 38, Paleozoic time 28, Mesozoic time 8, Cenozoic time 3, and we obtain [illegible] total number of years something like 150,000,000.—American Monthly [illegible] of Reviews.

Ice Lawyers Are Free.

Toledo, O.—The circuit court has reversed Judge Kinkaid in the contempt proceedings against Attorneys Tracey, Brown and Smith, who represented the ice trust and who were sentenced to jail by the common pleas court. The lawyers were dismissed.

If the baby lets the family get in a little sleep between 3 a. m. and breakfast its mother will tell how good it is.

Princess Chimay Not Dead.

Paris.—The announcement [illegible] ed in London and New York [illegible] Princess Chimay, formerly Clara [illegible] of Detroit, is dead, is erroneous. [illegible] report was founded in the death [illegible] of Princess Pierre Caraman [illegible] wife of the Belgian minister to [illegible] borg.

Mouty few Christians 'ul [illegible] hebben of t'ewn't fer dat [illegible] ment ur sweet milk and

T

VOL. IV.

ATTENTION!

[illegible] annual meeting of the [illegible]ers Mutual Insurance [illegible]ciation of Alabama (Chil[illegible] County Branch) will be [illegible] at the court house in [illegible]on at 10 a. m. on Satur[illegible] Aug. 4, 1906. A full [illegible]dance of Directors and [illegible]bers is requested.

W. M. WILSON,
President.

VERBENA.

[illegible]tor:

I come again. I've stood it long as I can. I feel like the were missing a great treat not hearing from an interest[illegible]mmunity as this is, and one [illegible]ith as able a writer as myself. [illegible] my crop about laid by, so I'll [illegible]u the news. Politics is warm[illegible]just a little. We can't help but little sick sometimes when we [illegible]e of those sympathetic (?) let[illegible] Sam Adams. He is so sorry poor Pops and Republicans, [illegible]ow he says we are disfranchised as State matters are concern[illegible] he would have us believe that [illegible]ould elect him to office we [illegible]e a happy people. Yes, he [illegible]t he is getting constant letters [illegible]en who opposed him hereto[illegible]d that they say he is entitled [illegible]ffice he seeks as a matter of [illegible] Well, I suppose they mean it [illegible]e justice to let him draw this [illegible]n place of the one they stole [illegible]m a few years ago. Now, [illegible] Pops and Republicans, don't [illegible]o no such nonsense as that. [illegible]t the Democracy think by let[illegible]ams run it will cause some [illegible] vote the Democratic ticket. [illegible]d that here two years ago, but [illegible]ey find out that the better ele[illegible] the Democratic party will not [illegible] him he'll just come down and [illegible]s going West for his health. [illegible] not help but fe[illegible] a little sick[illegible]w down, when I saw that the [illegible]pton Mullins endorsed his can[illegible] and I thought back, how Bro. [illegible]pictured him (Mullins) a few [illegible]nce "voting negroes right here [illegible]own of Clanton to defeat the [illegible]of the people." Bro. Adams [illegible]d the question, "If these Dem[illegible]defeated the people in 1892, [illegible]e people had 50,000 majority, [illegible]n they hope for now?" I would [illegible]ro. Adams that if this 50,000 had a lot of leaders that val[illegible]dollar more than they did prin[illegible] would not have been that [illegible]ow, brother Pops and Reps, it [illegible]tter who you are nor where [illegible]n our county, let's rally round [illegible]p-fires and show to Sam [illegible]nd the Democrats who stole [illegible]es when he had 50,000 major[illegible] we never turn our backs on [illegible]y and bend our knees to no [illegible] the All-wise God. Well, Mr. [illegible]'d like to have forgotten to [illegible] about our cotton association. [illegible]ting on a boom at Enterprise. [illegible] there the other day, and ex[illegible]t F. A. Gulledge was there [illegible]While your scribe did not hear [illegible]got it from a Democrat (one [illegible]Gulledge's ardent supporters). [illegible]t be pure and undefiled. He [illegible]) said in part as to stock [illegible]ybody knew it would have to [illegible] by a majority of the legal [illegible]hat it directly concerned. [illegible]mit that is so the way the law [illegible] but Mr. Gulledge knows, and [illegible]y else, that when the Legis[illegible]eets that it can repeal and [illegible]ery law that is on the statute [illegible] Alabama, unless it is some [illegible]eluvian moss-back that thinks [illegible]e thought 100 years ago and [illegible]s the longer he lives, and it [illegible] such a character in Chilton [illegible] man of Gulledge's standing [illegible] have more probity than to [illegible]m think that a stock law [illegible]y be got by a majority of the [illegible]ncerned. Mr. Gulledge also [illegible]he had made what he had off [illegible]rmers; that he had sold to [illegible] big price, but was able to [illegible] now at a less per cent. Now, [illegible] a matter of business, Mr. [illegible] and all other money kings [illegible] to loan their money (If they [illegible] all) cheaper than they did [illegible] beloved orb (the Democratic [illegible]ed this government. To il[illegible], if you will go to the court [illegible] examine the records, you [illegible]that where certain men had [illegible] mortgages recorded a few [illegible] now they have only about [illegible]es, a man could loan money [illegible] at from 12 1-2 to 24 per [illegible]they did do it, but now they [illegible]to loan it at from 8 to 10 [illegible]So now, when Mr. Gulledge [illegible]troduce you to your first [illegible](Democratic party) just tell [illegible]nd rather live a widow than [illegible] such a gang and have to [illegible]ages and pay big interest [illegible]erve to death. But after

Dear E
We Chapel interest
of the bring take c if

Mr. Ed
I wi county
Sheriff, now if Fifts i game heaven

Editor
Plea
nable health good.
ful.
It is pan of ing a c
as we has s be wi
in J. week's Felix body guess
Well. put up we ho and t from have talk o
West
guess teleph you w beauty
Union
all.

Editor
Far throug rain.
tended Pleas was s there carrie to ge
Oh. I mothe things darlin less p said t
the d spect worke
the L

Alabam
Directory.
Thorsby Real Estate
(INCORPORATED)
J. M. BARRETT, Pres.
G. H. GERALD, Sec.
G. C. MICHELSON, Treas.
OLAF SCHIV
Watchmaker & Jeweler
FRANZEN, BUILDI
Full line of watches je
etc. Repair work guarant
A. Langville & S
Blacksmith and
Horseshoer
—DEALER IN—
VAGONS AND BUGG
P. C. SMITH
Brown Leghorn Fowls
Eggs.
ERKSHIRE PI
The Thorsby
G. C. Michelson, Pr
Good Beds and Meals
J. J. Stanle
General Merchandi
MRS. MARY R. RASBE
General Merchandise
J. BICE
Charcoal Ovens
STORE,
g, Hats, Shoe
TURE, LLINS,
Alabam
Now Put at 000 Years
lin Keyes.
Princess Chimay Not Dead.
ris.—The announcement n London and New York that cess Chimay, formerly Clara
Detroit, is dead, is erroneous.
rt was founded in the death
Princess Pierre Caraman C of the Belgian minister to y.
outy few Christians 'nd
een, of tawn't fer dat
t uv sweet milk

THE UNION.

EQUAL RIGHTS TO ALL; SPECIAL FAVORS TO NONE.

VOL IV. CLANTON, ALA., AUGUST 2 1906 NO. 19

ATTENTION!

The annual meeting of the ers Mutual Insurance ciation of Alabama (Chil- County Branch) will be at the court house in on at 10 a. m. on Satur- Aug. 4, 1906. A full dance of Directors and bers is requested.

W. M. WILSON, President.

VERBENA.

[illegible] I've stood it [illegible] I feel like the [illegible] a great treat [illegible] from an interest- [illegible] this is, and one [illegible] writer as myself. [illegible] about laid by, so I'll [illegible] Politics is warm- [illegible] We can't help but [illegible] sometimes when we [illegible] sympathetic (?) let- [illegible] He is so sorry [illegible] Pops and Republicans. [illegible] we are disfranchised [illegible] letters are concern- [illegible] us believe that [illegible] him to office we [illegible] people. Yes, he [illegible] constant letters [illegible] opposed him hereto- [illegible] they say he is entitled [illegible] he seeks as a matter of [illegible] Well I suppose they mean it [illegible] to let him draw this [illegible] of the one they stole [illegible] a few years ago. Now, [illegible] Pops and Republicans, don't [illegible] such nonsense as that. [illegible] the Democracy think by let- [illegible] him it will cause some [illegible] the Democratic ticket. [illegible] that here two years ago, but [illegible] find out that the better ele- [illegible] the Democratic party will not [illegible] him he'll just come down and [illegible] going West for his health. [illegible] not help but feel a little sick [illegible] down, when I saw that the [illegible] Mullins endorsed his can- [illegible] and I thought back, how Bro. [illegible] told him (Mullins) a few [illegible] voting negroes right here [illegible] town of Clanton to defeat the [illegible] of the people." Bro. Adams [illegible] the question. "If these Dem- [illegible] defeated the people in 1892, [illegible] people had 50,000 majority. [illegible] they hope for now?" I would [illegible] Bro. Adams that if this 50,000 [illegible] had a few of leaders that val- [illegible] dollar more than they did prin- [illegible] would not have been that [illegible] another Pops and Reps, it [illegible] matter who you are nor where [illegible] in our county, let's rally round [illegible] banners and show to Sam [illegible] and the Democrats who stole [illegible] us when he had 50,000 major- [illegible] turn our backs on [illegible] and bend our knees to no [illegible] the Allwise God. Well, Mr. [illegible] like to have forgotten to [illegible] about our cotton association. [illegible] a boom at Enterprise. [illegible] the other day, and ex- [illegible] A. Gulledge was there [illegible] scribe did not hear [illegible] from a Democrat (one [illegible] dent supporters), [illegible] and undefiled. He [illegible] say in part as to stock [illegible] it would have to [illegible] a majority of the legal [illegible] directly concerned. [illegible] so the way the law [illegible] Gulledge knows, and [illegible] when the Legis- [illegible] can repeal and [illegible] is on the statute [illegible] unless it is some [illegible] back that thinks [illegible] years ago and [illegible] he lives, and it [illegible] Gulledge's standing [illegible] probity than to [illegible] a stock law [illegible] a majority of the [illegible] Mr. Gulledge also [illegible] what he had off [illegible] he had sold to [illegible] was able to [illegible] per cent. Now, [illegible] business. Mr. [illegible] money kings [illegible] money (if they [illegible] than they did [illegible] the Democratic [illegible] ment. To il- [illegible] go to the court [illegible] records, you [illegible] certain men had [illegible] recorded a few [illegible] have only about [illegible] could loan money [illegible] at from 12 1-2 to 24 per [illegible] they did do it, but now they [illegible] to loan it at from 8 to 10 [illegible] So now, when Mr. Gulledge [illegible] introduces [illegible] you to your first [illegible] Democratic party) just tell [illegible] had rather live a widow than [illegible] such a gang and have to [illegible] mortgages and pay big interest [illegible] starve to death. But after all Mr. Gulledge paid Mr. Middleton a fine tribute. He said he was a nice young man, but didn't know anything about farming and had never given the farmers any advice (which is cheap), but he (Gulledge) had. Well, to be sure he has certainly cut a shine for the last two years advising the farmers, but we thought it was all free. We didn't think when he was advising us how bad it was to have a catalogue of Sears & Roebuck or Montgomery, Ward & Co. in our houses, it was better you know to patronize our home industries. We didn't think when Bro. Gulledge was advising us to hold our cotton for 10 cents and went so far as to say that all of us that belonged to the S. C. A. and didn't obey its laws, that we wouldn't obey the laws of our country if it wasn't for bringing them to justice by the officers. Now, brother, didn't the S. C. A. say we must have 10 cents for our cotton, and you advised that and wanted to loan money to the small farmers to that effect, and in the same time sold yours for 8 cents? I only ask this for information, you know. Well, Mr. Editor, we had an old-fashioned barbecue and dance at Tyus (just across the line from Chilton) on the 27th, and Bro. Gulledge was there sure, and seeing a great many of Chilton's worthy voters, he wanted to introduce them to their first love (the D. P.), and after vainly endeavoring to get the crowd to follow him to the school house (about 150 yards distant) he and some of his friends decided to take the platform that belonged to the dancers, but Bud Lewis stepped up and said, "You will have to whip me before you can take this platform," and so the courtship was broken off, and consequently there will be no marriage to the Democratic party in Beats 5 and 10. Now, Mr. Editor, in conclusion, let me admonish every Populist and Republican and white man that opposes Democratic ring rule, to turn out to our primary on August 6 and vote for the man of his choice. We have several candidates for the different offices, all good men, but we can't give them all an office this time.

VERBENA KID.

Collins' Chapel, July 30, 1906.

Dear Editor:

We aim to have a great day at the Chapel Institute on August 18 in the interest of the F. E. & C. U. of A. All of the unions are asked to come and bring their baskets and help us to take care of the people. Yours,

tf J. D. COLLINS.

BEAT NINE.

Mr. Editor:

I wish to tell the people of this county how it is going up here for Sheriff. The way everything stands now it is for Fitts and Gentry, with Fitts in the lead. Hayes and Goodgame men are as scarce as sinners in heaven. Yours for the ticket.

POPULIST.

MACEDONIA.

Editor Union:

Please allow me space in your valuable paper to say a few words. The health of this community is fairly good. Rain and politicians are plentiful. I hear some of the women saying it is real dangerous to throw out a pan of hot dish water for fear of scalding a candidate. Hurrah for Mr. Bates as we notice in his announcement he has skipped the primary. We hope he will hit in November. We notice in J. D. Glasscock's letter in last week's issue where he said to know Felix J. Fitts is to love him. Everybody around here knows him, and I guess from that everybody loves him. Well, there is a telephone line being put up through this community, which we hope will prove beneficial to all, and there is talk of a line to come from Maplesville up to this line and have a switchboard, and there is also talk of another line coming from out West Chilton up to this line. So I guess we will be well blessed with telephones and the good Union. If you would know of it, some more of beauty, health and useful lore. The Union, we must admit, will tell you all. Subscribe for it.

POSSUM HUNTER.

BEAT NINE.

Editor Union:

Farmers in this section are about through work on account of so much rain. Some of our young people attended the singers' convention at Pleasant Grove Sunday, and say there was some whisky there, and I guess there would be some if the one that carried it knew that he would not live to get there he would start with it. Oh, boys, won't you, for your dear mother and sisters' sakes, quit such things. Mother don't want to see her darling son going down to the bottomless pit; neither does sister. Oh, how sad to think of our boys going on in the darkness of sin, showing no respect to the ones who have toiled and worked to raise them up in the way of the Lord. Drinking is not all that the young men of our community are guilty of. They do a lot of other things just as bad, but I hope to see the day when all such things are done away with. Now, I hope you all will not get offended with me for what I have said. Mrs. Arnold Riggins, who has been visiting friends and relatives in Beat 9, has returned to her home in Birmingham, accompanied by her sisters, the Misses Perdita and Callie Elland. Fonzie Roberson, of Talladega, is visiting his brother. Mrs. Julissa Foshee spent the latter part of last week in Beat 9. Misses Elizabeth and Alva Mims were the guests of the Misses Elland Sunday. Say, what's the matter with "Little J.," "One Forsaken," "One Alone," "It's Just Me" and a whole lot of others? I like to hear all the news.

NOBODY'S PET.

PLEASANT GROVE.

The members composing the Chilton County Singing Convention met with Pleasant Grove Church Saturday, July 28, 1906, in the second annual session, at 10:15 a. m. Devotional exercises conducted by J. H. Thomas.

10:30. Welcome address by J. H. Thomas, to which J. W. Billingsley responded in his pleasant way. Next on the program was the "Methods of Teaching Primary Pupils in the Singing School," which was discussed by James Franklin and J. B. Northcutt. "Ways to Improve Music in the Sunday School" was ably discussed by Prof. M. C. Crumpton and W. J. Calloway. "Music, Its Influence for Good," was ably spoke to by J. H. Thomas. No. 47 in Songs of Triumph was sung, led by James Franklin. Then adjourned for dinner, which was bountifully spread and enjoyed by all present, about 500 in number.

At 1:30 p. m. the convention was called to order by the president. Then a song service of forty-five minutes led by J. L. Gore, J. C. Veazey, James Franklin, J. B. Northcutt and J. W. Billingsley. At 2:15 election of officers, etc. Will say the day was well spent and enjoyed by all present.

Sunday morning the convention met promptly at 10 a. m. Devotional exercises conducted by W. J. Calloway. The remainder of the day was spent in singing except from 12 until 1, during which time the good ladies of this place spread as nice and as bountiful a dinner as the eyes of the writer has ever beheld. We can't help thanking the young people for their good behavior during the day, especially at the table and in the house. (But an intelligent people will observe good order at any and all times.) The music of the day was something I cannot describe, but will say that I never witnessed as good singing in all my life. We thank and praise Almighty God for sparing our life to attend this meeting, for when such music as was made there is heard our whole being is moved, the physical world disappears, the eyes of the soul open, we bow the head and bend the knee and our thoughts, disengaged from matter, soar to the eternal regions of the good, the true and the beautiful. Music is love. It came from God. It will be the language of the great beyond when He shall have called us home. The music of the day was led by J. L. Gore, J. W. Billingsley, C. L. Glasscock, J. C. Veazey, James Franklin and M. C. Crumpton; Miss Mattie Patton, Miss Gena Collins, Miss Ellen Thomas and Prof. J. D. C. Scott as organists. The following resolution was offered and adopted:

Resolved, That the thanks of this convention be tendered the good people of Pleasant Grove Church and community for the cordial way in which we have been entertained during our stay with them. We will ever remember them in our prayers.

Respectfully,

J. W. BILLINGSLEY,
W. T. BEAN,
T. J. LITTLEJOHN,
Committee.

The next annual session will be held with Macedonia Church, five miles east of Randolph, some time in July, 1907. To the members of the convention: Let's strive to make this meeting better than the one just closed, if possible. Yours truly,

JAMES FRANKLIN,
Secretary C. C. S. C.

P. S.—This is only a brief sketch, as the full details would be too lengthy.

J. F.

BEAT TWO.

Editor Union:

We've had plenty of rain. Crops are extra good; watermelons, fruit and vegetables are plentiful. Charlie Robinson and family, of Thorsby, were pleasant visitors with us last Sunday. When it comes to politics here, each and every one is for F. J. Fitts. We're not troubled with any Democrats in this community. Health here is good. As this is my first letter to the dear old Union, I'll close for this time, with best wishes to The Union and its readers.

BEAT TWO.

Don't Forget

—THE—

PEOPLES PRIMARY

MONDAY, AUGUST 6th 1906.

Come out and vote for the man of your choice, and so have a voice in the selection of your county officers. We live in Chilton.

(Communicated.)

Choose a True Man.

In picking out a man to put into office as our Sheriff, it is important that we choose a firm true man. Not one who flies about from one party to the other, with every change of wind, or one under suspicion of playing into the hands of the democratic clique, nor one who so far neglects the duty of every true American as to be unable to vote with the party with which he claims to be in sympathy.

Bearing all these things in mind and wishing to do the best we can for the general welfare of our grand old county; we have chosen F. J. Fitts as the man who has always been loyal to the cause of the people. The man who did not hesitate to stand up in 1902 and brand the traitors to our people with their proper title. Again in 1904 this man was on hand working and voting for the people. And now in 1906 when we have an opportunity to reward his faithful service, we intend to vote for him on Monday, August 6th, and hope and trust that all true Republicans and Populists will do likewise. Boys be on your guard against any stories of any kind between now and Monday. Lies travel fast, though truth in the end prevails.

Yours for the right,
Populist and Republican
Admirers of Truth and Loyalty.

TO THE VOTERS OF CHILTON COUNTY.

I have received many letters from friends all over the county requesting me to make the race for representative on the People's ticket, and while I feel very grateful to these, my friends, for their confidence bestowed upon me, I will be compelled to decline making the race on account of my business affairs needing my personal attention. Mr. J. Osmond Middleton in an article a few days ago stated that if I made the race that he would not. I will not be in the race, and I hope that our citizens will turn out and give Mr. Middleton their support on August 6, 1906. I will attend the primary and aid in selecting a good ticket, but find it impossible for me to make the race. A gain thanking the many friends for this expression of confidence, I am very respectfully,

C. W. REYNOLDS.

WEST CHILTON.

Mr. Editor:

Health is good in this community, but we're having plenty of rain, too much so for our cotton, but General Green is looking fine; late cotton is not doing much. Well, a few words to the Populist and Republican voters: Next Monday is our primary. Let us all get out and nominate our ticket, and in November show the demmies what we can do to them. Fitts and Middleton is all the talk around here. We had a revival meeting at Friendship Church the past week, and everybody seemed to enjoy the meeting. Best wishes to The Union and its readers.

LITTLE J.

MT. PLEASANT SCHOOL HOUSE.

We're having plenty of rain, and health in these parts is pretty good, except J. A. Duncan and Mrs. T. C. Sharbutt, who are sick, but we hope for their speedy recovery. Our Sunday school is doing splendidly. Rev. Doc Wells was to have preached here last Sunday, but failed to come, which caused much disappointment. We are going to have an all-day singing next Sunday, August 5. Everybody is invited, especially singers. All come and bring some one with you, also your basket and books, and we will spend an enjoyable day singing praises to our Father in heaven. We hope every one will respect themselves and their fellow men, so that their visit will be appreciated and all will want to have them visit us again. H. T. Littlejohn and wife were with us Sunday, and their visit was highly appreciated. Come again. Robert Littlejohn was here Sunday. He looked sad at first, but was soon all smiles. Our school is one of the best in the county under the management of Miss Bessie Ellis.

SNOODY.

CLANTON.

Editor Union:

A few words to the people: Gentlement, the primary comes off next Monday, and I hope you all will turn out and poll the largest vote in many years. The prospects are bright for the largest majority we've had since 1894. The Dems. won't stand any more chance than a bow-legged, knock-kneed, box-ankled, hump-backed, jimber-jawed, ring-tailed, one-eyed coon would at a beauty show. Now, let every man stand in his place, and as Moses said when he stretched the rod across the Red Sea, "Stand still and see the salvation of the Lord." Yours truly,

MOSES A. KILLGORE.

PROGRAM

For Meeting of Second District of Chilton County Association, to Be Held at Macedonia on the Fourth Sunday in August, 1906.

9 a. m. Devotional exercises—H. H. Armstrong.

9:30. "Explain the Present Practice of Pastors in the Service of Churches"—John Martin, Jackson Palmer.

10. "The Duty of Churches to the Pastor and Sunday School"—Rev. Beal, J. T. Williams.

11. "Can a Preacher Under Present Existing Circumstances Be a Good Pastor?"—W. H. Shaw, G. W. Gothard.

1 p. m. "How Is the Best Way for a Christian to Show His Love?"—W. J. Fleming, J. S. Wright.

1:45. "What Relation Ought to Exist Between the Pastor and Church?"—James Franklin, Clint Veazey.

2:30. "When Is the Best Time to Call a Pastor, and Does Not the Annual Call of a Pastor Cause Continual Confusion?"—P. G. Maness, M. C. Crumpton.

3:15. "Give the Best Method to Get Church Members to Attend Church and Sunday School"—T. U. Crumpton.

The speeches will be interspersed with singing by the choir and such leaders as may be present. We solicit delegates from every church in the Second district; also invite correspondence from First district and other associations in reach. Signed by the pastor and committee.

J. H. THOMAS,
J. W. ARMSTRONG,
tf M. C. CRUMPTON.

COLLINS' CHAPEL.

July 29, 1906.

Dear Editor:

I wish to correct through your paper some statements that have been circulated by F. A. Gulledge. I suppose he has been telling all over the county that I was for him for representative. Now, when you hear that you can give it the LIE. I am for Middleton STRAIGHT. Mr. Gulledge does not stand any better show up here than a one-legged man in a game of football. I told Mr. Gulledge that he would not get any support up here, for we were all Pops and Republicans. So if it is costing Mr. Gulledge anything to come to Beat 9 he had better stay away, for he will never get anything for his trouble. Now, you Pops and Republicans, come out on the 6th and let's show them how the thing will go in November. Yours truly,

J. D. COLLINS.

MAPLESVILLE.

Editor Union:

Please allow a little space in the dear old Union to say a few words for Mr. Lee Hayes, as I have just returned from an extensive trip in Mississippi. Mr. Hayes is the man for Sheriff, as he has been tried and found all sufficient and well qualified to fill the position. We learn that in the northern part of the county Mr. Hayes is the man, and I wish to say that I have known Mr. Hayes for many years and know him to be a worthy and upright citizen and a good neighbor, every ready to help to serve those in need or under difficulties. He is the man for the Sheriff's office. I have only to add further, that if we elect him, I can assure one and all that we will never have cause to regret it. Then let us see that we give Mr. Hayes an overwhelming majority the 6th of August.

HENRY FISHER.

Professional Cards.

William M. Adams,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW
OFFICE; Room 1, Court House.
"Practices in all Courts
Long time loans negotiated on improved Farm Lands.
CLANTON, - - - ALA.

J. EARLE GOWAN,
DENTIST.
Office in Kicker Building
CLANTON, ALABAMA.

A. C. Smith,
Attorney-at-Law
Practice in All Courts
Office 6th St. opp. Court House
CLANTON, :-: ALABAMA.

N. S. JOHNSON, M. D.
PHYSICIAN & SURGEON
Office at Residence
CLANTON, ALABAMA.

L. V. STABLER, M. D
Physician & Surgeon
Office Over Horn's Drug Store
Thorsby, Alabama

J. Osmond Middleton,
Attorney-at-Law
Practice in all Courts.
Office 6th St. Court House
CLANTON, :-: ALABAMA

DR. E. G. HYMAN
DENTIST
Office in Tipton Mullins' Building
CLANTON

H. C. Junkerman
DENTIST
OFFICE: Franzen Building
Thorsby, Alabama.

G. H. GERALD,
NOTARY PUBLIC
Office at Thorsby Inn.
Deeds, Mortgages, Affidavits and other papers carefully made out.
I. S. Gerald, Notary Public
AT THORSBY SAVINGS BANK.

FREE
to Readers of
THE UNION

To everyone who sends us $1.00 for a year's subscription to THE UNION, new subscriber or renewal, we will give as a premium absolutely FREE,

A Year's Subscription
To
The Southern Ruralist

We have examined the Southern Ruralist and consider it to be the best and most practical farm paper published in the South, and it just suits this locality. Drop by The Union Office when you are in town and see a copy of the Ruralist. It will mean dollars in your pocket to read this paper with The Union for a year. tf.

60 YEARS' EXPERIENCE
PATENTS
TRADE MARKS
DESIGNS
COPYRIGHTS &c.
Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. HANDBOOK on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents.
Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the Scientific American.
A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.
MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York
Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

LAND FOR SALE.
Eighty acres land in Beat 10, close to Cooper's. For sale cheap. Call on or address L. H. GENTRY,
Mt. Creek, Ala.
12 R. F. D. No. 5.

London's Under World.

The Human Wild Beasts That Prowl and Prey in the Jungle of London.

The London policeman is justly famous all over the world; he is regarded by foreigners as one of the finest and most imposing institutions of the British empire's metropolis, says the St. James Gazette. But what is it that has given our constables their celebrity? The picture that rises in the average man's mind, if he is asked for an explanation of the universal respect and appreciation accorded the London policeman, is Henley's aptly indicated scene in which one describes the rather sombre, burly figure of the police officer, mud-splashed but imperturbable, in the noisy centre of a maze of traffic. "With uplifted hand conducting the orchestral Strand."

Yet, it is largely upon this magnificent and never-questioned control of cabs and omnibuses, and also, of course, upon his grave judicial courtesy to flurried questioners that the fame of the London policeman is founded. If the London constable has earned a just fame upon the strength of his courtesy to pedestrians and his fine control of street traffic, how much more credit would be his if the public did but realize that these two characteristics of the force are no more than single facets of a many-sided usefulness, of an efficiency and thoroughness in vital matters, in view of which such details pale into complete insignificance!

The police control of London's enormous street traffic is fine and thorough; but the police control of those forces in the world of London which make for anarchy and dissolution is not less than marvelous; the police guardianship of London's colossal wealth; its maintenance of London's peace—these things, if you like, are worthy of the world's admiration and esteem. And these are matters with regard to the actualities of which the average man knows nothing. The ordinary citizen admits the general upshot of it all—not any too gratefully when he is a taxpayer—but appreciate the true wonder of it he cannot; because the process and the forces it contends with are almost entirely beyond his ken.

Consider for a moment a little simple comparison. The continent of Australia, with its half-dozen States, governors, legislatures, railway systems and the like, has an area of about three million square miles. The metropolitan area is well under seven hundred square miles. Australia's population is somewhat under four millions, and that of the metropolitan district nearly seven millions. In other words, Australia carries about one person to the square mile, and London carries about one hundred thousand to the same space. Thus it will be seen that there are a good many people to be looked after in London.

As for the wealth of London, that is not so easy of computation; it is fabulously great—greater than the wealth of many large countries. Its mere rateable value for police purposes, and without including its golden heart—the City—is about fifty millions sterling; but that is no more than a drop in the basin of London's prodigious wealth. Its administrative expenses are far greater than those of the whole of Denmark. There are fully one hundred thousand criminals in London, and a police force of some sixteen thousand men of all ranks stands between the hundred thousand predatory creatures and the six and a half million of unarmed working bees and gaudy drones, the misers, spendthrifts, idlers, women, children, invalids, crossing-sweepers, millionaires and the rest of the large preoccupied army of makers, dispensers, and accumulators of unreckonable wealth.

There are some sixteen thousand guardians of the peace in the metropolitan area. Sick leave, ordinary leave, special duty, and other matters account for a couple of thousand for actual duty. These are employed in eight-hour shifts, since even the London policeman must sleep and eat. Thus the maximum number of police on duty at any given moment is about four thousand seven hundred.

There are fully a hundred thousand of the recognizable predatory humans to engage the attention of the four and a half thousand of metropolitan police. There are, unfortunately, many hundreds of the permanently idle and generally hungry. The relation between hunger and nature's first and most undeniable law is terribly intimate.

The handful of men in blue patrol the huge and densely peopled jungle we call London, unarmed and unafraid. The hundred thousand human animals of prey prowl in and out beside the guardians, like wolves about a sheepfold, outnumbering the shepherds by twenty-five to one. The monstrous, pitiful battalion of the unemployed and unemployable stand about in a circle, wan, dull and motionless, yet forced always to consciousness by the war waged within them between the narcotic of despair and the irritant of hunger.

That is London. It is one of the most terrible, the most awe-inspiring, the most splendid, and the most tragic pictures that the world has to show. Literature and art have nothing to compare with it for poignancy of tragedy and romance, dignity and misery, splendor and pitifulness. It is London—the most amazing mass of contrasts in all Christendom, the most wonderful example in the world of the powers and the weaknesses, the blessings and the curses of modern civilization. It is London, and baffles him who would describe it as surely as it defeats the ambition of the man who seeks completely to master its manifold intricacies. But it is as well that those who live within its far-flung lines should learn to understand as much as they are able of its mysteries.

No other subject of study could be more fascinating, more rich in variety, and in the lore of men and women than London. The men who have studied the whole of its surface, its most obvious characteristics, are very, very few. In the nature of things, the vastness of the metropolis makes this inevitable. The strange thing is that the great bulk of London's respectable millions should know practically nothing whatever about the under structure of the living world they inhabit. They know a certain set of streets, a certain set of men and women of their own particular order, and a certain class of surface customs, rules, and characteristics of London life. It is as though they were content to believe that the soil of that part of England consisted of woodpavement and asphalt, and never realized that primeval clay lay beneath the well-ordered smoothness of the streets.

Just so primeval human nature—simple, savage, cunning, crude, and unmoral—lies beneath the surface of London society—beneath all the well-ordered smoothness of demeanor which characterizes the vast majority of respectable and preoccupied Londoners. A certain set of watchful authorities are keenly alive to this fact; the business of their lives is never to lose sight of it. They keep the countless wheels of the huge machine working freely and smoothly. London's vast wealth of law-abiding citizens and of treasure lies on the surface. The forces which make for dissolution are beneath the surface. The business of the authorities is to prevent those forces ever breaking through to the surface of densely populated London.

Money in Amusement Parks.

The estimated investment in summer amusement parks in this country will reach a total of $100,000,000 this year. The total number of parks is estimated at 200, and three-fourths of that number are controlled by and operated for electric railway lines.

This figure for the investment seems high, and the more so when it is known that the many small resorts, "gardens," "groves," etc., found in every locality are not included. It is probable, however, that the figure may be accepted as representative, though it will correspond more clearly to the advertised cost of each specific resort rather than the actual cost, the two sums frequently being quite different. At any rate the investment will probably reach an astonishing total, and it calls attention to an interesting development in transportation affairs.—Railway and Engineering Review.

Healthy Traveling Men.

"Hotel life and railroad traveling are not so hard after all," said George Mong, clerk at the Coates House, this morning. "Three traveling salesmen have registered this morning who are each over fifty years old and hearty, and one man comes here regularly from New York who has been traveling between New York and Kansas City for forty years.

"Of course the truth is that most of these men live with a great deal more care than ordinary civilians. They have to. A traveling man who falls sick when away from home—and all of them have homes—is making it awkward for himself and his firm, so that they know very well how to draw the line."—Kansas City Star.

Frenchman at the 'Phone.

In London they say, "Are you there?" at the telephone; in New York, "Hello!" in Paris, "Allo, allo". Why do they say, "Allo?" That is just the inquiry that is occupying newspaper attention at this moment. Is it English, is it French, is it Esperanto?

Some declare it to be the English "Halloo!" which is an encouragement as well as a signal. No one doubts that the demoiselle du telephone wants a great deal of encouragement. Then there is a supposition that it is a corruption of the French "Hola!" Others more imaginative see it in an allusion to "au loup," through the connection is not apparent between the wolf and the telephone. But one of your contemporaries produces documentary proof to show that in the early days of telephoning in France they used the formula "allons" as a signal.

After a few years usage, the "n" dropped away, leaving the final "o" sound. Whatever the origin of the call, the Paris lady of the telephone is equally indifferent.—Pall Mall Gazette.

Education.

The principal of one of Washington's high schools relates an incident in connection with the last Commencement day of the institution mentioned. A clever girl had taken one of the principal prizes. At the close of the exercises her friends crowded about her to offer congratulations.

"Weren't you awfully afraid you wouldn't get it, Hattie," asked one, "when there were so many contestants?"

"Oh, no!" cheerily exclaimed Hattie. "Because I knew that when it came to English composition I had 'em all skinned alive!"—Harper's Weekly.

IN THE PHILIPPINES.

Good Opportunities for Small Farmers in the Islands.

For people of small means there are no greater opportunities for an assured income than in the Philippines Islands. The climate is here the soil is here and moisture assured. Right here in this province you have the finest climate in the world, a perpetual summer, with cool nights, the days not near as hot as in cities of the United States. We have no sunstrokes, and are constantly fanned by a sea breeze.

We can raise all the year around cocoa (chocolate), tobacco, rubber, cocoanut, hemp, sugar, etc. Corn grows voluntarily. Almost all our vegetables succeed well. In fact, anything that grows in the tropics, semi-tropics, can be raised here. All that is needed is push, grit and a little money to insure sucess.

Now if some young people would organize a corporation among themselves and invest part of their incomes for three or four years in this island they could buy 2,400 acres of land at $2.50 to $5 an acre that in five years cannot be got for $25 an acre, or they could lease the same land from the Government at prices ranging from twenty-five cents to fifty cents an acre a year, with option to renew the lease at the expiration of the first term. Of course the Government expects the land to be improved and cultivated.

These lands planted in cocoa, rubber, tobacco, hemp and coffee would commence paying in about three years from planting, and increase their crops every year, until they would reach their full development, when they become a veritable gold mine. It would not be necessary to reside here, for the corporation could appoint an agent, who could manage the plantation, but it is essential that the owners be United States citizens.

The markets for these products are here. The foreign firms are willing to buy the crops a year in advance, and when we have free trade with the home land things will boom and the islands will be too small. Land is being taken up rapidly, and now is the time to get in on the ground floor before the Government raises the price and alters the laws. This is going to be a great country, and there is no doubt of it. It is also a very beautiful one, green all the year around, with fine forests of all kinds of valuable woods.

As to labor, the natives are a good class of farm hands, a little slow, but they are cheaply kept, and receive about $10 a month. They do all the rough work. Transportation from island to island is done by steamboats, which abound everywhere.—Ed Lebrun, Sergeant, Band Nineteenth Infantry, Parang, Mindanao, P. I.

WORDS OF WISDOM.

Double dealing always halves the profits.

Holy character is the only reliable heavenly credential.

The lazy man always has the worst form of heart disease.

It would never do for the trouble hunter to go to heaven; he would die of disappointment.

A good many men would get into heaven if they could use their gravestones as tickets at the gates.

Perhaps you can tell more about a man's piety by his private prayers than by his public practice.

The devil enjoys the hard names we call him, if we will only let him go right on with his business.

The rich man is willing that his money should be called tained if only it will be the scapegoat for his sins.

The world will not be saved by arguments about God in heaven, without the evidences of a God in the heart.

The deceits of the devil would be more enduring if his fleshly desires were not so much stronger than his discretion.

If the good sisters put half as much in the offering as they carry on their heads the church would soon cease to be a beggar.

No man has any right to take into his life any more money than he can properly administer and account for as God's steward.

There is better evidences of overruling providence in prevention and preservation than in the most dramatic and singular extrication from danger.

It never seems to occur to some men that there's anything queer about preaching against graft on Sunday and asking for a preacher's discount on Monday.—Ram's Horn.

Ingenious Lock.

A Jamaica inventor has constructed a remarkable combination lock that seems likely to defy the most expert lock picker. The combination is arranged in four sets of letters, twenty-four letters in each, and each letter represented by a figure. It can be set to a sentence in almost any modern language, one letter being taken from one set, one from another, and so on. The person who would open the lock must first know what letter each figure represents and then what language the sentence is in. The Scientific American considers that one trying to pick the lock would have to work over 96,000,000 years at the rate of sixty numbers a minute before arriving at the correct combination.

If air at ordinary temperatures does not move at more than one and a half feet a second, no draught is felt.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

INTERNATIONAL LESSON COMMENTS FOR AUGUST 5.

Subject: False Excuses, Luke xiv., 15-24—Golden Text, Luke xiv., 18—Memory Verses, 23, 24—Topic: Blessings of Salvation.

I. An invitation to a great feast (vs. 15-17). 15. "One of them." One of the rich friends of the Pharisaic host, whose remark gave the Saviour occasion for delivering this parable which is called the parable of the great supper. "Sat at meat." They were reclining on couches around the table. "Heard these things." The recompense at the resurrection of the just (v. 14), suggested to this guest a great banquet in the kingdom of the Messiah. "Blessed is he." He extols the greatness of the privilege. "In the kingdom of God." The kingdom of God, here, does not signify the kingdom of heaven in the highest sense, but only the kingdom of the Messiah, of which the carnal Jew here speaks, as the place of their happiness.

16. "Then said He." The remark of the guest gave Jesus an opportunity to state important truths. He delivered the following parable to show that though the Messiah's kingdom would be offered to them under the most favorable circumstances, yet they would reject it, the Gentiles would embrace the gospel. "A certain man." This man represented God, the Father. "A great supper." Representing the rich and abundant provisions of the gospel. Only two regular meals are ordinarily partaken of in Eastern lands.

17. "Sent His servant." The commission to all those who hold the office of summoning the world to enter the kingdom of God is the same, hence but one servant is referred to. John the Baptist, Christ, the apostles and disciples all delivered the gospel message and issued a call to the Jewish people. The same call was afterwards given to the Gentiles. "That were bidden." The Jews to whom the gospel was first offered. "Come." The invitations of the gospel are full and complete (Matt. 11:28; Rev. 22:17). "All things are now ready." "Now is the accepted time." Every provision is made for the redemption of a lost world; not one thing is lacking. The plan of salvation is perfect.

II. The excuses made (vs. 18-20). 18. "They all." But few of the scribes and Pharisees responded. "Began to make excuse." In worldly affairs people would be anxious to accept an invitation to such a "supper," but in religious matter it is very different. Men are unwilling to accept the offers of salvation. "The first said." When the time came they all refused to enter in, each having some excuse. They were typical excuses: 1. Cares of wealth. 2. Pursuit of wealth. 3. Attractions of earthly ties. "Have bought—must—see it." He lived, as do all in that country, in a village, and had to go out into the country to reach his farm. These excuses were all trivial, and yet they appeared to those making them to be real reasons why they could not possibly attend the feast. "I pray thee." I beg of thee. "Have me excused." Release me from my obligation.

19. "I go to prove them." Mark the increasing rudeness of the speakers. The first pleads a "must needs;" the second merely states his intention—"I go;" the third says bluntly, "I cannot." and omits the courtesy of asking to be excused. The true lesson from all three is, that innocent and right things keep men away from the gospel feast. Feeble excuses: 1. Worldliness of spirit. 2. Absorption in commercial pursuits. 3. Relative obligations. 20. "Married a wife." He should have said to his wife, "Come, let us both accept the invitation to this gospel feast, at once." "Therefore I cannot come." This was just the reason why he should have come. 1. When young people enter upon the active duties of life they need the help and guidance of the Holy Spirit. 2. No home is a truly happy home without Christ. 3. We need Christ to bear out burdens with us and help us through the hard places. 4. A Christian home is a power for good in the community. 5. The influences of the home mold the characters and lives of the entire family.

III. The invitation enlarged and urged (vs. 21-24). 21. "Being angry." Not the anger of passion, but of indignation. "Go out quickly." There is no time to be lost. The feast is ready. "Streets and lanes." Extend the invitation to the publicans and sinners—the outcasts. "Bring in—the poor," etc. The picture is one impossible for us to realize in our land. In the East, rich in beggars, opulent in misery, without poorhouses or hospitals, or other organized means of caring for and lessening misery, and with laws and social organism multiplying it, such a throng as is here described may be often seen in the city streets or squares. 22. "It is done." God's true ministers carry the gospel to the worst classes. "Yet—room." The lord of the house has prepared a very great feast for very many.

23. "Highways and hedges." Outside of the city. By this is meant that the gospel would be preached to the Gentiles. "Compel them to come in." Not by force, but by earnest entreaty. "House may be filled." How anxious the Lord is to save every person. No one needs to be lost. 24. "I say unto you." Christ is here half continuing the parable and half expounding it. "None of those men." A solemn announcement of the coming rejection of the Jews as a nation for their unbelief. "Shall taste of My supper." Shall enjoy the blessings of the gospel.

True Success.

Do what God calls you to do and you are a success.—Talmage.

President Sends Congratulations.

Oyster Bay.—Messages of congratulations have been sent by President Roosevelt through the state department at Washington to the presidents of Salvador and Guatemala upon the fact that peace has been arranged between those two countries. The president expressed the hope that all future disputes between them must be settled by arbitration without recourse to arms.

A GREAT COMBINATION OFFER

We Will Furnish the "TWICE-A-WEEK" Issue of the

St. Louis Globe-Democrat

—With—

THE UNION

—For—

$1.50 Both Papers, one year, only $1.

The St. Louis Globe-Democrat should not be classed with the many ... weekly papers. It is a high-grade Semi-Weekly, eight or more pages ... Tuesday and Friday. It is beyond all comparison the biggest, best and ... National News and Home Journal published in the United States. It is ... Republican in Politics but is above all

A Great Modern Newspaper.

It is not made up indiscriminately from the Daily issue. It is ... edited with special reference to the needs of the Farmer, the Merchant ... professional man who desires to keep thoroughly posted without sparing ... time to read a large Daily Paper. It also contains a great variety of well ... reading matter, making it invaluable to every member of the family.

This Liberal Clubbing Offer

is open to all old or new subscribers, but may be withdrawn at any time, ... must receive the cash with order. Address

THE UNION,
Clanton, Ala.

Ben M. Jacobs & Bros.

Furniture and Rugs.

—SOLE AGENTS—

Globe-Wernicke Elastic Book Cases ... Filing Cabinets.

Catalogue for the asking.

BIRMINGHAM, AL...

Farmers' Mutual Insurance Associati...

OF ALABAMA.

CHARTERED BY SPECIAL ACT OF THE LEGISLATURE

By the People and for the People.

Chilton County Branch

Organized February 3, 1900.

W. M. WILSON, President. WALLACE C. EDLER, Sec'y.-Treas.

INSURES Farmers' dwellings, outbuildings and ... and live stock against loss by fire, wind and lightn... The cheapest, safest and most sensible method of ... ance known to man

Average Yearly Cost for Five and a half Years 43-100 of 1 per ce...

Full particulars furnished upon application to WALLACE C. EDLER, Clanton, ...

PAUL CALAME,

205 21st Street

Birmingham, Ala.

Practical Watchm... and Optician

Eyes Correctl... Fitted

Mail orders promptly ...

SUBSCRIBE FOR THIS PAPER

DO YOU WAN...

Letterheads, Noteheads, Billheads, Envelopes,

OR ANYTHING ELSE PRINTED?

Then Call at

THE UNION OFFI...

and See Fine Work at Low Prices.

500 Noteheads 500 Envelopes All For $2.00

Good Work on Good Material, done on Good Mac...
Don't forget! THE UNION, Clanton, Alabama

Pure Water Prevents Fevers.

DRILLED WELLS FURNISH PURE WA...

We guarantee water or no charge made. Estimates given. Address

I. E. SARBER CO. Al...

Thorsby,

WELL—ENOUGH

...in the valley of "Well enough" men are sared
...hill and they eat and they love a bit, and the
...off in the hazy distance gleam the peaks of
...name that has traveled that difficult steep can

...way is o'er rocks, sharp and jagged and cruel,
...ching thirst;
...the water drips cool, far below in the depths
...the lungs, all in vain, for a friendly hand-clas...
...and true.
...may not turn back, so he struggles along
...view.

...at last, oh, long journey! see torn hands and
...with pain;
...stands at the summit of great desire, to dwell
...then—ah, the sadness of heart-break! was no...
...he longs to return to the land he has lost—to

—Grace E. Bo...

AN OUT-OF-SCHO...

By HILDA RICHMO...

"I think old Mr. Winton is too par...ular for any use," said Mark Car..., throwing his cap on a chair and ...ening to the supper table. "Ev...thing has to be done his way, and ...always the longest way, too."

"What is the matter, Mark?" in...red his father. "I thought you ...d the place very much."

"I do, papa, but it seems so un...sonable to do things the most ...ious way, when it don't matter ... they're done."

Mr. Winton pays for your time ... 6 o'clock every evening, and has ...ght to say what you shall do and ... You would not make a good ...ier, Mark, for the first duty of ...enlisted man is to obey without ...stioning. I must go to Chicago on ... 7.30 train and haven't time now ... talk about your work, but you ...t give satisfaction if you expect ... keep the place. Be a good boy ... mind your mother. Remember, ...re are four or five boys for every ...ce, and Mr. Winton can easily ... one to fill yours if you don't ..."

Mr. Carney's words set his son to ...king, and he finished his supper ...silence; but when the evening ...p shone down on the pile of ...ool books he had brought home ...h him, Mark broke out again:

"I might have had all these prob...s worked if he hadn't been so ...rticular about his old barrels."

"Don't you think it very impolite ... criticise a gentleman of sixty?" ...uired Mrs. Carney, reprovingly. ... boy of twelve should know better, ... I was sure my son did till I ...rd him at the table this evening."

"Well, mamma, he is unreasona... I don't say that to be impolite, ... only to let you know how he ...kes me work. Every afternoon ... week I've been piling old barrels ... the storeroom when there were ... errands to do, and Mr. Winton ...nts them arranged just so. As if ...made any difference so they're out ... the way! Once or twice a year a ...ckster from a little town comes to ... them to ship butter and produce ... Fred Miller says he's cranky ...out everything, and no one can ...ase him."

"Was Fred in the storeroom? I ...ught Mr. Winton's rules forbade ...ple sitting around talking to the ...rks."

"He wasn't inside. He just stood ... the door and talked awhile. Be...es, Mr. Winton is out of town to-..., and wouldn't have seen him if ... had come in, though I didn't ask ...n."

"Did you arrange the barrels as ... Winton directed?"

"Well, not exactly. He said to ...e everything from one side of the ...reroom and pile the barrels in ...rs along the wall, but there were ...me boxes there the same height as ... barrels, so I let them stay. I ...ppose I could have crowded them ...ger together, but the stack looks ... right from the outside. He won't ... around when the man loads them ..., so it don't make any difference. ... would have taken another whole ...ening to put them in as he said, ...d he'll think I'm a swift worker ...en he gets back and finds it all ...ne."

"What if he asks you about it?" ...ked Mrs. Carney. Her son's care...s ways had long been a source of ...rry to her, and it was in the hope ... having them corrected that she al...wed him to work in the store. No ...ount of talking and reasoning had ...en able to convince him of the dan...r of forming slipshod habits in ...outh.

"No fear of that," said Mark, con...dently. "I've worked there six ...onths, and I don't believe he's been ... the storeroom more than twice. ...e's forgotten all about them by this ...me, I suppose."

"I can't see why it makes any dif...rence to you what you do. He pays ...r your time, and if he wants you ... take six afternoons to put old bar...ls away instead of three, why, you ...ght as well do it. Was it such a ...rd task?"

"No, easy as anything, but, you ...e, when I'm in the store waiting for ...rands to do I work my problems for ...e next day. I have to sit on a ...ool at the cashier's desk where the ...erks can call to me, and sometimes ...'s fifteen minutes between jobs. ...an't you help me a little to-night, ...amma? It's 8 o'clock and I've only ...orked two. They are so hard and ...ng."

Mark looked up in surprise when ...s mother began swiftly working ...t of the long problems, only say...g—

"It is rather late. You take the ...ird, and I'll try the fourth."

It was the first time Mrs. Carney ...d ever worked out a problem for ...m, so it was no wonder Mark was

ATION OFFER
-A-WEEK" issue
obe-Democra
NION
year, only $1.
t be classed with the many kly, eight or more pages, son the biggest, best and in the United States. It is Newspaper.
the Daily issue. It is he Farmer, the Merchant
ghly posted without sparing ains a great variety of well member of the family.
bing Offer
be withdrawn at any time,
E UNION,
Clanton, Ala.
s & Bros.
d Rugs.
TH—
Book Cases
inets.
IGHAM, AL
rance Associati
AMA.
OF THE LEGISLATURE
r the People.
ty Branch
ary 3, 1900.
ALLACE C. EDLER,
Sec'y.-Treas.
outbuildings and cont
fire, wind and lightn sensible method of in 100 oi 1 per ce
pplication to EDLER, Clanton, A Practical Watchma
nd Optician
Eyes Correctly
Fitted
ail orders promptly f
E FOR APER
WANT Noteheads,
nvelopes,
SE PRINTED?
at OFFIC
at Low Prices.
For $2.00
done on Good Mach
Clanton, Alabama.
vents Fevers.
ISH PURE WAT
no charge made.
ss
ER CO.
Ala

WELL-ENOUGH.

In the valley of "Well Enough" men are careless and joyous and free;
They eat and they eat and they love a bit, and they grow old happily;
And in the hazy distance gleam the peaks of the unknown: "Fame."
No one that has traveled that difficult steep can enter the valley again.

Over the rocks, sharp and jagged and cruel; through fierce heat, with a dead-ening thirst
For the water drops cool, far below in the depths of the way that to him is accursed.
He longs, all in vain, for a friendly hand-clasp, for the smiles that were ready
and true
But he may not turn back, so he struggles along, with the joy of achievement in view.

At last on the long journey! see torn hands and feet, and face drawn and wrinkled
with pain
Stands at the summit of great desire, to dwell on his priceless gain.
But—ah, the sadness of heart-break! was not that a man's cry of woe?
He longs to return to the land he has lost—to the "Well-Enough" valley below.

—Grace E. Bostwick, in New York Tribune.

AN OUT-OF-SCHOOL LESSON

By HILDA RICHMOND.

"I think old Mr. Winton is too particular for anyone," said Mark Carney, throwing his cap on a chair and coming to the supper table. "Everything has to be done his way, and always the longest way, too."

"What is the matter, Mark?" inquired his father. "I thought you liked the place very much."

"I do yet, but it seems so unreasonable to do things the most tedious way when it don't matter when they're done."

Mr. Winton pays for your time and wants every evening, and has a right to say what you shall do and how. You would not make a good soldier, Mark, for the first duty of an enlisted man is to obey without questioning. I must go to Chicago on the 7:30 train and haven't time now to talk about your work, but you must give satisfaction if you expect to keep the place. Be a good boy and mind your mother. Remember, there are four or five boys for every place, and Mr. Winton can easily find one to fill yours if you don't."

Mr. Carney's words set his son to thinking, and he finished his supper in silence; but when the evening lamp shone down on the pile of school books he had brought home with him, Mark broke out again:

"I might have had all these problems worked if he hadn't been so particular about his old barrels."

"Don't you think it very impolite to criticise a gentleman of sixty?" inquired Mrs. Carney, reprovingly. "A boy of twelve should know better, and I was sure my son did till I heard him at the table this evening."

"Well, mamma, he is unreasonable. I don't say that to be impolite, but only to let you know how he makes me work. Every afternoon this week I've been piling old barrels in the storeroom when there were errands to do, and Mr. Winton wants them arranged just so. As if it made any difference so they're out of the way! Once or twice a year a buckster from a little town comes to buy them to ship butter and produce in. Fred Miller says he's cranky about everything, and no one can please him."

"Was Fred in the storeroom? I thought Mr. Winton's rules forbade people sitting around talking to the clerks."

"He wasn't inside. He just stood in the door and talked awhile. Besides, Mr. Winton is out of town today, and wouldn't have seen him if Fred had come in, though I didn't ask him."

"Did you arrange the barrels as Mr. Winton directed?"

"Well, not exactly. He said to take everything from one side of the storeroom and pile the barrels in tiers along the wall, but there were some boxes there the same height as the barrels, so I let them stay. I suppose I could have crowded them closer together, but the stack looks all right from the outside. He won't be around when the man loads them up, so it don't make any difference. It would have taken another whole evening to put them in as he said, and he'll think I'm a swift worker when he gets back and finds it all done."

"What if he asks you about it?" asked Mrs. Carney. Her son's careless ways had long been a source of sorrow to her, and it was in the hope of having them corrected that she allowed him to work in the store. No amount of talking and reasoning had been able to convince him of the danger of forming slipshod habits in youth.

"No fear of that," said Mark, confidently. "I've worked there six months, and I don't believe he's been in the storeroom more than twice. He's forgotten all about them by this time, I suppose."

"I can't see why it makes any difference to you what you do. He pays for your time, and if he wants you to take six afternoons to put old barrels away instead of three, why, you might as well do it. Was it such a hard task?"

"No, easy as anything, but, you see, when I'm in the store waiting for errands to do I work my problems for the next day. I have to sit on a stool at the cashier's desk where the clerks can call to me, and sometimes it's fifteen minutes between jobs. Can't you help me a little to-night, mamma? It's 8 o'clock and I've only worked two. They are so hard and long."

Mark looked up in surprise when his mother began swiftly working out of the long problems, only saying—

"It is rather late. You take the third, and I'll try the fourth."

It was the first time Mrs. Carney had ever worked out a problem for him, so it was no wonder Mark was astonished. She was always willing to explain and lend a helping hand in the difficult parts, but never solved them outright for him. She thought it encouraged cheating to do the work that belonged to some one else, and always kept Mark at his tasks till all were mastered.

"Did you get the third?" she inquired half an hour later. "Here are the fifth and sixth. How many are there in the lesson?"

"But, mamma, this isn't the way Miss Fillmore makes us work them. I can't copy them on my paper for to-morrow."

"I don't see why not," said Mrs. Carney, without looking up. "There are several methods of solving these problems, and I used the shortest one. The answer is correct, and that is the necessary thing. Where is the rest of the eighth written out? It seems to be all mixed up, or I can't find it," and she turned the papers with an abstracted air.

"Miss Fillmore says we must use the long way for the present, and when we are older the short cuts will come naturally to us. I'm so sorry I can't have these, for I wanted a good average this month. If our averages are high for the term, we won't have to be examined."

"Just write your name at the top of my sheets and hand them in," suggested Mrs. Carney. "Miss Fillmore will probably never look farther than the answers, and you will get your high grade very easily. I wonder why she is so particular about methods."

"I see what you are trying to do, mamma," said Mark suddenly. "You are showing me where I was wrong about the barrels this afternoon. I ought to have put them up as Mr. Winton said, without grumbling or wondering why."

"You have guessed it exactly, Mark. One of the greatest faults children have is the idea that they know more than older people. I am glad you can see why my problems cannot be given to Miss Fillmore, even if you copy them. Her method is not the shortest one, but is the best for beginners. What sort of work would be done in school if each pupil did the work as he pleased and was counted perfect if he could get the correct answer to his problems regardless of method? It is the same way in business, and those who rise from low to higher places are the people who obey orders exactly as if they were soldiers?"

"I'm sorry I worried you, mamma," said Mark in manly fashion. "If you will explain this part to me I'll try to work them all, and when Mr. Winton comes home I'll tell him about the barrels. By working overtime I can straighten them out, but it will take a long time."

"That pleases me more than anything else you could possibly do. I think it will be the turning point of your life if you carry out your resolve, for no one can hope to succeed who has careless ways," said Mrs. Carney.

It was late that night when the last problem was worked, but Mark had his reward next day when Miss Fillmore read out the names of the scholars who had perfect lists, and his was the first on the list. He worked harder than ever that day, and it was the recollection of his high grades that helped him to make his way to Mr. Winton's private office as soon as school was out.

It seemed to Mark that Mr. Winton looked very stern as he stammered and tried to tell his story. At last something in the old gentleman's eyes gave him courage, and he told all about the barrels, not sparing himself in the least. A great weight rolled off his mind when he said:

"If you'll only give me a chance, I'll put the barrels as you want them, and then try to show you that I don't always shirk."

"Why did you come and tell me this?" asked Mr. Winton. "Did your conscience trouble you, or were you afraid I might find you out?"

"My mother showed me last night that the only way to do things is the right way, and while you are paying me for my time, your way is right," said Mark. "I thought it didn't make any difference so they were out of the way, but I can see now that I ought to have piled them as you said without thinking about your reason for doing it that way. I hope you will let me work after the store closes every night till they are all in place."

"That's the right spirit, my boy. Tell your mother I am proud to have her son in my store. She used to play with my little girls years ago, and I have never forgotten her frank, winning ways," said Mr. Winton. "Now, about those barrels. You may begin this evening and work an hour each night till they are in order."

"Thank you, sir," said Mark, heartily. "I wonder why I always thought he was unreasonable," he thought to himself as he left the store an hour later than usual, but with a light heart. "I expected he'd fire me right away."

"How many barrels?" asked a voice a week later, as Mark proudly placed the last one against the wall. He had been working very swiftly to get through, but there were no vacant spaces among them.

Mark ran his eye over the orderly pile and made a quick calculation.

"One hundred and fifty-six," came the ready response.

"Right, and now do you see why they must be in order? The man who buys them usually comes on our busiest days, and it is necessary that we know how many there are instantly. It is likely he will be here next Saturday, and you can easily see how much work your carelessness would have caused. We had one boy who stored them away over some boxes and barrels of salt, and the wagons had to be unloaded to count them, as they ran short at the last minute."

"I'm very glad that will not happen this time," said Mark, with a sigh of relief.

"I am very glad, too," said Mr. Winton. "Take your mother's advice and remember it pays in the end to be strictly honest. By the way, are you thinking of giving up your place? Fred Miller said you were, and applied for it last week. I told him I would not promise till I had heard from you about it."

"I don't want to give it up if you are satisfied with me," said Mark, thinking of how Fred had encouraged him to slight his tasks. "I want to prove that I can obey orders."

It was a long time before Mark conquered his habit of grumbling over his tasks, but in time the good habits became as fixed as the bad ones had been. Every time he thought his employer unreasonable he thought of the barrels, and tried to remember that he must not expect to know the reason for everything he had to do.

"What do you think, mother?" he said laughingly, as he came in from work several years later. "I found a boy piling up barrels in the storeroom just as I did when I was new at the business."

"What did you do?" inquired Mrs. Carney.

"Told him my experience," said the tall youth, promptly. "He took my little lecture good naturedly and began over again. How bumptious and important I must have acted when I was his age!"

"That seems a long time ago, and now you are one of the best clerks they have," said Mrs. Carney, proudly. "Yes, it is true," she went on, as Mark protested with very red cheeks against this statement. "Mr. Winton told me so yesterday, and says you will have a still better place as soon as you have finished school. I am sure it helped you very much to have to work after the others had gone home, even if it seemed hard just then."

"It helps me yet, mother. I never go into the storeroom that I don't think of it and feel grateful to you and Mr. Winton. It makes me have more patience with boys younger than I am, too, for some one had to have lots of patience with me—and does yet," said Mark, stooping to kiss his mother.—Zion's Herald.

A Merciful Punishment.

Sergeant Nolan, stationed at one of the New England posts, has a small but active wife of whom he stands in considerable awe. One day the sergeant lost his quick Irish temper. The object of his wrath was a dog belonging to the wife of one of his superior officers. The lady overhead some of his statements, and took him severely to task.

"You ought to be ashamed to say such things, and to lose your temper with an animal," she said, while the big sergeant looked shamefaced and anxious. "I shall report your language."

"To—to her, ma'am?" faltered the penitent.

"To my husband," said the lady, haughtily.

"So do, ma'am," said Sergeant Nolan, cheerfully. "I well deserve it. I was only fearing you meant to tell me wife."

A Family Affair.

"Once upon a time there lived a good man of New York, who was soliciting contributions for the erection of an orphan-asylum," said the story-teller. "He had been to many rich people and received liberal contributions, which were entered in a book he had for that purpose. Among these many names there appeared, 'Mrs. Russel Sage, $25.' The good man went to Mr. Sage's office, and showing him the contribution entered in the book by Mrs. Sage, asked if he would not give a like sum. And what do you suppose he did?"

"Well, I suppose he at least doubled it," remarked a listener.

"Doubled it! Not Russell!" exclaimed the teller of the story. "Why, he simply took his pen and wrote 'Mr. and' before his wife's name, and handed the book back to the good man."—Harper's Weekly.

Shelters For Consumptives.

The Belfast city corporation has decided to place shelters for consumptives in one of the public parks. Protest meetings are being held.

The salaries committee of Stockport, England, has advanced the salary of the municipal draughtsman $2.50 a year—about four cents a week.

WHOLE FAMILY AT SCHOOL.

Kansas State Senator and His Wife Taking University Course.

When the University of Kansas closed its doors for the summer vacation this week all the members of the family of State Senator C. I. Martin, of Fort Scott, including Mr. Martin himself, were freed from their books. It is somewhat unusual for a man of middle age to go to school, but it is more so for a man to go and take his family with him, and this is what Senator Martin did. Senator Martin is a junior in the law department of the university, and his wife is also a student in the law department. Their only child, Miss Lilian Martin, attends public school in Lawrence.

Before becoming a student in the university, Mr. Martin was a farm hand, a country school teacher, a Major in the army of the Philippines, a clerk of the district court of Bourbon County and is at present State Senator from that county. Deciding that a knowledge of the law would be of benefit to him, he came to Lawrence and entered the university, and his fellow students quickly made him president of the class. He was also president of the Republican club of the university. Senator Martin found time, in addition to all his other duties, to take an active part in every phase of college life and enters into the spirit of the university with as much zeal as the youngest freshman.

When Mrs. Martin came to Lawrence with her husband she had no intention of entering school, but the sight of so many others at their books determined her to study also. She is a graduate of the State Normal School in Fort Scott and taught school for several years before her marriage.—Lawrence correspondence Kansas City Star.

WORDS OF WISDOM.

There would hardly ever be an old maid if she was asked.

When a man goes fishing it's a sign he is on no swear-off.

You can get along with most anybody unless he is a relative.

It's queer how the fun goes out of kissing a girl that wants you to.

It would be lots easier to be good if you had been brought up not to.

An unpleasantness in your own family is a scandal in anybody else's.

It's very unlucky to propose to a girl unless you want her to accept you.

If a girl is awful nice to a man it's a sign she doesn't care very much about him.

Wonder if a baseball umpire keeps the same stiff upper lip in an argument at home?

A man would have a lot more friends if they were sure he would never need them.

It's awful careless to marry a rich wife without making sure beforehand she has got it.

The high finance fellows have done a heap to make politics look like a respectable business.

If you buy a house the taxes go up; if you sell it there is a real estate boom right after you do it.

This is such a nice world that when you get well acquainted with it you stop worrying about the next.

A man could afford to smoke five-cent cigars instead of a pipe if his sons could get along on ten-cent ones.

The reason unmarried uncles are so fond of their little nephews is they don't have to be every day in the week.

The worst about trying to cut down expenses is that if you can use less ice it's because it's so cold you must use more coal.

One of the things a girl likes about a dance is she has a good excuse for having her breakfast in bed the next morning.

After a girl has broken her heart five or six times over a man her parents won't let her marry, they don't worry so much about whether she will die from it.

When a woman sneaks her husband's only decent necktie out for their son to wear she realizes she is not acting fairly, but she knows she is being a good mother.—From "Reflections of a Bachelor," in the New York Press.

A Great Herd of Caribou.

From figures and facts given me by Mr. H. T. Munn, Brandon, Manitoba, I reckon that in the three weeks following July 25, 1892, he saw at Artillery Lake (latitude 62½ degrees, longitude 112 degrees) not less than 2,000,000 caribou traveling southward, and yet he calls this merely the advance guard of the great herd. Colonel Jones (Buffalo Jones) who saw the herd in October, at Clinton Golden, has given me personally a description that furnishes the basis for an interesting calculation of their numbers.

"I stood," he says, "on a hill in the middle of the passing throng. I could see ten miles each way and it was one army of caribou. How much further they spread I do know. Sometimes they were bunched so that a hundred were on a space one hundred feet square, but often there would be open spaces equally large without any. I should think that they averaged at least one hundred caribou to the acre."—From "The Caribou and His Kindred," by Ernest Thompson Seton in Scribner's.

THE PULPIT.

A SCHOLARLY SUNDAY SERMON BY THE REV. DR. D. G. DOWNEY.

Subject: The Full-Orbed Life.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—At St. John's M. E. Church, the pastor, the Rev. Dr. D. G. Downey, preached Sunday morning on the subject, "The Full-orbed Life." His text was John xiii., part of the first and third verses: "When Jesus knew that His hour was come," and "Jesus, knowing that He was come from God and went to God," and he said:

To Jesus of Nazareth life was never merely a chance. It never was "just hapened so" to Him. To Him it was always opportunity. He conceived Himself, I think, from very early life, as a man of destiny with a work to do, a task to be accomplished and a trust to be fulfilled. In the morning of His life He said: "Wist ye not that I must be about My Father's business?" All through His career there was the evidence that He thought and felt that some important work would surely come to Him. Frequently He gave expression to this in some such form as when He said, "Now am I straightened until it is accomplished." Nevertheless, we are told that He "set His face steadfastly toward Jerusalem." Now, while it is true that Jesus conceived Himself as a man of destiny, with a word to do and a task to be accomplished, it is noticeable that He never allowed Himself to be hurried toward the accomplishment of His task. If you have ever noticed that, I think you will be a little surprised to see how often it is said that His hour had not yet come. He Himself said, "My time is not yet." "My hour is not yet come," "The time is not ripe," and just as He did not allow Himself to be hurried, so He never permitted Himself to be diverted from the main purpose of His life. Men tried to make Him king by force. Many of them expected that at that time He would set up the kingdom of Israel, overthrow the Roman power and be the Israelite leader, and He told them plainly that He would not be diverted from the saying, "My kingdom is not of this world." But with all this, Jesus knew that His hour would surely come and the entirety of His life was the preparation for fulfilling His hour, for meeting that hour when it came, and for completing His life. Every man's hour, it seems to me, comes when he can freely and fully express the thoughts and convictions that have been growing and deepening in His soul. It is surely a great moment when some voice sounds in the soul and says: "Now is thy hour; this is thy opportunity. Reveal thyself; show the world what is in thee; express thy nullity or capacity; now is thy time to speak and to do." Self-expression and the outspeaking of what is in a man, his true inner and deeper self, this is the joy and glory of life. It is sad that many never achieve this. Some, we must admit, do not seem to get the opportunity, but others through cowardice, time servers, trimmers, who are always wondering what the world will think and what their fellow men will say, not asking what is the truth and the right thing to do, not daring to stand before the world and speak their word and do their deed without thought of consequences, never achieve this joy and glory.

Jesus came to His supreme opportunity toward the close of His life, saw it coming and met it with the high courage and the gay cheer of the valiant soldier. It seems to me that we misconceive very largely these last acts in the life of Jesus. We have dwelt so much upon the sadness and the suffering and looked at the sentimental side, and these have had, I think, sometimes too large a place in our thoughts; for, after all, we must see that it was for this very purpose that He came into the world, and that His life would have been an utter failure but for this glorious culmination. To Jesus the cross was not merely a matter of sadness and sorrow. I think that, somehow, as He faced these closing acts of His life that He faced them with joy and cheer and strengthened courage. He recognized that after all this thing was the crowning joy and glory of His career. Here and now as never before had the opportunity come to Him, not only to think His thought, but to speak His word and do His deed and live out His life and glorify God and to have God glorified in Him.

I said that His life was a preparation. It was. Years of silence and meditation, of mystic communion with nature and God, in wisdom growing up to His task. To my mind His life was perfectly natural. He was not ready for His task before His hour had come. He could not have achieved His destiny at the age of twelve or twenty or twenty-five, not until the hour and the man met. There were times when He might have put Himself in the power of His enemies, but He hid Himself, and by and by He saw the elements gathering and, recognizing His own strength and knowing the will of God and seeing that the storm was about to break, the storm of hatred, and jealousy, and envy, and false pride, with the step of the soldier and the mien and aspect of a moral and spiritual hero, He went up to Jerusalem, and men marveled. He knew His hour was come. He was about to be glorified, and God was to glorified in Him. He had been thinking and speaking and teaching, and now He was to exemplify and illustrate and give special proof of the truth of all that He had said. He was destined to be cast out, yet He thoroughly understood that the time was coming when His spiritual supremacy and kinghood would be acknowledged to the limits of the earth and to the bounds of time. And how stands it this morning? Do we not see that He is the spiritual ideal of the race? The race is not turning to Confucius, or Buddha, or Mahomet. They have elements of truth, but the highest good and the supreme truth are with the young Prophet of Nazareth. He is the spiritual king and the spiritual leader of the race, and all turn to Him as flowers turn sunward to derive beauty and life.

I am sure, also, there must have been great joy in the mind of Jesus when He, at last, could speak the words He wanted to speak. In the temple He stood alone—one against the city. He must have had rich joy when He was able to give ample expression to His thought concerning the simplicity of the way of approach unto God—the right of every man, without the intervention of synagogue, or church, or priest, or ritual; to come Himself, in His own personality, unto God: "God is a Spirit, and they that worship Him must worship Him in spirit and in truth." Again, when His disciples had been quarreling among themselves as to who should be the greatest, once more He had an opportunity to express Himself, not only to teach, but to live out, His thought. He girded Himself with a towel and washed their feet, and said: "Let him who would be great among you be your servant." What high joy He must have had as He not only revealed His word, but by His action, for all time—for the generations yet unborn—taught the truth of the dignity of service; and if to-day the world is moving toward a wider brotherhood, if we are thinking not so much of ourselves and more of our neighbors, it is because He performed that lowly service. He had been talking, also, about faith; that God was their Father and that He would never desert those who put their faith in Him. In the hour of awful blackness, of excruciating physical and mental agony, His faith rose triumphant. Ah! there was the supreme triumph of His faith. Not in the words He had spoken, but in the life He lived and in the way in which He met the awful tragedy and in the glorious culmination of His earthly life.

The practical application of all this is not difficult. All men have some sense of destiny, some consciousness of a call, some feeling with respect to conduct. Every man has moments of Godlike aspirations. Surely, there come to us in moments of high, spiritual endowment, when the soul knows what it ought to do for its triumph or undoing, and man's time shall come when he is true to the revelation of truth that is in him, when he expresses in his speech and life the convictions that have grown in moments of supreme inspiration and insight. The mighty men of the world are the men who have been able to do this. There was Paul and Martin Luther and John Wesley and Abraham Lincoln. God pours into some men more than He is able to pour into others, because they are able to receive more. While it is true that we cannot all be geniuses and giants, it is also true that every man may live his complete, full-orbed life. He may feel first that he has come from God; that his destiny is to return to God, and his business is to breathe in the teaching and love and spirit of the infinite Father, and day by day be true to the beautiful, pure and noble suggestions that God will breathe into him. If a man will do this there is no question of his influence. The history of Jesus is proof positive on the point. He lived His life truly and loyally, and His world, which is the universe, swings around in obedience to His truth. Ah, friends, if we will be as loyal in our place and limited sphere, the world will be lifted up by us just as Christ's life-world was lifted by Him. It is in this sense that we are to follow Him and recognize that He is our example day by day as we go forth to the work and duty of our life.

The Only Safe Attitude.

I remember some years ago climbing the Weisshorn above Zermatt Valley with two guides. There had been a series of severe storms and ours was the first ascent for some weeks, consequently we had a great deal of step-cutting to do up the main arete. We had left the cabin at 2 in the morning, and it was nearly 9 before we reached the summit, which consisted, as did so many peaks in the Alps, of splintered rocks protruding from the snow. My leading guide stood aside to let me be first on top. And I, with the long labor of the climb over and exhilarated by the thought of the great view awaiting me, but forgetful of the high gale that was blowing on the other side of the rocks, sprang eagerly up them and stood erect to see the view. The guide pulled me down. "On your knees, sir. You are not safe there except on your knees."

My young friends, God lifts us all to summits in life; high, splendid, perilous. But these are nowhere more splendid or more perilous than in our youth; summits of knowledge, of friendship, of love, of success, declares George Adam Smith. Let us, as we value our moral health, the growth of our character and of our fitness for God's service, use every one of them as an altar on which to devote ourselves once more to His will.

Make Much of Your Blessings.

We are too prone to forget our present blessings. We seldom appreciate them until they are gone. Blessings seem to multiply as they take their flight. When they become memories we doubly prize them. Why not give them welcome while they are present with us. "Do not let the empty cup be your first teacher of the blessings you had when it was full. Seek, as a plain duty, to cultivate a buoyant joyous sense of the crowded kindnesses of God in your daily life."—Christian Intelligencer.

As a Man Thinketh, So is He.

The government of thought means Heaven or Hell. For if a man has disciplined himself to crush that thought—which may come to the purest and holiest mind—still better, if he has acquired the power to change the current and to turn his thought instantly into other and nobler channels, temptation is baffled at its very start and the man stands upon his feet victorious. A man will never regulate his passions who has never learned to regulate his thoughts.—G. H. Morrison.

THE UNION

Published every Thursday at Clanton, Chilton county, Alabama.

Wallace C. Edler, Ed. and Pub.

Subscription price, in advance, per year, $1.

For advertising rates, call at the office, Seventh street, between First and Second avenues.

Entered April 15, 1903, at Clanton, Ala., as second class matter, under act of congress of March 3, 1879.

NOTICE TO CORRESPONDENTS.

All communications to the Union must be signed by the writer's real name as well as that name which they wish to put in the paper. Letters must reach the editor Tuesday morning to get in the same week. While we will publish any and all communications complying with these requirements that do not contain any improper language, we are not responsible for the opinions expressed. tf.

CLANTON, ALA., Aug 2, 1906.

Union Clubbing List

THE UNION And Yellow Jacket	$1.00
THE UNION And Southern Ruralist	1.00
THE UNION And Union Educator	1.00
THE UNION And Home and Farm	1.00
THE UNION And Weekly Age-Herald	1.25
THE UNION and Weekly Atlanta Constitution	1.25
THE UNION and Twice-a-Week Globe Democrat	1.00
THE UNION and Tri-W'kly Atlanta Constitution	1.50
THE UNION And Tom Watson's Magazine	1.50
THE UNION and Tri-Weekly N. Y. World	1.00
THE UNION And Rural South	1.00
THE UNION And Weekly Advertiser and Map of Alabama, U. S. and world	1.00

If there are any other papers you want call at THE UNION office, and we will get them for you at the lowest rates. tf

ANNOUNCEMENTS.

FOR REPRESENTATIVE.

I am a candidate for Representative of Chilton county in the legislature of Alabama, subject to the action of the People's Primary.

tf J. OSMOND MIDDLETON.

FOR SHERIFF.

I hereby announce myself as a candidate for Sheriff of Chilton county, subject to the action of the People's primary. FELIX J. FITTS.

tf

FOR SHERIFF.

I hereby announce myself as a candidate for Sheriff of Chilton county, subject to the action of the People's primary. FRANK GOODGAME.

FOR SHERIFF.

I hereby announce myself as a candidate for sheriff of Chilton county, subject to the action of the People's primary. D. H. GENTRY.

FOR SHERIFF.

I hereby announce myself as a candidate for Sheriff of Chilton county, subject to the action of the people's primary. LEE HAYES.

tf

FOR SHERIFF.

I hereby announce myself a candidate for sheriff of Chilton county, subject to the action of the people at the November election, 1906.

ROLLEFFE BATES.

adv (tf)

FOR COUNTY COMMISSIONER.

I hereby announe myself as a candidate for County Commissioner for the 1st District, subject to the action of the People's Primary.

tf W. H. CONWAY.

FOR COUNTY COMMISSIONER.

I hereby announce myself as a candidate for County Commissioner for the Second District, subject to the action of the People's primary.

tf S. E. WALDRUP.

FOR COMMISSIONER.

By solicitation of a number of tax paying citizens of Chilton county, I announce myself as a candidate for county commissioner for the 2d district, subject to the actton of the people's primary, August 6, 1906.

SAM PATE.

tf

A RESULT OF HARMONY.

We all have heard of late years a lot of fool talk about "getting togther" and "harmonizing" our political differences. Well, Chambers county did that a few years ago, and the resulting Democratic ring rule has brought about an independent move, as the following extracts from an article in the Age-Herald of July 30 will show. There were about 500 in this meeting at LaFayette July 28:

"The following resolutions were read and adopted:

"Whereas, the present so-called Democratic party of this county has become oligarchal in its rulings and administration of our county affairs, and there is unworthy the support of believers in Democratic principles.

"Resolved, first, That in withdrawing from the present so-called Democratic party we wish it understood that we adhere to the principles of Democracy as expounded by Jefferson and Bryan and other orthodox Democratic leaders. Second, we denounce the present so-called Democratic Executive Committee for its arbitrary, wrongful and undemocratic rulings. Third, we denounce the present county administration for not conducting our county affairs according to laws made for the protection of the people. Fourth, we promise the people of this county, if placed in power, we will administer their affairs according to the laws of the State and with the strictest economy compatible with good public service.

"The following ticket was nominated: Representatives, W. E. Basworth, M. V. Moley; commissioners, T. H. Allen, John A. Frazer; Sheriff, J. W. Payne. This puts a double ticket for all county officers. The campaign promises to be a lively one. In today's convention an executive committee was appointed to administer the affairs of the 'reform' wing till a new committee shall be 'elected by the people' in next November's election."

NAILS CAMPAIGN LIARS.

Clanton, Ala., July 30, 1906.

Editor Union:

I was very much surprised when I saw in the last issue of the Banner a letter from J. J. Hawthorne to F. A. Gulledge purporting to give a conversation had between myself and Hawthorne on July 4 at Thorsby. I desire to state to the people of Chilton county that the statements contained in Hawthorne's letter of July 16, 1906, to F. A. Gulledge is the most malicious perversion of facts ever perpetrated, and that the same was done with an infamous intent to injure me. Hawthorne knows that I never made such statements, and he told me, in the presence of Hon. L. B. Pounds, that I never made such statements and denied having told Gulledge that I made them. I am corroborated in this by Mr. Pounds in a letter this day written to The Union.

I copy herein the statement by Hawthorne to me and the letter from Hawthorne to Gulledge:

"Thorsby, Ala., July 12, 1906.

"I understand that a certain report is being circulated over the county as having emanated from me, that Mr. J. Osmond Middleton told me that he was the candidate of the Democrats for the purpose of defeating the Populist and Republican parties in Chilton county, and that he was going to defeat them in this campaign. In justice to myself and Mr. Middleton I hereby denounce such report as as a lie. Mr. Middleton did say that he was being endorsed by leading Democrats, but he did not say that he was their candidate for the purpose of defeating the Populist and Republican parties.

"J. J. HAWTHORNE."

"Thorsby, Ala., July 16, 1906.

"Mr. F. A. Gulledge, Verbena, Ala.:

"Dear Sir—I desire to say to you that on July 4, in his conversation with me at Thorsby, J. Osmond Middleton stated that in his heart he was as good Democrat as breathed the breath of of life, that he had assurance from Democrats in other counties, whose election was a certainty, that he (Middleton) would be admitted to the Democratic caucus if he should be elected to the Legislature; that he had college friends who would support his desire to get in the Democratic caucus. From my conversation with Mr. Middleton he led me to believe that his candidacy was promoted by some ulterior, hidden source, for the purpose of throttling the local Populist-Republican organization in Chilton county.

"The above and foregoing is, in substance, what I stated to you in my talk with you on July 11 concerning my previous conversation with Mr. Middleton. I attach a copy of statement given to Mr. Middleton on July 12, 1906. Yours truly,

"J. J. HAWTHORNE."

God pity the man who would put his signature to two such conflicting statements! And Mr. Gulledge has truly said: "The common sense of the people will direct them to a correct conclusion on this question." And I herewith submit it to them for their verdict. J. OSMOND MIDDLETON.

Thorsby, July 30, 1906.

Editor Union:

I saw in last week's Banner a letter from F. A. Gulledge, in which he copies a letter from J. J. Hawthorne, wherein Hawthorne charges Mr. J. Osmond Middleton with having stated that he (Middleton) was a Democrat and intended to defeat the Populists and Republicans in this county, or that Mr. Middleton led him to believe that such was his purpose. I was present on July 12 at Thorsby during an interview between Mr. Middleton and Mr. Hawthorne, and in justice to Mr. Middleton and the honest voters of Chilton county I must state that in that interview Hawthorne denied emphatically having made the statements attributed to Mr. Middleton. When Mr. Middleton told Hawthorne that Gulledge was circulating the report that he (Hawthorne) had said that Middleton told him he was a Democrat and would get in the Democratic caucus, and that Middleton had led him to believe that Middleton's purpose was to destroy the Populist and Republican parties, I remember distinctly that Hawthorne said, "God in heaven knows you never made any such statement, nor anything that even sounded like it." I was very much surprised when I saw Hawthorne's letter to Gulledge, which was published in last week's Banner, and it seems to be a malicious effort to injure Mr. Middleton, and in behalf of truth and justice I make this statement.

L. B. POUNDS.

Clanton, Ala., July 30, 1906.

Editor Union:

My attention has been called to something Mr. F. A. Gulledge has to say in last week's Banner in regard to the stock law bill, which was most shamefully run over the people of what was then Beat No. 5 in this county.

I notice also that Mr. Gulledge refers the people to me to evidence the fact that he did not appear before the Legislature in support of the measure, and I want to say that if Mr. Gulledge visited the Legislature during my term there I cannot remember it, but I do remember that the measure was put through over the protest of probably four-fifths of the people of said beat. Yes, they petitioned the Legislature, both Democrats and Populists, not to pass the bill, but were never given any sort of hearing, either in committee or otherwise, and I have an affidavit to the effect that Mr. Bostwick, who was then a citizen of Verbena, that he was asked to contribute to a fund to help secure the passage of the bill. All this speaks for itself. But as to what part Mr. Gulledge played in the matter I am unable to say. Neither have I recently agitated the matter in any way, as some might suppose by the manner in which Mr. Gulledge uses my name. But I do say that it was a most infamous piece of work, and I do not blame Mr. Gulledge to try to wash his hands of the matter, for the question does not devolve upon whether stock law is or is not good for the country, but it simply demonstrated the fact that some men have an utter disregard for the voice of a majority of the people and are willing to put through any kind of measure to suit themselves. Even "straws show the way the wind blows." So I say that Mr. Guiledge and his neighbors know how he stood at that time as regards this question, and the record is made, the history is written, and I care not for a controversy over the matter, as it is even to this day a very unpleasant thing to my memory.

Yours truly,

L. B. POUNDS.

Salt Lake City, Utah, July 23, 1906.

Editor Union:

If you have the space I will ask for a few lines. I have been having a big time. I left Birmingham on the 16th. Went from there to Fort Worth, Tex. Then took the Denver and Fort Worth Railroad through the Pan Handle of Texas. Then through New Mexico, and the cattle I saw was a sight to me; and from New Mexico up in the hills of Colorado. Spent two days at Colorado Springs sight-seeing; went up on Pike Peak, which is over 14,000 feet high, and there was plentty of snow up there, which was a strange sight to me in July. I could not stay on Pike's Peak long, as the air was too light for me. I left Colorado Springs for Salt Lake City over the Denver and Rio Grande Railroad, which runs up the Arkansas river valley for 200 miles. There was a jolly crowd along. I was on a tourist car, and the sights we saw were grand. Some places the rocks were over 2,000 feet high, and seemed to hang right over the railroad. We passed through the Royal Gorge, where the only place they could put the railroad was to swing a bridge from one rock to the other. So we passed on, with one grand scene after the other, following up the Arkansas river, until we came to the head of it, and crossed the mountains at the Tennessee Pass, which was over 10,000 feet above sea level, and all the mountain tops were white with snow for over 100 miles. I tell you overcoatts felt good, but when we passed over we went down the Eagle river to the Grand river, and down the Grand for 200 miles, until we reached the Utah Desert. Well, I cannot describe the desert, but for over 100 miles not a bush or any kind of vegetation was to be seen, the sun shining hot and the thermometer 110 in the shade. Just think of what a change in twelve hourse—from snow to 110 in the shade! We reached the Utah Valley, where there are fine farms, all irrigated. And then came Salt Lake City, which is a grand city. I went out to church in the greatt Mormon Tabernacle, which has a seating capacity of 10,000 people, and there I heard the greatest organ in the world. I tell you it was grand. It cost $135,000. I was in the great Salt Lake bathing, and it is a salt lake sure enough—so strong that you cannot sink. I am going from here back to Grand Valley, Colorado, and go out in the mountains fishing. I hope everything is getting on all O. K. in the county, and that there will be a good turnout at our primary on August 6, for I am sure that the ticket that is nominated on that day will be elected in November. I hope you have had no mud-slinging and that every Populist and Republican and all good voters will come out to the primary and vote their convictions, and then do as we've always done—abide the results and elect the ticket. Respectfully,

L. H. REYNOLDS.

REPLY TO B. N. MARTIN.

Thorsby, July 31, 1906.

Editor Union:

Please allow me space in your valuable paper to reply to B. N. Martin's letter in behalf of Mr. D. H. Gentry. Now, I want to say that I live in Beat 9, and if everybody speaks the truth when they are talking to me F. J. Fitts will carry Beat 9 by a large majority, for every man I hear say anything about the Sheriff says Fitts is the man. Not only in Beat 9, but I have been through Beat 1 and find it the same way up there. Hurrah for Fitts and The Union. A UNION MAN.

Macedonia, Ala., July 28, 1906.

Editor Union:

After consulting with a good many people, we think it would be best and right to have our commissioners located in different parts of the county, so as to be handier in keeping up bridges, selecting jurors, etc. Now, we have not got anything against Mr. Pate but as above stated, but to leave S. E. Waldrup out would leave nearly half of the county without a commissioner living in it. We recommend S. E. Waldrup to the people and hope he will meet with their approval. Respectfully, T. A. Sorrell, C. L. Bearden, S. N. Waldrup, E. Bearden, W. M. Merchant and J. P. Atchison.

Jemison, Ala., July 30, 1906.

Editor Union:

It has been told to me that I said that I met F. J. Fitts and W. Y. Nix and that Mr. Fitts was drunk. This I did not say, but may have said that he did look like that he drank whisky. But I never saw him drunk, I never saw him drink a dram, I never saw him have any whisky about him, and I have known him six years. I hope that this will correct this mistake.

S. E. WALDRUP.

I was at S. E. Waldrup's house when said talk was made, and I never heard the above report said.

JAMES NIX.

It is also circulated that I, S. E. Waldrup, voted the Democratic ticket two years ago. This I brand as false. Now to the people: The time is too short for me to go after false reports, so it is with you all. Do as you think best. Yours for the right,

S. E. WALDRUP.

CARD FROM SAMUEL PATE.

Thorsby, July 30, 1906.

Dear Editor:

It has been circulated around that Mr. F. J. Fitts came to me and got me to come out for commissioner against Bro. Waldrup. I want to say right here that it is positively false; Mr. Fitts has never spoken to me on that subject. Yours truly, SAM PATE.

CARD FROM MR. FITTS.

Maplesville, Ala., July 30, 1906.

Editor Union:

It is now only a week until our primary, and I find it will be impossible for me to see all of our people, so I will say a few words to them through The Union concerning certain slanderous reports that have been circulated on me. The reports are lies pure and simple, and have been circulated for no other purpose than to injure me in my candidacy, and I ask every voter before being prejudiced by them against me to consider the parties by whom such reports are being circulated. When this is done I feel sure that you will realize that it is a serfish effort to injure me and to benefit themselves and that there is no truth in them.

It has been my purpose all the while, and I have ever adhered to it, to conduct my campaign on a clean plane, free from mud-slinging and slander, and no man has ever heard me make a single derogatory remark or give circulation to any slanderous report against either of my opponents.

In conclusion, I desire to say that, if the people nominate and elect me, no man will strive harder for the faithful discharge of official duty, doing full justice to every one. But if on August 6 the will of the people be that some other man shall be their nominee, rest assured that I will stand by my promise first made, to use "my very best efforts to elect him by an overwhelming majority." And I shall remain, as I have ever been, a Populist in the county and a Republican in State and national affairs. FELIX J. FITTS.

ANOTHER FOR GOODGAME.

Clanton, Ala., Aug. 1, 1906.

Editor Union:

A few words to the voters. Gentlemen, I haven't a word to say against any candidate, but I think J. F. Goodgame is the most deserving man because he has done more to build up the republican party than any other man, and again he is a hustler at anything he takes hold of. I think we should lay down our personal preferences and vote for the men that have built up our party. Yours for the party,

MOSES A. KILLGORE.

ENDORSING GOODGAME.

Editor Union:

Please allow me a small portion of your space to say a few words in regard to Mr. J. Frank Goodgame, who is before the people for the office of sheriff. I have known Mr. Goodgame ever since I have been a citizen of this county, a period of thirteen years, and now live a door neighbor to him. I unhesitatingly say that he is an honest, upright man, and as good a neighbor as I ever lived by. In politics, he is an unqualified Republican, and an untiring worker for the upbuilding of the Republican party and the people's cause. As United States Deputy Marshal, he discharged the full measure of his duties without fear, favor or affection, and I feel confident that if he should be elected sheriff the people would make no mistake.

Now, Mr. Editor, I desire to say in conclusion that the above is not intended to detract in the least any merit from other candidates, but is only a statement of a small portion of the worthy characteristics of Mr. Goodgame.

Trusting that our people will all turn out to the primary next Monday and vote for the man of their choice, I am yours truly,

A. C. SMITH.

CENTER POINT.

Editor Union:

Say, you ought to have been down at our big barbecue the last day of our singing school. There was good singing under the very able leadership of Prof. J. C. Veazey, there was plenty to eat, and generally good behavior. There was some speaking done by the opposing candidates for Representative of Chilton county and it sure looked as if the "young orator" has got the best end of the rope. Also, it is a sure thing that Felix J. Fitts will be the next sheriff of Chilton. Now, brethren of the F. E. and C. U. of A., just stick to your locals and we are sure to win the fight for our rights as American citizens and farmers. A local has been organized at Billingsley, which bids fair to be a strong lodge, as all of those chaps that have been holding off and looking to see what we could do are coming into the fold. Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Langston are the proud parents of a 12-pound boy, and mother and child are doing well. Crops are good in this part of the universe and coon hunting and eating roasting ears is all the go at present. I am still the same one that wrote last.

L. W. C.

THORSBY.

Mrs. G. W. Phalin came home last Wednesday for a visit with relatives.

Mrs. P. C. Smith and children visited in Birmingham Sunday and Monday.

R. M. Hubbard, of Jemison, was in town Tuesday.

Miss Lila May Robinson is back from her visit at Seacright.

Misses Nannie and Kathleen Shivers visited here the first of the week.

Mrs. Amundsen left for Chicago on Tuesday for a visit with relatives.

Providence and Thorsby played ball on the home grounds Tuesday afternoon. The game was in favor of Providence, the score being 7 to 9.

Geo. Freeman was in Clanton Tuesday.

Mrs. I. S. Gerald and daughters, Agnes and Ruth, left Tuesday morning for an extended visit with friends and relatives in Minnesota and North Dakota.

Sereno Norton and Lawrence Gerald drove to Clanton Friday.

James Bosworth, of Birmingham, visited in our city from Wednesday until Sunday.

Master Glenn Warnick had the misfortune of dislocating his arm Monday evening while at play.

Mr. Emil Fors, who has been ailing for some time, passed away at his home here Friday afternoon.

The educational rally, supper and concert given by the trustees of Thorsby institute on Tuesday afternoon and evening was a great success, not only as to money returns, but the pleasure and enjoyment of the speeches and music by all present. Miss Boyd and Miss Moffett, of Birmingham, were artists of the first class. Miss Moffett being one of Birmingham's favorite vocalists. In the afternoon Dr. Phillips, superintendent of schools in Birmingham, gave one of the best speeches ever delivered in Thorsby on education. In the evening the special feature was Dr. Dickinson's lecture, which was very well received by a fine audience. Altogether the rally was one long to be remembered by all. The proceeds, which were considerable, will be given to the school.

NEMO.

A GOOD WORK.

Editor Union:

Judging from the good attendance at the recent Sunday school convention held in Clanton, Chilton county is wide awake in Sunday school work. we were so pressed for time that we did not discuss "The Beginner's Course" in primary work. As this is very important, I wish every school that is not familiar with this feature would write to Westminster Publishing House, Philadelphia, Pa., for free samples. Do not be discouraged if you can not afford to buy the entire course. Send 15 cents to get the "Song Stories" and 25 cents for "Supplemental Lessons for Beginners." These two books give the method to obtain and keep the children's attention. Place this literature in the hands of some one in your school who has a fertile imagination and use the Bible. They can use these pictures in place of the "Large Cards" in the prescribed course, their imagination to supplement about each picture. As soon as possible get the "Regular Course" established permanently in your school.

The children who compose the class are from 3 to 6 years of age. When you are working up this class get the name of the baby in the home, date of its birth, its age, name and address of its parents. Secure a nice piece of card board, print on it

CRADLE ROLL

Baby's Name. Birth-day. Age.

Place the information on the blanks, hang in your Sunday school room, and lo! you have a class without any expense. Watch it grow and when the duplicates begin to come, be sure to write me, as I am always wishing it many friends. Send me a copy as soon as it reaches you, and I will bring it into the department.

Hoping that I have given you a practical manner in which our school can be modern in this department, and not multiply words, as space has a wide circulation, I hope it may reach many readers through its columns, and your kindness.

Yours in the work,

MRS. S. U. TURNER,
Clanton.

BEAT ONE.

Mr. Editor:

I noticed an article in last week's Union concerning the Democratic meeting (?) held in the court house July 21 and signed by "Many," which he says "you ought to have been there." Now, I beg to differ with you. X-Ray, for this fact, that old goats will not do well in the mountains nor won't both produce wool and mutton. had (in past days) too much democratic hair mixed with the Democratic Republican principles, so as to speak, not, handle not, visit not, the political party of our county, but have had fair warning time and time. X-Ray referred to their ragged patched breeches and bare heels. Mr. Editor, keeping bad company brings about just such things. He speaks of Col. Sam Aris[on] there "with his spice and vinegar," guess some pepper, too. But Pops don't need any of Sam's seasoning at all, nor do we care a cent about Gulledge's string band. We have musical bands enough in our party, and we propose to play in exact to time on the 6th day of November and give the Dems a rousing on the 6th day of November. Middleton will be our representative in the Legislature. Now, I have just a little corner in your paper this and I'll come again soon with another dollar.

THE GRIZZLY.

PROGRAM

Of District Meeting First Division Chilton County Baptist Association To Be Held With New Salem Church Friday and Saturday, August 10 and 11, 1906.

10 a. m. Friday. Prayer meeting. J. Wiley Foshee.

10:30 a. m. "What Is a Church?"—Rev. A. L. Foshee and W. T. Beal.

11 a. m. Preaching by Rev. W. T. Beal.

1:30 p. m. Duties of members to church; 2nd, Deacons to the church. Individual members to deacons. J. H. Thomas and A. F. Cain.

9 a. m. Saturday. "What are some of the Causes of the Indifference of the Church to the Church and Her Interest?"—R. A. Rasco and D. [illegible]

10 a. m. "If Grace Can Save, How Are the Wicked Lost?"—J. O. Vickers and W. M. Wood.

11 a. m. Preaching by A. Williams.

1:30 p. m. "Can We as Baptists All the Fifth Sundays to Our Sunday School Association?"—J. A. Cain and W. L. Honeycutt.

2 p. m. "Is the Sunday School the Best Place to Keep the Sabbath? If Not, How Should We Keep the Day?"—W. P. Lowery and J. A. Champion.

2:30 p. m. "Can a Church Member Do Their Duty Out of the Church?"—Rev. J. E. Champion and Rev. Pate.

FOR SALE

160 acres land, 65 acres in cultivation; two miles south of Clanton; dwelling and outbuildings; never failing water; very good land. Will be sold at a bargain.

H. M. R[illegible]
Clanton.

tf

NOTICE.

Blank Deeds, Mortgages and all official forms for Justices of the Peace for sale at The Union office. Only best approved forms are used. Come in and see us your order.

AND COUNTY OFFICIALS.
Circuit Court.
Term—Third Monday in May.
Term—Fourth Monday in No.
...L. Brewer, Tuskegee.
...W. B. Bowling, Dadeville.
...Sam W. Collins.

Chancery Court.
Term—Second Monday in
Term—Second Monday in Sep.
...Hon. W. W. Whitesides.
...Mrs. S. A. Stewart, Clan.

County Court.
Monday in each month.

Commissioners' Court.
Monday February, first Mon.
...first Monday June, second
July, second Monday August,
Monday November.

COUNTY OFFICERS.
...of Probate—L. H. Reynolds.
...urer—W. T. Callen.
...iff—J. M. Morgan.
...itor—W. M. Adams.
Assessor—L. B. Pounds.
Collector—T. J. Hubbard.

County Commissioners.
...District—W. H. Conway.
...d District—Alex Glasscock.
...d District—R. P. Kendrick.
...th District—Moses Robinson.

Supt. of Education.
J. W. Moore, Clanton.

County Surveyor.
R. Dahl, Calera.

State Senator.
W. R. Oliver, Calera.

COUNTY CHURCHES.

MISSIONARY BAPTIST.
...PHANY—Rev. J. L. Neeley, pastor. First Sunday and Saturday before. D. L. Hand, clerk.

...H-SALEM—Rev. M. J. Parrish, E. B. Popwell, clerk.

...E CREEK—Rev. J. L. Busbey, First Sunday and Saturday W. E. Thomas, clerk.

...LINS CHAPEL—Rev. J. H. ..., pastor. Third Sunday and ...day before. J. D. Collins, clerk.

...RS HILL—Rev. J. H. Thomas, First Sunday and Saturday G. W. Scott, clerk.

...EDONIA—Rev. J. H. Thomas, Fourth Sunday and Saturday at 3:30 p. m. H. H. Armstrong, ...

...ASANT GROVE—Rev. J. H. ..., pastor. Fourth Sunday and ...day before at 11 a. m. D. H. ..., clerk.

...VIDENCE—Rev. W. W. Robinson, pastor. Second Sunday and Saturday before. Riley Robinson, clerk.

...HOBOTH (Bibb Co.)—Rev. J. H. ..., pastor. Second Sunday and ...day before. D. C. Smitherman, ...

PRIMITIVE BAPTIST.
...THEL—Elder J. P. Mobles, pastor. Second Sunday and Saturday before. J. T. Abernathy, clerk.

METHODIST EPISCOPAL.
...CKY MOUNT—Rev. A. T. Vanpastor. Second Sunday. Sing every second and fourth Sunday noon. Prayer meeting every Wednesday night. Ladies' prayer meeting Saturday afternoon.

FRATERNAL SOCIETIES.
Masonic.
...ton R. A. Chapter, No. 116—Saturday, Clanton.

...ade Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No. ...Fourth Saturday, Cooper.

...ton Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No. ...First Saturday, Clanton.

...bury Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No. ...First Saturday, Billingsley.

...man Lodge, A. F. and A. M., ...4—Saturday on or before full ...Marbury.

...son Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No. ...Saturday on or before full moon, ...

...ton Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No. ...Tuesday on or before full moon, ...

I. O. O. F.
...son Lodge—First and third Sat...

...ton Lodge, No. 204—Second and Saturdays.

Woodmen of the World.
...k Jack Camp, No. 196—First and ...Mondays.

I. C. R. M.
...serme Tribe, No. 96—First and ...Mondays sleep. Visiting chiefs ...ly invited. E. B. Langston, C. J. H. Patton, Sachem.

...rie Tribe No. 42—2nd and 4th ...day sleeps. Visiting chiefs cor... invited. J. M. Grant, Sachem; ...Parrish, C. of R.

ace this literature in the me one in your school
rtile imagination and
ble. They can use the res in place of the "Lazy rds" in the prescribed eir imagination to simplify out each picture. As soon
e get the "Regular Course" blish permanently in your
The children who compose
e from 3 to 6 years of age.
u are working up this me of the baby in the its birth, its age, name and its parents. Secure a nice rd board, print on it:

CRADLE ROLL.

Name. Birth-day. Parents and Age.

Place the information gained anks, hang in your Sunday oom, and lo! you have a Cra without any expense. Watch nd when the different b ome, be sure to write baby iving it many returns of s soon as it reaches three ing it into the beginners'
Hoping that I have given a al manner in which our sch
e modern in this department ot multiply words. As you s a wide circulation, I hope any readers through its colu our kindness.

Yours in the work,
MRS. S. U. TURNIPS
Clanton.

BEAT ONE.

Mr. Editor:

I noticed an article in last Union concerning the Democra meeting (?) held in the court July 21 and signed by "X-R which he says "you ought to h there." Now, I beg to differ X-Ray, for this fact, that sh coats will not do well in the nor won't both produce wool.
had (in past days) too much eratic hair mixed with the Republican principles, so let not, handle not, visit not, the political party of our country, have had fair warning time a X-Ray referred to their patched breeches and bare fe
Mr. Editor, keeping bad brings about just such things
He speaks of Col. Sam Arle
there "with his spice and va guess some pepper, too. But Pops don't need any of Sam's ing at all, nor do we care about Gulledge's string band.
have musical bands enough in party, and we propose to play exact to time on the 6th day and give the Dems a rousing on the 6th day of November Middleton will be our repre
in the Legislature. Now, Mr.
just a little corner in your this and I'll come again some another dollar.

THE GRIZZLY

PROGRAM

Of District Meeting First Distr
ton County Baptist Assoc
Be Held With New Salem
Friday and Saturday, Augu
11, 1906.

10 a. m. Friday. Prayer
J. Wiley Foshee.

10:30 a. m. "What Is a C
Rev. A. L. Foshee and Wm
11 a. m. Preaching by
Beal.

1:30 p. m. Duties of church: 2nd. Deacons to Individual members to deac
J. H. Thomas and A. F. Chil
9 a. m. Saturday. "What of the Causes of the Indif Church to the Church and ers?" R. A. Rasco and D.
10 a. m. "If Grace Co
How Are the Wicked Lost?"
O. Vickers and W. M. Wood.
11 a. m. Preaching by J.
iams.

1:30 p. m. "Can We as
All the Fifth Sundays to th
School Association?"—J. J.
and W. L. Honeycutt.

2 p. m. "Is the Sunday
Best Place to Keep the Sa
If Not, How Should We
Day?"—W. P. Lowery and J.
pton.

2:30 p. m. "Can a Conv son Do Their Duty Out of the Rev. J. E. Champion and Pate.

FOR SALE.

160 acres land, 65 acres tion; two miles south of Cl dwelling and outbuildings;
lasting water; very good
be sold at a bargain.

H. M. BO
Cl

tf

NOTICE.

Blank Deeds, Mo
and all official fo
Justices of the Pe
for sale at The Uni
Only best approved are used. Come in us your order.

COUNTY OFFICIALS.

Circuit Court.

Term—Third Monday in May
Term—Fourth Monday in No

L. Brewer, Tuskegee.
W. B. Bowling, Dadeville.
W. Collins.

Chancery Court.

Term—Second Monday in
Term—Second Monday in Sep

Hon. W. W. Whiteside
Mrs. S. A. Stewart, Clan

County Court.

Monday in each month.

Commissioners' Court.

Monday February, first Mon
first Monday June, second
July, second Monday August,
Monday November.

COUNTY OFFICERS.

of Probate—L. H. Reynolds.
—W. T. Callen.
—J. M. Morgan.
—W. M. Adams.
Assessor—L. B. Pounds.
Collector—T. J. Hubbard.

County Commissioners.

District—W. H. Conway.
District—Alex Glasscock.
District—R. P. Kendrick.
District—Moses Robinson.

Supt. of Education.

J. W. Moore, Clanton.

County Surveyor.

R. Dahl, Calera.

State Senator.

W. H. Oliver, Calera.

COUNTY CHURCHES.

MISSIONARY BAPTIST.

HANY—Rev. J. L. Neeley, pas
First Sunday and Saturday be
D. L. Hand, clerk.

TH-SALEM—Rev. M. J. Parrish,
E. B. Popwell, clerk.

E CREEK—Rev. J. L. Busbey,
First Sunday and Saturday
W. E. Thomas, clerk.

LINS CHAPEL—Rev. J. H.
, pastor. Third Sunday and day before. J. D. Collins, clerk.

RS HILL—Rev. J. H. Thomas,
First Sunday and Saturday
G. W. Scott, clerk.

EDONIA—Rev. J. H. Thomas,
Fourth Sunday and Saturday
at 3:30 p. m. H. H. Armstrong,

ASANT GROVE—Rev. J. H.
, pastor. Fourth Sunday and day before at 11 a. m. D. H.
, clerk.

VIDENCE—Rev. W. W. Robin
pastor. Second Sunday and Sat before. Riley Robinson, clerk.

ROBOTH (Bibb Co.)—Rev. J. H.
, pastor. Second Sunday and day before. D. C. Smitherman,

PRIMITIVE BAPTIST.

EBEL—Elder J. P. Mobles, pas
Second Sunday and Saturday be
J. T. Abernathy, clerk.

METHODIST EPISCOPAL.

CKY MOUNT—Rev. A. T. Van
, pastor. Second Sunday. Sing
very second and fourth Sunday noon. Prayer meeting every Wed day night. Ladies' prayer meeting
Saturday afternoon.

FRATERNAL SOCIETIES.

Masonic.

R. A. Chapter, No. 116—
Saturday, Clanton.

Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No.
Fourth Saturday, Cooper.

Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No.
First Saturday, Clanton.

Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No.
First Saturday, Billingsley.

Lodge, A. F. and A. M.,
—Saturday on or before full
Marbury.

Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No.
Saturday on or before full moon,

Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No.
Tuesday on or before full moon,

I. O. O. F.

Lodge—First and third Sat

Lodge, No. 204—Second and Saturdays.

Woodmen of the World.

Jack Camp, No. 190—First and Mondays.

I. O. R. M.

Tribe, No. 90—First and Mondays sleep. Visiting chiefs
invited. E. B. Langston, C.
J. H. Patton, Sachem.

Tribe No. 48—2nd and 4th
day sleeps. Visiting chiefs cor
invited. J. M. Grant, Sachem;
Parrish, C. of R.

F. E. & C. U. OF A.

Chilton Co. Division Officers.

J. H. Thomas, President, Jemison, Rte. 1.
J. W. Hayes, Vice Pres., Thorsby, Rte 1.
J. N. Dennis, Sec-Treas., Clanton, Rte 6.
G. W. Thomas, Chaplain, Clanton, Rte 2.
J. W. Sorrell, Bus. Agent, Jemison, Rte 4.
C. N. Elland, Lecturer, Clanton, Rte 4.
N. A. Dobbs, Asst. Lect., Clanton, Rte 3.
W. J. Bean, Conductor, Clanton, Rte 4.
W. F. Culpepper, Doorkeeper, Clanton, Rte 3.
W. A. Barnett, Ex. Committee, Jemison, Rte 2.
E. H. Mims, Ex. Committee, Clanton, Rte 1.
J. Wiley Forbee, Ex. Committee, Clanton, Rte 4.

F. E. & C. U. O A.

A resolution was adopted at the last county meting of the Farmers' Union requiring the county lecturer to visit each local in the county at least once every year. Locals who want me to lecture to them will please write me, giving their location, so as to enable me to make a tour of the county in July and August. Address

C. N. ELLAND,
tf Route 4, Clanton, Ala.

BARBECUE AND DINNER AT ROCKY MOUNT SCHOOL HOUSE.

There will be an all-day educational and union rally at the new school house at Rocky Mount, 4 miles from Jemison, on August 16, 1906. J. A. Skaggs will superintend the barbecuing of the meat and dinner will be served on the ground. B. E. Collum will be in charge of the lemonade, ice cream, etc., which will be sold and the profits go to the school. W. I. MacAdory, Supt. of Jefferson Co.; J. W. Morris, Supt. of Chilton Co.; Probate Judge L. H. Reynolds and others will speak. F. B. Williams is the teacher at this school house. Everybody is invited to come, especially the surrounding districts. Come and spend an enjoyable and profitable day. tf

FOR SALE!

A saw mill outfit consisting of engine, boiler, saw mill, Challoner shingle mill, three Challoner shingle presses, one small planer and matcher. All in first class condition. Will sell on easy terms, or exchange for other property, except saw mill outfit.

C. E. Wheelock, Mgr.
Fixico, Ala.

NOTICE!

At Thorsby, Ala., May 17, 1906, the County Union passed a resolution to build a union warehouse and a committee was appointed by said meeting to select a suitable place for the warehouse; and the committee recommended that a warehouse be built at Thorsby and reported same to the County Union held at Union Grove June 21st, and said resolution was adopted by the County Union and ordered or suggested that the members of the union go to work and get up stock or take subscription for stock in said warehouse; and a sufficient amount has been raised to build the warehouse, so all subscribers will take due notice.

A MEETING IS CALLED for August 4, 1906, at Thorsby, Ala., 10 a. m. and all, both new and old, stockholders and persons who have subscribed for stock or authorized same to be subscribed will meet at Thorsby, on above date, organize, elect directors, and attend to such other business as is proper to be done at said meeting.

And all are expected to pay up at said meeting, or before that time, if they wish. And it is desired that all FARMERS and all persons in sympathy with the farmers will take stock in said warehouse and let's make the capital stock $10,000 instead of $5,000.

J. BICE, Pres.
July 24, 1906. tf

JOHN W. HARRELL,

Jemison, Ala.

Photographer. Dealer in all grades of enlarging. Frames made to order. Work done at your own home by appointment.

The anarchist is the fool who rocks the boat of government, according to Town Topics.

REWARD! REWARD!

Lost, a white and liver colored Setter Dog, about 15 months old, (large to age), near Rodgers' Cemetery, June 19th. I will pay a liberal reward for his return to me at Clanton, Ala

tf. W. H. SARTOR.

CLANTON COTTON MARKET.

Total receipts to Aug. 1, 1906, 6,550.
Price same date, 10 3-8c.
Receipts same time in 1905, 8,037.
Price same date, 10c.

LOCAL AND PERSONAL.

An all-day singing at Mount Pleasant school house on Sunday, August 5, 1906. Everybody invited to come and bring their books and baskets.

John W. Hawkins, of Clear Creek, took the first prize for judging fowls at the Auburn institute last week. The prize was a trio of pure bred fowls, valued at $10.00. Good boy, John.

James A. Mims was a pleasant visitor Thursday, putting up a dollar for THE UNION and Union Educator to be sent to N. H. Wyatt, Blocton, Ala. That is the way, brethren, take a personal interest in YOUR paper and help build it up.

W. W. Jones, of Lomax, was a welcome caller Thursday.

J. W. Harrell, the photographer, and A. D. Davis, Professor of Caligraphy, both of Jemison, were in THE UNION office Thursday. Mr. Harrell presented THE UNION with a photograph that he took of the county union at Union Grove June 21st and it is a daisy. Bro. Harrell is a union man clear through and likewise a good photographer. Order from him and you will get the goods.

S. M. Edwards was in Clanton Friday.

J. Beadlescomb was in town Friday.

J. W. Riggins and Noah Littlejohn were Clanton visitors Friday.

B. F. Sasnett was a pleasant visitor Monday. Say, boys, he's a musician.

J. Wiley Foshee was in town Monday.

M. C. Williams and J. H. Gillespie were in Clanton Monday.

E. F. Jackson and W. H. Hayes were in town Monday.

Bro. A. D. Massey paid us a visit Monday, looking well for a man with 75 years to his credit.

D. J. Rollan, J. J. Edwards and Tom Cleckler were pleasant visitors Monday.

H. W. and J. S. Dupree, of Winston county, who have been here on a visit to their brother, our fellow townsman, J. L. Dupree, returned to their home Tuesday and took J. L. and family with them to show them how things looked up in good Republican Winston.

H. M. Mahan and wife are visiting in Birmingham at the home of their son, Z. R., and put in their time admiring their little granddaughter.

J. Wiley Smith has sold out his stock of goods and has retired from the merchandise business for a while. We hope you took advantage of his ad. in THE UNION and got some of those bargains he had on tap. Union advertisers tell the truth, no fake about them.

J. F. Hays was in Clanton Tuesday.

Squire J. J. McDowell was in town Tuesday.

W. P. Smitherman was a pleasant visitor Tuesday.

Candidate Fitts was in Clanton Tuesday.

People say that J. O. Middleton did do Mr. Gulledge a sure enough job in a little debate they had at Center Point last Friday.

W. J., H. O. and Elbert Bean and L. C. Cleckler were in Clanton Tuesday. Say, that was a great field of Beans.

If you want to see some nice thoroughbred chickens, go to J. B. Downs. He has several varieties and all registered fowls.

M. J. Barrett, of Thorsby, has added a fine registered Poland china sow to his herd and will sell you registered pigs in the future.

The month of July has been remarkable for the amount of rain, 12 1-2 inches was the total for the month, about four times as much as a year ago.

L. A. and Eufa Brown, of Free Springs, were in Clanton Wednesday.

A. C. Maddox was in town Wednesday.

The south-bound accommodation on Friday afternoon made an unexpected stop at Clanton just above the R. R. bridge. The cause was a freight train in the way, the engineer set his air brakes and jumped, landing unhurt but a little soiled, the fireman was not so lucky and got cut up quite badly. Flagman Harrison was in the baggage car and a number of sample trunks rolled down on him, but he emerged from the "rucus" with only a few scratches. "All's well that ends well," but it might have been a very serious affair, and all brought about by the neglect of the flagman of the freight.

"People say" that Mr. Gulledge is sorry that he issued his challenge to a "joint debate," for he is not showing up very well against Mr. Middleton. Well, there is an old and very true proverb about "fools rush in where angels fear to tread."

FOR SALE.

30 young cockerels. Silver Spangled Hamburgs, Golden Laced Wyandotts, Buff, Brown and White Leghorns. Prices 50c to $1.50. All birds pure bred and of good quality.

J. B. Downs,
tf Clanton, Ala.

MARRIAGE LICENSES.

W. J. Culp and Miss Cora Glenn. Jim Armstrong and Miss Ora Jackson. T. M. Strickland and Mrs. B. S. Russell.

COLORED.

Will Simon and Dora Dixon. Mack Byrd and Beulah Smith. Joe Lacy and Mary Jane Rutledge.

NOTICE!

Managers, Clerks and Returning Officers of the People's Primary election, to be held August 6, 1906:

BEAT 1, MINERAL SPRINGS.

Managers—J. P. Bean, W. P. Cleckler, D. P. Martin; clerks, C. C. Conway, Sam Driver; returning officer, B. L. Martin.

BEAT 2 (BOX 1) PROVIDENCE.

Managers, W. H. Shaw, Will Sims, J. B. Wiggins; clerks, William Conway, J. E. Cobb; returning officer, Joe Cobb.

BEAT 2 (BOX 2) JEMISON.

Managers, J. M. Honeycutt, E. G. Cofer, John Rodgers; clerks, B. E. Collum, Charles Shaw; returning officer, C. C. Crumpton.

BEAT 3 (BOX 1) BENSON.

Managers, R. J. Williams, Walter Deshazo, Alex Giles; clerks, Marion Wagner, John Deshazo; returning officer, Arn. Calfee.

BEAT 3 (BOX 2) MACEDONIA.

Managers, J. D. Hodgins, Y. O. Freeman, George Dawson; clerks, Monroe Hubbard, Z. J. Jones; returning officer, J. D. Glasscock.

BEAT 4, CLANTON.

Managers, J. W. Littlejohn, J. D. Grant, R. Rutland; clerks, J. Watts Moore, A. G. Dake; returning officer, R. M. Smith.

BEAT 5, VERBENA.

Managers, J. T. Norris, Will Sims. Bird Johnson; clerks, M. Miller, Ephraim Jones; returning officer, W. S. Clark.

BEAT 6, KINCHEON.

Managers, Charles Foshee, B. F. Dobbs, John Edwards; clerks, W. L. Popwell, Charles Huett; returning officer, M. F. Lett.

BEAT 7 (BOX 1) MAPLESVILLE.

Managers, W. Y. Nix, Monroe Merchant, C. J. Coburn; clerks, D. J. Cooley, W. J. Atchison; returning officer, J. H. Grooms.

BEAT 7 (BOX 2) SHOULTS.

Managers, T. J. Littlejohn, J. N. Gentry, Frank Green; clerks, J. H. Green, James Langston; returning officer, John Green.

BEAT 8 (BOX 1) STANTON.

Managers, T. G. Milling, L. L. Leeter, W. M. Price; clerks, Wade Harris, D. C. Gaudy; returning officer, John Ramsey.

BEAT 8 (BOX 2) PLETCHER.

Managers, John Kendrick, S. B. Ratliff, Sr., J. A. Poole; clerks, J. T. Anderson, M. Bridges; returning officer, T. C. Abbott.

BEAT 9, THORSBY.

Managers, G. S. Burnett, B. N. Martin, W. P. Murrah; clerks, A. Z. Bear, S. P. Collins; returning officer, Lee Vickers.

BEAT 10, COOPERS.

Managers, J. J. McDowell, J. S. Jones, Joseph Cox; clerks, C. J. Eiland, J. J. Dennis; returning officer, E. N. Wilson.

BEAT 11, FLINT HILL.

Managers, G. W. Pate, John Gore, W. T. Mahan; clerks, Robert Gore Matt Mahan; returning officer, M. A. Killgore. tf

SPECIAL OFFER! !

The Union, Weekly Montgomery Advertiser, and a great white and black map of Alabama, United States and world, three in one, with a picture of every president from Washington to Roosevelt, all for $1.50.

STRAYED OR STOLEN.

From near my residence on June 25, one iron gray mare colt, one year old; one iron gray horse colt, with star on face, and scar on left hind leg above hock, one and a half years old. Any information leading to their recovery will be liberally rewarded.

C. C. MARTIN,
tf Calera, Ala., Rte 1.

PRIMARY ELECTION.

Notice is hereby given that the people's primary election will be held on the 6th day of August, 1906, at the various voting places in Chilton county for the purpose of nominating candidates for the offices to be filled in said county in the November election.

All qualified voters who will support the nominees of this primary are invited to participate.

W. R. JACKSON,
Chairman Republican Ex. Com.
A. C. SMITH, Secretary.
W. H. SHAW,
Chairman Populist Ex. Com.
J. D. COLLINS, Secretary.
tf

E. G. Rollins & Co.

——DEALERS IN——

General Merchandise, Clothing, Shoes and Fancy Groceries.

CLANTON, :-: ALABAMA.

WOODLAWN FARM.

Barred Plymouth Rocks

PURE BRED

Setting of 15 fresh eggs for 50c. Packing for shipping 10c extra.

PURE BRED

Duroc Jersey Hogs.

Write us for prices before you buy. Address,

W. Y. NIX,
Maplesville, Alabama.

A. A. JACKSON

Lomax, Alabama.

General merchandise, corn, hay, shorts, shoes, men's hats, Ladies hats. Best quality and lowest prices in all goods.

Highest Market Price Paid for Chickens and Eggs.

J. E. Littlejohn

Clanton, Alabama.

General Merchandise, Corn, Hay, etc.

SHOES

The most for the money in town. Come and see us and we will do you good. :-: :-: :-: :-: :-:

FOR SALE

At all times, high grade hogs and pigs, Berkshire and Poland China, crossed.

M. J. BARRETT,
tf Thorsby, Ala.

BUSINESS PROPOSITION

The best whiskey in the country is here. If you don't believe it, try me.

J. M. COLLINS,
Palace Saloon, Calera, Ala.
tf.

Notice No. 20906.

NOTICE FOR PUBLICATION.

Department of the Interior, Land Office at Montgomery, Ala., July 9, 1906.

Notice is hereby given that the following-named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim, and that said proof will be made before Clerk of Circuit Court, at Clanton, Ala., on Sept. 1, 1906, viz.: George W. Pate, Homestead entry No. 34394, for the E 1-2 of Ne 1-4, E 1-2 of Se 1-4 of Section 2, Tp. 23, in R 15 E.

He names the folowing witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of said land, viz.:

Rolifee F. Bates, of Clanton, Ala.; John Davis, of Clanton, Ala.; William L. Littleton, of Shelby, Ala.; and William M. Willis, of Shelby, Ala.

ROBERT D. JOHNSTON,
Register.

CRAWFORD & SAMMONS Blacksmiths Horseshoers & wheel wrights. At the "Old Vine stand" Clanton, Ala. Horse-shoeing 80 cent; Shrinking Buggy tires 50 cents; New tires 65 cents. Other work in proportion. Come and see us. tf.

GINNING SFASON 1906-7

We have engaged Joe and Walter Maddox to run and operate our gins for the coming season. We have the best machinery and with these men to operate it, we can guarantee entire satisfaction to those who patronize us. Bring us your cotton.

Respectfully
Chilton Warehouse & M,f,g. Company. tf.

FOR SALE OR RENT!

Land for sale, or to rent. One, two, three and four horse farms; two miles north of Jemison. Call on or address,

J. C. DUBOSE,
tf. Jemison, Ala.

MONEY TO LOAN

On real estate. Call or write me at my abiding place with Mr. G. O. Foshee, one mile northeast of Clanton, R. F. D. No. 1. Come during banking hours, as I keep my money in the bank.

tf JAMES GLASS.

FOR SALE!

300 acres land, 150 acres in cultivation. All in Sec. 6 T., 20, R., 14, 9 miles S. W. of Clanton. Good dwelling house and out buildings and 3 good tenant houses. Good and lasting well of water. This good farming land will be sold at a bargain. Call and see,

tf J. H. CARTER,
Clanton, R. F. D. No.

Song of the Search.

With garments crumpled and torn,
With her heart in a desperate mood,
A woman fumed in unwomanly rage
Seeking a cooker of food.
Search! search! search!
By subway, by trolley, in church,
Wherever she went, in dolorous voice
She sang the song of her search!

Search! search! search!
While the cook is crowing aloof!
And search! search! search!
For she has no cook—forsooth!
It's oh! for the days of slaves,
When your servants dare not shirk,
When ladies had never a dish to wash
And were waited on like a Turk!

Search! search! search!
Till your brain begins to swim!
Search! search! search!
Till you ache in every limb!
A cook who will wash, or who won't,
Or who condescends only to cook,
It's always the same old tiresome game
Whichever way you look!

With garments crumpled and torn,
With eyelids heavy and red,
She returns at night to a comfortless home
And tumbles, weary to bed.
Search! search! search!
Next day it begins again;
And we fear it will be till eternity
The burden of her refrain!
—Puck.

The Big Bear of the Tetons.

The sun was just turning to crimson the glacier while triangle of the highest of the Three Tetons as David Hanlon slammed into the log cabin, bringing in a fresh whiff of the crisp autumn air. His sisted Marta was bending over the stove, frying trout. Fork in hand, she turned in surprise.

"The Big Bear!" cried David. "He's been in the sheep corral again. He tore down that low place in the willow fence where he always goes over, and he just slaughtered the sheep."

"Dear! dear!" wailed his sister. "He has killed so many before! What ever shall we do?"

"Kill him!" retorted her brother, grimly.

"He must be a grizzly," ventured Marta, dubiously.

"That's about what he is," assented David. "Our Teton grizzlies are not as large as some silvertips but there are none so cunning and wicked and powerful. Most silvertips make their lair in some dark canon, and scuttle when they see a man, but these fellows range far and wide, just hunting for trouble."

The Big Bear had done enough mischief up and down the Teton Basin to warrant his bad reputation. Every rancher for miles hated and feared him. He was an ugly, surly fellow, although not so large as a California grizzly.

"I mean to catch the Big Bear," boasted David. "I'll sell his wicked old hide for twenty-five dollars, Marta, and you can buy some trinkets." He laughed, although he felt angry enough over his losses occasioned by the bear's depredations.

"You must be careful," cautioned his sister. She knew David had killed so many bears during their five years in the Teton Basin that he felt only contempt for the big clumsy fellows.

He made no ado about killing a bear. A good gun, steady nerves, and a bullet well placed—that was all that was required. Of course, he would add, you must look sharp when you meet a bear with cubs, or wound or corner a grizzly. And one would hardly shoot a bear on a ledge above, as it might roll down upon one. In brief, as David would summarize it, a man who hunts anything needs—just gumption!

While David and Marta ate breakfast David enlarged upon his plans for putting an end to the bear.

His sheep corral lay a little way back from the cabin. It was enclosed by a high, tight fence of woven willows. At the rear of the corral the fence was set squarely across an old path leading back and up into the pines which feathered the base of a talon-like spur of the mountains.

On every trip to David's corral the bear had come down this path and climbed over into the corral, partially knocking down the fence. When he had slain to his bloody satisfaction, he had climbed out at the same place and returned to the upper mountain fastnesses.

"I mean to watch every night," said David, " just inside the fence, close to the broken place, and as the old fellow comes down the path and over the fence, I'll shoot him."

This campaign seemed to David and his sister certain of success. Night after night David watched, ready for the fatal shot the moment the bear should life his head above the fence.

During the day David slept and rested, and so, fresh and enthusiastic every evening, he resumed his watch for the marauder.

"I think he'll come tonight," David said on the fourth evening, as he took down his favorite rifle from the small arsenal on the cabin wall. David Hanlon's "fad" was guns. He possessed seven of the best and latest patterns. Nor was his fad an extravagance, for the guns were his stock in trade. His hunting brought him many a dollar for game, and heads and pelts for Eastern taxidermists.

A few years ago there was an abundance of bear, moose, elk and deer in the Teton Basin. Even now, when the big game has been driven back by the encroachments of settlers, David Hanlon still derives a good income from his beloved mountains.

During the summer tourist season he acts as guide in the Yellowstone National Park. Every autumn, when the game season opens, he earns from five to ten dollars a day as guide for the wealthy sportsmen who come from the East to hunt big game in the Teton range and in the Jackson Hole country which lies just south of the great park.

David Hanlon has lived and loved his mountain life as a true sportsman. Your true sportsman has a triune nature—a poet's appreciation of beauty, a philosopher's content with simple living, and the primitive man's passionate love of the chase.

The tang of sage on the far, high mesas, the incense and murmur of pines on the slopes, the gleam of the eternal silver seams fourteen thousand feet up yonder on the peaks—these are things incomparably precious to the lover of the free, wild out doors.

Marta Hanlon had her rifle, too, for under her brother's tutelage she had become an excellent shot. She was a good horsewoman and an adept snow-shoer as well.

When her brother took his stand on the farther side of the sheep corral, Marta stood her rifle conveniently near the kitchen door. As she washed the supper dishes she listened for any unusual sounds from the corrals.

About nine o'clock her quick ear caught a wild bleating and a rush of small, stampeding feet. The bear was among the sheep! She listened intently, waiting for David's rifle to speak. There was no report, only wilder uproar. Marta snatched up her rifle and ran out cautiously toward the corral.

Meanwhile David had been sitting on a log on the farther side of the corral, near the break in the fence. No unusual sounds broke the silence of the forest night. The sheep were bedded in open sheds along the front of the corral. Now and then a little bell tinkled drowsily. A half-broken bronco, tied in the log stable not far beyond, tried every half-hour or so to kick out, but his hoofs made only a brief, vicious bombardment on the logs. David thought he had never heard the mountain stream before the house gurgle and babble so loudly over its boulders. He buttoned close his fur-lined fustian jacket, for the autumn nights are bitter cold in those high altitudes.

The night was brightly, crisply starlit. The moon, a faint, milky bit of jaggerdly broken pearl, added no light to the cold white star brillancy. The peaks stood sharply defined, like sculptured marble and ebony.

Once David fancied he heard faint, padded footfalls on the old path. He waited, rifle ready, eyes on the break in the fence. He could hear his blood pounding in his ears, but not another approaching footfall on the path. Presently a distant crackle of undergrowth only denoted that some wary night wanderer had gone off into the pines. David settled down on the log in sore disappointment.

Suddenly the sheep lying under the sheds heaved up from their straw. It was like the very ground heaving and breaking into gray, rounded waves. Bleating wildly, the flock stampeded toward his side of the corral.

David saw the waves—a thousand sheep—surging madly toward him. Near the gate, on the ebbing edge of the rushing flock, a large, dark animal was knocking sheep right and left with powerful slaps of his paws. The wily Big Bear of the Tetons had entered the corral from the front, while David was waiting to receive him at the rear!

But David himself had little time to realize how the Big Bear had frustrated his reception program, for the frightened sheep surged close about him, thrusting him back toward the fence. On they came, knocking each other down and trampling on the fallen. The onslaught of the thousand fear-maddened creatures was so terrific and unexpected that David was knocked down and trampled.

The sharp little hoofs cut his hands, his face. He could smell the very grease in the wool. He was being buried alive under the frantic flock. He was suffocating!

Dimly he heard two rifle reports, and he wondered dully how his gun, which had been knocked from his hand, had contrived to go off—twice! Then his whole body seemed bursting for want of air. Motes of flame danced in the black void. His eyeballs felt big and ready to burst.

Marta ran cautiously toward the corral. She reached the gate of pine poles and looked in. The Big Bear stood just inside. He had climbed the gate and descended unexpectedly upon the sleeping flock. Near him lay a bleeding, quivering carcass, ripped wide open by one slash of his razor-sharped claws.

Marta arrived at the gate just in time to see David go down under the stampeding flock. But the bear was between her and David, and must be disposed of before she could attempt the rescue of her brother.

She rested her rifle on the gate took good aim. She fired twice.

The bear paused in his slaughter and wheeled clumsily toward the girl. He was hard hit, but Marta saw there was yet enough vitality and fury in that big, shaggy body to carry him over the gate. He came toward her, squealing horribly — almost human cries of agony and anger.

Marta was frightened enough, but she did not lose control of herself or of her weapon. She waited, her rifle-barrel still resting on the top pole of the gate.

The bear flung himself against the barrier, and the strong panel of poles creaked and swayed with his weight. He upreared his great head, so that his foaming, gaping mouth was not six inches from the muzzle of Marta's rifle. Then Marta fired a fatal shot. The bear shook the gate in a last spasm of rage. Blood gushed from his mouth and nostrils as he fell back heavily. After a few convulsive quivers the big, dark bulk lay quite still beside the gate.

Even then Marta was not certain enough of his death to risk opening the gate and entering the corral over his body. She ran along the fence a few rods, and after climbing over, sped across the corral to her brother's assistance. The flock had parted in two streams that flowed in opposite directions round the fence.

With frantic haste Marta pushed and rolled the sheep off David's body. She had arrived just in time. A few minutes more under the sheep would have put an end forever to David Hanlon's bear-hunting.

Then sweet waters sang in his ears as he floated slowly back to consciousness, to find Marta shaking the breath into him and wiping muck and blood from his face.

As David hobbled back across the corral, Marta explained how she had despatched the Big Bear.

"Bless you!" said David, admiringly. "But you're a sister worth having!"—Youth's Companion.

UMBRELLAS AS LIGHTNING RODS.

A Recent Observance of a Well-Known Phenomenon.

The astounding tension of natural electricity and the smallness of the quantity are the despair of electricians who attempt to utilize the forces present in our atmosphere. At the same time it is to these two conditions that we owe the surprising variety of effects produced by lightning, and the interest which we find in observing these effects. The editor of Cosmos, for example, recently received from one of his correspondents a letter stating that not long ago, while walking through a snowstorm with an umbrella raised in front of him, he received clearly perceptible shocks of electricity through the steel ribs.

This phenomenon is all the more interesting as it is easy to explain it with the aid of known and observed facts. For a long time it has been known that during falls of snow one frequently sees, when the storm takes place on a moonless night, flashes of light denoting the presence of a large quantity of positive electricity. When the snow is blown by the wind and falls through dry and cold air the rubbing of the crystals on the air suffices to produce the phenomenon. This theory is confirmed by aeronauts, who state that the spontaneous combustion of balloons, which frequently occurs when they reach the earth, is due to the electricity developed by the rubbing against the air of the moving envelope while it descends. A recent catastrophe in the Alps also proves that an abundant fall of snow is accompanied by intense electrical phenomena. The Times, in its number of July 19, states that seven students of the University of Geneva were overtaken by a snowstorm in a cabin on the Aiguille du Gouter, in which they had taken refuge. They ridded themselves of all articles of iron which they had with them, but notwithstanding this four of them were struck. After this terrible example the appearance of the sparks noted by our correspondent is not surprising.

The experience described by the writer is identical with that which is experienced in all similar cases. The silk of the umbrella may be considered as a protecting veil capable of arresting the effects of electricity if the interior is not wet. In this case an effect is produced similar to that experienced by aeronauts. I will not be the apologist for umbrella lightning-rods which would seem to be the logical ending of this article, but it is interesting to recall that this invention was once considered by Benjamin Franklin.

Good Shots.

"During the past fiscal year," said Secretary Shaw of the Treasury Department, "we spent $1.42 per capita on the navy. But we have something to show for it.

"The other day our bluejackets set up a target twenty-one feet long and seventeen feet wide. A mile distant was a battleship moving ten knots an hour, rocking slightly over the waves and rolling from the recoil of the gun. The men reached down into the hold of the vessel and took a cartridge and shell weighing three-quarters of a ton, swung it up forty feet, put it into a gun and fired at the target. They reached down and got another cartridge, swung it up and fired it. And from that moving ship, out of ten shots they put nine thirteen-inch holes through that target one mile away in five minutes by the watch. Men that can do that are certainly worth $1.42 per capita."—Washington Star.

An inhabitant of Farmoutiers, France, has left a legacy sufficient to provide prizes of 25 francs each yearly for the two most polite scholars—male and female—of the town. The winners are to be elected by ballot of their schoolfellows.

NEWS AND NOTES FOR WOMEN

IN GAY PARIS.

I have often wished that Americans—in particular American women—would not be so zealous and outspoken in their endeavor to get their money's worth of wickedness when they come to Paris, though the naivete of the women in this respect is delicious. They turn from the tomb of Napoleon and demand, "Now where is the Moulin Rouge?" They spend the day at the Louvre, and at night they go to Maxim's. They vary grand opera, classic drama, and courses of lectures at the Sorbonne with the Bal Bouillier, the Folies Bergeres, and the cafes. Everything is embraced in their notion of the education to be derived from foreign travel, and in order to know la vie, they devote themselves as conscientiously to the wickedness of Paris as one touring spinster whom I lately encountered was studying the lives of all the saints in order—so she told me—to perfectly understand the art in the churches. Still, while the American woman is ever, everywhere, eminently to be trusted, we really ought to bear in mind that our culture of the wickedness of Paris not alone confuses foreign conceptions of American morals, but in a very practical way becomes the substance and support of wickedness. It is an open secret that a great deal of the varicolored evil which tourists seek in Paris as representing la vie is manufactured expressly for foreign consumption, and has as little part in the natural life of the people as the steam heat, porcelain tubs, chocolate layer cake, baked beans, chewing gum, which one is able to find by paying the price in centres where extensive patronage has made these things a profitable investment. —Harper's Bazar.

MISS CHRISTINE LA BARRAQUE.

Miss Christine Le Barraque, now twenty-eight years old, who has been blind since was was a baby, is a lawyer. She was graduated at the head of a law class in a California law school, and has been admitted to the bar in that State.

Miss La Barraque is a remarkable young woman. She is a graduate of the University of California, a finished linguist, an accomplished equestrienne and a musician. She is now in New York city completing her musical education.

"Nobody thought I could get through the university," she said. "I engaged three readers and managed to keep them all busy. I already knew French and Spanish, and I took up Italian. It was easy in geometry and trigonometry, but in integral calculus I thought I was lost."

Getting her degree, she announced that her ambition was to become a lawyer. The professors told her it was absurd, but she insisted and became a night school teacher to earn enough money to carry her through the law school. There were seventy-five men in the class, and at the end only thirty-nine remained. In the final examination Miss La Barraque led them all.

"Of course, I realize that a blind woman could hardly practice law successfully, so I decided to take up music as my livelihood," she declared, and I know I shall succeed."

FEMINIZATION OF THE SCHOOL.

At the session of the American Academy of Medicine President G. Stanley Hall urged the separation of the sexes after the age of twelve and the provision of men teachers for boys above that age. Dr. Woods Hutchinson emphasized the importance of home training as the fundamental means of education, to which the school instruction is merely supplementary. In the current number of the Arena Dr. W. L. Howard vigorously criticises both the policy of educating boys and girls together and the preponderance of woman teachers in the public schools. Undoubtedly there is much ground for this sort of criticism, especially as regards the desirability of men teachers for boys. It would be better for the boys in every way to place them at the age of ten or twelve under the instruction of men. The difficulty, however, is to get the right sort of men. A live schoolmarm is, after all, perferable to an effeminate, narrow-chested, under-vitalized apology for a man. Until the pay of school teachers is made high enough to attract men of power, breadth and personality into the service of the schools it will be necessary and desirable to rely chiefly on women teachers in the lower grades. In any event no amount of masculine influence in the school can take the place of home education personally conducted by the father. The excessive absorption of the average American father in business is the root of the present trouble. This has led to wellnigh complete abdication of the educational duties of parenthood. Only correction of this evil can bring a remedy—Boston Transcript.

POETRY FOR GIRLS.

It is a great mistake, in my opinion at least, to use poetry, and especially good poetry, as a medium of grammatical instruction and scholastic or domestic discipline. To parse "Paradise Lost" is to lose it again, and probably forever. The teacher, or parent, who gives out "The Ancient Mariner" or "The May Queen" to be learned by heart as a punishment, should be most severely dealt with—compelled to commit to memory several reports of the Bureau of Education, or to attend the sessions of a Summer School of Metaphysics for six successive years.

One reason why so many young readers conceive a lasting dislike for poetry is because at the beginning they are forced to put it to base uses. It should be treated always as "a dear and genuine inmate of the household of man," welcomed for the pleasure that it brings, read for the light of wonder and joy that it throws on the world in which we live and on the secret movements of the human heart. —Dr. Henry van Dyke, in Harper's Bazar.

EDUCATING HER CONSCIENCE.

"Contrary to common experience, my conscience is more tender now than when I first went into business," said a young woman who is employed downtown. "Then I did not mind working for any kind of a fakir. Now I strongly object. One of my first jobs was for a man who was sending out a lot of letters containg tips on racing. One day when I was in the thick of the work another customer read one of the circulars.

"'I wonder,' he said, 'how many poor devils will lose every cent they have in the world by being drawn into this cutthroat scheme.'

"'I don't know,' said I, 'and, anyway, that is not my lookout.'

"'Then your conscience doesn't trouble you?' he asked.

"'Not in the least,' said I. 'It is purely a matter of business with me. They will have to look out for themselves the same as I do. There is one thing sure, I shan't lose anything.'

"So I went ahead and wrote the letters. There were so many of them that my bill amounted to $25."

"I wonder," put in a listener, "if many people really did lose?"

"I know one that did," said the young woman, sadly. "That was me. I never got my $25."—New York Evening Post.

SUPERSTITION ABOUT STONES.

Emeralds are a spur to ambition, and promote the spirit of a leader.

A piece of jade worn in a bracelet clasp or viniagrette ring will drive away bad luck even more effectively than the rabbit's foot or horseshoe.

In the moonstone the wearer has an aid to beauty and the gift of pleasing. Under this stone's influence she sees everybody and everything about her in the best aspect. Some ancient writers believed the moonstone cured epilepsy, others that its powers waxed and waned with the moon.

The topaz banishes melancholy and imparts serenity and a contented mind.

If a young woman wears an amethyst, she has an amulet against flightiness and folly.

If she wears a sapphire, she will be proof against deceitful suitors, no matter how artful their wooing may be.

If she wears a ruby, she has a charm against rheumatism and kindred diseases, and a promoter to vivacity and fascination of manner. Failing the ruby, the carbuncle and the garnet will exert a similar influence.

In the turquoise the wearer has a talisman for self-possession. The pretty blue gem will enable her to think clearly and keep her presence of mind under the most trying circumstances.

DON'T CAARY TALES.

Do not carry or evil reports. Everybody knows the irritating and disturbing effect of tale-bearers. It is said that the famous Hannah More had an excellent way of managing these undesirable persons. Whenever she was told any unkind thing about another, she would say: "Come, let's go and ask if it is true." The tale-bear-bearer, somewhat discomfited by this, would often hurriedly beg that no notice might be taken, but Hannah More insisted on having her own way, with the result that her immediate circle was singularly free from scandal.

Such a course would be invaluable in our own lives, for who has not experienced the pain and incalculable mischief wrought by a thoughtless and ill-founded statement? The barbed arrows of slander are the most deadly and poisonous among weapons, and their effect is widespreading, for, like a stone thrown into a pond, slander begins with a little disturbance, but spreads in ever widening circles, until one wonder at the magnitude attained by it.

Truth and Poetry.

An English tourist engaged the jarvey who recommended his horse, "bekase it's a jewel ov a poitical basto." Dublin was reached at last, after a long journey. "Why," asked the delayed tourist, as he paid his fare, "why did you call your horse poetical?" "Shure, yer honor, it's thrue," said Pat, with his best blarney, "for his good qualities are imaginary, not real."—Cassell's Little Folks.

The Smolon tunnel in Italy, longest in the world, was completed in 1905.

EATING CHERRIES UP A ...

Eating cherries up a tree
Just two owners of the world—
Little Clara Thorpe and me—
(Might, perhaps, include the ...
Singing songs too cute for ...
Fragrant breezes, out for sport,
Came and found us in the ...
My, but those bright days ...
How for them my smirt ...
Fairy branch and elfin ...
All around us danced a ...
Light as they my heart was ...
And a barefoot dryad ...
Eating cherries up a tree.

In the middle of the road
Stood the monarch with his ...
Cherries almost black—so ...
Free to any passing hand
Red the winding roadway ran
Down the hill to old Tappan;
Green as far as eye could see
Rolled the hills—but what ...
Eating cherries up a tree?

Summer days, oh, do come ...
Come with joyance to the ...
Bring remembrance in your ...
Bring again the glad re...
Robins after happy rains
Carol, with the woods ...
Telling, by their merry ...
Where the sweetest ...
Bring again the days gone by
Meadows void of human ...
Not another soul around
Only Clara Thorp and me
Glory, but I'd like to be
Eating cherries up a tree.
—Jasper Barnett Cowdin ...
York Sun.

RIPPLES OF MIRTH

Muggins—"Is your son ... ness?" Juggins—"He succeeds." Muggins—"What line?" Juggins—"Debts."

"Does he think there is any ... in raising chickens?" "Yes, ... for every grain they give a ..." Yale Record.

Is it any wonder if the wo... is ahead of her age carries ... rather less well than the wo... is not?—Puck.

Oh, time and love and mone...
Are just the three big th...
Which would be e'en more ...
"Don't you believe that w...
If we could clip their wings ...

"I found six dead flies in ... currants you sent me yes... said the customer. "John," ... grocer to the clerk, "give ... six more currants."—New ... Grocer.

Mr. Porke-Pache—"Yes, ... my girl's goin' to marry a ... Yes, he's what they call a L... Mrs. Nooport—"How charm... course she gets her K. C. B. ... D.?"—Brooklyn Life.

"The canons of criticism ... wrong," exclaimed the liter... son. "That's right," agreed ... man. "They don't kill half ... What the critics need are ... guns."—Philadelphia Record.

Mrs. Widder (at the ... thought I told never to call ... Mr. Loster—"I didn't come ... you, madam. I came to ... little bill." Mrs. Widder—... see—er—call again, won't ... Cleveland Leader.

To fill the empty pews at ...
This hint we offer preachers:
Remove the cushions, and the ...
The seats resemble bleachers.
—Boston Tra...

"Fie, fie! my boy," said ... Goodley. "I'm surprised ... should tease that cat in that ... "Why?" asked the bad boy, ... in his inhuman work, "do ... any better way?" —Phila... Press.

"Our John's going to be a ... er, I guess," said Farmer ... "jedgin' from what his col... fessor sez about him." ... that?" asked his wife. "He ... inclined to be bibulous."—... phia Ledger.

"It seems to me," said ... castle, "that Dr. Fourthly ... good deal in hyperbole." ... thinkin' that same thing," ... her hostess. "Land sakes, ... think a man with as much ... him would leave these Fren... alone."—Chicago Record-H...

The Den.

Of late years our people ... to realize the fact that a ... or a boy's room is as necessa... properly conducted house... lady's boudoir. These ... common consent, are ... "dens."

A den usually consists of ... space, sometimes nothing ... an alcove, where the men of ... the house may retreat, and ... usually decorated with an ... display of yachting flags, ... ors, trophies of the hunt, ... letic field, fishing-rods, ... with probably a desk and ... chair. But, as the wealth ... country increases, and luxu... ply, the den gradually ... more and more primitive ... This is the natural result ... action against the surround... luxury of the household.

The surprise den is ... supply a want suggested by ... ters requesting ideas on ... orate and fix up a den in ... The surprise den is con... that one may open the door ... dining-room, the drawing-... the library, as the case ... usher the guests into a ... pioneer cabin.—Dan Beard ... to Build and Furnish a Sec... in a Modern House," in ... Magazine.

The railways of the ... employ an army of 1,500,000 ... the earnings of the various ... last year reached a total ... 000,000.

CHILDREN'S DEPA...

E LITTLE HOUSEWIFE.

...g dolly's ribbons,
...bing out her hair,
...ng up her dresses,
"Dolly's such a care."

...re is Nero waiting,
...r his morning run,
...re are Nellie's puppies
...olling in the sun.

...s and buds and blossoms,
...She must seem them all,
...y little housewife
...as no rest at all.

...rry little maiden,
Singing all the day,
...n asleep at supper,
Tired out with play.
—McCall's Magazine.

THE LEAVES TURN RED.

...is, why do the leaves turn red
...fall?" It was Fritzie who
...the question, one October after-
...of his friend Ankie, the Indian,
...y were walking through ...

...ren't I ever told you?" answered ...kis, in surprise, "It is one ...old legends of the tribe." And ...y seated themselves under a ... tree that blazed with color, ... began:

A NURSERY REBUS, FROM TH...

...g, long ago, there was a great
...more trees than there are now,
...great many more birds, too.
...he trees loved the birds, for
...tle feathered people sang from
...dawn till late at night, and
...d their blue and yellow and
...wings everywhere through the
And the trees said to one
...r: 'Oh, how dull it would be
...didn't have our birds!'
...the trees spread out their
...like great loving hands to hold
...e tiny nests, and they covered
...rd homes with thick foliage to
...hem from the prowling squirrels
...he fledgelings should have flown

...t one night in the month of the
...t moon, when the feathery
...ships were no longer sailing
...ean of the air, a messenger
...running down from the white
...y in the north, and whispered
...he ears of the trees. He was
...e Frost Boy, and his words
'Beware! The Chief of the
...is coming. And he has with ...great snow army, and all their
...s are full of ice arrows.'
...en the trees made ready to
...the army of the Chief of the
...and wrapped their bark close
...d their bodies and the bodies
...ir frail bud children. Sudden-
...ne one thought of the birds.
...o you know the snow army is
...s?" And the trees tried to warn friends; but the trees cannot
...ery loud, and the mother birds
...so busy teaching their children
...and sing that they heard noth-
...what the trees whispered.
...h, how can we make the birds
the trees cried in agony.
...en the maple tree said: 'I
Let's light a fire signal as
...dians do, and when the birds
...e flame they will come to ask
...it means. Then we can tell

...nd they did so. The next morn-
...he fire signals had been set
...ing among all the leaves of the
..., and everywhere the trees were
...nd crimson and scarlet. Sure
...h, the birds hastened to learn it meant, and the trees told that the Chief of the Cold was
...a way. When the birds heard
...y swiftly rose on the wing and
...d for the southland.
...nce that time, every fall, when
...rost Boy brings his warning to
...rees, they light their fire signal
...leaves. Whenever you see

EATING CHERRIES UP A

Eating cherries up a tree
Just two owners of the world
Little Clara Thorpe and me
(Might, perhaps, include the
Singing songs too cute for Fragrant breezes, out for
Came and found us in the
My, but those bright days
How for them my spirit
Fairy branch and elfin
All around us danced a jig;
Light as they my heart
And a barefoot dryad
Eating cherries up a tree.

In the middle of the road
Stood the monarch with his
Cherries almost black—so
Free to any passing hand.
Red the winding roadway
Down the hill to old Tappan;
Green as far as eye could see,
Rolled the hills—but what
Eating cherries up a tree?

Summer days, oh, do come back!
Come with joyance to the
Bring remembrance in your
Bring again the glad refrains
Robins after happy rains
Carol with the woods aglow—
Telling, by their merry cry,
Where the sweetest cherries
Bring again the days gone by,
Meadows void of human sound,
Not another soul around
Only Clara Thorp and me,
Glory, but I'd like to be
Eating cherries up a tree!
Jasper Barnett Cowdin, in

York Sun

RIPPLES OF MIRTH

Muggins—"Is your son in ness?" Juggins—"He's a contr
Muggins. "What line?" Jug Debts."

"Does he think there is any in raising chickens?" "Yes;
for every grain they give a p
Yale Record.

Is it any wonder if the woma is ahead of her age carries h rather less well than the woma is not?—Puck.

Oh, time and love and money
Are just the three big thi
Which would be e'en more s
"Don't you believe that wh
If we could clip their wings.

"I found six dead flies in currants you sent me yest said the customer. "John," grocer to the clerk, "give th six more currants."—New Y Grocer.

Mr. Porke-Pache—"Yes,
my girl's goin' to marry a so
Yes, he's what they call a L
Mrs. Nooport—"How charmin course she gets her K. C. B.
D.?"—Brooklyn Life.

"The canons of criticism wrong," exclaimed the litera son. "That's right," agreed th
man. "They don't kill half What the critics need are m guns."—Philadelphia Record.

Mrs. Widder (at the do thought I told never to call Mr. Loster—"I didn't come you, madam. I came to co little bill." Mrs. Widder—see—er—call again, won't y
Cleveland Leader.

To fill the empty pews at church
This hint we offer preachers
Remove the cushions, and thus
The seats resemble bleachers.
—Boston Trans

"Fie, fie! my boy," said
Goodley. "I'm surprised th should tease that cat in that
"Why?" asked the bad boy, in his inhuman work, "do yo any better way?"—Philad Press.

"Our John's going to be a er, I guess," said Farmer K
"jedgin' from what his colle fessor sez about him."
that?" asked his wife. "He inclined to be bibulous."—P phia Ledger.

"It seems to me," said M castle, "that Dr. Fourthly good deal in hyperbole." "T thinkin' that same thing," her hostess. "Land sakes, I think a man with as much him would leave these French alone."—Chicago Record-Her

The Den.

Of late years our people ha to realize the fact that a man or a boy's room is as necessary properly conducted household lady's boudoir. These roo common consent are kno
"dens."

A den usually consists of space, sometimes nothing m an alcove, where the men or the house may retreat, and th usually decorated with an a display of yachting flags, co ors, trophies of the hunt o letic field, fishing-rods, g with probably a desk and chair. But, as the wealth country increases, and luxuri ply, the den gradually more and more primitive
This is the natural result o action against the surround luxury of the household.

The surprise den is des supply a want suggested by m ters requesting ideas on how orate and fix up a den in one
The surprise den is constru that one may open the door dining-room, the drawing-the library, as the case may usher the guests into a pioneer cabin.—Dan Beard to Build and Furnish a Surp in a Modern House," in The Magazine.

The railways of the U employ an army of 1,500,000
the earnings of the various last year reached a total o 000,000.

CHILDREN'S DEPARTMENT.

THE LITTLE HOUSEWIFE.

ing dolly's ribbons,
combing out her hair,
ing up her dresses,
"Dolly's such a care."

re is Nero waiting,
For his morning run,
re are Nellie's puppies
Basking in the sun.

and buds and blossoms,
ey must seem them all,
e little housewife
Has no rest at all.

ning garden, ing day,
ing supper,
time out with play.
—McCall's Magazine.

THE LEAVES TURN RED.

why do the leaves turn red
" It was Fritzie who one October after-ness guard Ankis, the Indian, were walking through the

I ever told you?" answer-in surprise. "It is one legends of the tribe." And seated themselves under a tree that blazed with color, long, long ago, there was a great

more trees than there are now,
a great many more birds, too.
the trees loved the birds, for little feathered people sang from dawn till late at night, and their blue and yellow and wings everywhere through the
And the trees said to one
"Oh, how dull it would be didn't have our birds!"
the trees spread out their
the great loving hands to hold tiny nests, and they covered nests with thick foliage to them from the prowling squirrels the fledglings should have flown

one night in the month of the moon, when the feathery seeds were no longer sailing the air, a messenger coming down from the white in the north, and whispered the tops of the trees. He was the East Boy, and his words
'Beware!' The Chief of the
is coming. And he has with a great snow army, and all their are full of ice arrows.'
the trees made ready to
the army of the Chief of the
and wrapped their bark close their bodies and the bodies their frail and children. Sudden-one thought of the birds.
you know the snow army is
" And the trees tried to warn friends; but the trees cannot very loud, and the mother birds
so busy teaching their children
and sing that they heard noth-
at what the trees whispered.
"Oh, how can we make the birds
" the trees cried in agony.
the maple tree said: 'I
Let's light a fire signal as Indians do, and when the birds the flame they will come to ask
it means. Then we can tell

And they did so. The next morn-the fire signals had been set among all the leaves of the
, and everywhere the trees were and crimson and scarlet. Sure , the birds hastened to learn
it meant; and the trees told that the Chief of the Cold was
-way. When the birds heard swiftly rose on the wing and for the southland.
Since that time, every fall, when Frost Boy brings his warning to trees, they light their fire signal leaves. Whenever you see those red leaves, Fritzie, watch carefully, and you will find the birds every night and morning flying southward to escape the ice arrows of the snow army."—Sabbath School Visitor.

A NEW HAND-MADE TOP.

It doesn't cost much to buy a top, but why pay anything when you can while away an idle hour or so, making the unique one explained below, out of a baking powder can?

All you need to begin with are a baking powder box and lid and a couple of pieces of any kind of wood. Cut a hole in the side of the box an inch square or a circular one as your taste may dictate, as I fancy you will not be able to find much difference in round or square "music" in this case.

Then make a hole in the lid and another in the bottom of the box for the spindle to come through. The bottom hole is square and the top hole round. Cut the spindle to fit, pushing it in from the bottom.

After these operations, glue the lid firmly to the box so it can't slip off, and stick the spindle into position through the proper holes, glueing it in place by putting a little glue in each hole.

The spinner (handle by which the top is spun) is a plain piece of wood with a hole at one end.

After the top is thoroughly dry, procure a length of string, wind the string around a projecting end of the spindle, run it through the hole (see illustration) and let her go.

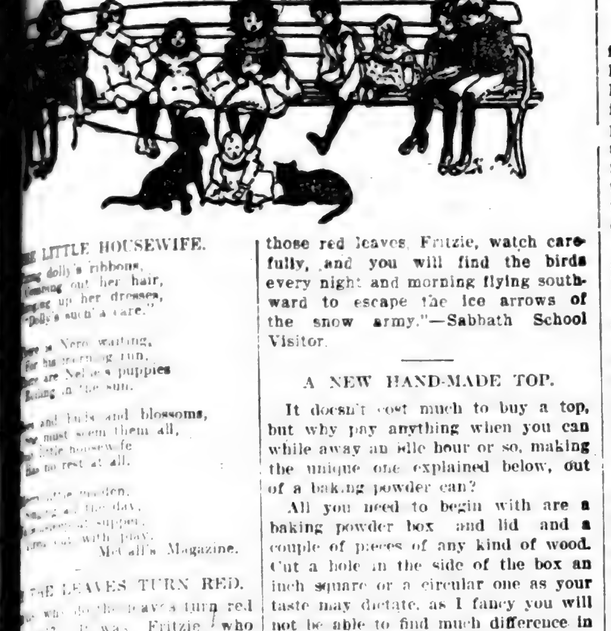
You will find that your spinning baking powder top is in truth "a hummer," and the sound produced will rise to just as loud a pitch as any store-purchased humming top.—Good Literature.



A NURSERY REBUS, FROM THE WASHINGTON STAR.

THE MINISTER'S HAT.

This is a play for little folks and will brush up their wits a bit. Each one in turn is required to apply some adjective beginning with the letter "A" to the minister's cat, which is supposed to be under discussion. No two answers may be alike. One may say: "The minister's cat is an aggravating cat." The next: "The minister's cat is an aristocratic cat," or an "awkward" cat, etc.

When one is unable to think of a word he drops out of the game, and when all have exhausted their supply of "A" words, they start again with words beginning with "B," "C" and so on. A dictionary is not to be used.

"ATTENTION."

Army regulations prescribe in detail what honors shall be paid to the flag, and these regulations are implicitly and gladly observed. No matter how little one may relish the duty of showing the respect due to some military superior, he is always ready and glad to do honor to his flag. Whenever any one in the military service of the United States passes near the unfurled colors, or whenever the flag passes before him, he is required to remove his cap in salute, and if sitting he is required to rise and stand at "attention" until the flag has passed.—From Capt. Harold Hammond's "Honors to the Flag."

PLAINT OF THE LITTLE MOTHER.

Lived Her Gospel and Was Not a Preacher by Word.

The world is so prone to judge from appearances. We so seldom look under the surface of things. We have so little time we form our opinions by what catches our eye and pass judgment on that basis. If we see a man or woman going to church, if we hear prayers uttered in loud tones, if one cries out from the housetops his good deeds we give him all credit and say to ourselves:

"So-and-So is a good Christian; he sets us an example which it would be well for us to follow."

And we humbly cry "Mea Culpa" and resolve to mend our ways.

A little story told by Dr. Dawson a famous London Evangelist, rather puts to shame Pharisaic criticisms, and in its beauty and simplicity teaches a lesson which it would be well to take to heart, says the New York Herald.

"In the course of my ministrations," said the Doctor, "through the slums of London I came upon a sad case, that of a woman, the mother of five children, the eldest of whom was a girl of nine or ten.

"The mother at the time the family first came under my notice was dying of consumption. The father, a hard working man, was barely able to earn sufficient to supply the meagre wants of the family, and they were often in dire straits.

"The bulk of the work devolved on the oldest girl, Mary by name. Never have I seen the title of 'Little Mother' more appropriately earned. She not only had the invalid to care for, but the younger children as well, and Mary was often a very tired little girl.

"Mary's duties were soon lightened to a certain extent by her mother's death, but made heavier in another by the added responsibility of the little family. The burden of the children and the house was very heavy after the mother had gone. While she lived Mary had always felt there was some one to direct and guide her, but now she was forced to rely upon herself entirely.

"Mary's health none too strong at any time soon began to fail under the great responsibility which had fallen on her shoulders. The care of the children, the cooking, the washing and ironing, the sweeping and bedmaking were too much for the little woman's strength. Day by day she failed, fewer and fewer became the outings which the lusty baby enjoyed. The little fellow soon became too heavy for the thin, weak arms of the 'little mother,' and it was but seldom she could muster courage and energy enough to carry him down the steep stairs and out into the unprepossessing streets, which were his only breathing-ground.

"The day came when even the slightest exertion was impossible for poor Mary and she was forced to depend upon the kind services of neighbors as poor as she was herself. Mary failed rapidly. She was soon confined to her bed, and then I procured the services of one of my 'helpers,' who took up Mary's work where the 'little mother,' in sheer helplessness, had laid it down.

"On one of my daily visits, as I stood in the doorway, unannounced, I heard the murmur of childish voices. A little friend of Mary's was sitting with her and had been laboriously spelling out some verses of the Bible.

"'Oh, Maggie!' I heard Mary say, 'What ever will I say to Jesus when I meet Him and He asks me why I did not go to church and why I did not pray? You know I was so tired, Maggie, so tired, I just couldn't.'

"'Never you mind, Mary,' the other child replied. 'When you see Jesus just show him your hands, Mary, and He will understand.'"

Best Weight Guessers.

Butchers are the world's bestweight guessers. The butcher's difficult trade gives him a skill in weight-guessing that is almost incredible.

It is a commonplace thing in a meat shop to see a butcher seize hold of a huge red round of beef and slash off with a great knife four pounds just, of two and a half pounds just, or six pounds just, according to the order.

The buyer of meat wants to get the weight he asked for, no more and no less, and he wants this weight in one piece, not in one big piece and two or three little ones.

To satisfy the buyer the butcher has been compelled to acquire extraordinary skill in judging just how much a certain portion of a round of meat weighs, and in cutting off that portion smoothly and accurately.—Minneapolis Journal.

To Hunt for an Iron Cross.

Members of the Chicago Historical Society will join in an expedition next Sunday to Twenty-second and Halsted streets in a hunt for an iron cross. This was put on a church built in 1746 at that point by Father Marquette.

When the building was torn down, it has been learned, that the cross was abandoned in a neighboring forest. It is said that it is still in the vicinity, possibly in the river or on one of its banks.—Chicago Daily News.

Cotton factories in Mexico employ over 25,000 people.

Fear of being reformed keeps many a man in the bachelor class.

FITS, St. Vitus' Dance: Nervous Diseases permanently cured by Dr. Kline's Great Nerve Restorer. $2 trial bottle and treatise free. Dr. H. R. Kline, Ld., 931 Arch St., Phila., Pa.

Every year between November and March about 70,000,000 eggs are exported from Alexandria, mostly to England.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup for Children teething, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, allays pain, cures wind colic, 25c a bottle

THE NEW STATE OF OKLAHOMA.

Spirit of the People and Stories of Their Life and Work.

Oklahoma amazes an easterner. The wide asphalted streets, the plate glass fronts of department stores, the clean sidewalks, the well-dressed, unhurried shoppers, the finish, the metropolitan air you find in Oklahoma City, for example, seem marvels to find in a territory only seventeen years old. But do not say so.

A New Yorker who went there on business complained that fate was thrusting him into a wilderness, and reassure him. But coming down his Oklahoma associates could not to breakfast the first morning, at his hotel in Oklahoma City, he stared around in wonder as he entered the dining room.

"This," he exclaimed, "this in Oklahoma. Why, do you know," he added confidentially, "I even found a porcelain bathtub in my room."

"Well," said an Oklahoman, dryly, "don't they have those in New York?"

It is better not to be surprised—better to say that the department stores seem to do a large business, or that the trolley ride to the suburbs is pleasant, indeed any comment that satisfies your interlocutor that you expected to find him living in a modern city, even though he dashed into Oklahoma country but a few years ago and scrambled for a homestead. Improvements have marched with swiftness in Oklahoma and in Indian Territory. It is bigger than all the New England states together, as big as Illinois and Ohio combined, and its red lands teem with all the crops that any state raises from the Canadian border to the beginning of the sun-tropics in Florida and Texas. There are no drones. Everybody is busy. New land is being broken. New buildings are going up. New trolley lines are starting. New waterworks are being put in. How can the work be done so fast? In the one town I spent a half hour in the Commercial club. In that busy time half the leading business men came in to discuss some enterprise or other in which all were interested.

"If a man comes here to enter business," said the secretary, "and doesn't put his shoulder to the wheel and co-operate to push the town's fortunes, he soon learns that the community does not want him. Oklahoma makes rapid progress because its citizens pull together," and he turned to speak with a storekeeper who had offered a prize to the Oklahoma farmer who could raise the best cotton; he said that it helped his business to have the farmers raise good crops.—World's Work.

Airship Possibilities.

The following conversation, according to Health, took place between two airship owners:

"Have any trouble in reaching Mars?"

"None worth mentioning. I was fined four or five times for scorching on the Milky Way, and once for looping the loop on one of Saturn's rings, but that was all."

A supreme test of friendship is a loan.

FOUR YEARS OF AGONY.

Whole Foot Nothing But Proud Flesh—Had to Use Crutches—"Cuticura Remedies Best on Earth."

"In the year 1899 the side of my right foot was cut off from the little toe down to the heel, and the physician who had charge of me was trying to sew up the side of my foot, but with no success. At last my whole foot and way up above my calf was nothing but proud flesh. I suffered untold agonies for four years, and tried different physicians and all kinds of ointments. I could walk only with crutches. In two weeks afterwards I saw a change in my limb. Then I began using Cuticura Soap and Ointment often during the day, and kept it up for seven months, when my limb was healed up just the same as if I never had trouble. It is eight months now since I stopped using Cuticura Remedies, the best on God's earth. I am working at the present day, after five years of suffering. The cost of Cuticura Ointment and Soap was only $6, but the doctors' bills were more like $600. John M. Lloyd, 718 S. Arch Ave., Alliance, Ohio, June 27, 1905."

Too Busy.

Senior Partner — The new man doesn't seem to have developed any good points yet.

Junior Partner—No, he hasn't had time.

Senior Partner—Hasn't had time?

Junior Partner—No, he spends most of his time explaining his mistakes.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Baron von Speck-Sternburg has a grievance. Nineteen times out of twenty his name is printed "Speck von Sternburg."

Only the man who is blindly in love fails to see through a coat of complexion paint.

Wintersmith's CHILL TONIC

A BOTTLE WILL BREAK CHILL TONIC YOUR CHILLS

CURES CHILLS AND ALL MALARIAL FEVERS.

Has been a standard household remedy for over 40 years. Pleasant to take; leaves no bad effects like quinine; harmless for children. Guaranteed by all druggists. Put up in 50c and $1 bottles. Sent express paid on receipt of price, if not on sale at the home drug store. Address

ARTHUR PETER & CO., General Agents, Louisville, Ky.

Birmingham Seminary,

BIRMINGHAM, ALA.

IDEAL SCHOOL FOR GIRLS AND YOUNG LADIES.

Limited number boarding pupils. Unexcelled city advantages. Refined, christian home life. High standards, superior faculty. For catalogue and further information address

MISS LOULIE COMPTON, 1722 Fifth Avenue, Birmingham, Ala.

SALARIES OF JUSTICES.

Compensation of Supreme Court Members Held to Be Too Small.

A bill is now pending in the senate of the United States, which, if enacted, will increase the salary of the president from $50,000 to $75,000; will increase the salary of the vice-president to $15,000; that of the speaker of the house to $12,000; of members of the cabinet to $15,000, and of members of congress to $7500.

The salary of the chief justice of the United States is $13,500 a year, and that of the associate justices $13,000. According to the importance and dignity of their office, the justice of the supreme court of the United States are more poorly paid than any other officials in the public employment. Upon the men who constitute this court rests a more weighty responsibility than upon any other public servants.

While salaries are being increased it would be well for congress to consider whether the judges of the supreme court are properly paid. In England and in other countries of Europe judicial officers of inferior dignity to our supreme court receive far greater salaries. The lord high chancellor of England gets $50,000 a year, the chief justice gets $40,000, and other judges about $25,000. If the salaries of the justices of the supreme court of the United States should be increased to $25,000 a year, would not such an increase meet with public approval?—Baltimore Sun.

HIS ONE WEAK SPOT.

Prominent Minnesota Merchant Cured to Stay Cured.

O. C. Hayden, of O. C. Hayden & Co., dry goods merchants, of Albert Lea, Minn., says: "I was so lame that I could hardly walk. There was an unaccountable weakness of the back, and constant pain and aching. I could find no rest and was very uncomfortable at night. As my health was good in every other way I could not understand this trouble. It was just as if all the strength had gone from my back. After suffering for some time I began using Doan's Kidney Pills. The remedy acted at once upon the kidneys, and when normal action was restored the trouble with my back disappeared. I have not had any return of it."

For sale by all dealers. 50 cents a box. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

A Good Location.

It was at a dinner party at a fashionable residence in Tacoma.

The bright young man found himself privileged to sit next to the young woman with beautiful arms and neck.

He thought himself the most favored personage in the room. Suddenly his fair companion exhibited signs of nervousness.

Two of his very best jokes, saved for a special occasion, pased by unnoticed. Her face wore a look of alarm. Apprehensively the young man gazed at her, and meeting the look she said:

"I am in misery."

"In misery?" echoed the man.

"Yes," she replied. "I was vaccinated the other day, and it has taken beautifully. I could almost scream, it hurts so."

The young man looked at the beautiful arms, and, seeing no mark there, said:

"Why, where were you vaccinated?"

"In Portland," she said, the smile chasing away the look of pain.—Tacoma News.

CAPUDINE CURES INDIGESTION and ACIDITY HEADACHES ALSO by removing the cause. It acts immediately—you feel its effects in 10 minutes. You don't have to wait a week to know its good. It cures. 10 cents.

Dropsy CURED Gives Quick Relief. Removes all swelling in 8 to 20 days; effects a permanent cure in 30 to 60 days. Trial treatment given free. Nothing can be fairer. Write Dr. H. H. Green's Sons, Specialists, Box B Atlanta, Ga.

Am. 31, 1906.

Positions GUARANTEED BY A $5,000 BANK DEPOSIT

R. R. Fare Paid. Notes Taken. 500 FREE COURSES Board at Cost. Write Quick.

GEORGIA-ALABAMA BUSINESS COLLEGE, Macon, Ga.

PIMPLES BLACKHEADS

Prevented by

Cuticura SOAP

To treat Pimples and Blackheads, Red, Rough, Oily Complexions, gently smear the face with Cuticura Ointment, the Great Skin Cure, but do not rub. Wash off the Ointment in five minutes with Cuticura Soap and hot water, and bathe freely for some minutes. Repeat morning and evening. At other times use Cuticura Soap for bathing the face as often as agreeable. No other Skin Soap so pure, so sweet, so speedily effective.

Cuticura Soap combines delicate medicinal and emollient properties derived from Cuticura, the great Skin Cure, with the purest of cleansing ingredients and the most refreshing of flower odors. For toilet, bath, or nursery, it is unsurpassed. Sold throughout the world. Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., Sole Props., Boston, U. S. A. Cuticura Soap, 25c. Ointment, 50c. Pills, 25c. (in chocolate-coated vials). Resolvent, $1. Depots: London, 27 Charterhouse Sq.; Paris, 5 Rue de la Paix; Sydney, 168 Columbus Ave. Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., Sole Props. Mailed Free, "How to Beautify the Skin."

YOU CANNOT

CURE

all inflamed, ulcerated and catarrhal conditions of the mucous membrane such as nasal catarrh, uterine catarrh caused by feminine ills, sore throat, sore mouth or inflamed eyes by simply dosing the stomach.

But you surely can cure these stubborn affections by local treatment with

Paxtine Toilet Antiseptic

which destroys the disease germs, checks discharges, stops pain, and heals the inflammation and soreness.

Paxtine represents the most successful local treatment for feminine ills ever produced. Thousands of women testify to this fact. 50 cents at druggists.

Send for Free Trial Box

THE R. PAXTON CO., Boston, Mass.

The Tulane University OF LOUISIANA

NEW ORLEANS.

EDWIN B. CRAIGHEAD, L. L. D., Pres.

The Tulane University of Louisiana, founded in 1847 as the University of Louisiana, is the logical head of the entire system of public educational institutions of the State.

Full courses are offered in Languages, Sciences, Engineering, Law, Medicine. Splendid departments for women in Newcomb College. Tulane ranks high even in all vacations. Its facilities for instruction in engineering are unsurpassed. Unexcelled opportunities for the study of Tropical and Industrial Chemistry. Many Scholarships in academic departments. Expenses low. Board and accommodations in dormitories at low rates. Next session begins October 1st. Send for catalogue. Address

R. K. BRUFF, Secretary.

60 Bushels Winter Wheat Per Acre

That's the yield of Salzer's Red Cross Hybrid Winter Wheat. Send 4c in stamps for free sample of same, or also catalogue of Winter Wheats, Rye, Barley, Clovers, Timothy, Grasses, Bulbs, Trees, etc., for fall planting.

SALZER SEED CO., Box A. C. LaCrosse, Wis.

WANTED Address of (1) persons of part Indian blood who are not living with any tribe, (2) of men who served in the Federal army, or (3) the nearest kin of such soldiers or sailors, now deceased. NATHAN RICHFORD, Washington, D. C.

Plantation Chill Cure is Guaranteed

To Cure, or Money Refunded by Your Merchant. Ask Him. Why Not Try It? Price, 50c. Retails.

Stylish Clothing For Young Men.

Make up your mind to have the best suit possible this season, it must be smart, the very latest weave and color. You can have all these things if you get an I. & S. Bing Suit.

Latest Ideas in Furnishings

Our line for spring wear is now complete, the styles are decided and we are showing absolutely correct styles. New Dress Goods, New Waist Goods, New Hats, New Shirts, New Neckwear.

Spring Models in Footwear

See our new line of Star Brand Oxfords for men, women and children. Our stock is complete and the prices are right. Let us show you the goods.

J. C. JONES,

Clanton, - - Alabama.

Wouldn't You Like

BETTER WHISKIES FOR LESS MONEY?

than the kind youvl been getting? Then send, your orders to us

THE BIG MAIL ORDER HOUSE

The house that sells nothing but the purest goods and guarantees every article it sells. If it's drugs or whiskies you want

WE CUT THE PRICE.

	Our Price.	Regular Price
Shehan's Canada Malt Whiskey	75	1 00
Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey	75	1 00
Weiler's Pure Malt Whiskey	75	1 00
Mason's Old Kentucky Rye	50	75
Dan Patch Virginia Rye	60	1 00
Private Stock Virginia Rye	65	1 00
J. Martin's Five-year-old Virginia Rye	75	1 00
Asa Holt Rye Whiskey	76	1 00
Old Style Country Club Rye Whiskey	85	1 25
Richmond Club Virginia Rye	1 00	1 50
Stewart's Old Virginia Rye	1 25	2 00
Paul Jones Four Star Rye	84	1 50
Murray Hill Club	1 00	1 50
Hunter's Baltimore Rye	1 00	1 50
Golden Cream Rye	1 00	1 50
I. W. Harper Rye	1 00	1 50
Wilson Whiskey	85	1 50
J. M. Atherton bottled in bond	1 00	1 50
Mammoth Cave bottled in bond	1 25	1 75
Old Jordon bottled in bond	1 50	2 00
Green River, the whiskey without a headache	1 00	1 25
Old Shades Mountain Corn	50	75
Old Mountain Due Corn	75	1 00
Old Lincoln County	65	1 00
Old Holland Gin	50	75
Old Crown Gin	75	1 00
Old Peach or Apple Brandy	50	75
California Sherry or Port	50	75

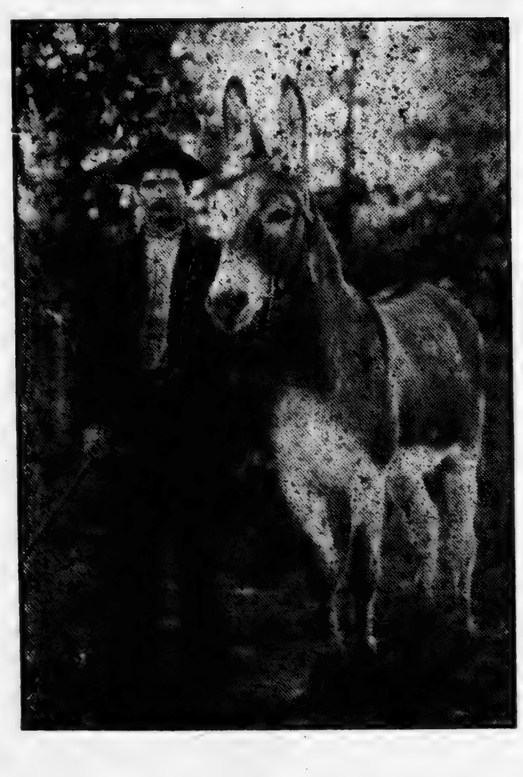
Mellow Old Liquors and Wines by the Gallon in Jugs.

	Per Gallon		Per Gallon
Old Sand Mountain Corn	$2.00	Old Mason's Pure Rye	$2.00
Old Mountain Due	3.00	Private Stock Virginia Rye	2.50
Old Tennessee	2.00	J. Martin's 5-year-old Va. Rye	3.00
Old Holland Gin	2.00	Old Style Country Club	3.40
Old Crown Gin	3.00	Old Lincoln County	2.50
Old Peach or Apple Brandy	2.00	Richmond Club Virginia Rye	4.00
Old California Port or Sherry	1.50	R. A. Stuart's Old Va. Rye	5.00

COLLIER DRUG COMPANY,

The Big Cut Rate Drug Store

2012 FIRST AVENUE, BIRMINGHAM, ALABAMA.



Imported Jack "LIJE"

Fee $8.00, Insured

Stands for service at his owners', JOHN THAMES, ½ mile East of Rocky Mount Church, Beat 1.

ABOUT REGISTERING.

Extracts from the general election law of Alabama:

Section 2. The following persons shall be disqualified both from registering and voting: All idiots and insane persons; those who were by reason of conviction of crime disqualified from voting at the time of the ratification of the constitution on November 28, 1901; those who have been since November 28, 1901, or who shall be convicted of treason, murder, arson, embezzlement, malfeasance in office, larceny, receiving stolen property, obtaining money under false pretenses, perjury, subornation of perjury, robbery, assault with intent to rob, burglary, forgery, bribery, assault and battery on wife, bigamy, living in adultery, sodomy, incest, rape, miscegenation, crime against nature, or any crime punishable by imprisonment in penitentiary, or for anw infamous crimes or crime involving moral turpitude; also any person who has been since November 28, 1901, or who shall be convicted as a vagrant or tramp, or of selling or offering to sell his vote or the vote of another, or of making or offering to make false returns in any election by the people or in any primary election to procure the nomination or election of any person to any office, or of suborning any witness or registrar to secure the registration of any person as an elector, provided that any person who is disqualified from voting by reason of conviction of any of the offenses mentioned in this section, except treason, whether the conviction was had in a State or Federal court, has been pardoned, may be restored to his citizenship with right to vote by the Governor, approved by the Board of Pardons and specially expressed in the pardon.

Sec. 7 1-2. The following persons and no others, who, if their place of residence shall remain unchanged, will have, at the date of the next general election the qualifications as to residence prescribed by section 1 of this act, shall be qualified to register as electors, provided they shall not be disqualified under section 2 of this act:

1st. Those who can read and write any article of the constitution of the United States in the English language, and who are physically unable to work; and those who can read and write any article of the constitution of the United States in the English language, and who have worked or been regularly engaged in some lawful employment, business or occupation, trade or calling for the greater part of the twelve months next preceding the time they offer to register, and those who are unable to read and write, is such inability is due solely to physical disability; or,

2nd. The owner in good faith in his own right, or the husband of a woman who is the owner in good faith in her own right, of forty acres of land situate in this State, upon which they reside; or the owner in good faith in his own right, or the husband of any woman who is the owner in good faith in her own right, of real estate situate in this State, assessed for taxation at the value of three hundred dollars or more or the owner in good faith, in his own right, or the husband of a woman who is the owner in good faith, in her own right, of personal property in this State assessed for taxation for three hundred dollars or more; provided, that the taxes due upon such real or personal property for the year next preceding the year in which he offers to register shall have been paid, unless the assessment shall have been legally contested and and undetermined.

Sec. 15. Any elector who registered prior to January 1, 1903, who has changed the county of his residence shall be registered on application on production of his certificate, unless he has since become disqualified.

Sec. 16. When the certificate of any elector who was duly registered has been lost, mutilated or destroyed, on application stating that the certificate has been lost, mutilated or destroyed, and verified by affidavit, and it appears of record that such applicant has been registered, the Judge of Probate of the county of registration or the Secretary of State shall issue to the applicant a certificate that he was duly registered as an elector. Such certificate shall be issued free of charge to the elector. The Secretary of State shall, at the expense of the State, furnish the Judge of Probate blank certificates for use as provided in this section.

The certificate of the registrars or the Judge of Probate or of the Secretary of State shall be sufficient to establish the fact of such registration.

* * * * * * * * * *

Be sure and register when the registrars are in your beat, as the only excuse for not doing so is by reason of sickness of yourself or in your family, or by absence from the county. Everybody can register this summer who will be qualified by residence or age by the 8th day of November. Poll tax paying has nothing to do with registration; you can register now and pay your poll tax afterwards, but you cannot vote unless you are both registered and have paid your poll tax (if any is due). The period of residence necessary to register is two years in the State, one year in the county and three months in the beat. If you have moved from one beat to another in the county less than three months before election day, you can vote in your old beat, so you don't lose your vote by changing beats. Any one who desires to register on property qualification should take with him his last assessment sheet and tax collector's receipt to show to the registrars as proof that you are possessed of such property and pay taxes on it. You can register under ANY of the following heads:

1. If you own forty acres or more land in this State, and reside upon it.
2. If your wife owns forty acres or more land in this State, upon which you reside.
3. If you own real estate in this State that is assessed for taxation at $300 or more.
4. If your wife owns real estate in this State assessed for taxation at $300 or more.
5. If you own personal property in this State assessed for taxation for $300 or more.
6. If your wife owns personal property in this State assessed for taxation for $300 or more.
7. If you can read and write any section of the constitution of the United States.

Don't give up your life certificate that you got in 1902; you only have to show it to the registrars in case you have moved to this county from some other county.

THE UNION will furnish any one information on any special points that they may be in doubt upon, and stands ready to help any one to get all the rights he is entitled to under the laws of Alabama. If you think you are entitled to register and the registrars should refuse you, take a couple of good men with you so you can have witnesses as to such refusal and the reasons given by the registrars, and thereby be enabled to take your case upto high authority. tf

REGISTRATION NOTICE.

In accordance with the provisions of section 6 of an act "To further regulate elections in the State of Alabama," aproved October 6, 1903, the Board of Registrars of the county of Chilton, Alabama, do hereby give notice that the following appointments are set for the purpose of registering those qualified under the law to register as electors:

Beat No. 8, at Pletcher, on July 27 and 28, 1906.

Beat No. 6, at Harris' store, on July 30, 1906.

Beat No. 6, at Kincheon, on July 31, 1906.

Beat No. 10, at Cooper, on August 1 and 2, 1906.

Beat No. 5, at Verbena, on August 3. 1906.

Beat No. 5, at Soldiers' Home, on August 4. 1906.

Beat No. 4, at Clanton, on August 6, 7 and 8, 1906.

Beat No. 4, at Clanton, on Aug. 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 1906, for the purpose of purging the registration list.

Beat No. 4, at Clanton, on Aug. 27, 28, 29, 30, 31 and Sept. 1, 1906, for the purpose of considering the case of each elector whose name it is proposed to strike from the registration list and determine same.

Beat No. 4, at Clanton, on Sept. 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 1906, for the purpose of registering voters.

Beat No. 4, at Clanton, on Friday and Saturday before the election in November, 1906.

R. H. GAINES,
B. L. JONES,
P. M. MOORE,
Board of Registrars Chilton County.
tf

WATSON'S MAGAZINE.

The leading exponent of Jeffersonian Democracy, edited by Hon. Thos. E. Watson, of Georgia, theFather of Rural Free Delivery; author of "The Story of France," "Life of Napoleon," "Life and Times of Thomas Jefferson," "Bethany" and other books. Mr. Watson was the People's party nominee for Vice-President in 1896, and for President in 1904. He is today heading a middle-class reform movement which is bound to sweep the country in a short time.

Watson's Magazine is not a Socialist publication. It does not stand for collective ownership of all the means of production. Mr. Watson believes in public or government ownership of railroads, telegraphs and telephones; in municipal ownership of street railways, gas electric lights, water works, etc.; and he believes in private ownership of all industries not natural monopolies.

The middle class—the home owners, farmers, small business men and property owners—won Jefferson's victory in 1800; won Jackson's victory over Nick Biddle's money power in 1832; won Lincoln's victory in 1860. But each time after the flush of victory had died away they became careless of their rights and went to sleep. They have slept a good portion of the time since 1865, but—

Watson's Magazine is waking them up. Another great victory is in the air. Keep in touch with the movement.

Fifteen cents a copy at news stands; $1.50 a year by mail. Sample copy for four 2-cent stamps and four names of reading friends. Address,

TOM WATSON'S MAGAZINE,
121 West Forty-second Street,
New York City.

SPECIAL CLUBBING RATE.

WATSON'S MAGAZINE AND THE UNION A YEAR FOR ONLY $1.75. WHY NOT SAVE THE 75 CENTS? LEAVE ORDERS AT THIS OFFICE.
tf

What the surgeon make on the Fourth of July the insurance companies lose.

Thorsby, Alaba

Business Directory.

Commercial Club
OF THORSBY
DEFINITE and RELIABLE information furnished to parties who desire to locate in the South.

A. HORN
LICENSED PHARMACIST.
Drugs, Stationery and Toilet Articles.

City Bakery
BREAD, CAKES and PIES
of all kinds, fresh every day.
K. A. EKBLAD

A. M. Johnson
Groceries and Delicatessen

E. H. Adams
General Merchandise.

J. R. PARNELL
General Merchandise.

J. L. FOSS
Meat Market.

Thorsby Winery Co.
Lofthus & Brunberg, Props.

Thorsby Real Esta
(INCORPORATED)
J. M. BARRETT, Pre
G. H. GERALD, Sec.
G. C. MICHELSON, T

OLAF SCH
Watchmaker & Jewe
FRANZEN. » SUL
Full line of watches
etc. Repair work guara

A. Langville &
Blacksmith and Horseshoer
—DEALER IN—
WAGONS AND BUG

P. C. SMIT
Brown Leghorn Fowl
Eggs.
BERKSHIRE P

The Thorsby
G. C. Michelson, P
Good Beds and Me

J. J. Stanl
General Merchan

MRS. MARY R. RAS
General Merchand

J. BICE
Charcoal Ove

Cor. 2nd Ave and 7th St. THE BIG STORE, Co
—Is at The Head of The Procession.—
Dry Goods, Clothing, Hats, Sho
FURNITURE,
COFFINS AND BURIAL NECESSITI
W. I. MULLINS,
Clanton. — — Alaba

Humor and Tragedy of San Francisco's Day of Terror

By James Hopper.

OUT of that experience several pictures remain detach vivid. At Fourth and Folsom streets, by some fre drant was still giving out water. I still see the fire stood there, rushing a hose down the street flaming sides; I can see their chief standing at the corner, h helmet rosy with the flame, his long slicker drip mouth pouring out a volley of jolly oaths, and the men, the hose upon their shoulders, their helmet toward the terrific heat, rushing in between the walls. The whole city, mind you, is burning beyond them. They hose, one stream of water; they are four. It was something big, t futility of their effort, of their immense determination to do, with the world crashing to ruins about them, their single duty—to fight to the hopeless fight.

On Valencia street, at the corner of Eighteenth, a four-story wood tel collapsed, and now seems but one story high. Upon the ruins four men and 50 volunteers are working. I see them, a rope noosed about partition, tugging in concert. A hundred men are buried in those ru fire is only a few blocks away. They tug, their yellow faces distort the effort, beads of cold perspiration welling from their pores. At they stop, all of them; they look toward the fire, their weary faces with the glow, puckering in an expression of anxiety almost simian, with new courage they tug again.

At the end of the third day I was standing on the top of Russ The fire had then swept the city, but was still burning in the North Be trict. To the south, a little below me, was the Jones Street hill. A hallucination possessed me. I thought I heard strains of music. It hallucination. Up on the tip top of the Jones Street hill, in the middle street, the only thing standing for miles, was a piano. A man was on it; I could see his hands rising and falling, his body swaying. In his long black hair and a loosened red tie at his neck streamed. The bore the sounds away from me, but in a lull I finally heard the was Saint-Saens's "Danse Macabre"—the death dance. His hands and down, his body swayed, his hair streamed, and from the crest of the devastated city, like a cascade, poured the notes with their shaken dry bones.—Harper's Weekly.

It Pays, An Ad In This P

TH

VOL. IV.

ALABAMA STAT

Items of Interest Gathered Over the Entire

Confederate Veterans Will Hold Reunion.
Marion, Ala.—The Confederate veterans will hold their annual reunion August 8, 9 and 10. They anticipate a big time. It will be an occasion for a large crowd. Commander R. A. D. Camp, of the Emma Sansom camp, has issued the following command: Tuesday, August 8, assembly call 9 a. m.; policing grounds, 12 m. to 1 p. m.; devotional exercises. Thursday, August 9, address of welcome, 10 a. m.; response by Col. R. A. D. Dunn; music and devotional exercises; address, "The Old Reb as He Was and as He Is;" dinner, 2 p. m.; address by Hon. J. G. Harris, of Montgomery. The afternoon will be devoted to music, enrollment of names and other business. Friday morning, August 10, annual election of officers. All who attend are requested to bring well filled bas-

To Have New Census Taken.
Tuscumbia, Ala.—The city council of Tuscumbia has appointed one of its members, Councilman N. Pride Tompkins, to take the census of this city. The law requires that a census be taken every two years of the children of school age, and while getting the children the enumerator covers the entire field. Two years ago the population of Tuscumbia, according to the census figures, reached approximately 5,000, but the figures were not satisfactory, it being the prevalent opinion that there are fully 5,000 people in Tuscumbia, and that the figures of the present taking will reach that number.

Miners' Convention.
Birmingham, Ala.—The executive board of District No. 20, United Mine Workers of America, met in the office of the union in the Chalifoux building and decided to call a special convention of the union miners on August 14 in Birmingham. It is supposed that the meeting was called for the purpose of hearing from President Flynn as to the conference which he had with John Mitchell, president of the United Mine Workers of America, upon his recent visit to Indianapolis. It is believed that the subject of this conference was the strike of the miners which has been in effect in this district for the past two years.

Death From Live Wire.
Birmingham, Ala.—J. H. Wood, aged stableman in shaft No. 1, Pratt mines, met a sudden death by coming in contact with a live wire of the haulage system in the mines. He had been in the employ of the Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railroad Company for about a year. In some manner he touched the overhead wire in the mine, and the shock killed him almost instantly. He leaves a widow and one child. The obsequies are being held pending the arrival of the father of the unfortunate man from Georgia, where the family resided. The interment will probably take place Sunday. Despite warnings in regard to the wires of the haulage system, fatalities occur every now and then.

Good Progress Made on Sewer.
Gadsden, Ala.—The contractors who are putting in the new sewerage system are making fast progress, and if no accident happens will have the entire system completed by the middle of October. The immense ditching machine is one of the sights of the city, and its workings are watched by hundreds daily. The machine is working perfectly, except where there are large trees, the roots impeding its progress somewhat. Otherwise the soil is of a light sandy character, free from large rocks. Nine miles are being put

Judge Kyle Withdrawn.
Decatur, Ala.—Judge Osceola Kyle, who has withdrawn from the race for state legislature, comes out in a letter in the local newspapers giving reasons for withdrawing from the Car Inspectors Strike.

Montgomery, Ala.—About 300 carmen and car inspectors in the employ of the Central of Georgia railway are on a strike, but Montgomery, where the Central's trains are handled under contract by the Western of Alabama railway, will only be indirectly affected unless complications occur. The Brotherhood of Railway Carmen, it seems, had slated 117 men for increase in salaries, but were not willing to accept the company's proposition to raise only those who, in the judgment of its officials, were deserving. It is stated that, acting on this decision, 47 per cent of those slated were refused.

Alaban
Directory.
Thorsby Real Estat
(INCORPORATED)
J. M. BARRETT, Pres.
G. H. GERALD, Sec.
G. C. MICHELSON, Tr
OLAF SCHI
Watchmaker & Jewele
FRANZEN, BUIL
Full line of watches
etc. Repair work guara
A. Langville &
Blacksmith and
Horseshoer
—DEALER IN—
WAGONS AND BUGG
P. C. SMIT
Brown Leghorn Fowl
Eggs.
BERKSHIRE P
The Thorsby
G. C. Michelson, P
Good Beds and Meal
J. J. Stanle
General Merchan
MRS. MARY R. RASBE
General Merchandi
J. BICE
Charcoal Oven
STORE,
The Procession
ng, Hats, Sho
TURE,
AL NECESSITIE
LLINS,
Alaban
Tragedy of ncisco's
Terror
Hopper.
veral pictures remain detache
Folsom streets, by some freak
t water. I still see the firem ose down the street flaming ief standing at the corner, his ame, his long slicker dropp lley of jolly oaths, and then eir shoulders, their helmets
, rushing in between the ning beyond them. They ha
r. It was something big, the etermination to do, with their ir single duty—to fight to th Eighteenth, a four-story woo y high. Upon the ruins four e them, a rope nooseed about men are buried in those ruin
g, their yellow faces distorte ling from their pores. At the fire, their weary faces of anxiety almost simian, and arding on the top of Russia still burning in the North as the Jones Street hill. A heard strains of music. It ones Street hill, in the middle was a piano. A man was ing, his body swaying. In th ie at his neck streamed. The hill I finally heard the mu death dance. His hands amed, and from the crest
red the notes with their
In This Pa

THE UNION.

EQUAL RIGHTS TO ALL; SPECIAL FAVORS TO NONE.

VOL. IV. CLANTON, ALA., AUGUST 9 1906 NO. 20

ALABAMA STATE EVENTS.

Items of Interest Gathered as They Transpire Over the Entire State.

Veterans Will Hold Reunion.

Ala.—The Confederate vet- will hold their annual reunion 8, 9 and 10. They anticipate a time. It will be an occasion for crowd. Commander R. A. D. of the Emma Sansom camp, issued the following command: day, August 8, assembly call, p. m.; policing grounds, 12 m. to m.; devotional exercises. Thurs- August 9, address of welcome, 10 ; response by Col. R. A. D. Dun- music and devotional exercises; "The Old Reb as He Was and in;" dinner, 2 p. m.; address by J. G. Harris, of Montgomery. The noon will be devoted to music, en- ment of names and other business. morning, August 10, annual tion of officers. All who attend requested to bring well filled bas-

To Have New Census Taken.

Tuscumbia, Ala.—The city council of Tuscumbia has appointed one of its members, Councilman N. Pride Tomp- son, to take the census of this city. The law requires that a census be taken every two years of the children of school age, and while getting the names the enumerator covers the en- tire field. Two years ago the popula- tion of Tuscumbia, according to the census figures, reached approximately 5,000, but the figures were not satis- factory, it being the prevalent opinion that there are fully 5,000 people in Tus- cumbia, and that the figures of the present taking will reach that number.

Miners' Convention.

Birmingham, Ala.—The executive board of District No. 20, United Mine Workers of America, met in the of- fices of the union in the Chalifoux building and decided to call a special convention of the union miners on Au- gust 14 in Birmingham.

It is supposed that the meeting was called for the purpose of hearing from President Flynn as to the conference which he had with John Mitchell, presi- dent of the United Mine Workers of America, upon his recent visit to In- dianapolis. It is believed that the sub- ject of this conference was the strike of the miners which has been in ef- fect in this district for the past two years.

Death From Live Wire.

Birmingham, Ala.—J. H. Wood, aged stableman in shaft No. 1, Pratt mines, met a sudden death by coming in contact with a live wire of the haul- age system in the mines. He had been in the employ of the Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railroad Company for about one year. In some manner he touched the overhead wire in the mine, and the shock killed him almost instantly. He leaves a widow and one child. The remains are being held pending the arrival of the father of the unfortunate man from Georgia, where the family resided. The interment will probably take place Sunday. Despite warnings in regard to the wires of the haulage system, fatalities occur every now and then.

Good Progress Made on Sewer.

Gadsden, Ala.—The contractors who are putting in the new sewerage sys- tem are making fast progress, and if no accident happens will have the en- tire system completed by the middle of October. The immense ditching machine is one of the sights of the city and its workings are watched by hundreds daily. The machine is work- ing perfectly, except where there are large trees, the roots impeding its pro- gress somewhat. Otherwise the soil is of a light sandy character, free from large rocks. Nine miles are being put down.

Judge Kyle Withdraws.

Decatur, Ala.—Judge Osceola Kyle, who has withdrawn from the race for the state legislature, comes out in a letter in the local newspapers giving his reasons for withdrawing from the race.

Car Inspectors Strike.

Montgomery, Ala.—About 300 car- men and car inspectors in the em- ploy of the Central of Georgia railway are on a strike, but Montgomery, where the Central's trains are handled under contract by the Western of Alabama railway, will only be indirectly affected unless complications occur.

The Brotherhood of Railway Car- men, it seems, had slated 117 men for increase in salaries, but were not will- ing to accept the company's proposi- tion to raise only those who, in the judgment of its officials, were deserv- ing. It is stated that, acting on this decision, 67 per cent of those slated were raised.

Repair Steel Cars.

Gadsden, Ala.—The Alabama Great Southern railway repair shops in this city have added a department for re- pairing steel cars, which requires spe- cial and costly machinery.

The sides of the cars, which are of sheet steel, have the dents taken out by being heated with an apparatus re- sembling a blacksmith's bellows, which heats the steel to a white heat in a few minutes; it is then hammered with powerful pneumatic hammers and is made as smooth as a new car. The repairing of steel cars has been a vex- ing problem with railroads, and the shops here are among the first to make it a success. Ten steel cars have been turned out of the shops here within the past two weeks, and to all appear- ances are as good as new.

Alabama Regiment Leaves.

Chattanooga, Tenn.—The first arri- vals of national guards at the Chicka- mauga National Park encampment have served their time and gone home. The Seventy-first Virginia, Third South Carolina and Second Alabama were paid off, the enlisted men getting $3 each, and have taken their departure. The First Georgia, First South Caro- lina, a North Carolina regiment and a battalion from Mississippi will take their places.

Charges Dismissed.

Birmingham, Ala.—The charge of accessory to the murder of George Shoemate, the man found mortally wounded on Five Mile creek bridge and who died at the St. Vincent Hos- pital Monday night, will be dismissed against Henry Ragland and Bay Roch- ester. Both men were released on their own recognizance by Judge H. B. Abernathy on recommendation of Cor- oner Paris, who caused the arrests to be made after an investigation into the shooting, which he made Tuesday.

E. T. Glenn Dead.

Auburn, Ala.—Mr. E. T. Glenn, treas- urer of the Alabama Polytechnic Insti- tute, died Friday night at 11 o'clock. He was 86 years old, and has been connected with the college since its foundation in 1872. He was born in Georgia, but was reared in Barbour county, Alabama. His father was a leading Methodist minister and the founder of the East Alabama Male Col- lege, and has himself been always fore- most in the councils of the church.

Boy Charged With Forgery.

Gadsden, Ala.—Will Leek, a young white boy about 18 years of age, was arrested on city and state warrants charging him with larceny and forgery. It is alleged that he sold the watch of John Moore, a well-known merchant, and disposed of it for a few dollars to another party. It is also alleged that he forged two checks and attempted to pass them. He is the son of highly respected parents.

Ask for Selection at Primary.

Gadsden, Ala.—Governor Jelks has been petitioned by a number of citi- zens of the First commissioners' dis- trict to allow the successor of J. R. Cambron, who resigned to make the race for sheriff, to be selected in the August primary. There are several pe- titions already before the governor for the position, the two most important being R. R. Yates and W. P. Johnson, both excellent citizens.

Lesser Reports to Governor.

Montgomery, Ala.—In a letter to the governor E. Lesser, of Birmingham, says after a full investigation at Lock- hart that there is nothing to the charges of peonage there. He asserts that men leave when they please. The same statement is made by the Ger- man vice consult at Pensacola.

Electioneering at Cullman.

Cullman, Ala.—Chief Justice Samuel D. Weakley, Robert J. Lowe and Judge Sam Adams were canvassing here. The three gentlemen made short speeches at the court house.

Etowah Cotton Doing Well.

Gadsden, Ala.—The warm sunshine of the past few days has improved the cotton crop wonderfully, especially the upland cotton, which is fruiting finely, although some ten days late. Consid- erable of last year's crop is being brough to this market and sold, which is something unusual for this season of the year. One farmer sold thirty- odd bales at an average of 11 cents.

Postmasters Appointed.

Washington, D. C.—Jasper L. Mor- row, appointed postmaster at Beard, Marshall county.

James T. Lever appointed regular and John W. Warnock substitute rural carrier, route 1, at Ensley.

FATAL COLLISION

Electric Cars Collide. Two are dead, Others Will Die.

ONE CAR IS TELESCOPED.

Both Cars Were Crowded and Met on Curves While Running at High Speed.

Vermillion, O.—In a head-on collis- ion between two passenger cars on the Lake Shore electric road two people were killed outright, several fatally in- jured, while probably two score more were injured, several seriously.

The total casualties in the Lake Shore electric wreck are placed at two dead, one dying, six probably fatally hurt and forty-four seriously hurt. St. Joesph's Hospital at Lorani is jammed with injured, eighteen persons having been removed there on the first car moved from the scene of the wreck.

James Yerrick died on the way from the scene of the wreck to the hospital in Lorain, making the list of dead so far three.

The westbound Lake Shore electric limited crashed into the regular No. 12, eastbound, three miles west of here, and the limited was telescoped more than half way through its length by the westbound car.

Both cars were running at a high rate of speed and met at a curve. About eighty persons comprised the passenger list of the two cars. The collision is said to have been caused by a misunderstanding of orders. The injured were removed to a hospital in Lorain.

The dead: W. D. Moody, Beach Park, O., motorman on limited; Frederick Smiley, Lima, O.

Injured: James Yerrick, Great West- ern Oil Company, Milan, O., fatally, concussion of the brain.

Witnesses of the accident and people who rushed to the scene attracted by the cries of the victims say that it is a miracle that at least fifty were not killed. Both cars were crowded. The westbound limited, in addition to its regular patronage, carried forty Lima Y. M. C. A. boys, who had just finished a two weeks' camp at Linwood Park. The car was crowded to the rails.

Many of the passengers were riding in the front vestibule with the motor- man, Moody, and M. Caldwell, of Lake- wood, the conductor, who were in charge. The eastbound car, the regu- lar car, was also heavily laden. The passengers had no warning of what was coming. The car passed a siding under full speed. They did not know that they were to pass a car there. At the curve, 600 feet away, those riding in the front end saw the other turning, coming towards them at full speed. An instant later the crash took place.

Palace Hotel.

San Francisco, Cal.—It is definitely decided that the new Palace Hotel will cost $3,000,000, with $600,000 allowed for furniture.

The New York architects who are preparing preliminary plans have been instructed to make certain alterations which will increase the cost $200,000 over the original estimate. There are to be 700 rooms. The additional ex- pense will be for women and men's grills and the court. In nearly every respect the famous old court will be duplicated.

Spanish Minister Attacked.

Lisbon.—An attempt was made to assault Senor Jene Franco, president of the council of ministers, as he was leaving a political gathering. Senor Franco had addressed the newly inaug- urated club of electors, after which the crowd of manifestants in the streets stoned the members of the club, and as Senor Franco entered his carriage a manifestant attempted to attack the minister, but friends com- pelled his assailant to seek safety in flight.

Shot to Death.

Chicago, Ill.—John Rose, a painter, was sitting with his wife on the door- step of their home, 124 Sangamon street, when he was shot and fatally wounded by George W. Heller. Rose died a few minutes later.

Heller, who is an iron worker, was walking up and down the street with a woman. Both had been drinking. At length they crossed to Rose's side of the street and started a quarrel with the latter. Rose ordered them away, and Heller replied with a bullet, which struck the man in the left side.

As the shot was fired the woman accompanying Heller ran and escaped. Heller was arrested.

Decision Rendered Against Ice Men.

Toledo, O.—Judge Babcock, in the common pleas court handed down his decision in the cases sustaining Judge Kinkaid in everp particular and exon- erating him of having made any prom- ise or suggestion of leniency, as claim- de by the attorneys for the ice trust. The judge declared the contentions of the attorneys for the trust to be ridic- ulous and should never have been brought into court.

Were it not for the fact that the ice men's attorneys succeeded in get- ting into the circuit court on errors the defendants would have to go to the workhouse. Technically the cases are yet proceeding in the upper court, al- though Judge Babcock's decision re- moved the case entirely from the cir- cuit court. That court, however, is ad- journed until the middle of September and sentences are suspended until the court meets and decides it has noth- ing further to do with the cases. Should the attorneys for the ice men appeal from Judge Babcock to the cir- cuit court, which they are likely to do, that court will likely send the cases back for rehearing in the common pleas court, or by declaring there is no error cut off the last hope of the ice men to escape imprisonment.

Wants Apologies.

New York.—A special to the Tribune from Portland, Me., says:

The British consul in Boston has or- dered an investigation of the alleged ill treatment of Lord Sholto Douglas during the period of his recent deten- tion by the Portland police.

The inquiry relates chiefly to the use of manacles on the second night of his detention, after he had furnished the police with what seemed to the British vice consul to be ample proof of his identity. The manacles, worn all night, left painful bruises.

Lord Douglas says he wants to avoid further notoriety and will be satisfied with verbal apologies from the sheriff and police. The consular authorities await the apologies and the matter may become the subject of interna- tional inquiry.

Lord Douglas was mistaken by the police for an alleged bigamist wanted in the south.

Twelve Years' Imprisonment.

Patreson, N. J.—William H. Belcher, who while mayor of this city abscond- ed a year ago and who surrendered himself on Monday last, was sen- tenced to twelve years imprisonment in the state prison at Trenton on a charge of embezzzlement.

Belcher disappeared from this city about a year ago while he was mayor. He was alleged to have embezzled from $100,000 to $150,000 from personal friends and from the Manchester Building and Loan Association, which was forced to suspend business. No trace of the missing man was discov- ered by the authorities until he ap- peared at the county jail Monday night and voluntarily surrendered. He had only $17 in his possession and declared he had suffered great hardship during his absence.

May Enter Upon Holy War.

London.—A dispatch to the Pall Mall Gazette from Tangier says:

Highly sensational reports are being received here, causing the utmost ex- citement. Daily, almost hourly, comes information from the interior of the rapid spread of a violent anti-French agitation. The rebels are concentrat- ing their military contingents around Marakesh (Morocco City), the south- ern capital, and there is no doubt that a formidable coalition of anti-independ- ent vassals has been formed.

They are clamoring for a holy war and urging the viceroy, Prince Abdul- Hafod, to proclaim himself sultan. The situation is more critical than it has been for many years.

Colonel Bullitt Dead.

Louisville, Ky.—Col. Cuthbert Bul- litt, one of the most widely known Kentuckians, died at the age of 97. He was appointed collector of customs at New Orleans by President Lincoln and served in that capacity for several years, afterwards holding other federal appointments. He was known as a great beau and was extremely particu- lar regarding his personal appearance up to his last illness.

Hart Will Not Resign.

London.—Answering a question in the house of commons Foreign Secre- tary Grey said the government had no reason to believe that the report of the intended resignation of Sir Robert Hart, inspector-general of the Chinese imperial customs, was correct. The secretary has been informed by Charge D'Affaires Carnegie at Pekin of the new instructions given to the inspect- or-general of customs and they did not appear to be contrary to the assurance given by China that the actual admin- istration of the customs will continue as before. The secretary was inquir- ing, however, as to whether this had been made quite clear.

THE RUSSIAN MOB

One Officer Thrown Into a Lake With Stone Tied About Neck.

BOMB THROWERS KEEP BUSY.

A Poor Demented Woman Bayonetted Without Mercy—Servants Turned Masters Over to Mutineers.

Warsaw.—A telegram from Libau says that train robbers between Libau and Haffpot stole $40,000 of govern- ment money.

Warsaw.—A plan to liberate the po- litical prisoners here was betrayed to the authorities. Several civil servants and policemen who were implicated have been arrested.

Moscow.—A bomb was exploded in the Lazan railway station. Two per- sons were killed.

St. Petersburg.—The Novoe Vremya, the only unofficial paper to appear, de- clares "the nation seems determined to commit harikari," and reviews the brutality of the mutineers at Cron- stadt in their attacks on the officers as showing what the country may expect if the mob gets the upper hand. The paper says the mutineers tied a rope with a stone at one end around the neck of one of the officers and threw him into a lake, where he was drown- ed, beat in the face of another officer with the butt of a rifle and broke the legs of a poor mad woman after bayo- netting her.

It turns out that the servants of Colonel Alexandroff and Captain Vrich- insky delivered them up to the muti- neers, and these servants were among the murderers who were tried by drumhead court-martial and shot. When they were offered the services of a priest six men sentenced to death refused to accept the sacrament and only expressed repentance.

After such evidence of the mob's spirit the Novoe Vremya appeals to all who desire to prevent a repetition of the horrors and terrors of the revolu- tion in France to discontinue their at- titude of interference and rally to the side of law and order.

Call for Uprising.

Warsaw.—The Jewish socialists in a proclamation urge the Jews to be ready to fight, and should the signal be given they are requested to appear in the street armed. The appeal has given rise to a serious panic, and fears are also expressed that a railroad strike may also break out here. Stringent measure have been adopted for the preservation of order.

The Polish socialists have issued a proclamation admitting their responsi- bility for the recent train robberies and acknowledging that they murdered twenty policemen during the course of the week.

Pennsylvania Leads.

Harrisburg, Pa.—The annual report of James E. Roderick, chief of the state department of mines for 1905, shows that Pennsylvania continues to lead in the mining industry of the country, producing practically all of the anthracite and 30 per cent of the bituminous coal.

The total coal output for Pennsylva- nia in 1905 represents a value at the mines of about $350,000,000 and at points of distribution of about $650,- 000,000. The anthracite production was 78,647,020 short tons and bitumi- nous 119,351,514 short tons. The total loss of life in and about the anthracite mines was 664 and in and about the bituminous mines 479.

Herbert Compton Dead.

London.—News was received here of the death of Herbert Eastwick Compton, the novelist, biographer and author on historical and other subjects, who died at sea while on his way to the Island of Madeira. He was born in 1853.

Wealthy Man Convicted.

Portland, Ore.—Willard N. Jones, a member of the Oregon legislature of 1903 and a wealthy contractor and tim- ber dealer, was sentenced by Judge William H. Hunt in the United States circuit court to serve one year's im- prisonment in the federal penitentiary on McNeill's Island and to pay a fine of $2,000. Jones was convicted of con- spiracy to defraud the government. Thaddeus S. Potter, a well-known Port- land lawyer, who was tried and con- victed jointly with Jones, was sen- tenced to serve six months in the Multnomah county jail and to pay a fine of $500.

Professional Cards.

William M. Adams,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW
OFFICE; Room 1, Court House.
"Practices in all Courts
Long time loans negotiated on improved Farm Lands.
CLANTON, - - - ALA.

J. EARLE GOWAN,
DENTIST.
Office in Kicker Building
CLANTON, ALABAMA.

A. C. Smith,
Attorney-at-Law
Practice in All Courts
Office 6th St. opp. Court House
CLANTON, :-: ALABAMA.

N. S. JOHNSON, M. D.
PHYSICIAN & SURGEON
Office at Residence
CLANTON, ALABAMA.

L. V. STABLER, M. D
Physician & Surgeon
Office Over Horn's Drug Store
Thorsby, Alabama

J. Osmond Middleton,
Attorney-at-Law
Practice in all Courts.
Office 6th St. Court House
CLANTON, -:- ALABAMA

DR. E. G. HYMAN
DENTIST
Office in Tipton Mullins' Building
CLANTON

H. C. Junkerman
DENTIST
OFFICE: Franzen Building
Thorsby, Alabama.

G. H. GERALD,
NOTARY PUBLIC
Office at Thorsby Inn.
Deeds, Mortgages, Affidavits and other papers carefully made out.

I. S. Gerald, Notary Public
AT THORSBY SAVINGS BANK.

FREE
to Readers of
THE UNION

To everyone who sends us $1.00 for a year's subscription to THE UNION, new subscriber or renewal, we will give as a premium absolutely FREE,

A Year's Subscription
to
The Southern Ruralist

We have examined the Southern Ruralist and consider it to be the best and most practical farm paper pub- lished in the South, and it just suits this locality. Drop by The Union Office when you are in town and see a copy of the Ruralist. It will mean dollars in your pocket to read this paper with The Union for a year. tf.

60 YEARS' EXPERIENCE
PATENTS
TRADE MARKS
DESIGNS
COPYRIGHTS &C.
Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communica- tions strictly confidential. HANDBOOK on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents. Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the Scientific American.
A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest cir- culation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.
MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York
Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

LAND FOR SALE.
Eighty acres land in Beat 10, close to Cooper's. For sale cheap. Call on or address L. H. GENTRY,
Mt. Creek, Ala.

TEMPERANCE IN THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

The subject of "Temperance in the Sunday School," which is now before us for discussion, is one of deep concern, or should be, to all who are interested in the betterment of the race of mankind.

Now, if this is true, then I will answer this question by saying that better temperance education is the burning need of the day. Temperance is a word which is broad in its meaning and application, and is generally defined and understood by the people as meaning the moderate use of all things. With this definition, however, I wish to take issue. And instead thereof I shall give you a different and more up-to-date definition, one that is more modern in its meaning and application, viz: Temperance is the moderate use of all things not injurious to the human system, and the total abstaining from all things harmful or injurious to the physical being. I shall now confine myself to what is considered by all fair-minded people of today as being the greatest curse to the human race that the devil has ever been able to devise: something that has caused more suffering, death and broken hearts than all wars, pestilences and famines combined. What shall we name this monster? It is called King Alcohol, a poisonous liquid obtained from fermented grains and vegetables of different kinds, and is found to a greater or less per cent in all intoxicating drinks, viz., whiskey, gin, beer, ale, wines, etc. But when we see the wanton destruction which it leaves in its path we are wont to call it by some more appropriate name, that we may, if possible, the more indelibly affix it on our minds as to what are its dangers to us. So let us call it double-distilled extract of damnation. You may think this is harsh language, but I ask you in all sincerity, is it? I answer no, indeed; the English language is too limited to allow us words of sufficient force to properly name it. And yet we pet, fondle and embrace it, and call it blessed, when all the time it is slowly, but none the less surely, biding its time when it will hold us fast in its deadly embrace as prisoners, where we are doomed to endless torment in hell. Let me give you an illustration, which I trust will help you to a better understanding of this great subject. There was once a man who was traveling in India, and he found a small snake of the boaconstrictor species, which, when full grown, is large and powerful and crushes its prey to death in its powerful coils, before making its dinner out of it. This man picked up this innocent looking little snake and put it in his bosom and took it home with him, and being of a literary turn of mind, wrote a drama for the stage or theatre, one act in which he was to appear with his snake. He fondled, trained and played with it very affectionately for a number of years, blinded to the fact that his snakeship was growing and becoming more powerful all the time. During all these years he was each night playing his part in the drama, which, whilst daring, yet pleased the people very much, and each night as they appeared on the stage elicited encore after encore, and had the honor of being the star of the company. Finally, one night when his turn came in the play, the curtain was lifted, and, as usual, he was seen seated in what represented a wild jungle in India, and in the background was seen this now large and powerful snake, licking out its forked tongue, and swaying its monstrous head to and fro, its green eyes glittering like diamonds as it approached its victim, who, apparently, was at perfect ease, and unconscious of approaching danger. The snake again embraced the man's body in its slimy coils, as was its part in the play, and shot its devilish head above that of its victim, as was its custom, which was the climax in the scene, but just as the audience was on the verge of a loud and long applause, the snake tightened its coils and crushed every bone in its victim's body, which froze the encore to the lips of that large audience. And thus does it portray the certain fate of all who tamper and play with alcoholic drinks.

Let us now change the scene, and for a short time consider the effects of alcohol on the human system. For it does seem to me that what we most need is a clear understanding of the effects of alcohol on our ownselves. Now, if it is a fact that alcohol is poisonous to our bodies, and by its use the organs become diseased, it does seem reasonable to conclude that we, as intelligent and responsible creatures, ought to stop and sincerely consider what we are doing, and not destroy what God created in his own image and likeness. For we read in God's word, I. Cor. 3:16-17, "Know ye not that ye are the temple of God, and that the Spirit of God dwelleth in you? If any man defile the temple of God, him shall God destroy: for the temple of God is holy, which temple ye are."

The taking of alcoholic drinks into the system poisons every vital organ of the body, and thus destroys them, by causing disease therein, thus hindering them in performing their part of keeping the body in a healthy condition, the stomach being the first organ to become affected, then the liver, heart, kidneys and brain become involved, and thus the whole nervous system becomes diseased.

Now to the proof. I shall now take up the medical use and effects of alcohol. This question is one which at the present time is exciting a great degree of interest in the medical world, and we should neglect an important part of our task if we should fail to devote to it more than a passing notice. The medical use of alcohol is the strong fortress into which the moderate drinker runs when hard pressed by the advocates of total abstinence. It has always been a sort of a Gibraltar for intemperance. The admission of the medical use of alcohol, as a stimulant, tonic, conservator or generator of vital force is a delusion. It has made the other almost impregnable force of teetotal argument seem erroneous and false. But moderate drinkers have persisted in making the issue prominent on every possible occasion, and we accept the challenge, and will now proceed to show you by unimpeachable scientific experiment that alcohol is a poison, and that it kills instead of giving life.

It has become evident to those who have given the matter candid thought that either the common employment of alcohol as a medicine is a stupendous error or teetotalism is a fanatical delusion. Which of these positions is the true one? It must certainly be that one which best agrees with facts—scientific facts—and the dictates of reason and common sense.

According to the classical authorities on materia medica, alcohol is a nervine, stimulant, tonic, diaphoretic, diuretic and caustic. Its varied properties being urged as sufficient for its so geenral use, they making it applicable to almost any actual or imaginary disease. It should be remarked, however, that a medical property is not, as generally supposed, a certain mode of acting upon the system possessed by a drug, but rather an indication of the manner in which the system acts toward the drug. It is evident, then, that the medical properties of alcohol, before enumerated, are so many terms for indicating a corresponding number of disturbances or disorders which the drug occasions in the body. When medical authors say that alcohol acts so and so, we must understand them to mean only that the drug occasions such an action on the part of the system. As the relation of any drug to the body in disease is determined by observing its effects upon the body in health, it will be instructive for us to glance for a moment at the effects of alcohol upon living tissue, as determined by actual experiment.

When applied to plants, says Pereia, a noted medical writer, "Alcohol acts as a rapid and fatal poison." Says the same author, "Leeches, immersed in spirits, die in two minutes." Frogs and snakes are affected in the same manner. We have seen the heart of a turtle, contracting vigorously several hours after removal from the body of the reptile, but on being placed in alcohol its contractions ceased in less than a minute. Alcohol causes paralysis when applied directly to the trunk of a nerve.

Applied to the skin, and retained by some impervious covering to prevent evaporation, alcohol produces irritation and numbness. If a little alcohol is added to a vessel of water containing live minnows, they will speedily die. Applied to the mucous membrane of the eye or mouth, still greater irritation is occasioned. When taken into the stomach, undiluted, it produces irritation, inflammation and ulceration, as proven by Dr. Beaumont's observations upon Alex St. Martin. When mingled with the blood alcohol destroys the blood. When a considerable quantity of alcohol is taken the distinction between venous and arterial blood is almost destroyed, all the blood assuming a dark hue. But alcohol does not remain in the blood. It permeates every tissue of the body, and for some curious reason, accumulates in the nerve tissue more than any other, unless it be the liver, which would very naturally receive the most, since alcohol, when received by the stomach, is carried directly to the liver by the portal vein, as soon as absorption occurs. The effect of alcohol upon the nerves is to lessen sensibility. A man whose nerves are bathed in alcohol has the acuteness of all of his senses somewhat impaired. The degree of impairment depends upon the amount of alcohol taken. A large quantity of alcohol taken destroys sensibility entirely.

We have observed that alcohol is a rapid and fatal poison to plants, that it kills leeches, frogs, reptiles and minnows, that it irritates the skin and mucous membrane, destroys the blood and paralyzes the nerves. In considering these effects, Prof. Christinson, Dr. Perera, Dr. Taylor, Prof. Orfila and other authorities of equal note pronounce it a narcotico-acrid poison. Says Dr. E. Smith, "It is a poison of the nervous centers." Says Dr. Edmunds, of England, "There is no great city on our side of the ocean where there are not inquests held upon men who drink a bottle of brandy and fall down and die, just as if you had given them a spoonful of prussic acid; alcohol is a poison." Says Dr. Willard Parker, of New York, "By physiological inquiries it has been established that alcohol is a poison."

If there should remain the least shadow of a doubt in the mind of any one that alcohol is a poison, it must certainly be removed by considering how the system treats this drug when it is taken into the stomach. At first the mucous membrane becomes congested, and throws out a quantity of mucous to protect itself from the alcohol, while the absorbents increase their activity for the purpose of getting the drug out of the stomach as quickly as possible. Having entered the blood, it is transported at once to the liver, which does its best to extract as much as possible of the poison, though at imminent peril to itself. Very soon the poison-laden blood reaches the heart. This organ also recognizes the drug as something which has no place in the blood and ought to be removed; and as it cannot directly effect the removal itself, it pumps a little harder at the circulation in order to hurry the impure blood along to those organs which are especially designed to remove impurities. Hence the increased force and frequency of the pulse. The first of these organs which the hastening blood reaches is the lungs, and here the volatile poison is sent out in volumes. Every one knows that a drunkard's breath smells like a beer shop. The alcohol is also expelled by the kidneys and the skin, and can be found in the urine and perspiration. In fact, every excretory organ of the body is engaged in getting rid of this poison. A food or a friendly substance is not treated in this way. If alcohol is a good thing it is certainly very much abused by the vital instincts. But the vital instincts are not easily deceived. They recognize food in an entirely different manner. An apple, a potato, milk or bread, when taken into the body, is utilized. It disappears, and never reappears as milk, or bread, or apple, or potato. But not so with alcohol. It enters the system alcohol and leaves it precisely the same as it entered, remaining the same all the way through. Instead of retaining the drug, digesting and assimilating it the system hurries it out in every possible way. The escaping poison can be detected in the breath for more than twenty-four hours after a small quantity has been taken. It is longer retained in the body, and has been distilled from the brains of drunkards thirty-six hours after its reception into the body. If after eating apples, potatoes and sundry other articles, the same articles should be found upon a post mortem examination in various portions of the body—apples in the brain, potatoes in the liver, and other articles in other parts of the body—it would be considered as the most indisputable evidence that those articles, apples, potatoes, etc., were not food, since they were net used or changed in the body. If we found these same articles passing out of the body in an unchanged condition, we should be led to the same conclusion. This is just the experience with alcohol; it enters the body alcohol and leaves the body alcohol. The conclusion, then, is unavoidable that alcohol is not a food, but a poison; as eminent physicians have declared it to be.

In conclusion, let me give you the per cent of alcohol contained in the different drinks: Whiskey, 54 per cent; rum, 53 per cent; brandy, 53 per cent; Holland gin, 51 per cent; Madeira wine, 24 per cent; port wine, 22 per cent; sherry wine, 19 per cent; Burgundy, 14 per cent; champagne, 13 per cent; cider, hard, 8 per cent; strong ale, 7 per cent; beer, 7 per cent; brown stout, 7 per cent. I trust that in this somewhat lengthy thesis I have enabled you to fully, as never before, see the eminent danger to your ownselves there is in the use of alcoholic drinks. Friends, I have conscientiously and truly presented these indisputable facts to you, with the hope that I might be able thereby to enable you to awaken to the great danger to which we are threatened by the use of alcoholic drinks, and thus, if possible, arouse you to the great importance of Temperance Sunday in the Sunday School.

A. HORN.

Thorsby, Ala., April 29, 1906.

Peasants Killed by Cossacks.

Vorosneh.—Peasants of Bolgasa, who had assembled for the village fair, attacked a passing patrol of Cossacks. The latter replied with two volleys. A number of peasants were killed or wounded.

Lawyer Charged with Vagrancy.

Oyster Bay, N. Y.—Karl Cook, who said he was a lawyer from Washington, D. C., and who was arrested by a secret service man while attempting to climb Sagamore Hill, was sentenced to five days in jail at Mineola on the charge of vagrancy.

Mexico City.—Reports indicate that the strikers on the Mexican Central railroad are losing ground, a number of men having come forward to take the places of the strikers. It is not believed probable the strike will spread to other railroads.

Minsk.—Two workmen have been arrested at the barracks here for distributing revolutionary proclamations among the troops.

THE PORCH.

I.
When father built the veranda,
He kicked about the expense,
But ma, she said:
"Don't mind it, Ed—
Don't think of dollars and cents."

II.
That autumn Clara was married,
It made pa glad as could be,
And ma would smile
Most all the while,
"I'm proud of that porch," said she.

III.
Last summer both Belle and Amy
Would race for the porch at night,
And all the rest
Of us thought best
To stay indoors, out of sight.

IV.
But Belle ran faster than Amy—
She got her man in July;
And I'll commend
That porch to send
A bachelor's path sky high.

V.
Last Sunday Amy informed us
That she had told Jimmy "yes,"
And now us three,
Pa, ma and me,
Can get on that porch, I guess.
—Cleveland Leader.

FLASHES OF FUN

Artist (broke)—"Yes, I'm making a good deal of progress. The sheriff has just begun to take an interest in my paintings."—Fliegende Blaetter.

"Out of a job, eh?" "Yeh. De boss said he was losin' money on de t'ings I was makin'." "Dat so? W'ot was you makin'?" "Mistakes."—Philadelphia Press.

The darkest hour is just before the dawn
When woman first puts the peroxide on.
—Town Topics.

be will be?" inquired the red-faced optimist. "Yes, when it doesn't turn out to be something quite to the contrary," replied the lantern-jawed pessimist.

"Do you think the auto will eventually be the means of doing away with horses?" "I know it. I've seen two killed right on my own street."—Milwaukee Sentinel.

"Sometimes I think I have more troubles than any other man on earth." "Nonsense! Look at Thompson. He's got a wife, an automobile and a sure system for beating the races."—Judge.

Miss Plane—"I understand you do very handsome work and make very pretty pictures." Photographer—"Yes'm, but I could give you an exact likeness if you wish."—Philadelphia Ledger.

Mrs. Naggsby—"How well I remember the night you proposed to me, Henry. You looked like a fool." Naggsby—"Appearances are not always deceitful, my dear."—Chicago Daily News.

The marts of Packingtown among Went Mary with her lamb;
Now half of it is potted tongue
And half is potted ham.

"What books have helped you most?" inquired the literary girl. "Well," answered the wholly mercenary author, "I must confess that I never succeeded in drawing royalties from any except my own."—Washington Star.

Louisville Courier-Journal.

Johnny—"Mamma, when I grows up I wants to be a saint." Mother—"Oh, you darling! And why?" Johnny—"Why, I was reading that boys never grows up to be what they wants to be."—Judge.

First Passenger (exuberantly pacing the deck)—"When I am at sea I can scarcely contain myself." Second Passenger (dejectedly leaning over the rail)—"Strange. That's just the way I feel."—Philadelphia Record.

"Really," complained the cranky woman, "I never met a man so hard to please as my husband." "Indeed?" replied Miss Speitz, "and it was only a few years ago that he proposed to you. How quickly men change."—Philadelphia Press.

How to Drive a Horse.

The manner of driving or riding has a strong bearing on condition, and we can see every day thousands of examples to this effect on the streets anywhere. Given two horses having the same care, food, etc., both physically able and performing identical tasks, yet driven by two different men—one is always fat, composed, and tranquil; the other nervous, agitated, anxious, and in consequence thin and out of condition. What is the reason? Nothing but the different handling—lack of sympathy, of any horse sense or horseman's instinct, in the driver of the latter. Why is the average livery-stable or riding-school horse haggard of eye, anxious of countenance, almost always thin and worn? Not lack of food nor overwork—just mental worry and the nervous overstrain of trying to please a lot of thoughtless people, most of whom wholly lack horse sense and are proud of it. Do what you will in the way of care, etc., the handling the horse receives has greatly to do with his physical welfare. Perfect condition is not a mere matter of so much food, so much water, a warm bed, a tight roof. It depends, as does everything else in life and in our relations with other men and all beasts, upon the little things, the unconsidered trifles—and lucky is he who has the interest, the patience, the intuition to investigate closely, to discern clearly, and to apply intelligently, for he shall reap his reward in countless ways, and in various associations.—F. M. Ware, in "Condition in the Horse and How to Attain It," in The Outlook Magazine.

A GREAT COMBINATION OFFER

We Will Furnish the "TWICE-A-WEEK" Issue of the

St. Louis Globe-Democrat

—With—

THE UNION

—For—

$1.50 Both Papers, one year, only

The St. Louis Globe-Democrat should not be classed with the many weekly papers. It is a high-grade Semi-Weekly, eight or more pages, Tuesday and Friday. It is beyond all comparison the biggest, best and National News and Home Journal published in the United States. It is Republican in Politics but is above all

A Great Modern Newspaper,

It is not made up indiscriminately from the Daily issue. It is edited with special reference to the needs of the Farmer, the Merchant, professional man who desires to keep thoroughly posted without spending time to read a large Daily Paper. It also contains a great variety of well reading matter, making it invaluable to every member of the family.

This Liberal Clubbing Offer

is open to all old or new subscribers, but may be withdrawn at any time, must receive the cash with order. Address

THE UNION,
Clanton, Ala.

Ben M. Jacobs & Bro.

Furniture and Rugs.

—SOLE AGENTS—

Globe-Wernicke Elastic Book Cases
Filing Cabinets.

Catalogue for the asking.

BIRMINGHAM, AL

Farmers' Mutual Insurance Associat

OF ALABAMA.

CHARTERED BY SPECIAL ACT OF THE LEGISLATURE

By the People and for the People.

Chilton County Branch

Organized February 3, 1900.

W. M. WILSON, President.
WALLACE C. EDLER, Sec'y.-Treas.

INSURES Farmers' dwellings, outbuildings and c and live stock against loss by fire, wind and ligh The cheapest, safest and most sensible method of i ance known to man

Average Yearly Cost for Five and a half Years 43-100 of 1 per c

Full particulars furnished upon application to WALLACE C. EDLER, Clanton.

PAUL CALAME,

205 21st Street
Birmingham, Ala.

Practical Watchm and Optician

Eyes Correct Fitted

Mail orders prompt

SUBSCRIBE FOR THIS PAPER

DO YOU WAN

Letterheads, Noteheads, Billheads, Envelopes,

OR ANYTHING ELSE PRINTED?

Then Call at

THE UNION OFFI

and See Fine Work at Low Prices.

500 Noteheads
500 Envelopes
All For $2.00

Good Work on Good Material, done on Good M
Don't forget! THE UNION, Clanton, Alabama

Pure Water Prevents Fevers.

DRILLED WELLS FURNISH PURE WA

We guarantee water or no charge made. Estimates given. Address

L. E. SARBER CO.

Thorsby,

A POPE BROUGHT... ..... WORRIES AND

Fears For His Health Have Made Consider Possibilities of a New C of Daily Life of Prisoner He Has Been Fond Now Shut Off

Notwithstanding the many reports ...y sent out from here that the ...had entirely recovered from ...ent attack of the gout, writes ...me (Italy) correspondent of ...w York World, well-founded ...s are just now very persistent ...ican circles that Pius X. is very ...n well. His recent illness has ...ceeded by a state of general ...y which prevents him from ...ng any length of time, and Dr. ...ni, his medical attendant, al... professing no immediate ... at the situation, has been ...ly insistent that even the most ...e instructions he gives for the ...of his illustrious patient shall ...ried out to the letter.

...e his recent attack of the gout ...meaning people from all over ...orld have sent to the Pope sug...ns and remedies which they ...would surely cure the Pope of ...alady. Hundreds of bottles and ...of pills have been received at ...ffice of the Secretary of State. ...he Pope absolutely refuses to ...them:

...y a few days ago the Pope said ...oreign prelate who visited him: ...ve been offered the services of ...s and medicines from all over ...orld, and the pious people who ...the offers seem to think that ...doctors and medicines are infal... I am very thankful and grate... ...r the offers, but I cannot per... myself to take any of the ... I am sure there is enough ...to make an international drug ... I cannot possibly think of ...wing any of the drugs."

Gout a New Experience.

...ording to the Pope's own state... to the same prelate, the first at... of the gout he ever experienced ...over him a little more than a ...go and in a few days made such ... progress that it affected all of ...ft leg. The doctors to whom ...plied for relief seemed unable ...ck the progress of the malady. ...at the Pope himself became ...y alarmed, fearing that sooner ...er he might become a confirmed ...d. These attacks have suc... each other at brief intervals ...the past year, and the case has ...e now so serious that Pius X. is ...y able to walk.

... says himself that the anney... ...he experiences at the recurrence ...se attacks is very great, as they ...to come at the most inoppor... moments and prevent him some... from attending to important ...ess on hand. The doctors in ...dance are now at work to pre... the possibility of the gouty af... ...n reaching the Pope's heart.

...e alarm created in Vatican cir... ...by the present condition of the ...is so great that already the ... prominent Cardinals have met ...ret consultation to discuss the ...bility of another conclave in the ...diate future. Cardinal Oreglia, ...an of the Sacred College, quiet... ...ed some of his most influential ...gues to meet in his apartment ... friendly chat. Among the Car... ... who attended was Rampolla, ...rmer Papal Secretary of State, ... had never before set foot in ...nal Oreglia's apartment because ...eir diverging views on church ...es; Cardinal Gotti, Prefect of ...Propaganda, and Cardinals Sa... Cavagnis, Mathieu and Agliardi. ...fact that no Cardinal belonging ...e religious orders was asked to ...d the meeting is taken as a ...g indication that the successor ...e present Pope will be a secular ...nal, such a policy having been ...ed at the last conclave.

Lack of Exercise.

... the opinion of one of the doc... who recently visited Pius X. the ...s present condition of health is ... constitutional illness, but sim... ...n indisposition brought about by ...personal susceptibility, which ...s him consider the troubles and ...cutions of the church as per... matters. Then there is the ... change of habits brought about ...s election to the Papal throne, ...h makes him a prisoner in the ...an.

...en Patriarch of Venice Pius X. ...very fond of open air exercise, ...whenever he had a chance he ...long walks into the Lido and un... ...ok excursions and visits to the ...try parishes under his jurisdic... Since his election to the ...y all this has changed, and, al...gh in the beginning Pius X. ...ed himself very fond of taking ... walks in the Vatican gardens, ...meness of the melancholy and ...abited surroundings soon tired ...of the exercise, which of late he ...took only with the greatest re...nce and at the earnest urging of ... intimate prelates. It is this ...e of habits that has now caused ...present partial collapse of Pius ...or the reason that a man at the ...f seventy cannot adopt a differ...egime of life so easily as a young ...

... along he has maintained the ...ice of rising early and of going ...d never later than 11 o'clock. ... celebrating mass in his private ...el—a function which requires ...y an hour and a half every ...ing, because after his own he ...s the mass celebrated by one

NATION OFFE
VICE-A-WEEK" issue
Globe-Democr
UNION
ne year, only rn Newspaper, om the Daily issue. It is of the Farmer, the Merchant oroughly posted without ontains a great variety of well very member of the family.
lubbing Offer
may be withdrawn at any time,
THE UNION,
Clanton, Ala.
obs & Bros.
and Rugs.
ic Book Cases
abinets.
NGHAM, AL
urance Associat
ABAMA.
CT OF THE LEGISLATURE
for the People.
nty Branch
ruary 3, 1900.
WALLACE C. EDLER,
Sec'y.-Treas.
, outbuildings and con
by fire, wind and ligh
st sensible method of 3-100 of 1 per c
application to
C. EDLER, Clanton,
Practical Watchm
and Optician
Eyes Correct
Fitted
Mail orders promptly
BE FOR PAPER
WAN
Noteheads,
Envelopes,
ELSE PRINTED?
Call at N OFFIC
rk at Low Prices.
For $2.00
, done on Good Mac
N, Clanton, Alabama.
events Fevers.
RNISH PURE WA
or no charge made.
dress
BER CO.

...A POPE BROUGHT.....
.....WORRIES AND GOUT TO PIUS X

Fears For His Health Have Made Cardinals Consider Possibilities of a New Conclave—Routine of Daily Life of Prisoner of Vatican—All His Life He Has Been Fond of Free Open Air Exercise Now Shut Off From Him.

Notwithstanding the many reports ...y sent out from here that the ...d entirely recovered from ...ast attack of the gout, writes ...Rome (Italy) correspondent of ...New York World, well-founded ...are just now very persistent ...ican circles that Pius X. is very ...ill well. His recent illness has ...succeeded by a state of general ...y which prevents him from ...any length of time, and Dr. ..., his medical attendant, al... professing no immediate ...r the situation, has been ...y insistent that even the most ...instructions he gives for the ...of his illustrious patient shall ...ried out to the letter.

...e his recent attack of the gout ...aining people from all over ...orld have sent to the Pope sug... and remedies which they ...would surely cure the Pope of ...dy. Hundreds of bottles and ...of pills have been received at ...ffice of the Secretary of State, ...e Pope absolutely refuses to ...them.

...r a few days ago the Pope said ...foreign prelate who visited him: ...been offered the services of ...rs and medicines from all over ...orld, and the pious people who ...e offers seem to think that ...doctors and medicines are infal... I am very thankful and grate... for the offers, but I cannot per... myself to take any of the ... I am sure there is enough ...in make an international drug ... I cannot possibly think of ...ing any of the drugs."

Gout a New Experience.

...ording to the Pope's own state... to the same prelate, the first at... of the gout he ever experienced ...er him a little more than a ...ago and in a few days made such ...progress that it affected all of ...left leg. The doctors to whom ...pealed for relief seemed unable ...check the progress of the malady, ...that the Pope, himself became ...ly alarmed, fearing that sooner ...later he might become a confirmed ...id. These attacks have suc... each other at brief intervals ...in the past year, and the case has ...me now so serious that Pius X. is ...ly able to walk.

...ays himself that the annoy... ...e experiences at the recurrence ...ese attacks is very great, as they ...to come at the most inoppor... ...moments and prevent him some... ...from attending to important ...es on hand. The doctors in ...dance are now at work to pre... ...the possibility of the gouty af... ...on reaching the Pope's heart.

...e alarm created in Vatican cir... ...by the present condition of the ...is so great that already the ...prominent Cardinals have met ...ecret consultation to discuss the ...bility of another conclave in the ...diate future. Cardinal Oreglia, ...Dean of the Sacred College, quiet... ...ted some of his most influential ...gues to meet in his apartment ...a friendly chat. Among the Car... ...who attended was Rampolla, ...former Papal Secretary of State, ...had never before set foot in ...inal Oreglia's apartment because ...their diverging views on church ...es: Cardinal Gotti, Prefect of ...Propaganda, and Cardinals Sa... ...Caragnis, Mathieu and Agliardi. ...fact that no Cardinal belonging ...the religious orders was asked to ...ttend the meeting is taken as a ...ong indication that the successor ...the present Pope will be a secular ...inal, such a policy having been ...pted at the last conclave.

Lack of Exercise.

...the opinion of one of the doc... ...who recently visited Pius X. the ...'s present condition of health is ...a constitutional illness, but sim... ...an indisposition brought about by ...personal susceptibility, which ...s him consider the troubles and ...ecutions of the church as per... ...al matters. Then there is the ...change of habits brought about ...his election to the Papal throne, ...ch makes him a prisoner in the ...ican.

...When Patriarch of Venice Pius X. ...very fond of open air exercise, ...whenever he had a chance he ...long walks into the Lido and un... ...excursions and visits to the ...ry parishes under his jurisdic... ...Since his election to the ...ey all this has changed, and, al...gh in the beginning Pius X. ...ed himself very fond of taking ...walks in the Vatican gardens, ...vanes of the melancholy and ...habited surroundings soon tired ...of the exercise, which of late he ...ertook only with the greatest re...ance and at the earnest urging of ...intimate prelates. It is this ...ge of habits that has now caused ...present partial collapse of Pius ...for the reason that a man at the ...of seventy cannot adopt a differ... ...regime of life so easily as a young ...

...All along he has maintained the ...ice of rising early and of going ...bed never later than 11 o'clock. ...er celebrating mass in his private ...pel—a function which requires ...rly an hour and a half every ...ning, because after his own he ...ists the mass celebrated by one ...of his private chaplains and then remains alone about thirty minutes in prayer—he takes his modest breakfast with his personal attendants, very often with his sisters, who are generally admitted to assist to his mass every morning.

After breakfast it is the invariable custom of Pius X. to attend to his private correspondence in his study. At 9 the Cardinal Secretary of State is admitted to the Pope's study, always bringing a large amount of correspondence with him, which forms the subject of an hour's discussion and adds to the Pope's daily worries. At 10 the audiences begin, and up to 1 o'clock in the afternoon it is a continuous procession of cardinals, bishops, prelates and lay people, who are admitted to private audience. After the audiences are ended the Pope dines with his secretaries, and at 2 o'clock is in the habit of retiring to his private apartments for a siesta, which is considered indispensable by all Italian ecclesiastic and which generally lasts an hour. Then, unless unusual business pressure prevents him, the time arrives for a walk in the garden or in the Raphaelian loggias in case of rain.

Pius X. occasionally asks Mgr. Bressan to walk with him, but as a rule prefers to be alone reading his Breviary. Of late the pressure of business has been such and the dislikes of the Pope for his monotonous surroundings have so increased that very seldom he has indulged all through the past winter in even this modest kind of relaxation.

Work All the Time.

As soon as the Pope re-enters his study toward evening, other audiences begin, principally those accorded to the secretaries of the several congregations who have one day each week in which to make reports to the Pope and submit to him the decisions arrived at by the cardinals composing these departments of the church. Among the Pope's visitors in the evening hours are all those whose presence in the Vatican it is desired to keep absolutely secret, because they are charged with important and jealously guarded affairs.

Sometimes the Pope receives an intimate prelate, whom he has especially asked to a familiar conference, and really these visits are the only kind of relaxation the Pope finds during his day's work. He then forgets that he is the Pope. He treats his guest with a familiarity unknown in the annals of the Vatican and even furnishes refreshments for the entertainment of his visitors. It is in this way that Pius X. is enabled to find out many things which would not be reported to him in the ordinary course of business, such as the prevailing gossip of Vatican circles or information as to the truth or falsity of many things reported to him during the course of the day.

After a light supper Pius X. recites the rosary and the evening prayers with his personal attendants in his private chapel, and at 10 is ready to retire.

In itself the life of Pius X. is very simple and ought to contribute to the preservation of his health; his habits are extremely frugal and this also ought to lengthen his life. But the long imprisonment of three years in the gilded cage of the Vatican and the anxious dealings with affairs of which he was absolutely extraneous before his election have now preyed on his mind and have made of him a changed man. His physicians have now assumed the task to distract his mind as much as possible from the worries connected with the administration of the church.

The Handkerchief.

Is the linen handkerchief doomed? In a recent issue of the New York Medical Record, Dr. L. A. Barkan urges the use of paper handkerchiefs, which shall be burned up. The handkerchief, he says, "is quite a dangerous bacteria carrier and preserver, chiefly on account of being stored in the depth of a pocket where a mild temperature, humidity, and seclusion of air and light contribute to the increase and spread of bacteria." He specifies the bacteria of pneumonia, tuberculosis, "their frequent precursor, influenza," and cerebro spinal meningitis. The handerchief, he asserts, deposits the bacteria in clothes and pockets and spreads them broadcast. The moral seems to be that the man who would preserve his own health and that of the people about him, should begin the day with a few dozen paper handkerchiefs, which are destroyed as fast as they are used.—New York Evening Post.

Sunday-Schoolish.

In one of his public addresses, the late Bishop Brooks spoke of a certain class of instruction, of which, alas, we see too much as being "goody-goodyish or Sunday-schoolish," and there are certain occasions where from what people say or write, it would seem as if some people thought of a Sunday-school, as the old fashioned New Englander thought of his "tavern;" that anyone who was good for nothing else could "keep tavern." Let us all do our best to root up any such fallacy. —Edward Everett Hale.

YANKEES SPEND $400,000,000
.....IN EUROPE YEARLY

—A. B. HEPBURN.

New York Banker Blames the Extravagance of American Tourists For the Stringent Monetary Conditions Here—Steamship Men Think His Figures Too High—$85,000,000, Cook's Agency Believes, Will Cover the Expenditures in 1906.

Americans Abroad Will Spend $85,000,000 in 1906, Says Cook's.

The following estimate of the number of Americans visiting Europe in 1906, with their expenditures, is compiled from opinions given by Thomas Cook & Sons:

ESTIMATE OF NUMBER OF TOURISTS.

Passengers to Europe (first class) in 1904	80,021
Same in 1905	87,641
Same (estimated) for 1906	96,000
Passengers to Europe (second class, estimated) in 1906	83,500

COST OF OCEAN VOYAGE.

Cost of first class round trip (average)	$175
Tips, first class	10
First class passengers, round voyage and tips	17,760,000
Second class passengers, round voyage	7,515,000

COST OF STAY IN EUROPE.

First class—
19,000 tourists, 4 weeks at $6 per diem	3,200,000
38,500 tourists, 6 weeks at $8 per diem	13,000,000
24,000 tourists, 8 weeks at $10 per diem	21,500,000
14,500 tourists, 12 weeks at $10 per diem	12,180,000
Second class—
83,500 tourists, expenses in Europe at $125 each	10,447,500
Total	$85,102,000

How can less than 100,000 persons spend half a billion dollars in Europe this year?

A. Barton Hepburn, formerly Comptroller of the Treasury and now President of the Chase National Bank, asserts that at least $400,000,000, but probably the larger sum, is what it will cost this country for the expenses of its tourists in 1906.

Mr. Hepburn's sources of information include the biggest bankers, American and foreign, in New York, and his experience in the United States Treasury, gives his opinion great weight among financiers. Mr. Hepburn said:

"The extravagant expenditures of American tourists abroad are in a great degree responsible for the present conditions in the money market. These expenditures now reach the enormous sum of $400,000,000 or $500,000,000 a year. The subject was discussed recently by a number of gentlemen prominent in financial affairs who have facilities for gathering information on such a subject, and the lowest estimate by any of them was $400,000,000. Several of them thought this estimate was too low, and placed their estimate at $500,000,000 a year.

Offsets the Trade Balance.

"This vast sum about offsets the great trade balance in favor of the United States each year. According to the best information obtainable on the subject, our floating debt to Europe at the present time is between $300,000,000 and $500,000,000. This is in addition to the great sum spent by American tourists.

"When John Sherman was Secretary of the Treasury, about a quarter of a century ago, he made a careful investigation through foreign bankers and foreign exchange houses as to the full amount that was at that time expended every year by these tourists. He found these expenditures amounted to $100,000,000 a year.

"At that time there were few multi-millionaires in the country. Now there are many of this class who maintain great establishments abroad, but their disbursements do not by any means represent all the American money that goes into European pockets. The tourists come from all parts of the country, and include people of moderate means, as well as those of wealth.

"Our bank keeps one of its brightest young men constantly employed in attending to the wants of these tourists. The expenditures are growing larger every year. But for them there would be an annual monetary balance in favor of the United States that would in a few years pile up an enormous sum."

Extent of European Travel.

It is estimated by steamship men that more than 100,000 men, women and children have paid first-class passage "across the pond" this year, perhaps the biggest year of European travel. The second-class passengers, who spend less, may bring the total up to 180,000. Supposing that 20,000 of the steerage passengers are "tourists," that makes 200,000 in all.

To spend even $400,000,000 in Europe these tourists would be obliged to pay out $2000 each. Experts declare no such sum is spent on the average. A $2000 tariff, they say, would bring the army of ocean-goers down to a handful of a few thousands. The persons who pay $700 for a stateroom or $1500 for a parlor or cabin de luxe on translatlantic steamers are few indeed. So also the millionaires who go abroad for a few months, scatter money right and left, take a ducal house in London for the season, a chateau in Languedoc, and perhaps a castle in Spain are also very few.

The estimate of Mr. Hepburn was submitted to Thomas Cook & Son, who have wide experience in the tourist business. Mr. Keyser, manager of Cook's booking department, said:

"I don't believe it. It doesn't stand to reason. Our business touches, in general, persons from moderately rich to those with small incomes. Going to Europe is not so costly a job, when it's figured out right, as many think.

"Once you're on the other side you can travel and stop wherever you like, with good accommodations, all covered by an expense of $6 to $10 a day. Any more can be set down to extravagance, or at least to lavishness. I could tell you of the extravagance of a few of our suddenly-rich Americans, but as a factor in American expenditures abroad these extravagant individuals count for very little.

"Bear in mind that a trip to Europe is the dream of almost every cultivated American. School teachers save their salaries for years to go. Ministers, also, try to save a little out of their small pay, or their congregations raise a small purse for them. Merchants and professional men in small towns all over the country try to set aside enough to take their families to England or France or Italy.

Expenses Generally Small.

"They are all so eager to go that as soon as they can see their way to cover closely calculated expenses they start. That means a small average of expenses. Besides, most European travelers come back with ten per cent. of their letters of credit unexpended."

A steamship agent expressed the opinion that there was positive gain in European travel. He said:

"A business man takes his family over. He cannot help seeing how the men in his line of business in England, Germany — anywhere — carry it on. Maybe he gains points that he can apply to his own advantage in his business at home. Most often he sees chances to increase his business by selling to Europe.

"Aside from that, no economist will claim that money spent for culture, for broader views and general enlightenment, is wasted, even if it be spent in another country. It is sure to come back at least tenfold."

The Traveling Salesman.

"Better than a letter from your wife, sweetheart or even President Roosevelt, is a letter from your firm increasing your salary," was the interesting comment of H. J. Williams, of La Crosse, sitting in the lobby of the Kirby House. "I just received such an epistle this morning, and I feel like a prince. Had I received a notification reducing my stipend I would not have been greatly surprised, because my sales recently have been nothing to brag of, and if the firm thinks by giving me a financial lift my results will be more noticeable, it won't be disappointed, because I am going to start out today and work like a major and prove to my people that I am worthy of the confidence shown me. There are times in the life of a traveling salesman, when, no matter how hard he tries, he doesn't do enough business in a day, or even a week, to make him feel like thinking of his occupation. And then again, the reverse takes place, but between these two we manage to even up the sales.

"Persistency is what wins with us fellows. No matter how angry your customer gets after the fifteenth or twentieth refusal to give you an order and you are not convinced he needs something in your line, adopt the schoolday proverb and try again. Your pluck may elicit his admiration unless he throws you bodily out of the store, and nine times out of ten you land him."—Milwaukee Evening Wisconsin.

Meat Foods for Man.

Twelve Reasons Tending to Prove the Superiority of a Vegetable Diet.

By J. Edward Giles.

RECENTLY, in a reply to a letter of the Hon. Ernest H. Crosby, the editor of the New York Times said:

"There is not, so far as we know, a single fact for one of these statements except that in regard to Mr. Crosby's own diet. Physiology demonstrates man's need of and adaptation to a meat diet as clearly as the lion's, and history, ancient and modern, proves that vegetable food will not do much, if anything more than keep him alive usually as the serf or subject of men who eat meat."

I would like to give you a few facts:

1. Experiments of Prof. Chittenden, of Yale University, demonstrate that the average individual consumes double the amount of food necessary for the maintenance of health.

2. This excess produces fermentation, imperfect digestion, toxins, excess of urates, and increases the work of elimination, so producing disease.

3. Since meat contains a high percentage of proteids, the danger of excess of meat is greater than with cereals and vegetables.

4. The diet of the Japanese troops is mainly rice and bread. In the war with Russia the death rate was below that of any army in history, and if there was any lack of energy in their fighting, no one noticed it.

5. There was very little gastro-intestinal disease among the Japanese troops. Beri-beri, which was the most common disease, was driven out from the navy and greatly reduced in the army by adding barley (not meat) to increase the proteids in the ration.

6. Napoleon testified that of all his troops the Italians withstood the hardships best, and their diet was almost exclusively vegetables and cereals

7. Leonidas and his little band of Spartans defended the Pass of Thermopylae on a diet of lentils.

8. The winner of the late Marathon race at the Olympic games trained on the same food—the lentil.

9. The dention of man is supposed to indicate his need of meat, but the gorilla and orang-outang, with much larger canine teeth, are not carnivorous.

10. On the positive side of the physiological argument is the fact that the intestinal canal of the lion is only about nine feet long, while that of man is more than thirty feet in length

11. No one can eat meat without eating with it the urates which have been formed by the breaking down of the tissues of the meat and without running the risk of ptomaine poisoning.

12. The urates and ptomaines taken with meat produce diseases, but the experience of the Japanese Army proves that the proteids can be supplied without any such risk.

Economic Origin of the "Boss"

By Eugene V. Debs.

Political parties express the economic interests of those who belong to them. Men do not join parties that oppose their material interests.

Politics, therefore, is simply the reflex of economic conditions, and men are active in politics, primarily, to advance their material welfare.

The capitalist is the private owner of a public utility. The capitalist owns it but does not use it, while the people use it and are dependent upon it, but do not own it.

Take the railroad, for illustration; the capitalist who owns it wants profit —all he can get—even on watered investments. He insists upon high fares and rates, but draws the line at accommodations. The people, on the other hand, want low rates, cheap fares, and better accommodations, and when they attempt to assert their collective interests, as the people, against the private interest of the capitalist, who owns the railroad, by the introduction of ordinances in the council, bills in the legislature and in congress, the work of defeating them, and of seeing to it that no friend of the people and no emeny of the corporation shall be elected, becomes the special function of the political "boss;" and the greater the bulk of capital in private control, the greater the necessity for the "boss," and the larger the premiums for his "indispensable" services.

What applies to the railroads applies to all other departments of wealth production and distribution.

Modern "business" has developed the modern "boss," and the evil will not be remedied by assaulting the scapegoat.

The people are receiving their first lessons in the true meaning of "boss-ridden" politics. Many of them are beginning to analyze the "boss," and, as they proceed, they observe the economic origin of this political species; and, when the people at length understand the source of "boss rule," as they surely will, they will put an end to it, not by exchanging bosses, but by abolishing private property in social necessities.—Success Magazine.

Radium's Help in Explaining Matter

C. W. Saleeby, M. D., F. R. S. E.

TIME was when men thought that ordinary "dead" matter was "inert" and "gross" and "brute;" and that the difference between living matter and lifeless clay depended upon the fact that the former was vivified and informed by a mysterious entity called life.

The old materialism accepted the one view, and the old vitalism the other. Here and there a man of insight denied the truth of both propositions alike, but it was not until quite the latter times that the old materialism and the old vitalism became hopelessly untenable. It is perhaps radium the revealer that has opened our eyes. In the first place it has shown us that, Plato notwithstanding, matter is not brute nor inert nor gross. Radium itself is a form of matter, yet it displays the most potent and ceaseless and stupendous activities with which the mind of man has yet made acquaintance. I use the last adjective advisedly, and not without memory of the flying stars, whose motion is stupendous merely on account of its magnitude, whereas radioactivity impresses us because of its quality, transcending anything heretofore conceived. Space fails me for the present elaboration of this high argument.

For our present purpose let us take it merely that the old materialism is no longer tenable. But since we must now regard matter—even "lifeless" matter—as the seat of incessant, manifold, potent, and seemingly self-caused activities, out attitude towards the problem offered us by living matter must undergo a profound alteration.—Harper's Magazine.

The World's Letter-writing.

By Postmaster General Cortelyou.

FROM the amount or nature of a country's correspondence one cannot estimate its commercial activity or development along other lines.

In the order of their importance of the number of letters and postal-cards passing through the post-offices for 1905, Great Britain rates first, and the United States, New Zealand, Switzerland, Germany, Denmark, Austria, Argentina, Luxembourg, Holland, Belgium, Sweden, France and Norway in the order given.

It is evident that the development of instruction cannot be seen from the greatest correspondence, for countries having compulsory education, such as France, Denmark and Norway, hold a mediocre place, while other countries noted for the percentage of illiteracy are well in the front. It is singular to note that the citizens of Austria and Denmark write more letters than do those of France. Belgium ranks eleventh among the above. A commercial status or other development does not figure, or both France and Belgium would hold a better position. It is a fact that those of Anglo-Saxon blood correspond more frequently than those of the Latin races. Temperament might also figure, concluded the Postmaster-General, for it is said on the Continent that an Englishman will write to a friend fifteen minutes away from his home, but that a Frenchman will walk that far and communicate what he has to say verbally.—Harper's Weekly.

How to Propose.

A Hindu father recently received the following letter asking for the hand of his daughter: "Dear Sir—It is with a flattering penmanship that I write to have communication with you about the prospective condition of your damsel offspring. For some remote time to past, a secret passion has firing my bosom internally with loving your daughter. I have navigated every channel in the magnitude of my extensive jurisdiction to cruelly smother the growing love-knot that is being constructed in my within side, but the humid lamp of affection still nourishes my love-sickened heart. Hoping that you will concordantly corroborate in espousing your female progeny to my tender bosom and thereby acquire me into your family circle. Your dutiful Son-in-Law."

It's so hard for some men to save money when single that they don't think it worth while trying after they marry.

Unless a man's sense of humor is on a vacation, he never takes a woman seriously.

THE UNION

Published every Thursday at Clanton, Chilton county, Alabama.

Wallace C. Edler, Ed. and Pub.

Subscription price, in advance, per year, $1.

For advertising rates, call at the office, Seventh street, between First and Second avenues.

Entered April 15, 1903, at Clanton, Ala., as second class matter, under act of congress of March 3, 1879.

NOTICE TO CORRESPONDENTS.

All communications to the Union must be signed by the writer's real name as well as that name which they wish to put in the paper. Letters must reach the editor Tuesday morning to get in the same week. While we will publish any and all communications complying with these requirements that do not contain any improper language, we are not responsible for the opinions expressed. tf.

CLANTON, ALA., Aug 9, 1906.

Union Clubbing List

THE UNION And Yellow Jacket	$1.05
THE UNION And Southern Ruralist	1.00
THE UNION And Union Educator	1.05
THE UNION And Home and Farm	1.00
THE UNION And Weekly Age-Herald	1.25
THE UNION and Weekly Atlanta Constitution	1.25
THE UNION and Twice-a-Week Globe Democrat	1.80
THE UNION and Tri-W'kly Atlanta Constitution	1.50
THE UNION And Tom Watson's Magazine	1.50
THE UNION and Tri-Weekly N. Y. World	1.50
THE UNION And Rural South	1.50
THE UNION And Weekly Advertiser and Map of Alabama, U. S. and world	1.50

If there are any other papers you want call at THE UNION office, and we will get them for you at the lowest rates. tf

FOR REPRESENTATIVE.
J. Osmond Middleton.

FOR SHERIFF.
Felix J. Fitts.

FOR COMMISSIONER.
First District—W. H. Conway.
Second District—S. E. Waldrup.
tf

THE PRIMARY.

Well, the primary has come and gone and the people have recorded their verdict. There were, roughly speaking, between 800 and 900 votes cast, not so many as two years ago, but there being only one contest, as you might say, and the people being convinced it would come their way, did not turn out Monday, but say that in November they will be on hand good and strong. The defeated candidates, so far as heard from, have accepted the verdict of the people, Messrs. Gentry and Hayes being especially emphatic in their support of the ticket as nominated. As Mr. Hays says, "No more Democratic thin soup and patched breeches for me." Gentlemen, that is the way to talk, and the only way an honorable man can talk. The beauty of a primary is that no one can truthfully say anything about rings, etc., as they might say in regard to a convention. "Every tub stands on its own bottom "in a primary. Felix J. Fitts polled as many votes as his three opponents together did. Bro. Sam Pate was beaten by Bro. Waldrup by two to one, the question of the residence of the two playing a prominent part in the contest. Now, brethren, just let's pull together and the majority in November will be the largest we have polled for several elections. Hurrah for the people's candidates.

A TEMPERANCE ARGUMENT.

Be sure and read Dr. Horn's thesis on "Temperance in the Sunday School." This paper has been read in several Sunday school gatherings, notably in the county convention recently held in Clanton, and this reading has led to the expression of a wish for its publication. The Union always stands ready to do anything in reason that will help our people to right living and right thinking, so it publishes this essay in order that Dr. Horn's arguments may reach the largest number of hearers.

MINUTES OF THE ANNUAL MEETING

Of the Farmers' Mutual Insurance Association of Alabama (Chilton County Branch), Held at Clanton, Ala., on August 4, 1906.

About 10:15 a. m. the members of the Association were called to order by the president, W. M. Wilson, who stated that the secretary would read his report for the past year.

Secretary's Report.

The strength of the Association at the end of the first half of its seventh year consists of 155 members, with an aggregate property valuation of $108,262, or an average of $698.46 to each member. The average cost per $100 per year since the organization of the Association (February 3, 1900) has been 36 1-2 cents per $100 of property insured (see president's sworn statement). This roll of membership is cleared from all doubtful or suspended members. The Association owes O. A. T. Lefstad, of Beat 9, $34 and interest on that amount at 8 per cent per annum, on account of a loss he sustained by lightning on May 30, 1905, and which claim was adjusted and allowed by Director W. J. Bean on June 2, 1905. The amount being so small, Mr. Lefstad consented to wait until another loss occurred for his money, President W. M. Wilson agreeing to allow him (Lefstad) 8 per cent on his claim from July 2, 1905, until paid. In this connection it would be well to notice that the stated charge of 5 cens per member on each assessment would pay 8 per cent on $34 for over fourteen years, so the Association has been a decided gainer by President Wilson's agreement with Mr. Lefstad. There are some small amounts due some of the directors for work done in inspecting the property insured in our Association, as well as some small balances due some of the losers several years ago under former officers, of which said amounts I have no accurate knowledge.

I wish to congratulate the Association on the remarkable record the Association has made for cheap insurance, as our members have been insured against losses by wind as well as loss by fire and lightning at less than one-fourth of the cost of standard insurance, which charges $1.50 pe. $100 per annum on country property, and at that price only insures against loss by fire and lightning.

Respectfully submitted,
WALLACE C. EDLER,
Secretary-Treasurer Chilton County Branch Farmers' Mutual Insurance Association of Alabama.

The above report was, on motion, received and adopted as read.

President's Sworn Statement.

In the six and one-half (6 1-2) years that this Association has been in existence it has levied seventeen (17) assessments to pay twenty-six (26) losses, viz.: Lightning, 1; wind, 4; fire, 21. The total of the 17 assessments was $2.36 3-4 cents per $100 of insurance, being an average yearly cost of 36 1-2 cents on each hundred dollars of insurance per annum.

W. M. WILSON.
President Chilton County Branch.

Sworn to and subscribed before me this 3rd day of August, 1906.

L. H. REYNOLDS,
Judge of Probate, Chilton County, Alabama.

The above statement was, on motion, received and adopted as read.

The following additional article to the agreement in the policies of this Association, to be known as No. 11, was submitted to the Association, and after discussion was unanimously adopted:

11. That should any assessment become delinquent by reason of the non-payment thereof within the time prescribed by the secretary-treasurer in said assessment, and the claim is placed in the hands of an attorney for collection, the insured hereby agrees to pay all costs of collection, including a reasonable attorney's fee.

The following officers were elected to serve for the ensuing year:

President, W. M. Wilson, Clanton, Ala.

Secretary-Treasurer, Wallace C. Edler, Clanton, Ala.

Directors.

Beat 1—H. C. Young, Clanton, R. F. D 5.

Beat 2—W. H. Killingsworth, Jemison, R. F. D. 4.

Beat 3—T. J. Hubbard, Jemison, R. F. D 1

Beat 4—W. M. Aldridge, Clanton, R F. D. 6.

Beat 5—J. T. Bland, Verbena.

Beat 6—W. Y. Keel, Billingsley, Route 1.

Beat 7—C. J. Cobern, Maplesville, Route 1.

Beat 8—W. J. Ruddick, Stanton.

Beat 9—W. J. Bean, Clanton, Route 4

Beat 10—T. F. Patterson, Verbena Route 1.

It was moved and seconded "that the president be and is hereby ordered to levy an assessment to cover the 'Lefstad loss' and any and all charges and expenses that this Association is owing at the time he issues such assesment."

Passed by unanimous vote.

Reports from the several directors present showed that property in their beats was strictly within the three-fourths valuation clause, and such of the directors as had not made the July inspection of their beats were ordered to do so and report to the president before September 1, 1906.

The meeting then adjourned.

W. M. WILSON,
Pres. Chilton Co. Branch Farmers' Mut. Ins. Ass'n of Ala.
WALLACE C. EDLER,
Sec.-Treas. Chilton Co. Branch Farmers' Mut. Ins. Ass'n of Ala.

RURAL CARRIERS ORGANIZE.

The rural carriers of Chilton county met in the court house August 4, at 8 p. m., for the purpose of organizing themselves into a union of letter carriers. State Organizer J. A. Caddell called the meeting to order and the following officers were elected: President, W. J. Armstrong; vice-president, Carrier Pyron, Verbena;; secretary, Carrier Wilson, Clanton; treasurer, Carrier Vines, Maplesville. The carriers give as their reasons for organizing: First, to get the numerical strength, so as to more adequately get their pleas, petitions and demands before the department and Congress, to the best advantage. Second, for the betterment of the service in a general way. The meeting was harmonious and promises to be of benefit to the parties concerned. The next meeting will be on September 3, 1906, at 2 p. m., at Clanton, and everybody is invited, especially patrons of the rural routes.

(Communicated.)

Thorsby, Ala., August 7, 1906.

I have noted with great interest the exposures of the recent scandalous conditions in life insurance, certain railroad companies and meat packing establishments, etc., and it has occurred to me that a little light might be needed in some of the dark places at home. My attention has just been called to the subject by one of the high-handed and outrageous proceedings which have been only too common in the history of Thorsby, and I must again call attention to affairs here.

On Wednesday night, August 1, at about 9:30 o'clock, Prof. C. J. Fielitz a man 65 years old, while he was reading his Bible in his room, was visited by J. F. Peterson, secretary and treasurer of the Concordia Land and Improvement Association, who struck, choked and mistreated Prof. Fielitz, until, after cries of "Help" and "Murder," Rev. H. F. H. Hartelius came and separated them. Immediately after this disgraceful scene, Peterson had Prof. Fielitz arrested for attacking him. At the trial the next morning, before E. F. Mead, mayor of Thorsby, the testimony of Rev. Hartelius agreed with that of Prof. Fielitz in every particular of which Rev. Hartelius had knowledge. As there was no evidence that Prof. Fielitz had done anything hostile or illegal, but the evidence showed that Peterson was at fault, Judge Mead dismissed the case and assessed the complaining witness and the defendant each with half of the costs. I have not yet been informed why Prof. Fielitz was assessed half of the costs, but suppose that it was because he was not guilty. After the trial mentioned above, not content with what he had already done, Mr. Peterson had Prof. Fielitz's trunk attached (after it was brought to the depot) for a debt which he claimed was due him or the Concordia Land and Improvement Association. It had been known for some days that the professor intended to leave Thorsby Friday morning. Fielitz was not notified of the attachment, and it seems that it was the intention to harass him and prevent his going, as he intended, and to make an example of him. However, the case was finally dropped by Mr. Peterson because public sentiment was so strong against him and he realized that he was getting himself into a dangerous position, but Fielitz was not notified in time to get his trunk, and he went away, presumably to Mobile, without it.

It is enough to make one's blood boil to think of this and similar outrages perpetrated by this same party. If a man who has committed no offense (except that he has told that another man owes him money which he will not pay) cannot be safe in his own home at night, but can be attacked with impunity, brought into court, fined half of the costs, and further harassed after the trial, it is time that something be done. And here is a case that is even worse. Not long ago a certain lady of Thorsby, without relatives or protectors here, because she thought she had been grossly deceived in a land deal, decided that she would make no more payments on the property. When this came to the knowledge of J. F. Peterson, he, for spite and in order to freighten her into doing as he wished, had her arrested on a charge of adultery. Furthermore, he timed the proceedings so that the arrest was made just when the train was due on which she was to leave for a visit to Chicago. Fortunately, the train was several minutes late that morning, so she had time to make bond and proceed on her journey. What punishment is fit for such a proceeding? And the man who did it is supremely sensitive and highly insulted if any reflection is cast on his "honor."

No details need be mentioned here of the many outrageous land deals which have been made by these people, though they could be named by the score. The last case of this kind left Thorsby last Friday morning, after sinking 400 to 500 hardearned dollars and many days of honest toil, where they are lost forever. It is worthy of note in this connection that, while many persons of intelligence and influence have been grossly deceived by the Concordia Land and Improvement Association, the people who are bluffed, bulldozed and mistreated by them are almost always defenseless women, people of small means, who feel that they cannot afford to take legal measures, and those who have a poor knowledge of the laws and language of the country, or for other reasons are in poor position to make a fight.

In my humble opinion, no community can be built up by fraud and deceit, such as has been practiced by the Concordia Land and Improvement Association since its inception, and it is the duty of every honest citizen to discountenance such practices by every lawful and honest means in his power. The Concordia Land and Improvement Association is a foul blot on the fair name of Alabama. By its crooked dealings it has driven many citizens of Thorsby back to the North, it has prevented many others from coming here, and it has made the name of Alabama a by-word and a hissing among many citizens of our fair land. What enterprise has it ever promoted which has been successful? What of the Thorsby Canning Company? How about the Alabama Winery Company, and the people who put their money into it? What became of the school which they persuaded others to found in their midst? Where are the newspapers they have promoted? Who was it that refused to pay a debt of over $300 to the city of Thorsby? Who can enumerate the foul deeds of this company? Have you ever known them to help or endeavor to help any enterprise in Thorsby unless they led the procession and expected all the glory?

Citizens of Thorsby, it is time to wake up and ask yourselves, "Are these people doing any good here?" Don't you think that Thorsby would be better off without such a land company or such "promoters?" How can you build up a town while such practices are tolerated?

And to the land agents mentioned herein I would say, "I know whereon I write, and the tenth has never been told." I have the facts and can pile them on. Don't come around and "explain" these things, or shout "Prove it." Get right down to business. There can be no proper or effective reply except a suit for libel, and you dare not bring that. There are many honest people in Thorsby who have suffered much at your hands and are heartily sick of your ways. The time is past when you could run Thorsby just as you pleased. If you do not reform you will soon come to the point where you can go no further. Do business honestly or let Thorsby alone.

* * *

The ghost still walks, with eyes and ears open, ready to knock again.

THE GHOST.

THORSBY.

Mrs. Lonnie Reagan, of Calera, is visiting relatives here.

The Congregational Conference of middle Alabama met here Friday and adjourned to meet near Clanton this fall.

Mr. Fred Schiller left for Nebraska Friday.

Mr. Tom Childress visited his father and mother near Pleasant Grove Saturday and Sunday.

Rev. A. T. Clarke, who has been here the past week, last Monday for his home at Fort Payne.

Willie Sorrell is home for a short visit.

Jay Caverno came down from Birmingham Saturday and spent Sunday with his parents.

Lonnie Reagan was in town Sunday evening between trains.

Ernie Hanson spent Sunday in Calera.

The Misses Lucas have moved their millinery parlor up over Mr. Stanley's store. M. Carr has moved into the building vacated by them.

M. J. Soberg has been elected by the Thorsby Fruit and Truck Growers' Association to go to Lawrenceberg, Tenn., to investigate the cantaloupe system, and left for that place Wednesday.

Prof. Fielitz left for Mobile Friday.

The Misses Simpson enjoyed a visit from their brother, B. Simpson, of Birmingham, last week.

Mrs. Robert Smith left Friday for Oakman and Cartersville, Ga.

The Ladies' Aid of the Swedish church meets with Mrs. Anderson Thursday afternoon.

Bert Bosworth is home for a short visit.

M. Carr was in Birmingham last week, Thursday.

Thorsby was in the ball game here with Clanton Monday afternoon.

NEMO.

MARS HILL.

The health of our community is very good at present. Everybody is through with their work. We've had a little sunshine lately after several days' continual rain. The rain has damaged cotton to some extent; corn is extra good and peas are showing a nice promise for hay. A. J. Scott has some real fine pea vines on his place. Crossties, hauling lumber and making shingles is all the go at present in this neck of the woods. I'm in accord with one of the writers last week, in the way of being glad I am a farmer. Those juicy watermelons, fragrant muskmelons, tomatoes, cucumbers, cabbage and the numerous other things that we can and do raise on the farm, makes me truly glad that I'm a farmer. The canning of fruit and vegetables is being carried on largely in this community. Friends, look well to your home-made fertilizers; now is the time to fill your cow lots with straw and litter for the making of manure for another year, and so cut off some of that big commercial fertilizer bill you'll have to pay this fall. Well, I sure was glad to see "Little J." and "C. W. L.'s" articles in last issue, as well as the other correspondents. Boys, just look at our grand old union; note how she is improving as well as growing. J. N. Scott has bought an interest in a threshing machine and it has been calling him away from home for several days. A. J. Scott and son, C. W., went to Montevallo last week. G. W. Scott has just finished a nice well in his yard. We are going to have a union rally on Friday, the 17th, and expect a large attendance. Protracted meeting started last Saturday. Wishing success to The Union and its many readers, I am still THE OLD MAN.

CAHABA VALLEY.

Editor Union: Please allow me a little space in The Union. Rev. J. H. Thomas and myself have just returned from a meeting which we held in the Presbyterian church here, the Baptists not having any church nearer than Helena. We constituted a Baptist church of 16 members, 15 by letter and one by baptism, and more to follow. There were people in attendance who never saw a Baptist baptism before. I never met kinder people in my life than they were in that community, not kind only in their homes, but with their money help also. May God bless each home. I never saw people give better attention in all my experience. There is glorious work to be done here yet. May the Lord guide the work is my prayer. Yours in the work,

J. A. BUTTS.

PLEASANT GROVE.

Editor Union

A few words to the people. We don't know who will be our candidates, but whoever they may be let's stick to them. Don't do as some have done in the past—because you get defeated go and vote the Democratic ticket. Some people are all right as long as things go their way, but when things don't go to suit them they pull back, but still call themselves Pops. They are not Pops nor much of anything else, in my opinion. Now, dear people, let's be true to our nominee, whoever he is, and vote for him as if he was our first choice. Now, friends, I don't think we ought to hit the Democrats so hard; wait until November and then strike hard. Say, Mr. Editor, if Mr. Guiledge had had a little more time and a little "grease" up here, he would have swallowed some of our good (so-called) Pops, but the lack of time and grease is all that saved them. Success to The Union.

J. D. HODGENS.

MAPLESVILLE ITEMS.

T. C. Perry left here this week to pay a visit to his parents in Oklahoma. The primary passed off very quietly, with Fitts having a majority of three for sheriff. Captain Powers and Tom Scott, of Montgomery, have been spending some time here at their place. Mrs. Ricketts has spent several days with her daughter, Mrs. Dr. Walker, of Birmingham, who has been quite sick. Mr. Hannon, of New Orleans, is visiting Dr. Claughton here. Mrs. Glover is visiting her daughter Mrs. Matthews, at Matthews' Station. Fred Rogan, of Montevallo, is visiting Dr. Parnell here. Wheeler Foshee, of Belle Sumpter, is here visiting relatives. There is no apparent damage as yet to the crops from the continued rains. Miss Minnie Foshee is convalescing from a spell of fever. Miss Klinner, of Marion, Ala., has been visiting Jessie Hayes here. Success to The Union. "O."

PLEASANT GROVE.

Dear Editor:

Well, Mr. Green is looking fine now after so many nice showers, and we hear some of our neighbors grumbling about the rain. But grumble not, neighbors, for the Almighty God knows best, and it wasn't best for us to have so much rain I'm sure we would not; so He doeth all things and it's all for our good. The Chilton county singing convention met with Pleasant Grove church Saturday and Sunday, July 28-29, 1906, and we had some of as good singing as I ever heard in my life, and if there is anything I enjoy any better than good singing it is just a few more good old hymns. I like the old songs, as they are sometimes called. But they are new, if not to us, they are to the younger people; so they are good and good enough for me. Mr. Jim Langston and family, of West Chilton, were pleasant visitors of Mr. C. Cost's family last week. Mr. J. W. Wright is at home again after visiting friends and relatives in Coosa county. Our school at this place is progressing nicely under the skillful management of Prof. H. Merchant. Miss Mattie Patton, of Jemison, is teaching a music school at this place, and we are expecting to hear some good music by some of her pupils soon. Mr. J. A. Cobb, who has been in Birmingham for some time, is with his parents now, and we are very sorry to say the young man is quite sick, but hope for him a speedy recovery. Well, the Macedonia 'possum hunter says it's real dangerous to throw out a pan of hot dish water, for fear of scalding a candidate. But we haven't been bothered up here with so many candidates. Yet we think it a little dangerous to throw out hot dish water, for fear of scalding some one. So we will say, Hurrah! hurrah! for F. J. Fitts, for he looks just like our next sheriff. Well, Verbena Kid, your letter in the last issue was a good one; come again. Where is Just A Voter? Well, I guess he is at home during this rainy spell, keeping his powder dry. But say, "Voter," we are getting real anxious for another barrel from you, so come again real soon. Rev. R. M. Honeycutt preached at Mullins' Hill last Sunday to an attentive congregation. The Misses Dulcia and Delia Champion spent Saturday night and Sunday with Miss Selma Patterson. Miss Cost spent Sunday night with Selma. Well, my letter is a little lengthy, and for fear it to the waste basket, or take much space, I will stop and for some one else; but will soon. Best wishes to The its many readers. GREEN

NEED MORE.

Oh, my! what a good time had Sunday at Mt. Pleasant. had good singing and such havior. Every one seemed great interest in the singing good leaders were present, whom were Messrs. Ben Tom Littlejohn. I think and their girls were there many friends whom I had not with in a long time. We to the Master that he ga ant day. There was but the good ladies of had dinner enough for Lee Vickers was there usual). There sure were pieces in our paper last you all will come again wishes to The Union it's BU

OLD-TIME SINGING.

There will be an old-time Cedar Grove on the fourth August. The "Christian note-book will be used. invited to attend and bring and baskets. Come and a good old time singing praise. All that love are urged to come; the be conducted by Bro. R. and we are going to try singing convention in books, "Christian "Sacred Harp."

Peasants Killed by Cossacks.

Vorosneh.—Peasants who had assembled for the attacked a passing patrol of The latter replied with two A number of peasants were wounded.

Lawyer Charged with Vagrancy.

Oyster Bay, N. Y.—Karl said he was a lawyer from ton, D. C., and who was a secret service man while to climb Sagamore Hill, was to five days in jail at Manch charge of vagrancy.

Mexico City.—Reports indicate the strikers on the Mexican railroad are losing ground, a of men having come forward the places of the strikers. It believed probable the strike spread to other railroads.

NOTICE TO SCHOOL PATRONS.

School district No. 49, Chapel school, will meet at the house on Friday, August m. Every patron should important business affecting school will be disposed of.

W. S. WILL
Chairman District

NOTICE.

Jemison, Ala., August 7th

Lost—One light clay branded on the left shoulder heart; the last time heard was at Ashby; she weighs pounds. I will reware any ally for information as to is, or if returned to me, I will for the trouble.

T. S. DAVIS
Jemison

tf

PETITION TO SELL LAND FOR DIVISION.

In the Probate Court of County, Alabama, July 26th

This day came Julia E. Cook of J. W. Cook, and Carrie wife of G. Frank Martin, of Bibb counties, Alabama, and have filed their joint petition writing, alleging that they owners in certain real estate larly described in said petition and being in Chilton county with John T. Dungan, William gan and David B. Dungan, boldt, Tennessee; Joseph A. of Memphis, Tennessee; Williams, of Jackson, Tennessee A. McLeod, of Atlanta, Georgia ert M. McLeod, of the State of Carl McLeod, Bessie McLeod, Lilian McLeod, each of Elliott, Clara Sales, of Dallas, Texas liam Martin, Edward Martin cob C. Vaughan, each of Kentucky, and Annie Belle Gandy Willie C. Gandy, each of Yalobusha alleging that each of said persons are over the age of one years, and praying that estate described in their said be sold for partition and that the ground that the same cannot equitably divided without thereof.

It is ordered, that the 10th September, 1906, be appointed for hearing said petition, and tice of the same be given to residents of the State of Alabama publication for three successive in The Union, a newspaper at Clanton, in Chilton county, bama; and a copy of said sent by mail, post paid, to parties residing without the Alabama. L. H. REYNOLDS
Probate

8-9-06-3w

COUNTY OFFICERS.
Circuit Court.
—Third Monday in March
—Fourth Monday in Nov
I. Brewer, Tusbegee.
W. B. Bowling, Enderville.
W. Collins.

Chancery Court.
—Second Monday in
—Second Monday in Sep
—Hon. W. W. Whitesides.
—Mrs. S. A. Stewart, Clan

County Court.
day in each month.

Commissioners' Court.
Monday February, first Mon
first Monday June, second ly, second Monday August,
ay November.

COUNTY OFFICERS.
Probate—L. H. Reynolds.
—W. T. Callen.
J. M. Morgan.
—W. M. Adams.
sessor—L. B. Pounds.
llector—T. J. Hubbard.

County Commissioners.
District—W. H. Conway.
District—Alex Glasscock.
District—R. F. Kendrick.
District—Moses Robinson.

Supt. of Education.
W. Moore, Clanton.

County Surveyor.
Dahl, Calera.

State Senator.
R. Oliver, Calera.

COUNTY CHURCHES.

MISSIONARY BAPTIST.
ANY—Rev. J. L. Neeley, pas
Sunday and Saturday be
L. Hand, clerk.

SALEM—Rev. M. J. Parrish,
E. B. Popwell, clerk.

CREEK—Rev. J. L. Busbey,
First Sunday and Saturday
W. E. Thomas, clerk.

NS CHAPEL—Rev. J. H.
pastor. Third Sunday and before. J. D. Collins, clerk.

HILL—Rev. J. H. Thomas,
First Sunday and Saturday
G. W. Scott, clerk.

DONIA—Rev. J. H. Thomas,
Fourth Sunday and Saturday
3:30 p. m. H. H. Armstrong,

ANT GROVE—Rev. J. H.
pastor. Fourth Sunday and
before at 11 a. m. D. H.
clerk.

IDENCE—Rev. W. W. Robin
tor. Second Sunday and Sat
fore. Riley Robinson, clerk.

BOTH (Bibb Co.)—Rev. J. H.
pastor. Second Sunday and
before. D. C. Smitherman,

PRIMITIVE BAPTIST.
ILL.—Elder J. P. Nobles, pas cond Sunday and Saturday be
T. Abernathy, clerk.

METHODIST EPISCOPAL.
KY MOUNT—Rev. A. T. Van
pastor. Second Sunday. Sing
ry second and fourth Sunday
m. Prayer meeting every Wed night. Ladies' prayer meeting
Saturday afternoon.

FRATERNAL SOCIETIES.
Masonic.
on R. A. Chapter, No. 116—aturday, Clanton.

ton Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No.
urth Saturday, Cooper.

on Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No.
st Saturday, Clanton.

ery Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No.
st Saturday, Billingsley.

son Lodge, A. F. and A. M.,
—Saturday on or before full
Marbury.

ton Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No.
aturday on or before full moon.

ton Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No.
nday on or before full moon.

I. O. O. F.
on Lodge—First and third Sat on Lodge, No. 304—Second and Saturdays.

Woodmen of the World.
Jack Camp, No. 190—First and Mondays.

I. O. R. M.
ware Tribe, No. 90—First and Mondays sleep. Visiting chiefs
ly invited. E. B. Langston, C.
J. H. Patton, Sachem.

ota Tribe No. 78—2nd and 4th
day sleeps. Visiting chiefs cor
invited. J. M. Grant, Sachem;
Parrish, C. of R.

...ss Selma Patterson. ...
...st spent Sunday night with ...
...lma. Well, my letter is ...
...tle lengthy, and for fear ...
...the waste basket, or take ...
...uch space, I will stop and give ...
...r some one else; but will come ...
...on. Best wishes to The Union ...
...many readers. GREEN ...

NEED MORE.

...Oh, my! what a good time ...
...d Sunday at Mt. Pleasant. We ...
...d good singing and such ...
...evion. Every one seemed to ...
...eat interest in the singing. ...
...ood leaders were present, ...
...hom were Messrs. Ben Sasnett ...
...om Littlejohn. I think all the ...
...d their girls were there, for I ...
...any friends whom I had not ...
...ith in a long time. We are ...
...the Master that he gave us a ...
...t day. There was a large ...
...t the good ladies of the ...
...d dinner enough for as many ...
...o Visitors was there an ...
...There sure were ...
...ress in our paper last week. I ...
...will come again. With ...
The Union and its ...
BUTTERFLY.

OLD-TIME SINGING.

...There will be an old-time sing... ...Grove on the fourth Sun... ...The "Christian Harm... ...ook will be used. Everybo... ...ited to attend and bring their ... ...kets. Come and let's ... old time singing ... ...All that love old-time ... ...ged to come; the meeting ... ...conducted by Bro. R. J. Lang... ...and we are going to try to organi... ...convention in the two ... ...Christian Harmony" ... ...Sacred Harp."

Peasants Killed by Cossacks.

Voronezh.—Peasants of Bo... ...who had assembled in the village ... ...attacked a passing patrol of Cos... ...the latter replied with two vo... ...number of peasants were kill... ...wounded.

Lawyer Charged with Vagrancy.

Oyster Bay, N. Y.—Karl Cook, ...aid he was a lawyer from Wa... ...on, D. C., and who was arreste... ...secret service man while attempt... ...o climb Sagamore Hill, was senten... ...o five days in jail at Mineola on ...harge of vagrancy.

Mexico City.—Reports indicate ...he strikers on the Mexican C... ...railroad are losing ground, a nu... ...of men having come forward to ...the places of the strikers. It i... ...believed probable the strike ...spread to other railroads.

NOTICE TO SCHOOL PATRON...

School district No. 40, ... Jack... ...Chapel school, will meet at the ... ...house on Friday, August, 10, at ...m. Every patron should attend ...important business affecting ...school will be disposed of.

W. S. WILLI...
Chairman District Boa...

NOTICE.

...Jemison, Ala., August 7th, 19... ...Lost—One light clay bank ... ...rounded on the left shoulder w... ...heart. The last time heard from ...was at Ashby; she weighs abo... ...pounds. I will reware any one ...any information as to where ...is, or if returned to me, I will pay ...for the trouble.

T. S. DAVENPORT,
Jemison, A...

PETITION TO SELL LAND...

...DIVISION.

...In the Probate Court of C... ...Alabama, July 24th, 19... ...came Julia E. Cook, ...Cook, and Carrie W. M... ...wife of Frank Martin, of Dalla... ...counties, Alabama, respect... ...filed their joint petition ...setting, alleging that they are ...owners in certain real estate p... ...particularly described in said petition, ...and being in Chilton county, Ala... ...with John T. Dungan, William R. ...Dungan and David B. Dungan, of ...Memphis, Tennessee; Joseph A. D... ...of Memphis, Tennessee; Lil... ...Williams, of Jackson, Tennessee; ...A. McLeod, of Atlanta, Georgia; ...ert M. McLeod, of the State of T... ...Carl McLeod, Bessie McLeod, ...Lilian McLeod, each of Elliott, ...Clara Sales, of Dallas, Texas; ...liam Martin, Edward Martin a... ...cob C. Vaughan, each of Ba... ...Kentucky, and Annie Belle O'N... ...Willie C. Gandy, each of Tyle... ...alleging that each of said par... ...persons are over the age of ... ...one years, and praying that ... ...estate described in their said ... ...be sold for partition and divi... ...the ground that the same ... ...equitably divided without ... ...thereof.

It is ordered, that the 10th ... ...September, 1906, be appointed ...for hearing said petition, and ...fice of the same be given to ... ...residents of the State of Ala... ...publication for three successive ...in The Union, a newspaper ... ...at Clanton, in Chilton ... ...bama; and a copy of said ... ...sent by mail, post paid, to said ...parties residing without the ... Alabama. L. H. REYNOL...
8-9-06-3w Probate ...

COUNTY OFFICERS.

...Circuit Court.
...—Third Monday in ...
...Fourth Monday in ...

...L. Brewer, Tuskegee.
...E. Bowling, Dadeville.
...W. Collins.

...County Court.
...—Second Monday in ...

...—Second Monday in Sept...

...—Hon. W. W. Whitesides, ...—Mrs. S. A. Stewart, Clan...

...County Court.
...day in each month.

...missioners' Court.
...Monday February, first Mon... ...first Monday June, second ...July, second Monday August, ...day November.

COUNTY OFFICERS.

...of Probate—L. H. Reynolds.
...—W. T. Callen.
...J. M. Morgan.
...—W. M. Adams.
...sioner—L. B. Pounds.
...ector—T. J. Hubbard.

...unty Commissioners.
...District—W. H. Conway.
...District—Alex Glasscock.
...District—R. P. Kendrick.
...District—Moses Robinson.

...Supt. of Education.
...W. Moore, Clanton.

...County Surveyor.
...Dell, Calera.

...State Senator.
...R. Oliver, Calera.

COUNTY CHURCHES.

...SIONARY BAPTIST.
...ANY—Rev. J. L. Neeley, pas... ...Sunday and Saturday be... ...L. Rand, clerk.

...SALEM—Rev. M. J. Parrish, ...E. B. Popwell, clerk.

...CREEK—Rev. J. L. Busbey, ...First Sunday and Saturday ...W. E. Thomas, clerk.

...NS CHAPEL—Rev. J. H. ...pastor. Third Sunday and ...before. J. D. Collins, clerk.

...S HILL—Rev. J. H. Thomas, ...First Sunday and Saturday ...W. Scott, clerk.

...DONIA—Rev. J. H. Thomas, ...Fourth Sunday and Saturday ...3:30 p. m. H. H. Armstrong, ...

...SANT GROVE—Rev. J. H. ..., pastor. Fourth Sunday and ...before at 11 a. m. D. H. ..., clerk.

...VIDENCE—Rev. W. W. Robin... ...tor. Second Sunday and Sat... ...before. Riley Robinson, clerk.

...ROTH (Bibb Co.)—Rev. J. H. ..., pastor. Second Sunday and ...before. D. C. Smitherman.

PRIMITIVE BAPTIST.

...EL—Elder J. P. Nobles, pas... ...Second Sunday and Saturday be... ...J. T. Abernathy, clerk.

METHODIST EPISCOPAL.

...KY MOUNT—Rev. A. T. Van... ...pastor. Second Sunday. Sing... ...every second and fourth Sunday ...ve. Prayer meeting every Wed... ...night. Ladies' prayer meeting ...Saturday afternoon.

FRATERNAL SOCIETIES.

Masonic.

...n R. A. Chapter, No. 116—...aturday, Clanton.

...ade Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No. ...ourth Saturday, Cooper.

...on Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No. ...rst Saturday, Clanton.

...ery Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No. ...rst Saturday, Billingsley.

...man Lodge, A. F. and A. M., ...—Saturday on or before full ... Marbury.

...ton Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No. ...aturday on or before full moon, ...

...ton Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No. ...Tuesday on or before full moon, ...

I. O. O. F.

...ton Lodge—First and third Sat...

...ton Lodge, No. 304—Second and ...Saturdays.

Woodmen of the World.

...ck Jack Camp, No. 190—First and ...Mondays.

I. O. R. M.

...ewarne Tribe, No. 90—First and ...Mondays sleep. Visiting chiefs ...ly invited. E. B. Langston, C. ...; J. H. Patton, Sachem.

...ade Tribe No. 18—2nd and 4th ...day sleeps. Visiting chiefs cor... ...ly invited. J. M. Grant, Sachem; ...Parrish, C. of R.

F. E. & C. U. OF A.

Chilton Co. Division Officers.

J. H. Thomas, President, Jemison, Rte. 1.
J. W. Hayes, Vice Pres., Thorsby, Rte 1.
J. N. Dennis, Sec-Treas., Clanton, Rte 6.
G. W. Thomas, Chaplain, Clanton, Rte 2.
J. W. Serrell, Bus. Agent, Jemison, Rte 4.
C. N. Biland, Lecturer, Clanton, Rte 4.
N. A. Dobbs, Asst. Lect., Clanton, Rte 3.
W. J. Bean, Conductor, Clanton, Rte 4.
W. F. Culpepper, Doorkeeper, Clanton, Rte 3.
W. A. Barnett, Ex. Committee, Jemison, Rte 2.
E. H. Mims, Ex. Committee, Clanton, Rte 1.
J. Wiley Foshee, Ex. Committee, Clanton, Rte 4.

UNION RALLY

At Mars Hill Church, Friday, August 17, 1906, Commencing at 9:30 a. m.

"Why Should We, as Farmers, Be Organized?" Discussion by County President J. H. Thomas and others.

"What Benefits Should We, as Farmers, Derive by Being Organized?" Discussion by County Lecturer C. N. Biland and others.

"Should the Farmer's Wife Be Organized; If Not, Why?" Discussion by T. M. Driver and others.

"To What Extent Does the Mortgage System Depress Us as Farmers?" Discussion by Judge L. H. Reynolds and others.

"Will Crop Diversification Pay; If So, in What Way?" Discussion by W. H. Conway and others.

"Why the Farmers' Union Should Be a Secret Organization." Discussion by A. J. Scott and others.

We have written to the State officials for some of them to be present at this meeting. We want to make it an interesting day to the public as well as to the union man. The larger part of the day will be public and everybody is cordially invited to come and bring a large basket filled with eatables. Come and bring your wives and children and show them the necessity of being in an organization. There will be at least a half dozen local unions at the above named place and date. So come one, come all. Our editor is cordially invited. Yours for success.

A. J. SCOTT,
W. R. COFER,
J. D. TERRY,
Committee.

G. W. Scott, Local No. 246. tf

F. E. & C. U. O A.

A resolution was adopted at the last county meting of the Farmers' Union requiring the county lecturer to visit each local in the county at least once every year. Locals who want me to lecture to them will please write me, giving their location, so as to enable me to make a tour of the county in July and August. Address

C. N. EILAND,
Route 4, Clanton, Ala.
tf

BARBECUE AND DINNER AT ROCKY MOUNT SCHOOL HOUSE.

There will be an all-day educational and union rally at the new school house at Rocky Mount, 4 miles from Jemison, on August 10, 1906. J. A. Skaggs whl superintend the barbecuing of the meat and dinner will be served on the ground. B. E. Collum will be in charge of the lemonade, ice cream, etc., which will be sold and the profits go to the school. W. I. MacAdory, Supt. of Jefferson Co.; J. W. Morris, Supt. of Chilton Co.; Probate Judge L. H. Reynolds and others will speak. F. B. Williams is the teacher at this school house. Everybody is invited to come, especially the surrounding districts. Come and spend an enjoyable and profitable day. tf

NOTICE.

Blank Deeds, Mortgages, and all official forms for Justices of the Peace, etc., for sale at The Union Office. Only best approved forms are used. Come in and give us your order tf.

FOR SALE!

A saw mill outfit consisting of engine, boiler, saw mill, Challoner shingle mill, three Challoner shingle presses, one small planer and matcher. All in first class condition. Will sell on easy terms, or exchange for other property, except saw mill outfit.

C. E. Wheelock, Mgr.
Fixico, Ala.

CLANTON COTTON MARKET.

Total receipts to August 8, 1906...6564
Price same date 10 1-4
Receipts same time in 1905.....8000
Price same time 10 1-8

LOCAL AND PERSONAL.

Photographer J. W. Harrell, of Jemison, will be on hand at Rocky Mount school house with his tent and prepared to "take the pictures" of all who apply. So go prepared. Mr. Harrell is a good union man and an artist in his work, and his prices are reasonable. He will donate ten per cent of the day's work to the school fund at Rocky Mount.

The singing at Mount Pleasant Sunday was a great success. There was a big crowd, behavior was perfect and plenty of dinner spread for twice the number. J. W. Billingsley was president of the gathering and among the leaders during the day were G. W. Melton, T. J. Littlejohn, B. F. Sasnett, J. E. Littlejohn, W. F. Murphy and Z. Lowery. The organists were Miss Carrie Littlejohn and Will G. Culp.

Rev. Mr. Ray, of Prattville, will preach at Highlands this coming Saturday night and Sunday afternoon.

The protracted meeting at the Baptist church is drawing large congregations. Rev. Mr. Upshaw, of Port Deposit, is preaching, as also the pastor, Rev. A. C. Swindall. All good people hope that much good will result, for the field is large James J. A. Box is in Chilton county. He represents the Anniston Marble Works, so if you want a good monument at reasonable cost apply to him.

Dr. McLain, of Jemison, was a pleasant visitor Thursday, and anticipates building up a good practice in our county.

Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Littlejohn and little daughter, Edna, were Clanton visitors Friday.

G. A. Keen was in town Friday.

W. R. King and wife, of Autauga county, were Clanton visitors Friday, looking up the many friends they had when they resided in Chilton.

W. J. Dennis and G. G. Riggins were in Clanton Saturday.

T. L. Dennis went to Mt. Creek Saturday on a visit to his uncle, I. J. Dennis.

J. B. Farley was a pleasant visitor Saturday.

W. R. Bean, of Dolive, and young son, William Riley Bean, were welcome callers Saturday.

L. H. Gentry was a pleasant visitor Saturday.

R. L. Knight was in Clanton Saturday.

C. J. Cobern and sons, Jeff and Burr, were visitors in Clanton Saturday. We don't see Mr. Cobern here very often; he sticks pretty close to Maplesville.

T. C. Jones was a welcome visitor Saturday.

Alex Glasscock was in Clanton Saturday.

J. P. Thomas was a pleasant caller Saturday. He was accompanied by his daughters, the Misses Lucinda and Nettie Jane, and son, B. C.

T. G. Lake, the contractor at Mt. Creek, was a welcome caller Saturday.

Rural Carrier Lefstad, of Thorsby, was in Clanton Saturday.

J. A. Caddell and family, of Jemison, were visitors at Dr. Crumpton's Saturday and Sunday. Mr. Caddell has charge of R. F. D. No. 4 at Jemison.

G. H. Gerald, of Thorsby, was in Clanton Monday.

W. J. Sorrell was in town Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Jess Collum's baby boy, aged four months, died Sunday and was buried at Union Grove cemetery on Monday.

Mrs. S. A. Lowe, of Coosa county, is visiting relatives in and around Clanton.

Charlie Reynolds was a visitor at Judge Reynolds' Monday night.

Judge L. H. Reynolds returned from his western trip last week, and if you want any information about mountains and Mormons ask the judge.

T. S. Davenport and Uncle George Shaw were in Clanton Monday.

J. M. Curlee and son, Hubbard, were in town Tuesday. Mr. Curlee has just returned from his old home at Providence, in Coosa county, where he had been attending protracted meeting, and says the services surpassed anything he ever witnessed for the interest manifested. Rev. Doss Hughes is the pastor and a very able one, too.

J. N. Scott was in Clanton Tuesday.

J. P. Barrett and Lee Vickers were in town Tuesday.

J. T. Green, of West Chilton, was a pleasant visitor Tuesday and was very enthusiastic over the results of our primary Monday.

J. P. Rushing was in Clanton Tuesday.

J. D. Glasscock and T. J. Hubbard were welcome callers Tuesday.

M. C. Williams was in town Tuesday.

M. F. Lett brought The Union a vegetable freak Tuesday; it is a corn tassel with fifteen or twenty little ears of corn on it. Come in and see it.

J. B. Downs has got a few of those thoroughbred young roosters left. This is a great chance to improve your chickens at little cost. Try it a whirl.

J. M. Huckabee went to Birmingham Wednesday to look over the town.

COME TO PREACHING.

The Rev. A. C. Swindall will preach at Mount Pleasant school house on the afternoon of the first Sunday in September. Everybody is invited to come. tf

NOTICE TO LAND-OWNERS.

I wish to say that I am preparing maps or plats of each land-owner's property, giving a written description of the land, as it should be described in assessments. I am preparing these plats for the purpose of getting all errors corrected, and at the same time furnish every party an easy and correct way to keep their property correct and avoid future mistakes and annoyance, as well as (sometimes) considerable expense. These plats are made of excellent bond paper and will last a lifetime, and only cost 25 cents each, except where plats are very large, when they will cost 50 cents. Every one that has seen the plats I am making pronounce them splendid and worth many times their cost and well calculated to save their cost many times over. Any one wishing a plat can obtain it by coming to my office in Clanton with their deeds, so as to insure an accurate description.

L. B. POUNDS,
tf Tax Assessor.

BARBECUE AND PICNIC.

A barbecue and picnic will be given under the auspices of the Improved Order of Red Men, at the Soldiers' Home on August 18, 1906. Everybody is invited to come and bring a full basket. We have the promise of the Great Sachem and other prominent men in the order, who will be with us that day. All refreshments, etc., that will be on sale will be under control of the order.

By order of committee. tf

FOR SHERIFF.

I hereby announce myself a candidate for sheriff of Chilton county, subject to the action of the people at the November election, 1906.

ROLLEFFE BATES.
adv (tf)

THE NEW YORK WORLD

Thrice-a-Week Edition.

Read Wherever the English Language Is Spoken.

The Thrice-a-Week World hopes to be in 1906 a better paper than it has ever been before, and it has made its arrangements accordingly. Its news service covers the entire globe, and it reports everything fully, promptly and accurately. It is the only paper, not a daily, which is as good as a daily, and which will keep you as completely informed of what is happenng throughout the world.

The Thrice-a-Week World is fair in its political reports. You can get the truth from its columns, whether you are Republican or Democrat, and that is what you want.

A special feature of the Thrice-a-Week World has always been its serial fiction. It publishes novels by the best authors in the world, novels which in book form sell for $1.50 each, and its high standard in this respect will be maintained in the future as in the past.

The THRICE-A-WEEK WORLD'S regular subscription price is only $1.00 per year, and this pays for 156 papers. We offer this unequaled newspaper and THE UNION together for one year for $1.50.

The regular subscription price of the two papers is $2.00. tf

The Union, Weekly Montgomery Advertiser, and a great white and black map of Alabama, United States and world, three in one, with a picture of every president from Washington to Roosevelt, all for $1.50.

STRAYED OR STOLEN.

From near my residence on June 25, one iron gray mare colt, one year old; one iron gray horse colt, with star on face, and scar on left hind leg above hock, one and a half years old. Any information leading to their recovery will be liberally rewarded.

C. C. MARTIN,
tf Calera, Ala., Rte 1.

FOR SALE.

160 acres land, 65 acres in cultivation; two miles south of Calera; good dwelling and outbuildings; good and lasting water; very good soil. Will be sold at a bargain.

H. M. BUSBEY,
tf Calera, Ala.

FOR SALE.

30 young cockerels. Silver Spangled Hamburgs, Golden Laced Wyandotts, Buff, Brown and White Legherns. Prices 50c to $1.50. All birds pure bred and of good quality.

J. B. Downs,
tf Clanton, Ala.

JOHN W. HARRELL,
Jemison, Ala.

Photographer. Dealer in all grades of enlarging. Frames made to order. Work done at your own home by appointment.

E. G. Rollins & Co.

—DEALERS IN—

General Merchandise, Clothing, Shoes and Fancy Groceries.

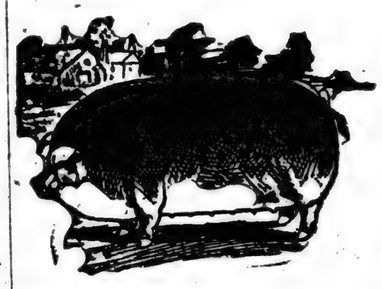
CLANTON, ALABAMA.

WOODLAWN FARM.

Barred Plymouth Rocks

PURE BRED

Setting of 15 fresh eggs for 50c. Packing for shipping 10c extra.



PURE BRED

Duroc Jersey Hogs.

Write us for prices before you buy. Address,

W. Y. NIX,
Maplesville, Alabama.

A. A. JACKSON
Lomax, Alabama.

General merchandise, corn, hay, shorts, shoes, men's hats, Ladies hats. Best quality and lowest prices in all goods.

Highest Market Price Paid for Chickens and Eggs.

J. E. Littlejohn
Clanton, Alabama.

General Merchandise, Corn, Hay, etc.

SHOES

The most for the money in town. Come and see us and we will do you good.

FOR SALE

At all times, high grade hogs and pigs, Berkshire and Poland China, crossed.

M. J. BARRETT,
tf Thorsby, Ala.

BUSINESS PROPOSITION

The best whiskey in the country is here. If you don't believe it, try me.

J. M. COLLINS,
Palace Saloon, Calera, Ala.
tf.

Notice No. 20906.

NOTICE FOR PUBLICATION.

Department of the Interior, Land Office at Montgomery, Ala., July 9, 1906.

Notice is hereby given that the following-named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim, and that said proof will be made before Clerk of Circuit Court, at Clanton, Ala., on Sept. 1, 1906, viz.: George W. Pate, Homestead entry No. 34394, for the E 1-2 of Ne 1-4, E 1-2 of Se 1-4 of Section 2, Tp. 23, in R 15 E.

He names the folowing witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of said land, viz.:

Rollfee F. Bates, of Clanton, Ala.; John Davis, of Clanton, Ala.; William L. Littleton, of Shelby, Ala.; and William M. Willis, of Shelby, Ala.

ROBERT D. JOHNSTON,
Register.

CRAWFORD & SAMMONS Blacksmiths Horseshoers & wheel wrights. At the "Old Vine stand" Clanton, Ala. Horse-shoeing 80 cent; Shrining Buggy tires 50 cents; New tires 65 cents. Other work in proportion. Come and see us. tf.

GINNING SFASON 1906-7 We have engaged Joe and Walter Maddox to run and operate our gins for the coming season. We have the best machinery and with these men to operate it, we can guarantee entire satisfaction to those who patronize us. Bring us your cotton. Respectfully
Chilton Warehouse & M,f,g. Company. tf.

FOR SALE OR RENT!

Land for sale, or to rent. One, two, three and four horse farms; two miles north of Jemison. Call on or address,

J. C. DUBOSE,
tf. Jemison, Ala.

MONEY TO LOAN

On real estate. Call or write me at my abiding place with Mr. G. O. Foshee, one mile northeast of Clanton, R. F. D. No. 1. Come during banking hours, as I keep my money in the bank.

tf JAMES GLASS.

FOR SALE!

300 acres land, 150 acres in cultivation. All in Sec. 6 T., 20, R., 14, 9 miles S. W. of Clanton. Good dwelling house and out buildings and 3 good tenant houses. Good and lastiug well of water. This good farming land will be sold at a bargain. Call and see,

tf J. H. CARTER,
Clanton, R. F. D. No.

IN THE WOOLLEY BUILDING.

By ROE L. HENDRICK.

Although it was many years before the era of "sky-scrapers," our little city had the Woolley Building, "the tallest in the country," as some proud residents declared. "As ugly as sin, and a fire-trap," was the comment of certain visitors, which unkind statement we attributed to ignoble jealousy.

On each side of Monroe street stretched a dozen blocks of brick structures, three or four stories in height. In the midst of them, with its back to Moss Creek, the Woolley Building towered upward nine stories in front, or eleven behind, if one counted the two basements.

So all good Palmyrans deemed themselves modest in speaking of its "nine full stories," although the same envious visitors had been heard to describe it as consisting of "six stories and a cocked hat."

The six formed the original structure. Then the City Library Association found itself in possession of a collection of books, a moderate building fund, and a lawsuit over a site.

After the suit had dragged along for two years Mr. Woolley, owner of the tall "block," and at the same time president of the Library Association suggested a happy compromise. He would use the fund to put on three additional stories and install an elevator, and would give the library its lofty "site" rent free for all time. This was promptly agreed to, and in due time accomplished; but the result, from an architectural point of view, was not all that might have been desired.

The seventh story had a steeply sloping, slate-tiled front, much like a mustard roof, with a "hip" above, which was also slated. Above this, to afford plenty of light, the two other floors were built in circular form, and capped with a very flat, dome-like roof. It would have cost less had the addition been built like the lower floors, but in the eyes of Mr. Woolley and the committee the result would have been less ornamental.

The library proved very useful to the townspeople, and was often consulted, except when the old-fashioned counterweight elevator was out of order—which occurred frequently. That the air and light, upon a level with the top of Beemis' Hill, a mile away, were of the best, all patriotic Palmyrans agreed.

On May 30, 18—, Amy Murray, Jennie Pauli, Lizzie Minturn, Frank Lodge and I, all students about to graduate from the academy, decided not to attend the Decoration-day exercises in Valleyview Cemetery, but instead to prepare the groundwork of our essays and orations for the coming commencement. By going to the library on a holiday, we knew we could have it to ourselves. Indeed, even the librarian was away; but Lizzie had borrowed the keys from him the night before.

Immediately after breakfast we all hurried down the street to the Woolley Building. A drum corps was "tootling" and rumbling over on Washington street, where the Grand Army veterans, members of the Woman's Relief Corps, and distinguished citizens, bearing flags and flowers, were forming in line for the march to the cemetery. A throng was assembled about Military Hall, but otherwise the streets were half-deserted, and many of the stores were closed.

We found only "Uncle Ben" Moseley, the colored janitor, in the building, sitting grumpily on the floor of the elevator, which was raised a foot or more above the level of the lobby tiles.

"Yo' cahn't go up," he said, shortly. "Everything locked."

"But I have the keys, Uncle Ben," said Lizzie, cheerily. "You're not going to make us walk up all those stairs, now are you?"

"Track's done busted," the old man explained, yielding a little.

"Not the whole way, is it, uncle?" Amy asked. "Can't you give us a lift?"

"Mebbe she'll go all right up to de fif' flo'," he admitted, "but de track's done busted above dar. An' dat lazy 'Lige Murphy's comin' to fix it soon's de p'rade starts. Dat's why I got to wait heah!"

Having thus revealed the cause of his ill humor to be the loss of a sight of the parade, Uncle Ben more graciously admitted us to the car and started it on its wabbly upward journey. He stopped at the fifth floor, and went very gingerly for the last few feet—a caution which seemed necessary, as the track on one side of the shaft swayed ominously.

"You-all 'll have to walk down," he said, at parting, "unless yo' wait till dat lazy 'Lige Murphy fixes things up."

Our ride was only two floors short of what it could have been at its best, for the shaft ended on the seventh floor. We soon were in the reading-room under the roof, with the windows open and a gentle breeze blowing through the apartment. It was almost or quite noon before we had looked up the last of our authorities and had finished taking notes.

"How still it is!" said Jennie, going to a window. The roof outside hid the street below, so she could only see the chimney-tops across the way. "Why, you can't even hear the car-bells! It doesn't seem a bit as if we were in the midst of a city."

"We aren't," said Frank, smiling and holding up one finger. "Listen!"

From Beemis' Hill, clear and tinkling, came a bobolink chorus. The wind was in the right quarter to bring the distant bird music to our ears as distinctly as if the feathered songsters had been only a few rods away. We heard them in delighted silence till Lizzie cried, "There goes the noon bell!"

Ding! dong! A pause. Ding! dong! ding! came from the tower of the city hall only a block or two away.

We leaned forward, with lips apart. Again the alarm was repeated. "Twenty-three," said Frank. "Why, that's the corner of Monroe and Wayne streets—this corner!"

"I smell smoke," Lizzie added, in ominously quiet tones. "I've had whiffs of it before, but I thought it came from a chimney."

The city-hall bell was still clamoring, and now a half-dozen other bells and whistles had taken up the summons.

We ran to the windows, but could see nothing, although now the rumble of wheels and clangor of gongs came to us in startling contrast to the former silence. Then, creeping up the rear wall of the structure, a broad canopy of smoke came into view. Probably a window had just been shattered somewhere below.

"It's in this building," said Amy.

Frank instantly ran down to the lower floor of the library. Thin pencilings of smoke outlined the door-frame, but the air was comparatively clear. When the door leading to the next story was opened, however, we were almost blinded and suffocated by the volume of smoke that poured in.

"Stay here, girls!" Frank shouted. "Open a window, so as to keep the air clear, but shut all doors, and don't let in any draft from below!"

He caught me by the wrist. "Come on, Jack," he said, and dragging me through, slammed the door behind us.

We fell flat on our faces, where the air was not quite so foul, and crawled to the elevator shaft. A dull roar came up to us, and we could see red flames midway of the long descent. The elevator car was below, opposite the second story, as nearly as we could judge.

To remain where we were, even for a few moments, was both painful and perilous, to go farther down impossible; but Frank explained that the draft, formed by the open well, or shaft, must be cut off. If we could get the car above the fire, it might save our lives.

The heavy counterweight was near the top, but, unfortunately, just below our reach. The cord which operated it had ben burned off lower down. A cogged "rider" held the weight firmly in place by means of a steel "dog."

Gasping and half-dazed, we ran to a window, threw it up, and filled our lungs with pure air. After being thus refreshed for a moment, Frank went back into the room, and in a closet found a long, slender iron bar. Reaching down with this, he pried desperately at the weight, calling to me for help. We both threw ourselves upon this lever, and suddenly were hurled backward to the floor, while the weight, thus released, shot downward, dragging the car up the shaft through the flames, till it jammed, where the track was broken, between the fifth and sixth floors.

Again we gasped for breath a moment at the open window, and then, after closing it, hurried up into the lower reading-room, where we found the girls clinging to one another, believing we had deserted them or had been suffocated.

"We've closed the flue with the car," was Frank's brief and, to them, unintelligible explanation of our absence. "That should hold the fire back a half-hour, and maybe we can escape in that time."

He pulled off his shoes, and without a moment's delay, crept out upon the roof.

Lizzie mistook his purpose. "It's of no use," she said. "The flames are all about the iron ladder at the back, and Jennie and Amy couldn't climb down it, anyhow." For the first time I then noticed that her shoes were off. The brave girl had crept to the edge of the roof to examine the fire-escape. Frank nodded. "I had guessed as much," he said.

He stepped cautiously, till opposite a front chimney back of the coping, and then slid down to it. Close at one side was fixed a tall and strong flagstaff, with the huge flag then at half-mast, in honor of the nation's dead. He had unfastened the halyards from the cleat by the window, and now swiftly lowering the flag, he let it flutter down into the street, thereby calling attention to our perilous position.

I watched him draw the rope, hand over hand, till the loosened end fell from the upper pulley. Then he turned and beckoned imperatively for me to come to him. I had already removed my shoes mechanically, but the dread of great heights always had been inherent in my nature. It did not seem possible that I could go down to that dizzy verge, where my friend was working so coolly.

I hesitated, and he beckoned again. "You must go," Lizzie whispered. "I know how you feel, but you can do it. Frank has some plan, and you must hurry."

Already the floor was getting uncomfortably warm, and the slates outside were actually hot. We could hear a steady rumble, interspersed with occasional crackling noises, seemingly directly beneath our feet.

Turning over on my face, I slid down the slope till stopped by the chimney. Standing half-sheltered behind it, I was then able to grasp Frank's coat, while he leaned far over and lowered the rope. I now saw that the new water-tower had just been brought as close to the building as the heat would permit, and hastily elevated. But its top came only to the fifth story, leaving two floors between.

When the rope was let down, a man on the tower caught it with a pike-pole and drew it to him. Frank now lowered the other end of the rope, and in accordance with his instructions, the two ends were tied together by the tower man. The rope now formed an endless loop, running over the stout pulley on the lower part of the staff, which was placed there to facilitate the handlings of the halyards from within the building.

"It's plenty long enough," said Frank, briefly. I then noticed for the first time that he had a curtain pole, with brass knobs at each end, in his hand. Evidently before going out upon the roof he had snatched this from the closet in the reading-room.

"Draw up the slack," he said.

As soon as we had a few coils of the rope from below laid on the roof, he drew a "half-hitch" about each end of the curtain pole.

"That will hold fast," I heard him say with a certain emphasis born of the satisfaction I could not understand at the moment. "Now get astride and see how easily you can ride down. This pole will make a life-boat upon which all of us can ride to safety. Tell the men to send back plenty of cord, so I can fasten the girls to this pole. I want at least six pieces, so I can fasten them firmly to both ends of the pole before they start, for it isn't safe to assume that they can hang on at all. They may be unconscious before they leave the roof. And tell them to hang on to the rope and see that it doesn't run too fast. Now go, old man!"

"I can't," I said. A few glances from that great height already had caused an attack of nausea, and I felt sure I was going to faint. "I simply can't, Frank! You go!"

"Remember what I told you," was the only reply. "And tell them to hurry, please." With that he deliberately thrust me over the edge, and I was too weak to resist.

Astride both pole and rope, with a firm grasp above, and my eyes closed to avoid a sight of the dizzy distance below, I slid steadily down to the tower, while the firemen controlled my descent. In a few seconds I was clinging limply to one of the ladders.

"Send up six length of rope at once, so Frank can tie the girls on," I said. Luckily, the men understood without further explanation, which I was helpless to give at the time.

Now I could see how terribly the fire—which had started from the repair man's overturned brazing furnace—had eaten out the third and fourth stories, till practically all the woodwork was gone. It seemed as if the enormous weight above must simply crush the skeleton frame below, and I expected the catastrophe to occur at any moment.

I had reached the ground when I saw Jennie, bound fast to both ends of the pole, and unconscious, come sliding down the endless cable Frank had devised. Amy followed, then Lizzie, the latter courageously clinging to the rope, with only a loop about her feet; and finally, to my infinite relief, came Frank.

As he reached the tower, the rope was cut and the men ran down, while the ladder-like sections were quickly telescoped. In another instant the four horses bounded ahead, and the firemen and police forced the people out of the way into the adjacent streets.

They were none too soon! The tall building bowed backward with a roar, the greater part of the ruins falling into Moss Creek, but two stories "buckling" forward so as almost to fill Monroe street. The fire was thrown against the Maynard House on the opposite side of the highway, and that building, with two adjacent blocks, was burned before nightfall.

But not a life was lost. Fire Chief Malone warmly said that credit for this was due solely to Frank Lodge, whose clear-headedness in first shutting off the elevator shaft alone afforded sufficient time for the subsequent rescue. No one below had known of our predicament until Frank dropped the flag, for Uncle Ben Moseley had been so frightened by the fire that he had forgotten our presence in the building.

Strange as it may seem, both Frank and I kept the notes for our orations, which had been thrust into our pockets; but the girls, having fewer pockets, lost theirs.—Youth's Companion.

Moderation in Exercise.

It is better to be lazy than dead, and it is probably just as comfortable. For obvious reasons the prescription to take "moderate exercise" is misleading and unsatisfactory. Most of us are constitutionally incapable of exercising moderately. We begin violently and end quickly. And what is "moderate exercise?" One philosopher who tried it for twenty years arrived at the same as to walking. Smell the morning, look down the long way that separates you from your business. Then take a car.—Detroit Free Press.

THE PULPIT.

A BRILLIANT SUNDAY SERMON BY THE REV. L. L. TAYLOR.

Subject: Children's Rights.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—Sunday evening, in Puritan Congregational Church, the pastor, the Rev. Livingston L. Taylor, preached a sermon in anticipation of Anniversary Day, on "Children's Rights." The text was from Mark 10:14: "Suffer the little children to come unto Me, and forbid them not; for of such is the kingdom of God." Among other things, Mr. Taylor said:

Here is the Magna Charta, the great charter of children's rights. The kingdom is their kingdom. The Christ is their Christ. He recognizes their right to be; their right to be children; their right to a blessed life as children. The kingdom cannot come except as children have their rights. Could we save the children of but one generation, the kingdom would be here. God does not work in just that way; but the kingdom will never come unless we keep our hearts with the children and our faces toward the unborn. The world must become better by being born again. That is the way the kingdom has been coming. The human race makes progress by being better born each time. The right to be well born should be secured to every child and from birth on all its rights as a child should be safe-guarded.

Christ's blessing rests upon every plea for children's rights, upon every law enacted for their protection from inhuman parents, guardians and employers; upon every provision for their welfare when orphaned, or deserted, or sick, or feeble minded, or crippled, or in any way dependent, defective or delinquent. But the children who are thus afflicted, the children who are beaten and sent out to beg and steal, the children who are compelled to work long hours and under unwholesome conditions, the children whose parents are dead or unable to provide for them, are not the only children who need to have their rights examined. In what we call the best homes certain rights of the children are in danger of being overlooked, are in need of being declared, championed and secured.

First and foremost, I would put the right of children to be children. They have as good a right to be children as we have to be grown up folks; a better right, probably. Childhood is as much a part of the framework of this universe as earth or sky or sea. The right to a childhood is inalienable. Your child has a right not only to live but to live as a child. We are not to infer that Paul was ashamed of his childhood because he said: "When I became a man I put away childish things."

We are not to think the less of childhood because we were meant to outgrow it. Such real men as Paul was are generally discovered to have had a real childhood. He certainly had had a childhood sufficiently marked to be well remembered. Some men and women are not so fortunate. They seem to have forgotten that they ever were or were meant to be children. But Paul said: "When I was a child, I spoke as a child, I understood as a child, I thought (or reasoned) as a child." And there seems to have been nobody to interfere with him. "Childhood and youth are vanity," said the preacher. But perhaps he was simply lamenting their brevity. "Make the most of childhood and youth for they are soon gone." But if we are to understand him as pronouncing vain and profitless the golden days of all our life, he is sadly out of tune with all the rest of the Bible. Vanity! Emptiness! The fulness of life's worth and meaning is nowhere writ so large as in the soul of youth. Is it just a lie writ large? Oh, no, for God wrote it thus:

The men who retain childhood's sense of the reality and eagerness of life are the men who never grow old and never get through learning. "There is no substitute," says the bright woman from whose charming book of nursery logic I have borrowed the title of this discourse, "for a genuine, free, serene, healthy, bread-and-butter childhood. A fine manhood or womanhood can be built on no other foundation." God says the foundation shall be childhood. Why, then, should we be impatient? Why should we fear to trust what He puts nethermost for all the rest to stand upon? It is well enough to think of the manhood and the womanhood we want our children to attain and to give to the world. But I am persuaded that we think less than we should of the childhood which it is our first duty to give them.

The second right of childhood which I shall mention is the right to be governed. By a real childhood I do not mean an unrestrained childhood. A child left to itself will not have a natural childhood. That which is most distinctive and beautiful in childhood is contributed to it, or developed in it, by wise and loving restraint. The street Arab is not the ideal child. Nor is the child who grows up in a home where the political maxim that "governments derive their just powers from the consent of the governed" is accepted as applying to parental authority.

The authority of father and mother is derived from the Fifth Commandment and from the constitution of nature which lies back of that commandment. There is no authority more august, more sacred, more God-given than parental authority. We abdicate it to our shame and sorrow, to the shame and sorrow of the church, to the shame and sorrow of our children themselves.

But, having said this, let me make haste to say that in the endeavor to maintain the control of our children our steadfast aim should be to put them at last in control of themselves. Our control should be the scaffolding of self-control. A child has a right, I say, to an intelligent, firm, consistent government that shall represent in a way, adapted to its years, the conditions under which some day it will have to shift for itself. In a scale, we cannot begin too early to put a child in control of himself; that is, to teach him self-control. We have no right to gratify a child's every wish. The child has a right to be denied some things; to be restrained; to learn from us, in love, something of the inexorable conditions of mature life. We have no right to interfere with the law of cause and effect to such an extent as to send our children out into the world unprepared for real life.

The third of the inalienable rights of children is the right to be taught, involving the right to be ignorant. A child has a right to be ignorant and to be kept in ignorance of many things. It is a difficult right to maintain in these days, especially after a child has learned to read. But I question whether our children do not learn more of the dark and sinister facts of life from our own careless conversation than from what they read. And I speak not only of conversation relating to gross crimes of lust and violence, but of unkind criticism, of ordinary gossip, of distrust, insinuation and ridicule. Many of us, I fear, are in no position to complain of the newspapers, nor even of the unwholesome books from which our children learn so many things they might better never know.

If only this right of our children to be spared for a time the disclosure of certain aspects of life were more clearly recognized and at the same time the safe-guarding of their innocence more carefully distinguished from the foolish withholding of necessary knowledge! Let me say with all deliberation that it should be counted as one of the most sacred of the obligations of parents to give to their children, or to provide for them, that physiological instruction, the withholding of which, entirely or too long, through our utterly false sense of propriety, has been for many generations, and is to-day, one of the chief causes of human sin and wretchedness.

The right of children to be taught has never been so fully recognized as it is in our day. It is felt to be a wrong and a disgrace if one child is left without a seat in a school, or kept out of it. There never were so many people interested in educational methods and institutions. There never was such a widespread appreciation of the value of education. There never was better teaching nor more of it.

But the right to be taught demands more than the privilege of going to school. No school can relieve parents from their responsibility for their children. If shortcomings in their own education cut them off from giving the kind of asistance they would like best to give, they can give that which is, after all, most valuable, the help and inspiration of loving appreciation, of sympathetic interest.

In the religious instruction of children there can be no substitute for father and mother. Sacred history and religious truth may be taught by others. Relationships with others may be established which will greatly promote spiritual life. But nothing can take the place of a religious parentage and of parental instruction, in the religious development of a human life. The fundamental truth of our religion is the Fatherhood of God. The only natural medium for the realization of that truth is a godly parentage. We concede the right of every child to be well born. Is it too much to say that every child has a right to be born of religious parents? What is this but saying that no parents are in a position to do the best that might be done for their children unless they are truly religious persons, unless they know God and serve Him and represent His Fatherhood to their children?

Among the rights of a child which should be considered in connection with the right to be taught, and bearing particularly upon his religious training, are the rights of childhood's faith. How simple it is! How ready to conceive what we teach! In childhood, faith has its golden opportunity to establish itself for all life's pilgrimage. We have no right to discourage a child's faith. It is wicked to make light of it to ridicule it, to embarrass it in any way. But we have no right, on the other hand, to impose upon it, to trifle with it, to burden it. It is the supreme right of children under the royal charter of their Christ to come to Him. Their faith and their spirit are exactly what He wants. "Suffer the little children to come unto Me, and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of God." I believe that the threshold of life is meant to be the threshold of the kingdom and that our children have a right to receive the sign and the seal of their citizenship in holy baptism. And can it be that the Lord Jesus Christ will deny them a place at His table when they come to understand what it means to sit down with Him there, and desire to come? "Forbid them not! Forbid them not; For of such is the kingdom!"

He Was the Other Fellow.

A shrewd worldy agnostic and a Christian clergyman dressed in a modest clerical suit, says Eli Perkins, sat at the same table in the Pullman dining-car. They were waiting for the first course at the dinner, a delicious Hudson River shad. Eyeing his companion coldly for a moment, the agnostic remarked:

"I judge you are a clergyman, sir!"

"Yes, sir; I am in my Master's service."

"Yes, you look it. Preach out of the Bible, don't you?"

"Oh, yes; of course."

"Find a good many things in the old Book that you don't understand—eh?"

"Oh, yes; some things."

"Well, what do you do then?"

"Why, my dear friend, I simply do just as we do while eating this delicious shad. If I come to a bone I quietly lay it on one side and go on enjoying the shad, and let some fool insist on choking himself with the bones."

Then the agnostic wound up his watch and went into the smoker.—Evangelical Messenger.

THE SUNDAY

INTERNATIONAL LESSON FOR AUGUST

Subject: The Parable of Sons, Luke xv., 11-Text, Mat. iii., 7-
Verses 17, 18.

I. Leaving home (vs. 11-13). "A certain man." The pretentious beginning of beautiful of all parables is here the image of God the "Two sons." The two sons said to be representative kind, for we have in them of two great phases of from God—the elder in self-righteousness, the younger graded by his unrighteou "The younger." He repre ly wicked persons, such as licans and sinners. He sents the thoughtless, care

13. "Not many days" decided upon his course ened to be gone. This sha the rapidity (1) of national individual degeneracy. all together." Sinners who from God venture their all his journey." He was w father's government and greater liberty. The jo prodigal took represents in his departure from God into a "far country," far fr

II. In deep distress (vs. 14. "Spent all." He did until his last dollar was g mighty famine." The soul a distance from God, and from intercourse with Him soon feel its utter empti mighty famine will follo want." Real want is soul

15. "Joined himself to a The same wicked life that be represented by riotous living represented by servile living ners are perfect slaves. The the citizen of that country both in city and country. swine." This was doubly and especially so to a Jew

16. "With the husks." were not the pods of fruit, but "the fruit of the used for feeding swine" driven to the extremity of satisfy his hunger with the was fit only for swine. endeavor to satisfy the earthly and sensual delights

III. The decision to retu (vs. 17-19).

17. "He came to himself dethrones the reason. A is a state of folly and mad the madness is in the hea 9:3). "Bread enough and The lowest in my father's bread to give to the poor people are abundantly supp good things. "I perish." will not come to Christ until themselves ready to perish will arise." He had left h own free will, and he must in the same way. God co one to do right. "And go." ing the decision there must fort put forth. In returning there is something to do. sinned." The first thing to make a full confession of (1 John 1:9; Job 33:2 "Against heaven." Again Every sin is a sin against "No more worthy." He is humble himself. He knows justice his father could shut against him; he pleads for

IV. The return and the (vs. 20-24).

20. "He arose." He im did all of these things that decided upon. "Great way was coming slowly, in rags grace, questioning about come. "Father saw him." father was ever watching for turn. So God knows when toward Him. "And ran," represents the readiness with God receives returning sinn "The son said." He makes fession; he abases himself

22. "But the father." er did not wait until he had his confession. In this we great affection of the father willingness to forgive. "Bri servants." The father's joy and he instantly issues or celebrate his return. "Bri quickly." (R. V.)—Let us once by our actions that the er is fully forgiven and re "Put a ring on his hand" of affection.

23. "Be merry." Be j happy. The Bible gives the of God license to shout for "Was dead." Lost to all go up to all evil. "Is alive again was special cause for rejoic would not be a partaker of

V. The elder brother (vs. 28. "He was angry." G now holds up to the Pharisees a likeness of th As the elder brother is an joy which welcomes the home from his wanderings these men murmured at h with which Jesus has re publican and the sinner. him." As Jesus was then the captious Pharisees and the repenting outcasts. In these verses Jesus gives, in the substance of the Phar murmurings: We are better th and should have great re deference paid us, but you us and interested yourself publicans and sinners. Th thine." All is within thy you do not enjoy my bounty cause you will not. Notice parable leaves the elder b the outside, stubbornly re enter.

Work or Be Cru

Secretary of the Navy M addressing an Afro-Americ ence in Washington, D. C., the negro must work or be by the whites.

President Roosevelt

The Michigan Republi convention, at Detroit, ind ident Roosevelt's administ urged the election of Uni Senators by direct vote.

HELBAUGH
WEST VIRGINIA
PRAISES PE-RU-NA.

Hon. W. H. Kelbaugh.

At Any Time of the Year, Especially Hot Weather, is Very Depressing to the System. Pe-ru-na is an Unequaled Remedy For Such Cases. Read What He Says About It.

W. H. Kelbaugh, Ex-Member of Legislature, 204 9th street, N. E. Washington, D. C., writes:

"I can use my name and word of praise for Peruna as a medicine and tonic unequaled. I have used it for a stubborn cold and for a run down system. I tried many remedies of other medicines and physicians, several expensive doctors' bills, but Peruna cured me, strengthened me more than ever, and saved me money."

Mrs. Clara Litterst, Seafield, Ind., says: "I took a severe cold. I took Peruna to improve and kept on doing so as able to do my work."

APUDINE
RES It acts immediately—you feel its effects in 10 minutes. You don't have to wait a week to know its good. It cures ICESTION and ITY HEADACHES ALSO by the cause. 10 cents.

Original Sin.

In consists the sinfulness of whereinto man fell?

—The sinfulness of that whereinto man fell, consists in of Adam's first sin, the want al righteousness, and the corruption of his whole nature, which is commonly called original sin; together with all actual transgressions which proceed from it.—Shorter Catechism.

Old doctrine of original sin al through life. It confronts r homes and in our schools. t scientific philosopher cannot Hear what Herbert Spencer in his work on "Education:" not among those who believe Lord Palmerston's dogma, children are born good.' On the opposite dogma, untenable it is, seems to us less wide truth." In the doctrine of we find that we are all in varying degrees with portion of passion from the deeds of —St. Andrew, Glasgow.

Carl Schurz.

hood Carl Schurz was an Old hero of romance; in the history his native country his knightly have put on an atmosphere ition and of myth. In manbattled for freedom and the the American Union. In ripe stood among the honored heads councillors of the republic. es away, leaving a blameless utiful fame as a precious ince for his fatherland and for ntry of his adoption, and of his devotion.—From an Editorial Century.

patch from St. John's states sealers' harvest in the Arc- year amounts to 337,000

"NO TROUBLE"

ge From Coffee to Postum.

tum has done a world of good writes an Ills. man.

had indigestion nearly all my never dreamed coffee was se of my trouble until last I got so bad I was in misery time.

coffee drinker for 30 years, it d my stomach and nerves, yet ust crazy for it. After drinkwith my meals, I would leave ie, go out and lose my meal e coffee, too. Then I'd be as as ever.

friend advised me to quit coffee use Postum—said it cured Since taking his advice I re- y food and get all the good it, and don't have those awful spells.

anged from coffee to Postum any trouble whatever, felt from the first day I drank it. ell now and give the credit to ." Name given by Postum ttle Creek, Mich. Read the ook, "The Road to Wellville," "There's a reason."

THE SUNDAY

INTERNATIONAL LESSON FOR AUGUST

Subject: The Parable of Two Sons, Luke xv., 11-32. Text, Mat. iii., Verses 17, 18.

I. Leaving home (vs. 12-14). "A certain man." The most pretentious beginning of the most beautiful of all parables. Who is here the image of God? "Two sons." The two sons are said to be representatives of every kind, for we have in them the characteristics of two great phases of sin from God—the elder is the type of self-righteousness, the younger is graded by his unrighteousness. "The younger." He represents openly wicked persons, such as publicans and sinners. He also represents the thoughtless, careless, [illegible] 13. "Not many days." He decided upon his course and proceeded to be gone. This shows the rapidity (1) of national and individual degeneracy. "Gathered all together." Sinners who turn from God venture their all on his journey." He was weary of his father's government and desired greater liberty. The [illegible] prodigal took represents [illegible] in his departure from God [illegible] into a "far country," far [illegible]

II. In deep distress (vs. 14-16). 14. "Spent all." He did not stop until his last dollar was gone. "A mighty famine." The soul is in a distance from God, and [illegible] from intercourse with Him, will soon feel its utter emptiness. A mighty famine will follow. "In want." Real want is soul want. 15. "Joined himself to a citizen." The same wicked life that before was represented by riotous living is now represented by servile living. "Sent him into his fields to feed swine." This was doubly degrading, and especially so to a Jew. 16. "With the husks." The husks were not the pods of some sweet fruit, but "the fruit of the carob tree used for feeding swine." He was driven to the extremity of trying to satisfy his hunger with the food that was fit only for swine. So he made endeavor to satisfy the soul with earthly and sensual delights.

III. The decision to return (vs. 17-19).

17. "He came to himself." Sin dethrones the reason. A state of sin is a state of folly and madness, and the madness is in the heart (Eccl. 9:3). "Bread enough and to spare." The lowest in my father's house have bread to give to the poor, but my father's people are abundantly supplied with all good things. "I perish." The sinner will not come to Christ until he finds himself helpless in himself and thoroughly ready to perish. "I will arise." He had left home of his own free will, and he must return in the same way. God commands every one to do right. "And go." Following the decision there must be a definite effort put forth. In returning to God there is something to do. "I have sinned." The first thing to do is to make a full confession of sin to God. (1 John 1:9; Job 33:27, 28). "Against heaven." Against God. Every sin is a sin against God. "No more worthy." He is not worthy to be called a son. He must humble himself. He knows that he deserves justice his father could shut the door against him; he pleads for mercy.

IV. The return and the welcome (vs. 20-24).

20. "He arose." He immediately did all of these things that he had decided upon. "Great way off." The father was coming slowly, in rags, in disgrace, questioning about his son. "Father saw him." The father was ever watching for his return. So God knows when the sinner turns toward Him. "And ran," etc., represents the readiness with which God receives returning sinners. 21. "The son said." He makes a full confession; he abases himself.

22. "But the father." The father did not wait until he had heard his confession. In this we see the great affection of the father and his willingness to forgive. "Said to his servants." The father's joy overflows, and he instantly issues orders to celebrate his return. "Bring forth quickly." (R. V.)—Let us not delay once by our actions that the Father is fully forgiven and restored. "Put a ring on his hand." The ring is a token of affection.

23. "Be merry." Be joyful and happy. The Bible gives the children of God license to shout for joy. 24. "Was dead." Lost to all good and dead up to all evil. "Is alive again." There was special cause for rejoicing that the son would not be a partaker of the sin.

V. The elder brother (vs. 25-32). 28. "He was angry." Our Lord now holds up to the murmuring Pharisees a likeness of themselves. As the elder brother is angry at the joy which welcomes the return home from his wanderings, so these men murmured at the manner with which Jesus has received the publican and the sinner. "This man receiveth sinners." As Jesus was then welcoming the captious Pharisees not to condemn the repenting outcasts. 29. "These many years." In these verses Jesus gives, in the form of the parable, the substance of the Pharisees' murmurings: We are better than they and should have great reverence paid us, but you receive us and interested yourself in publicans and sinners. 31. "All that is mine." All is within the reach of you; you do not enjoy my bounty because you will not. Notice that the parable leaves the elder brother on the outside, stubbornly refusing to enter.

Work or Be Crushed.

Secretary of the Navy Metcalf, addressing an Afro-American audience in Washington, D. C., said the negro must work as he is driven by the whites.

President Roosevelt Indorsed.

The Michigan Republican state convention, at Detroit, indorsed President Roosevelt's administration and urged the election of United States Senators by direct vote.

Hon. W. H. Kelbaugh.

Ex-Member West Virginia Legislature, Praises Pe-ru-na.

At Any Time of the Year, Especially in Hot Weather, is Very Depressing System. Peruna is an Unequaled Tonic For Such Cases. Read What He Says About It.

W. H. Kelbaugh, Ex-Member West Virginia Legislature, 204 9th street, N. E., Washington, D. C., writes:

"I can use my name and word many times for Peruna as a medicine and tonic unequaled. I have used it for a stubborn cold and for a run down system. I tried many sorts of other medicines and several expensive doctor bills. Peruna cured me, strength-ened me more than ever, and saved me money."

Miss Clara Latterst, Seafield, Ind., says: "After I took a severe cold. I took Peruna, began to improve and kept on improving, was able to do my work."

APUDINE

CURES It acts immediately—you feel its effects in 10 minutes. You don't INDIGESTION and have to wait a week to know its good. It cures

DYSPEPSIA HEADACHES ALSO by removing the cause. 10 cents.

Original Sin.

What is the sinfulness of the state whereinto man fell?

Answer—The sinfulness of that state whereinto man fell, consists in the guilt of Adam's first sin, the want of original righteousness, and the corruption of his whole nature, which is commonly called original sin; together with all actual transgressions which proceed from it.—Shorter Catechism.

The old doctrine of original sin is all through life. It confronts us in our homes and in our schools. No scientific philosopher cannot meet it. Hear what Herbert Spencer says in his work on "Education:" "We are not among those who believe in Lord Palmerston's dogma, 'All children are born good.' On the opposite dogma, untenable as it is, seems to us less wide of the truth." In the doctrine of original sin we find that we are all born in varying degrees with potentialities of passion from the deeds of the past.—St. Andrew, Glasgow.

Carl Schurz.

Boyhood Carl Schurz was an Old World hero of romance; in the history of his native country his knightly deeds have put on an atmosphere of tradition akin to that of myth. In manhood he battled for freedom and the Union in the American Union. In ripe years he stood among the honored heads and councillors of the republic. Now he passes away, leaving a blameless record, beautiful fame as a precious inheritance for his fatherland and for the country of his adoption, and of his life devotion.—From an Editorial in the Century.

A dispatch from St. John's states that the seafarers' harvest in the Arctic this year amounts to 337,000 seals.

"NO TROUBLE"

Change From Coffee to Postum.

Postum has done a world of good for me," writes an Illa. man.

"I have had indigestion nearly all my life but never dreamed coffee was the cause of my trouble until last year. I got so bad I was in misery all the time.

"As a coffee drinker for 30 years, it ruined my stomach and nerves, yet I was just crazy for it. After drinking it with my meals, I would leave the table, go out and lose my meal and the coffee, too. Then I'd be as sick as ever.

"A friend advised me to quit coffee and use Postum—said it cured him. Since taking his advice I retain my food and get all the good from it, and don't have those awful sick spells.

"I changed from coffee to Postum without any trouble whatever, felt better from the first day I drank it. Am well now and give the credit to Postum." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a reason."

With the Funny Fellows

A RECIPE.

The surest way to know content
Is not to own a single cent,
And have no vain desires,
Nor any noted sires,
Who may have handed down to you
Ambition's nagging gift
Which makes you long for better things
And fortune's proud uplift.
If you will never learn to want
The goods you don't possess,
And have no knowledge of the world
Nor any modes of dress;
If you are poor in property
And do not read those books
Which waken in you fancy hopes
And turn your hungry looks
To luxuries you can't enjoy
And have no chance to get,
You'll never be a pessimist,
You'll never learn to fret,
With ignorance your happy lot,
Regrets won't make you sad.
When you don't know the pleasures missed,
It's easy to be glad.
—Birmingham Age-Herald.

AS FAR AS SHE WENT.

He—You don't mean to say you're superstitious about opals.

She—Well, I think it's unlucky to neglect an opportunity to get one.—Philadelphia Press.

BROUGHT TO TIME.

"That was a runaway match of Smith's, wasn't it?"

"Yes. He tried to get away in the night but the bride and her father caught him."—Cleveland Leader.

IN SOCIETY.

Ice Box—I hear you are entertaining a good deal lately.

Thermometer—Yes, indeed! I'm giving everybody a hot time.—Detroit Free Press.

SPITEFUL THING.

Patience—When I go to get a new pair of shoes, I never get them two sizes too small for me.

Patrice—And don't you have some difficulty in finding them large enough for you?—Yonkers Statesman.

A POSSIBLE ACCIDENT.

Mrs. Green—The iceman is fearfully late. I wonder what has happened.

Green—Maybe he has "fallen off the wagon."—Detroit Free Press.

SURE THING.

"To him that hath," said the man who loves to quote, "shall be given."

"Yes," said the practical philosopher, "and to him that hath not shall be given a swift kick."—Puck.

A SEPARATION.

Bill—Do you believe in separating the chaff from the wheat?

Jill—Sure thing! That's why I'm trying to separate Chollie from his money.—Yonkers Statesman.

CATCHING MEN.

She—I see the number of marriages in England and Wales during 1905 was 260,489, a slight increase over the record for 1904. That would look as if the men were getting more sensible."

He—Getting more careless, I should say.—Yonkers Statesman.

NO TURNING.

"And only a narrow grave at last!" sighed the dramatist.

For a little his lip quivered, and then there dawned a new hope.

"If the amateurs will only let my works alone, a narrow grave will answer," he exclaimed, intensely.—Puck.

A DEFINITION.

"Jinks is a true optimist. Ask him how things are going and he'll always say he can't complain.

"His mere limitations do not make him and optimist. The true optimist a man who can complain but won't."

STOPPED HIM.

"Do you think your father would like me as a son-in-law?"

"Yes; I believe he would."

"Oh, joy! I——"

"Papa and I never agree about anything, you know."—Cleveland Leader.

TEACHING INDEPENDENCE.

Church—I think our colleges should teach independence.

Gotham—Well, I know a girls' college where they teach dressmaking.

Church—But you never heard of a college for boys where they taught sock-mending, did you?—Yonkers Statesman.

SO IT DOES.

"You ought to take a trip through one o' them big shoe manufactories down East," remarked the old-fashioned cobbler.

"I've been through one," replied the other. "What d'ye think of all that modern machinery?"

"Well, it certainly does beat awl.

A woman's vanity begins with her hat and ends with her shoes.

A good fellow is a bad fellow to have in office.

FITS, St. Vitus' Dance: Nervous Diseases permanently cured by Dr. Kline's Great Nerve Restorer. $2 trial bottle and treatise free. Dr. H. R. Kline, Ld., 931 Arch St., Phila., Pa.

It is good economy to buy kitchen and laundry soap in large quantities and to let it dry before using it. The drying will be hastened if the papers are removed from the soap.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup for Children teething, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, allays pain, cures wind colic, 25c a bottle

STRINGENT RULES OF ROYALTY.

Curiosities of Regal Etiquette at Various Courts.

A curious curtailment of the royal prerogative is effected by an act of Parliamena passed in the reign of George IIII, which deals with Sabbath breaking. In this act it is distinctly stated that the monarch shall not have the power to pardon any persons convicted of a certain form of Sabbath breaking. Yet His Majesty can, of course, pardon ninety-nine out of every hundred prisoners in the land.

A number of years ago, says London Tit-Bits, it was perfectly permissible, and, in fact, a matter of strict etiquette, for a visitor who should obtain an audience with the Sultan of Turkey to bow and kiss the hand of that Oriental potentate. Anarchists, however, took advantage of the privilege, and on one memorable occasion a treacherous emissary drove a dagger into the heart of his sovereign, and from that time forth the privilege has been disallowed.

When the youthful King of Spain was 12 years of age he one day had the misfortune to slip and fall down a flight of the palace steps. The fall would very probably have been attended with fatal results had it not been for a servant who extended a kindly hand and saved his young master by breaking the fall. But, by a stringent rule of Spanish etiquette, no servant may dare touch the sacred person of the King, and for this very "grave" offence the servant was at once dismissed from his position.

By a remarkable law of royal etiquette, which has existed for a number of years past at the Court of Siam, no person is permitted to sleep in an apartment situated above that occupied by the King. A deliberate breach of this rule has on more than one occasion been punished by death. Recently, when the King of Siam paid a visit to Paris, a number of bedrooms were reserved, directly above that in which the King was to have slept, for the dusky followers of the royal visitor. The blunder caused great consternation among the fearful courtiers, until the matter was explained to the management and duly rectified.

It is a traditionary etiquette custom in the Marlborough family for each Duke to present a Blenheim spaniel to the Duchess when she enters Blenheim Palace for the first time as its mistress. The story from which this custom has its origin is that during the Battle of Blenheim a spaniel followed at the heels of the great Duke throughout the day, never leaving him until victory was assured.

When the Emeperor or Empress of China appears in public, no other person is allowed to occupy a higher place than they do. Therefore, on such occasions the shutters of all buildings are drawn and the upper parts of the houses past which the royal procession is expected to move are deserted, the inhabitants swarming to the ground floors in order to show due deference to their rulers.

The Bought Name.

"Pittsburg, Kan., I believe, is the only town in the United States which paid for its name," said Louis La Budde of Kansas City. "It was platted and named in 1870 by Col. Brown.

"The town site was named after Pitsburg, Pa., because of the large amount of coal just being developed in its vicinity. Whenever application was made to the postoffice department for the approval of the name Col. Brown struck a snag. There was a Pittsburg already in Kansas, and the best that could be done was to name the new town New Pittsburg. Thus it continued until 1880, when the Pittsburg Coal Company began to make efforts to have the name changed. A suggestion was made to the residents of the older Pittsburg to change the name of their town, but to no avail.

"It was ascertained that money might be a persuasive agent. A fund of $150 was raised by the New Pittsburg people and forwarded to the postmaster of older Pittsburg. That had its decided effect. The name of the town was changed to Tipton, and thus it has been known ever since. At the time the prefix 'New' was dropped from the newer town."—Milwaukee Sentinel.

The Dictator.

"Here's a trade paper that says men are more susceptible to the dictates of fashion than ever before."

"Feel that way yourself?"

"No more than usual. My wife considers herself fashionable and does the dictating all right."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

As crackling thorns under a pot, so is my rival's story when it is better than my own.

Smithdeals

In the oldest and best business college in Va., is now in full progress. Also one, the wealthiest, Leading and Conservative Business, Shorthand, Penmanship, Typewriting, Telegraphy, etc. Open entire year. Send for catalogue. Leading business college south of the Potomac river. Public Stenographers furnished. Address

C. M. SMITHDEAL, President, Richmond, Va.

STORING NICKEL HARVEST.

Mysterious Early Morning Proceeding in Downtown District.

Every morning between the hours of 2 and 4 o'clock, wagons guarded by armed men stop in front of the side entrance to the Park Row building or Ann street. A squad of men leap out, line up across the pavement, forming a lane between the rear of the wagon and the open door. If they speak at all, it is in low tones, and they glance suspiciously at any chance passerby who stops to gaze with curiosity. There are sundry scraping sounds on the beds of the wagons, and the sound of some heavy body being shifted. Perhaps the night is dark and foggy. The men about the wagon move silently as shadows. The whole proceeding appears dark and mysterious. The curious passerby thinks of a possible crime committed under shadow of night.

Two powerful men lift some dark object from the wagon, bear it across the pavement, and disappear into the darkness of the doorway. In a few moments they reappear, seize a second dark body, and quickly disappear within the door again. This is continued until the wagons are empty. Then the men drive away.

The man who scents mystery is doomed to disappointment, for the armed men are simply employes of the Interborough company; the dark bodies carried into the building are leather sacks filled with nickels from the pockets of the hundreds of thousands who daily patronize the elevated and subway trains. In the offices of the company these thousands of nickels are counted, the totals taken and checked up against the statements of the ticket agents.

Every night when the after-theatre rush is over and travel has become thinned the day's takings are gathered from all the stations along the line of the subway and collected at Fulton street; the same with the elevated roads, whose receipts are nightly gathered together at Cortlandt street. From these two stations the clinking shekels are hauled away by wagons, closely guarded until safely placed in the offices of the Interborough company in the Park Row building.—New York Press.

Errors in Printing.

A man who has done a great deal of work in correcting some large dictionaries, encyclopedias, and historical reference works, who has studied ten languages, and who is well posted on a number of foreign lands, examined over 15,000 pages of an encyclopedia recently published in this country. Much of the work he did without the publishers' knowledge. Though this encyclopedia was considered to have been edited very carefully, he discovered over 1000 mistakes in the first volume alone. In the following volumes he found many thousands.

DAZED WITH PAIN.

The Sufferings of a Citizen of Olympia, Wash.

L. S. Gorham, of 516 East 4th St., Olympia, Wash., says: "Six years ago I got wet and took cold, and was soon flat in bed, suffering tortures with my back. Every movement caused an agonizing pain, and the persistency of it exhausted me, so that for a time I was dazed and stupid. On the advice of a friend I began using Doan's Kidney Pills, and soon noticed a change for the better. The kidney secretions had been disordered and irregular, and contained a heavy sediment, but in a week's time the urine was clear and natural again and the passages regular. Gradually the aching and soreness left my back and then the lameness. I used six boxes to make sure of a cure, and the trouble has never returned."

Sold by all dealers. 50 cents a box. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

A Honeyed Rebuke.

Robbie was in the habit of running errands for an old gentleman next door who never paid him except in effusive thanks. He had just returned from the third errand one morning, and the old gentleman, patting him on the head, said:

"Robbie, I am very much obliged to you. You're a fine little fellow. Thank you, my boy, thank you."

Robbie looked up in his face wistfully, and apologetically replied:

"Mr. Jones, you don't know how I wish I could thank you for something."—Harper's Magazine.

The man who marries for gold soon conceives a contempt for its preciousness.

The man behind the plow makes an impression in the world.

King and Clippings.

When his majesty Peter I. of Servia was called to the throne he was anxious to know the world's opinion of him, and instructed an agency to collect all press cuttings, whereupon the Argus opened its one hundred eyes, and in a few weeks gathered together a collection which, as regards quantity, would make a prima donna jealous. By his majesty's command the collection was bound, and the manager of the Argus himself took fifteen volumes to Belgrade to present them to his royal client. There a terrible disappointment awaited him. The King of Servia, lacking in humor, gazed with horror and indignation at the collection, wherein the English, French, German and Swiss caricaturists had displayed their wit at his expense. While the Argus clamored for its money the King was roaring threats inside his palace, declaring that nothing would induce him to pay a cent for these volumes. When the agency threatened to exhibit these morocco bound books the King shouted: "I don't care, as long as they are not exhibited before me!" And now these thirty thousand cuttings will be sold by auction in Paris, and the sale will no doubt attract many amateurs.—The Bystander.

HEAD COVERED WITH HUMOR.

Bothered With Itching For a Long Time —Kentucky Lady Now Completely Well—Cured by Cuticura.

"After using Cuticura Soap, Ointment, and Pills, I am very glad to say I am entirely relieved of that itching humor of the head and scalp which I was bothered with quite a length of time. I did not use the Cuticura Remedies more than three times before I began to get better, and now I am completely well. I suffered with that humor on my head, and found no relief until I took the Cuticura Remedies. I think I used several cakes of Cuticura Soap, three boxes of Ointment, and two vials of Pills. I am doing all I can to publish the Cuticura Remedies, for they have done me good, and I know they will do others the same. Mrs. Mattie Jackson, Mortonsville, Ky., June 12, 1905."

Vanity has no greater monument than a weak young man in his first white vest.

Things we would like to be thankful for so seldom give us the opportunity.

The Tulane University OF LOUISIANA

NEW ORLEANS.

EDWIN B. CRAIGHEAD, L. L. D., Pres.

The Tulane University of Louisiana, founded in 1835 as the University of Louisiana, is the logical head of the entire system of public educational institutions of the State.

Full courses are offered in Languages, Sciences, Engineering, Law, Medicine. Splendid department for women in Newcomb College. Tulane makes leaders in all vocations. Its facilities for instruction in engineering are unsurpassed. Unexcelled opportunities for the study of sugar and industrial chemistry. Many Scholarships in academic department. Expenses low. Board and accommodations in dormitories at low rates. Next session begins October 1st. Send for catalogue. Address,

R. K. BRUFF, Secretary.

MONARCH STUMP PULLER Will Pull Stumps 7 Feet in Diameter. Guaranteed for 12 mts. Catalog & Disc. add'ss. Monarch Grubber Co. Lone Tree, Ia.

WINTER Wheat, 60 Bushels per acre. Catalogue and samples free. Salzer Seed Co., Box A. C., La Crosse, Wis.

Am. 32, 1906.

ITS MERIT IS PROVED

RECORD OF A GREAT MEDICINE

A Prominent Cincinnati Woman Tells How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Completely Cured Her.

The great good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is doing among the women of America is attracting the attention of many of our leading scientists, and thinking people generally.

The following letter is only one of many thousands which are on file in the Pinkham office, and go to prove beyond question that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound must be a remedy of great merit, otherwise it could not produce such marvelous results among sick and ailing women.

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"About nine months ago I was a great sufferer with female trouble, which caused me severe pain, extreme nervousness and frequent headaches, from which the doctor failed to relieve me. I tried Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and within a short time felt better, and after taking five bottles of it I was entirely cured. I therefore heartily recommend your Compound as a splendid female tonic. It makes the monthly periods regular and without pain; and what a blessing it is to find such a remedy after so many doctors fail to help you. I am pleased to recommend it to all suffering women."—Mrs. Sara Wilson, 31 East 3d Street, Cincinnati, Ohio.

If you have suppressed or painful periods, weakness of the stomach, indigestion, bloating, pelvic catarrh, nervous prostration, dizziness, faintness, "don't-care" and "want-to-be-left-alone" feeling, excitability, backache or the blues, these are sure indications of female weakness, or some derangement of the organs. In such cases there is one tried and true remedy—Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

YOU CANNOT CURE all inflamed, ulcerated and catarrhal conditions of the mucous membrane such as nasal catarrh, uterine catarrh caused by feminine ills, sore throat, sore mouth or inflamed eyes by simply dosing the stomach.

But you surely can cure these stubborn affections by local treatment with

Paxtine Toilet Antiseptic

which destroys the disease germs, checks discharges, stops pain, and heals the inflammation and soreness.

Paxtine represents the most successful local treatment for feminine ills ever produced. Thousands of women testify to this fact. 50 cents at druggists.

Send for Free Trial Box

THE R. PAXTON CO., Boston, Mass.

If afflicted with weak eyes, use Thompson's Eye Water

Wintersmith's CHILL TONIC

A BOTTLE WILL BREAK CHILL TONE YOUR CHILLS

CURES CHILLS AND ALL MALARIAL FEVERS.

Has been a standard household remedy for over 40 years. Pleasant to take; leaves no bad effects like quinine; harmless for children. Guaranteed by all druggists. Put up in 50c and $1 bottles. Sent express paid on receipt of price, if not on sale at the home drug store. Address

ARTHUR PETER & CO., General Agents, Louisville, Ky.

Birmingham Seminary,

BIRMINGHAM, ALA.

IDEAL SCHOOL FOR GIRLS AND YOUNG LADIES.

Limited number boarding pupils. Unexcelled city advantages. Refined, christian home life. High standards, superior faculty. For catalogue and further information address

MISS LOULIE COMPTON, 1722 Fifth Avenue, Birmingham, Ala.

CENTRAL COLLEGE

TUSCALOOSA, ALABAMA

Number of pupils limited. Healthful locality. President with family in same building. Personal attention. Expenses reasonable.

DEPARTMENTS

Music, Piano, J. P. Ludebuhl, of Berlin Conservatory, director.
Voice, Miss Deeba, College of Music, Cincinnati.
Stringed instruments, Miss Carter, Conservatory, Kansas City.
English, Miss Brown, Harvard, and Emerson School of Expression.
Mathematics, Miss Bullock, University of Alabama.
Latin, Mrs. Doncho, fifteen years a successful Teacher.
Modern Language, Miss Robinson, Leipsig, Germany.
Art, Miss Shelton, University of Va., and New York Art School.

Expenses, $218.00 pays for board, fuel, lights, laundry, physical culture, sight singing, books, physician's attendance, uniform, incidental fee, and tuition in Literary Department.

The above with piano or voice, with practice one hour per day, $260. With violin, mandolin or guitar, $260. With art $250.

Reputation for thoroughness and faithfulness. Religious influences positive.

Write for catalogue to Miss Amelia Dershide.

R. F. GILES, -:- -:- -:- -:- PRESIDENT.

You Look Prematurely Old

Because of those ugly, grizzly, gray hairs. Use "LA CREOLE" HAIR RESTORER. Price, $1.00, retail.

Stylish Clothing For Young Men.

Make up your mind to have the best suit possible this season, it must be smart, the very latest weave and color. You can have all these things if you get an I. & S. Bing Suit.

Latest Ideas in Furnishings

Our line for spring wear is now complete, the styles are decided and we are showing absolutely correct styles. New Dress Goods, New Waist Goods, New Hats, New Shirts, New Neckwear.

Spring Models in Footwear

See our new line of Star Brand Oxfords for men, women and children. Our stock is complete and the prices are right. Let us show you the goods.

J. C. JONES,

Clanton, - - Alabama.

Wouldn't You Like

BETTER WHISKIES FOR LESS MONEY?

than the kind youvl been getting? Then send your orders to us

THE BIG MAIL ORDER HOUSE

The house that sells nothing but the purest goods and guarantees every article it sells. If it's drugs or whiskies you want

WE CUT THE PRICE.

	Our Price.	Regular Price
Shehan's Canada Malt Whiskey	75	1 00
Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey	75	1 00
Weller's Pure Malt Whiskey	75	1 00
Mason's Old Kentucky Rye	50	75
Dan Patch Virginia Rye	60	1 00
Private Stock Virginia Rye	65	1 00
J. Martin's Five-year-old Virginia Rye	75	1 00
Asa Holt Rye Whiskey	75	1 00
Old Style Country Club Rye Whiskey	85	1 25
Richmond Club Virginia Rye	1 00	1 50
Stewart's Old Virginia Rye	1 25	2 00
Paul Jones Four Star Rye	84	1 50
Murray Hill Club	1 00	1 50
Hunter's Baltimore Rye	1 00	1 50
Golden Cream Rye	1 00	1 50
J. W. Harper Rye	1 00	1 50
Wilson Whiskey	85	1 50
J. M. Atherton bottled in bond	1 00	1 50
Mammoth Cave bottled in bond	1 25	1 75
Old Jordon bottled in bond	1 50	2 00
Green River, the whiskey without a headache	1 00	1 25
Old Shades Mountain Corn	50	75
Old Mountain Due Corn	75	1 00
Old Lincoln County	65	1 00
Old Holland Gin	50	75
Old Crown Gin	75	1 00
Old Peach or Apple Brandy	50	75
California Sherry or Port	50	75

Mellow Old Liquors and Wines by the Gallon in Jugs.

	Per Gallon		Per Gallon
Old Sand Mountain Corn	$2.00	Old Mason's Pure Rye	$2.00
Old Mountain Due	3.00	Private Stock Virginia Rye	2.50
Old Tennessee	2.00	J. Martin's 5-year-old Va. Rye	3.00
Old Holland Gin	2.00	Old Style Country Club	3.40
Old Crown Gin	3.00	Old Lincoln County	2.50
Old Peach or Apple Brandy	2.00	Richmond Club Virginia Rye	4.00
Old California Port or Sherry	1.50	R. A. Stuart's Old Va. Rye	5.00

COLLIER DRUG COMPANY,

The Big Cut Rate Drug Store

2012 FIRST AVENUE, BIRMINGHAM, ALABAMA.

Imported Jack "LIJE"

Fee $8.00, Insured

Stands for service at his owners', JOHN THAMES, 1 mile East of Rocky Mount Church, Beat 1.

ABOUT REGISTERING.

Extracts from the general election law of Alabama:

Section 1. The following persons shall be disqualified both from registering and voting: All idiots and insane persons; those who were by reason of conviction of crime disqualified from voting at the time of the ratification of the constitution on November 28, 1901; those who have been since November 28, 1901, or who shall be convicted of treason, murder, arson, embezzlement, malfeasance in office, larceny, receiving stolen property, obtaining money under false pretenses, perjury, subornation of perjury, robbery, assault with intent to rob, burglary, forgery, bribery, assault and battery on wife, bigamy, living in adultery, sodomy, incest, rape, miscegenation, crime against nature, or any crime punishable by imprisonment in penitentiary, or for anw infamous crimes or crime involving moral turpitude; also any person who has been since November 28, 1901, or who shall be convicted as a vagrant or tramp, or of selling or offering to sell his vote or the vote of another, or of making or offering to make false returns in any election by the people or in any primary election to procure the nomination or election of any person to any office, or of suborning any witness or registrar to secure the registration of any person as an elector, provided that any person who is disqualified from voting by reason of conviction of any of the offenses mentioned in this section, except treason, whether the conviction was had in a State or Federal court, has been pardoned, may be restored to his citizenship with right to vote by the Governor, approved by the Board of Pardons and specially expressed in the pardon.

Sec. 7 1-2. The following persons and no others, who, if their place of residence shall remain unchanged, will have, at the date of the next general election the qualifications as to residence prescribed by section 1 of this act, shall be qualified to register as electors, provided they shall not be disqualified under section 2 of this act:

1st. Those who can read and write any article of the constitution of the United States in the English language, and who are physically unable to work; and those who can read and write any article of the constitution of the United States in the English language, and who have worked or been regularly engaged in some lawful employment, business or occupation, trade or calling for the greater part of the twelve months next preceding the time they offer to register, and those who are unable to read and write, is such inability is due solely to physical disability; or,

2nd. The owner in good faith in his own right, or the husband of a woman who is the owner in good faith in her own right, of forty acres of land situate in this State, upon which they reside; or the owner in good faith in his own right, or the husband of any woman who is the owner in good faith in her own right, of real estate situate in this State, assessed for taxation at the value of three hundred dollars or more or the owner in good faith, in his own right, or the husband of a woman who is the owner in good faith, in her own right, of personal property in this State assessed for taxation for three hundred dollars or more; provided, that the taxes due upon such real or personal property for the year next preceding the year in which he offers to register shall have been paid, unless the assessment shall have been legally contested and and undetermined.

Sec. 15. Any elector who registered prior to January 1, 1903, who has changed the county of his residence shall be registered on application on production of his certificate, unless he has since become disqualified.

Sec. 16. When the certificate of any elector who was duly registered has been lost, mutilated or destroyed, on application stating that the certificate has been lost, mutilated or destroyed, and verified by affidavit, and it appears of record that such applicant has been registered, the Judge of Probate of the county of registration or the Secretary of State shall issue to the applicant a certificate that he was duly registered as an elector. Such certificate shall be issued free of charge to the elector. The Secretary of State shall, at the expense of the State, furnish the Judge of Probate blank certificates for use as provided in this section.

The certificate of the registrars or the Judge of Probate or of the Secretary of State shall be sufficient to establish the fact of such registration.

* * * * * * * * * *

Be sure and register when the registrars are in your beat, as the only excuse for not doing so is by reason of sickness of yourself or in your family, or by absence from the county. Everybody can register this summer who will be qualified by residence or age by the 8th day of November. Poll tax paying has nothing to do with registration: you can register now and pay your poll tax afterwards, but you cannot vote unless you are both registered and have paid your poll tax (if any is due). The period of residence necessary to register is two years in the State, one year in the county and three months in the beat. If you have moved from one beat to another in the county less than three months before election day, you can vote in your old beat, so you don't lose your vote by changing beats. Any one who desires to register on property qualification should take with him his last assessment sheet and tax collector's receipt to show to the registrars as proof that you are possessed of such property and pay taxes on it. You can register under ANY of the following heads:

1. If you own forty acres or more land in this State, and reside upon it.

2. If your wife owns forty acres or more land in this State, upon which you reside.

3. If you own real estate in this State that is assessed for taxation at $300 or more.

4. If your wife owns real estate in this State assessed for taxation at $300 or more.

5. If you own personal property in this State assessed for taxation for $300 or more.

6. If your wife owns personal property in this State assessed for taxation for $300 or more.

7. If you can read and write any section of the constitution of the United States.

Don't give up your life certificate that you got in 1902; you only have to show it to the registrars in case you have moved to this county from some other county.

THE UNION will furnish any one information on any special points that they may be in doubt upon, and stands ready to help any one to get all the rights he is entitled to under the laws of Alabama. If you think you are entitled to register and the registrars should refuse you, take a couple of good men with you so you can have witnesses as to such refusal and the reasons given by the registrars, and thereby be enabled to take your case upto high authority.

tf

REGISTRATION NOTICE.

In accordance with the provisions of section 6 of an act "To further regulate elections in the State of Alabama," aproved October 6, 1903, the Board of Registrars of the county of Chilton, Alabama, do hereby give notice that the following appointments are set for the purpose of registering those qualified under the law to register as electors:

Beat No. 4, at Clanton, on Aug. 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 1906, for the purpose of purging the registration list.

Beat No. 4, at Clanton, on Aug. 27, 28, 29, 30, 31 and Sept. 1, 1906, for the purpose of considering the case of each elector whose name it is proposed to strike from the registration list and determine same.

Beat No. 4, at Clanton, on Sept. 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 1906, for the purpose of registering voters.

Beat No. 4, at Clanton, on Friday and Saturday before the election in November, 1906.

R. H. GAINES,
B. L. JONES,
P. M. MOORE,
Board of Registrars Chilton County.

tf

WATSON'S MAGAZINE.

The leading exponent of Jeffersonian Democracy, edited by Hon. Thos. E. Watson, of Georgia, theFather of Rural Free Delivery; author of "The Story of France," "Life of Napoleon," "Life and Times of Thomas Jefferson," "Bethany" and other books. Mr. Watson was the People's party nominee for Vice-President in 1896, and for President in 1904. He is today heading a middle-class reform movement which is bound to sweep the country in a short time.

Watson's Magazine is not a Socialist publication. It does not stand for collective ownership of all the means of production. Mr. Watson believes in public or government ownership of railroads, telegraphs and telephones; in municipal ownership of street railways, gas electric lights, water works, etc.; and he believes in private ownership of all industries not natural monopolies.

The middle class—the home owners, farmers, small business men and property owners—won Jefferson's victory in 1800; won Jackson's victory over Nick Biddle's money power in 1832; won Lincoln's victory in 1860. But each time after the flush of victory had died away they became careless of their rights and went to sleep. They have slept a good portion of the time since 1865, but—

Watson's Magazine is waking them up. Another great victory is in the air. Keep in touch with the movement.

Fifteen cents a copy at news stands; $1.50 a year by mail. Sample copy for four 2-cent stamps and four names of reading friends. Address,

TOM WATSON'S MAGAZINE,
121 West Forty-second Street,
New York City.

SPECIAL CLUBBING RATE.

WATSON'S MAGAZINE AND THE UNION A YEAR FOR ONLY $1.75. WHY NOT SAVE THE 75 CENTS? LEAVE ORDERS AT THIS OFFICE.

tf

What the surgeos make on the Fourth of July the insurance companies lose.

Killed Sweetheart.

Lincoln, Neb.—A lynching is threatened at Grand Island, Neb., where John Hamblin shot and probably fatally wounded his sweetheart, Rachel Engellies, while she was on her way to a street carnival with a company of young people. Hamblin was infatuated with the girl, but his affections were unrequited.

Three things to love—purity, truthfulness and honor.

Thorsby, Alaba

Business Directory.

Commercial Club
OF THORSBY
DEFINITE and RELIABLE information furnished to parties who desire to locate in the South.

A. HORN
LICENSED PHARMACIST.
Drugs, Stationery and Toilet Articles.

City Bakery
BREAD, CAKES and PIES
of all kinds, fresh every day.
K. A. EKBLAD

A. M. Johnson
Groceries and Delicatessen

E. H. Adams
General Merchandise.

J. R. PARNELL
General Merchandise.

J. L. FOSS
Meat Market.

Thorsby Winery Co.
Lofthus & Brunberg, Props.

Thorsby Real E (INCORPORA
J. M. BARRETT,
G. H. GERALD,
G. C. MICHELSON

OLAF SC
Watchmaker &
FRANZEN,
Full line of watch
etc. Repair work g

A. Langville
Blacksmith
Horseshoe
—DEALER IN—
WAGONS AND B

P. C. SMI
Brown Leghorn F
Eggs.
BERKSHIRE

The Thorsb
G. C. Michelson
Good Beds and

J. J. Stan
General Merch

MRS. MARY R. R
General Merch

J. BIC
Charcoal O

Cor. 2nd Ave and 7th St.

THE BIG STORE,

—Is at The Head of The Procession.—

Dry Goods, Clothing, Hats, S
FURNITURE,
COFFINS AND BURIAL NECESS
W. I. MULLINS,
Clanton. Alab

Collins' Chapel, July 30, 1906.

Dear Editor:

We aim to have a great day at the Chapel Institute on August 18 in the interest of the F. E. & C. U. of A. All of the unions are asked to come and bring their baskets and help us to take care of the people. Yours,

tf J. D. COLLINS.

PROGRAM

For Meeting of Second District of Chilton County Association, to Be Held at Macedonia on the Fourth Sunday in August, 1906.

9 a. m. Devotional exercises—H. H. Armstrong.

9:30. "Explain the Present Practice of Pastors in the Service of Churches"—John Martin, Jackson Palmer.

10. "The Duty of Churches to the Pastor and Sunday School"—Rev. Beal, J. T. Williams.

11. "Can a Preacher Under Present Existing Circumstances Be a Good Pastor?"—W. H. Shaw ,G. W. Gothard.

1 p. m. "How Is the Best Way for a Christian to Show His Love?"—W. J. Fleming, J. S. Wright.

1:45. "What Relation Ought to Exist Between the Pastor and Church?"—James Franklin, Clint Veazey.

2:30. "When Is the Best Time to Call a Pastor, and Does Not the Annual Call of a Pastor Cause Continual Confusion?"—P. G. Maness, M. C. Crumpton.

3:15. "Give the Best Method to Get Church Members to Attend Church and Sunday School"—T. U. Crumpton.

The speeches will be interspersed with singing by the choir and such leaders as may be present. We solicit delegates from every church in the Second district; also invite correspondence from First district and other associations in reach. Signed by the pastor and committee.

J. H. THOMAS,
J. W. ARMSTRONG,
M. C. CRUMPTON.

tf

Raisin Crop S

It is estimated that t raisin crop of Sp 50 to 60 per cent on account of destructive weather.

We Buy More of Franc

Exports from Franc States for the year e reached the re $107,240,547, an $23,473 over

PROGRAM

Of District Meeting First B ton County Baptist A Be Held With New S Friday and Saturday, A 11, 1906.

10 a. m. Friday. Pray J. Wiley Foshee.

10:30 a. m. "What is a —Rev. A. L. Foshee and 11 a. m. Preaching Beal.

1:30 p. m. Duties of church; 2nd, Deacons to Individual members to J. H. Thomas and A. F.

9 a. m. Saturday. "W of the Causes of the Church to the Church est?"—R. A. Rasco and

10 a. m. "If Grace How Are the Wicked L O. Vickers and W. M.

11 a. m. Preaching liams.

1:30 p. m. "Can We All the Fifth Sundays School Association?"— and W. L. Honeycutt.

2 p. m. "Is the Sun Best Place to Keep the If Not, How Should Day?"—W. P. Lowery pion.

2:30 p. m. "Can a C son Do Their Duty Out —Rev. J. B. Changin Pate.

T

VOL. IV.

te for County C

Middleton
Fitts
Gentry
Goodgame
Hayes
Conway
Honeycutt
Pate
Waldrup

Beat 1

PLEASANT GROVE.

Union:

singing at this place Sunday success and our young organi proving very fast. Dear Editor ame appeared in your paper eeks ago with the syllable "Le I was writing in behalf of hilton County Singing Conven and being secretary of same I it proper and right to sign me as such, but by some mis the syllable "Lee" was affixed d of "Sec." We sympathize the person that will criticize h the mail, especially on a pos rd, and yet are so unintelligent leave the space for their name Very truly, editor was very busy the week anklin mentions, and the print le "Lee" out of "Sec." We no the error and would have spoken our next issue, only it did seem that everybody with ordinary on sense would see that the "Lee" was a mistake, especially attached to James Franklin's a man so well known in this of the county. We don't know rote the postal card, which we t below for the benefit of our rs. The card was written by a of some education, judging the handwriting, etc., but it does as if "the pocket gun" and t bottle" had stepped on that 's toes.—Editor Union.

JAMES FRANKLIN.

The Postal Card.

James Franklin Lee—Your name igned to a letter in The Union ve. Pocket guns and pocket bot l left at home, The Union read nt to see your letter next wee our name signed—James Frank e—so as to have a good laugh more. So good-bye, James lin Lee, let us hear from you tracted meeting closed Wednes ight with the acceptance of six dates of the Lord Jesus Christ nd Mrs. A. L. Foshee visited G. ulp's family Sunday. Grady Wil and sister, Miss Annie, were ne visitors to Jess Culp's fam ar Lomax Saturday night, and a nice time. Messrs. Jimmie rson and Walter Abbott, er, were visitors in this commu he past week. Miss Bodie Jones ilberry, was a visitor to the s Alpha and Annie Williams last Well, as this is my first time g off and come again.

PLEASANT GROVE.

NOBODY S DARLING.

BEAT ONE.

ditor:

e I come with some more good for our county readers. We all n educational rally on the 10th ad a grand old time, with school hes, and public speaking by Prof. Judge Reynolds and J. Osmond eton, our next representative lasioner Conway delivered a ld address to the children. We glad to have Bro. Moore in our and we are proud that we have nty superintendent who takes interest in Rocky Mount school and children, and comes and the day with us. In looking I saw Judge Reynolds with a on his face as long as from here ke's Peak and back, and we fear to know that the judge of our old county wasn't too proud to out and spend the day with his rnfield friends. When he step on the stage to speak he called friends, and I believe he meant what he said, because we have n our friendship for him and he ot forgotten it. And then there Osmond Middleton; he looked a lost at first, but that soon wore en he went over to the lemon and with a friend and took a or two. M. Middleton, the la re talking about you up here, but let that get in your way, for we you in the legislature to repre n. Osmond, we sure enjoyed address, though you said you ase the preacher without a ser

, Alaba
Directory.

Thorsby Real Est
(INCORPORATED)
J. M. BARRETT, P
G. H. GERALD, Sec
G. C. MICHELSON, T

OLAF SCH
Watchmaker & Jew
FRANZEN, - SUR
Full line of watches
etc. Repair work guar

A. Langville &
Blacksmith and
Horseshoer
—DEALER IN—
WAGONS AND BUG

P. C. SMIT
Brown Leghorn Fow
Eggs.
BERKSHIRE P

The Thorsby
G. C. Michelson,
Good Beds and M

J. J. Stan
General Mercha

MRS. MARY R. RAS
General Merchan

J. BICE
Charcoal Ove

G STORE,
of The Procession.—
thing, Hats, Sh
NITURE,
URIAL RECEIVED
MULLINS,
Alab

Raisin Crop Shor
It is estimated that th
raisin crop of Smyrna wil 50 to 60 per cent. of last account of destructive hail weather.

We Buy More of France T
Exports from France to t States for the year ending reached the record breaking $107,240,547, an increase
$23,473 over the previous y

PROGRAM
Of District Meeting First Ba ton County Baptist Ass
Be Held With New Sa
Friday and Saturday, Aug
11, 1906.

10 a. m. Friday. Prayer
J. Wiley Foshee.

10:30 a. m. "What Is a C
—Rev. A. L. Foshee and W

11 a. m. Preaching by
Beal.

1:30 p. m. Duties of church; 2nd, Deacons to Individual members to
J. H. Thomas and A. F. C

9 a. m. Saturday. "What of the Causes of the Ina
Church to the Church and est?"—R. A. Rasco and H.

10 a. m. "If Grace C
How Are the Wicked Lost
O. Vickers and W. M.

11 a. m. Preaching W.
liams.

1:30 p. m. "Can We as
All the Fifth Sundays in School Association?"—J.
and W. L. Honeycutt.

2 p. m. "Is the Sunday
Best Place to Keep the
If Not, How Should we
Day?"—W. P. Lowery and pton.

3:30 p. m. "Can a C
son Do Their Duty Out of
—Rev. J. E. Champion
Pate.

THE UNION.

EQUAL RIGHTS TO ALL, SPECIAL FAVORS TO NONE.

VOL. IV. CLANTON, ALA., AUGUST 16 1906. NO. 21

ote for County Officers by Beats Aug. 7, 1906.

	Beat 1	Beat 2, Box 1	Beat 2, Box 2	Beat 3, Box 1	Beat 3, Box 2	Beat 4	Beat 5	Beat 6	Beat 7, Box 1	Beat 7, Box 2	Beat 8, Box 1	Beat 8, Box 2	Beat 9	Beat 10	Beat 11	Total
. Middleton	54	13	78	38	36	141	7	49	47	17	15	30	110	78	30	743
Fitts	18	11	65	16	41	74	6	19	28	16	14	15	50	62	4	439
Gentry	11	4	6	2	2	9	00	11	00	00	00	00	51	5	17	118
Goodgame	25	00	10	00	1	48	1	8	2	00	2	00	12	14	14	137
Hayes	1	0	0	22	2	17	00	15	24	1	00	14	2	5	00	103
H. Conway	49	15	64	38	26	130	8	49	45	17	16	25	90	78	21	671
L. Honeycutt	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	4	..	..	4
Pate	13	9	26	11	5	46	00	25	5	00	00	4	53	17	27	241
Waldrup	41	6	54	29	41	92	7	22	46	17	16	26	59	56	7	519

PLEASANT GROVE.

Union:

sinking at this place Sunday success and our young organist proving very fast. Dear Editor same appeared in your paper a weeks ago with the syllable "Lee" I was writing in behalf of Chilton County Singing Conven and being secretary of same, I got it proper and right to sign name as such, but by some mis- the syllable "Lee" was affixed of "Sec." We sympathize the person that will criticize in the mail, especially on a pos- card, and yet are so unintelligent leave the space for their name Very truly, editor was very busy the week Franklin mentions, and the printer made "Lee" out of "Sec." We no- the error and would have spoken in our next issue, only it did seem that everybody with ordinary common sense would see that the "Lee" was a mistake, especially attached to James Franklin's a man so well known in this of the county. We don't know wrote the postal card, which we at below for the benefit of our The card was written by a of some education, judging the handwriting, etc., but it does as if "the pocket gun" and bottle" had stepped on that toes.—Editor Union.

JAMES FRANKLIN.

The Postal Card.

James Franklin Lee—Your name signed to a letter in The Union Pocket guns and pocket bot- left at home. The Union read- want to see your letter next week your name signed—James Frank- so as to have a good laugh more. So good-bye. James Franklin Lee, let us hear from you tracted meeting closed Wednes- night with the acceptance of six dates of the Lord Jesus Christ and Mrs. A. L. Foshee visited G. Culp's family Sunday. Grady Wil- and sister, Miss Annie, were some visitors to Jess Culp's fam- near Lomax Saturday night, and a nice time. Messrs. Jimmie son and Walter Abbott, of ter, were visitors in this comm- the past week. Miss Bodie Jones, Salisberry, was a visitor to the Alpha and Annie Williams last Well, as this is my first time, stay off and come again.

PLEASANT GROVE.

NOBODY'S DARLING.

BEAT ONE.

Editor:

I come with some more good for our county readers. We all an educational rally on the 10th had a grand old time, with school addresses, and public speaking by Prof. Judge Reynolds and J. Osmond Middleton, our next representative. Commissioner Conway delivered a good address to the children. We are glad to have Bro. Moore in our and we are proud that we have county superintendent who takes interest in Rocky Mount school and children, and comes and eats the day with us. In looking and I saw Judge Reynolds with a on his face as long as from here Pike's Peak and back, and we felt to know that the judge of our old county wasn't too proud to out and spend the day with his cornfield friends. When he stepped upon the stage to speak he called his friends, and I believe he meant what he said, because we have seen our friendship for him and he has not forgotten it. And then there J. Osmond Middleton; he looked a little at first, but that soon wore when he went over to the lemonade stand with a friend and took a drink or two. Mr. Middleton, the la- are talking about you up here, but let that get in your way, for we want you in the legislature to repre- us. Osmond, we sure enjoyed your address, though you said you were like the preacher without a ser- mon, and who said he did not know what he was going to say and didn't think God or the devil knew either—but you got there just the same. Mr. Cofer's string band can't be beat in all Stumps Hill, nor anywhere else. Hurrah for Green and his boys; come again when you will. Now a few words to our county voters. Stand by your primary nominee and let us all pull together in November. Now, boys, I lost two of my candidates, but I am going to help you elect yours. My judgment may have been bad in part. So let us stay together and work together and we'll come out on top all right. With good wishes to The Union and all true Republicans, I am the old

"GRIZZLY BEAR."

REHOBOTH.

Dear Editor:

Crops are looking fine, but cotton will be short to some extent on account of too much rain. Fodder pulling is on. There are some good protracted meetings being carried on around here. Rev. J. H. Thomas is helping at Pleasant Grove, in west Chilton; he filled his regular appointment here the second Sunday and Saturday before, and announced a meeting here to begin on the first Sunday night in September. We were glad to hear of the good results from the meeting at Mars Hill. We would like to be at Mars Hill on the 17th to the union rally, but can't get there, but we pray they may have great success in the work. That's right, "Old Man," come on with your good letters; we are truly glad to see so many good letters from the different communities. Those two young men from Pletcher who visited O. P. Scott a few days ago are waking the Active young men up. Miss Cora B. Scott, of Active, is visiting her brother, M. D. Scott, at Pletcher. They do say that J. D. C. Scott is lookingq very pleasan these days over that 10-pound boy that arrived on the 11th. By the way we all ought to look more pleasant; it would make the world so much sweeter. Get music in your soul, and you will all be better men and women.

MUSIC LOVER.

COOPER.

Mr. Editor:

I want to say a few words to the voters of Chilton. Boys, the primary is over; now let's see how many votes we can roll up for the nominees in November. Some men may say, "Well, my man didn't get nominated, and I don't like Mr. Fitts and don't think I'll vote for him." Now, don't let the Democrats slobber over you and try to influence you to vote for them. Let's ask ourselves the question, which has been the best policy for the poor men of this county, Democrat or Republican? I hear that some of the defeated candidates are dissatisfied and say that they won't support the nominee; now right here I want to say that this is just what the Democrats want; they think if they can get us people split up that they can come in between us and get the offices they are so hungry for. If any of the candidates do slob off, I wouldn't vote for them for anything. Now, gentlemen, let's stand shoulder to shoulder and roll up the biggest majority that has ever been in Chilton county. Hurrah for the nominees and The Union.

J. S. JONES, JR.

LITTLE ANGEL'S FLIGHT.

From earth to heaven, Saturday, 7:30 p. m., little Russie, 4 months old, the earthly jewel of Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Maddox, closed his precious eyes in sleep to wake no more here. But in heaven we know the darling awoke to never sleep again. He was the bright jewel of that home, and we say, mother, father, today he is one of heaven's sweet angels; weep not for your precious one, for at least you can go to him, where partings are no more. Sunday at 3 o'clock the funeral took place at Concord church by Rev. W. W. Robinson, who made a grand talk and proved to all present that the dead rise at the last day, and that heaven's angels were precious babes. And except all repent and become as one of these little ones we can in no wise enter into the kingdom. Our earnest prayers and deepest sympathy are for the bereaved family, but their little one is now in the arms of our blessed Saviour.

ONE WHO LOVED THE DARLING.

AN OBITUARY.

On the 11th inst. Miss Lizzie Lowery passed peacefully from this life. After many months of illness God called her home, and her bright spirit took its flight to the realms of eternal light. Miss Lizzie was a model young lady, a consecrated Christian, a power for her Master's cause. Her noble life and pure character were such that they could well be copied by any person. She was a faithful member of the Jemison Baptist church, where her labors will be missed in many places and ways. She was an ardent worker for the Sunbeam Band, Sunday school and church, one that sought opportunity to serve the Master. To know her was to admire and love her. The many good deeds that she did will remain a monument to her sweet, noble and pure life. She leaves to mourn her loss a loving father and mother, two brothers and three sisters, a number of relatives and a countless host of friends. All were her friends, she had no enemies. Her casket was fairly laden and the grave strewn with flowers by the Sunbeam Band, relatives and friends in tokens of their love. We offer the following lines to the bereaved ones:

Lizzie has gone from you away,
To that land where no night can fall;
She has entered the realms of eternal day,
Where there's no pain, sorrow, sickness or death to appall.
You loved her so dearly, we know;
Oh, imagine the heavenly curtain drawn aside,
There at the portals she stands and beckons to you now
To come and there wtih her abide.

You can no longer see her familiar form,
Her sweet smiles beam on you no more;
She's free from life's rugged storm
And her smiles shine from the other shore.
You miss her soft footsteps,
Her sweet voice you cannot hear,
But let heaven take her without regret;
Oh, the joy, she's at rest from all care.

The fingers that made music by their touch
Now play the strings of a golden lyre,
The voice of song you loved so much
Is now tuned and sings in the "holy choir."
A most beautiful testimony she did give;
She said, "The way is twice as bright as the sun."
... what an inspiration for others to live;
She had gained all worth while to be won.

Just as a full blown rose must spoil
The bud of beauty and loveliness to make the flower,
God takes his weary children of toil
And makes them jewels by his power.
Just as the limpid fountain flows forth
To wind its way over rugged pebbles laid,
Until at last it is crystallized in its course,
God a precious jewel of Lizzie has made.

A vacancy you have in your home,
A place no one can fill;
Her happy smiles from the other side bid you welcome;
You can only with patience wait until
You shall be called, too, away
To become one of the redeemed fold;
When you have reached the shining portals on that day
Lizzie will meet and greet you at the threshold.

A FRIEND.

NOTICE TO LAND-OWNERS.

I wish to say that I am preparing maps or plats of each land-owner's property, giving a written description of the land, as it should be described in assessments. I am preparing these plats for the purpose of getting all errors corrected, and at the same time furnish every party an easy and correct way to keep their property correct and avoid future mistakes and annoyance, as well as (sometimes) considerable expense. These plats are made of excellent bond paper and will last a lifetime, and only cost 25 cents each, except where plats are very large, when they will cost 50 cents. Every one that has seen the plats I am making pronounce them splendid and worth many times their cost and well calculated to save their cost many times over. Any one wishing a plat can obtain it by coming to my office in Clanton with their deeds, so as to insure an accurate description.

L. B. POUNDS,
tf Tax Assessor.

SCHOOL NOTICE.

Patrons of School District No. 40 are hereby called to meet at the school house on Saturday at 7:30 p. m., August 18, to elect a teacher.

W. S. WILLIS,
Chairman District Board.

PEARLS OF THOUGHT.

Don't save your money and starve your mind.

Vigorous thought must come from a fresh brain.

"Keeping alive that spirit of youth," Stevenson used to say, was "the perennial spring of all the mental faculties."

A man may build a palace, but he can never make of it a home. The spirituality and love of a woman alone can accomplish this.

Tens of thousands of people fail because they love their ease too much. They are not willing to put themselves out, to sacrifice comfort.

If we are contented to unfold the life within, according to the pattern given us, we shall reach the highest end of which we are capable.

By proper training, the depressing emotions can be practically eliminated from life, and the good emotions rendered permanently dominant.

Every time you crowd into the memory what you do not expect it to retain, you weaken its powers, and you lose your authority to command its services.

No life amounts to much until it has a program—something definite, something particular. Nothing else can take the place of it. Education can not, talent can not, genius can not, hard work can not. Until there is a definite aim, the energies will run to waste, the ability be squandered. The faculties deteriorate when working without a definite aim.

Business is not only a great civilizer of nations and of peoples, but also the greatest educator and developer of character in the world, for it is a perpetual school, a great life university where we do not go to recite and hear lectures for three or four hours a day for a few years, but where we are constantly studying and practising, almost from the cradle to the grave.—Success Magazine.

SPORTING BREVITIES.

The Corinthian football team sailed from England for this country.

Record breaking crowds of turf enthusiasts are gathered in Saratoga for the races.

Jarvis, of England, was victorious in the great French swimming race for amateurs.

Frank L. Kramer won the open half-mile cycle race at the Vailsburg (N. J.) track.

Although twenty-eight years old, Jay Bird is the sire of forty-two foals dropped this year.

Jack Palmer, the champion English heavyweight, has challenged Philadelphia Jack O'Brien.

James B. Brady purchased for $25,000 the two-year-old colt Fountainblue, son of Oddfellow.

The Seventy-fourth Regiment, of Buffalo, won the State shoot for National Guardsmen at Creedmoor.

W. A. Larned retained the Longwood lawn tennis cup by defeating Karl H. Behr, of Yale, three sets to one.

The kings of England and Spain saw Emperor William's yacht, the Meteor, beaten in opening of the Cowes regatta.

Dr. Thomas and Roy Knabenshue sailed 325 miles over four States in a balloon, landing on the eastern coast of Massachusetts after fifteen hours.

Guy Bingen, by trotting the first heat of the three-year-old sweepstakes in 2.12½ at Cleveland, Ohio, promises to be one of the sensations of the light harness world.

NOTICE.

Road overseers in Beat 10 must attend to their duty or take the consequences.

J. W. KICKER,
J. M. GRANT,
T. N. HOWARD,
tf Apportioners.

REGISTRATION NOTICE.

In accordance with the provisions of section 6 of an act "To further regulate elections in the State of Alabama," aproved October 6, 1903, the Board of Registrars of the county of Chilton, Alabama, do hereby give notice that the following appointments are set for the purpose of registering those qualified under the law to register as electors:

Beat No. 4, at Clanton, on Aug. 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 1906, for the purpose of purging the registration list.

Beat No. 4, at Clanton, on Aug. 27, 28, 29, 30, 31 and Sept. 1, 1906, for the purpose of considering the case of each elector whose name it is proposed to strike from the registration list and determine same.

Beat No. 4, at Clanton, on Sept. 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 1906, for the purpose of registering voters.

Beat No. 4, at Clanton, on Friday and Saturday before the election in November, 1906.

R. H. GAINES,
B. L. JONES,
P. M. MOORE,
Board of Registrars Chilton County.
tf

WATSON'S MAGAZINE.

The leading exponent of Jeffersonian Democracy, edited by Hon. Thos. E. Watson, of Georgia, theFather of Rural Free Delivery; author of "The Story of France," "Life of Napoleon," "Life and Times of Thomas Jefferson," "Bethany" and other books. Mr. Watson was the People's party nominee for Vice-President in 1896, and for President in 1904. He is today heading a middle-class reform movement which is bound to sweep the country in a short time.

Watson's Magazine is not a Socialist publication. It does not stand for collective ownership of all the means of production. Mr. Watson believes in public or government ownership of railroads, telegraphs and telephones; in municipal ownership of street railways, gas electric lights, water works, etc.; and he believes in private ownership of all industries not natural monopolies.

The middle class—the home owners, farmers, small business men and property owners—won Jefferson's victory in 1800; won Jackson's victory over Nick Biddle's money power in 1832; won Lincoln's victory in 1860. But each time after the flush of victory had died away they became careless of their rights and went to sleep. They have slept a good portion of the time since 1865, but—

Watson's Magazine is waking them up. Another great victory is in the air. Keep in touch with the movement.

Fifteen cents a copy at news stands; $1.50 a year by mail. Sample copy for four 2-cent stamps and four names of reading friends. Address,

TOM WATSON'S MAGAZINE,
121 West Forty-second Street,
New York City.

SPECIAL CLUBBING RATE.

WATSON'S MAGAZINE AND THE UNION A YEAR FOR ONLY $1.75. WHY NOT SAVE THE 75 CENTS? LEAVE ORDERS AT THIS OFFICE.
tf

COMMISSIONER'S SALE.

Under and by virtue of an order and decree rendered by the honorable Probate Court of Chilton county, on the 14th day of August, 1906, whereby the undersigned was appointed commissioner to sell the hereinafter described real estate, for the purpose of an equitable division thereof; now, therefore, in pursuance of and in accordance with said order and decree, I will proceed to sell to the highest bidder, for cash, in front of the court house door in Clanton, Alabama, on

MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 3d, 1906,

the following described real estate, to-wit: Beginning at the northwest corner of the Episcopal church lot, on the south side of Second avenue, and running thence west along said Second avenue 120 feet to the northeast corner of the Chilton Warehouse and Manufacturing Company's lot; thence south along the east line of said lot 210 feet to the Chilton Warehouse and Manufacturing Company's property; thence east along the north line of said property 120 feet; thence north 210 feet to point of beginning, situated west of the Louisville and Nashville railroad, in the town of Clanton, Chilton county, Alabama.

N. A. KICKER,
8-16-06 Commissioner.

Professional Cards.

William M. Adams,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW
OFFICE; Room 1, Court House.
"Practices in all Courts
Long time loans negotiated on improved Farm Lands.
CLANTON, - - - ALA.

J. EARLE GOWAN,
DENTIST.
Office in Kicker Building
CLANTON, ALABAMA.

A. C. Smith,
Attorney-at-Law
Practice in All Courts
Office 6th St. opp. Court House
CLANTON, :-: ALABAMA.

N. S. JOHNSON, M. D.
PHYSICIAN & SURGEON
Office at Residence
CLANTON, ALABAMA.

L. V. STABLER, M. D
Physician & Surgeon
Office Over Horn's Drug Store
Thorsby, Alabama

J. Osmond Middleton,
Attorney-at-Law
Practice in all Courts
Office 6th St. Court House
CLANTON, -:- ALABAMA

DR. E. G. HYMAN
DENTIST
Office in Tyson Mullins' Building
CLANTON

H. C. Junkerman
DENTIST
OFFICE: Franzen Building
Thorsby, Alabama.

G. H. GERALD,
NOTARY PUBLIC
Office at Thorsby Inn.
Deeds, Mortgages, Affidavits and other papers carefully made out.

I. S. Gerald, Notary Public
AT THORSBY SAVINGS BANK.

FREE
to Readers of
THE UNION

To everyone who sends us $1.00 for a year's subscription to THE UNION, new subscriber or renewal, we will give as a premium absolutely FREE,

A Year's Subscription
TO
The Southern Ruralist

We have examined the Southern Ruralist and consider it to be the best and most practical farm paper published in the South, and it just suits this locality. Drop by The Union Office when you are in town and see a copy of the Ruralist. It will mean dollars in your pocket to read this paper with The Union for a year.
tf.

60 YEARS' EXPERIENCE
PATENTS
TRADE MARKS
DESIGNS
COPYRIGHTS &c.
Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. HANDBOOK on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents. Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the Scientific American.
A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.
MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York
Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

LAND FOR SALE.
Eighty acres land in Beat 10, close to Cooper's. For sale cheap. Call on or address L. H. GENTRY,
Mt. Creek, Ala.
tf R. F. D. No. 2.

Ben M. Jacobs & Bros.,

Furniture and Rugs.

—SOLE AGENTS—

Globe-Wernicke Elastic Book Cases and Filing Cabinets.

Catalogue for the asking.

BIRMINGHAM, ALA.

Farmers' Mutual Insurance Association

OF ALABAMA.

CHARTERED BY SPECIAL ACT OF THE LEGISLATURE

By the People and for the People.

Chilton County Branch

Organized February 3, 1900.

W. M. WILSON, President. WALLACE C. EDLER, Sec'y.-Treas.

INSURES Farmers' dwellings, outbuildings and contents and live stock against loss by fire, wind and lightning. The cheapest, safest and most sensible method of insurance known to man

Average Yearly Cost for Five and a half Years 43-100 of 1 per cent.

Full particulars furnished upon application to

WALLACE C. EDLER, Clanton, Ala.

A GREAT COMBINATION OFFER

We Will Furnish the "TWICE-A-WEEK" Issue of the

St. Louis Globe-Democrat

—With—

THE UNION

—For—

$1.50 Both Papers, one year, only $1.50.

The St. Louis Globe-Democrat should not be classed with the many cheap weekly papers. It is a high-grade Semi-Weekly, eight or more pages, every Tuesday and Friday. It is beyond all comparison the biggest, best and cheapest National News and Home Journal published in the United States. It is strictly Republican in Politics but is above all

A Great Modern Newspaper.

It is not made up indiscriminately from the Daily issue. It is carefully edited with special reference to the needs of the Farmer, the Merchant and the professional man who desires to keep thoroughly posted without sparing the time to read a large Daily Paper. It also contains a great variety of well selected reading matter, making it invaluable to every member of the family.

This Liberal Clubbing Offer

is open to all old or new subscribers, but may be withdrawn at any time, and we must receive the cash with order. Address

THE UNION, Clanton, Ala.

PAUL CALAME,

205 21st Street

Birmingham, Ala.

Practical Watchmaker and Optician

Eyes Correctly Fitted

Mail orders promptly filled

SUBSCRIBE FOR THIS PAPER

DO YOU WANT

Letterheads, Noteheads, Billheads, Envelopes,

OR ANYTHING ELSE PRINTED?

Then Call at

THE UNION OFFICE

and See Fine Work at Low Prices.

500 Noteheads 500 Envelopes All For $2.00

Good Work on Good Material, done on Good Machines. Don't forget! THE UNION, Clanton, Alabama.

Pure Water Prevents Fevers.

DRILLED WELLS FURNISH PURE WATER

We guarantee water or no charge made. Estimates given. Address

L. E. SARBER CO.

Thorsby, Alabama.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE.

HON. JOHN MORLEY.

The Habits of the Okapi.

Captain Gosling writes from Angu, River Welle: "On the chance of their proving of interest, I send herewith some notes on the okapi that exists in the forest contained by the rivers Welle, Libuati and Rubi.

"The okapi here is generally found singly or in pairs, but Mobatti hunters state that sometimes three may be found together. An essential to the life of the okapi is a small stream of water with some muddy and swampy ground on either side. In this grows a certain large leaf that on its single stalk attains a height of ten feet. It is the young leaf of this plant that is the favorite food of the okapi, and I venture to say that where the plant is not to be found the animal will not exist. During the night he will wander along in the mud and water in search of it. Here he may be found feeding as late as eight o'clock in the morning, after which he retires to the seclusion of the forest, where he remains till nearly dusk. On the three occasions that I was at close quarters with the beast, he was perfectly concealed in this swamp leaf.

"Near the River Welle I found his spoor on ground frequented by buffalo and waterbuck, but this is unusual and his companions in the forest are the elephant, the greater bushbuck, the yellow backed and small red dujkers. The okapi is very quick of hearing and in that respect is classed by the Mobatti with the bushbuck (local name 'bungana'). In the forest here I consider this latter beast to be more difficult to obtain than the former. On the hunting ground of the first village that I visited I estimated the number of okapi as five or six, at the second and third nil, and twenty miles south in the forest, on very likely ground, where my guides said they were formerly numerous, there was one only, probably owing to rubber collectors who had been there.

"The okapi is killed occasionally by the natives, speared, shot or trapped by the common African method. At the first village I visited three had been speared at various times, at the second and third one each, and in the forest referred to above my guide had shot one. Unfortunately, time did not permit me to continue my search or return to the ground first visited by me."—London Times.

"Grass Widow" Not Slang.

"She is a grass widow," said the professor, nodding in the direction of a lady with yellow hair.

"A 'grass' widow? Oh, professor, I didn't think you would use slang."

"'Grass' widow is not slang," said the professor stoutly. "It is, on the contrary, a very ancient and correct expression. It comes from the French 'grace.' It was originally written 'grace widow.' A widow may call herself that with propriety, and with propriety any one may call her that."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

DISAPPEARING CHAIR

Can Be Readily Folded and Placed in the Floor.

In the illustration below is a recent invention which can be aptly called a "disappearing" theatre chair. It was designed for use in halls and rooms that are used for theatre or concert purposes, it being but the work of a moment to fold and lower it into the floor. It will thus not occupy or obstruct any space when not in use. It is especially adaptable to be placed in aisles and such places where it is desired to temporarily have a seat in case the hall is crowded with spectators. In a theatre equipped with such chairs, it would be easy to create passageways for persons to walk when taking and leaving their seats. In case of fire, an easy exit could be made. In the picture a portion of the floor is shown in which there is a recess or counter-sunk portion. This recess corresponds in depth and size to the seat and back of the chair. The back folds upon the seat, and when both are lowered into the recess a smooth surface is established which can readily be walked over by persons without endangering their lives. Supporting the seat of the chair is a rod which can be released and lowered into an opening in the centre of the recess.

Made to Disappear.

THE OKAPI.

—From Forest and Stream.

It Was His Busy Day.

"Ethel," he whispered, "will you marry me?"

"I don't know, Charles," she replied, coyly.

"Well, when you find out," he said, rising, "send me word, will you? I shall be at Mabel Hicks' until 10 o'clock. If I don't hear from you by 10 I'm going to ask her."—Tit-Bits.

A London authority states that a deep yellow, with a shot of flame red in its lights and shades, is the latest fashionable color. It is known as "Vesuvius."

CHILDREN'S DEPARTMENT.

THE HUMMING BIRD.

What a "boom! boom!"
Sounds among the honeysuckles!
Saying "Room! room!—
Hold your breath and mind your knuckles!"
And a fairy birdling bright
Flits like a living dart of light,
With his tiny whirlwind wings
Flies and rests and sings!
All his soul one flash, one quiver,
Down each cup
He thrusts his long beak with a shiver,
Drinks the sweetness up;
Takes the best of earth and goes—
Daring sprite!—
Back to his heaven no mortal knows,
A heaven as sweet as the heart of a rose
Shut at night!
—Harriet Monroe, in St. Nicholas.

IT IS WELL TO THINK.

Mother was working in the flower garden. "Harold," she said, "will you bring mother the big flower-pot that is in the shed?"

Harold ran to the shed, but soon came back without the flower-pot. "It is so big, I was afraid I would break it, mother," he said.

"I can get it," cried Jennie, who was a whole year younger. And she ran out and soon came back, wheeling the big flower-pot in Harold's express wagon.

"I could have done that if I had thought of that way," said Harold.

"Any one could do it after the way had been thought of," said mother, "but Jennie thought of the way."—Little Workers.

THE BANDOLIRE.

The bandolire is a quaint toy, made of two discs joined at the centre, and having a string wound between them. To play with it you hold the discs in the left hand, and wind the string between them with the right. Then, holding the end of the string, you let the toy fall, and it will revolve as the string unwinds. Just before the end of the string is reached you give the toy a quick upward jerk, when the discs will begin revolving in an opposite direction.

The velocity acquired in the revolution will cause the toy to wind itself up the string in an opposite way, and when again allowed to fall it will wind itself again, and keep on thus for an indefinite time, first unwinding down the string and then winding itself up.

The Bandolire.

It is a very pretty toy, and is easily made out of almost any desired material. It has quite a history, in spite of its simplicity, having been invented, a long time ago, to amuse an East Indian princess. In 1790 it was brought to England from Bengal, and became the fashionable toy under the name of "Quiz."

From England it was taken to Normandy, where it was called "Joujou," and it was not long until it became the rage in Paris. Indeed, it was made of every kind of material, from sugar to gold, and it said that the Duke of Orleans made a present of a bandolire, set with diamonds, that was valued at 2400 lires.

To-day, in France, the toy is called "L'Emigrant," because at the time of the French Revolution, when so many people were forced to emigrate, the toy was much in favor with the nobility.

Any boy can make a bandolire for himself, and he will be sure to have lots of fun with it.—Philadelphia Record.

TREAT FOR THE ORPHANS.

No inconsiderable number of men in New York City live by buying up tickets of admission to places of amusement and reselling them, at advanced prices, on the sidewalk on the evening of the performance. There is much complaint against these men, the newspapers berate them periodically, and now and then a theatrical manager starts a crusade against them. While calm consideration would scarcely show their calling to be worse than many other businesses coming within the limits called "legitimate," many of these men are not overprepossessing in appearance; and altogether the general attitude toward the ticket speculators is one of execration.

Recently the circus exhibiting in Madison Square Garden gave the regular "Orphans' Day," the annual treat provided for the joy of the homeless children of the city.

No tickets were sold, and, indeed, no adults were allowed [illegible] except teachers and other guardians of the little folk. One wondered beforehand, why the ticket speculators were in their usual place on the sidewalk.

A big policeman near the entrance observing these men in conversation kept an eye on them. Presently indignation burst bounds.

"Well," he exclaimed, "that's the dirty a trick as I've seen!"

The ticket speculators were "scalpering" the peanut market.

The Italian venders of the sticks the tickets were bought, were ordered to exchange nuts into bags [illegible] policemen looking [illegible].

The ticket speculators [illegible] up on each side of the entrance presently wagons and [illegible] cles came rumbling up. "Children's Aid." "Home For Crippled Children."

As the little ones were [illegible] and marched or hobbled or [illegible] ried across the sidewalk to the [illegible] trance, each one received a bag of peanuts, free.

"Well, now, I'll— Say [illegible] back!" The big policeman [illegible] his hand to a speculator.

"What!" cried the [illegible] "Did you think we wanted to make a profit to those little [illegible] ain't got anything at all!"—Companion.

A LAMB THAT LOVED OLIVE.

A few years ago my little [illegible] old was presented with a young [illegible] which was brought up by hand [illegible] which soon became a great pet. It quickly grew to love Olive as a little brother, and was often out of the pen where the sheep were kept to become an interested participant in all their romping games.

As the warm days of May came it became necessary to drive the sheep to a distant pasture. Olive pleaded so earnestly for the lamb that she was finally allowed to keep it at home. About the same time and her brother began to attend district school. The lamb missed both his four-legged and two-legged friends, immediately became very lonesome and inclined to stray from home, so that it was thought best to tie him to an apple-tree not far distant. But poor Dickany resented this indignity and bleated incessantly.

One day he broke his rope, and found him in the back room of the house with his end and peacefully standing by Olive's old familiar dress, which was low down upon a nail.

This gave us an idea: and so Dickany went back to the apple-tree, the dress went too, and was hung on a branch where he could reach it.

After this the lamb stopped bleating and led a very quiet and uneventful life, wearing his rope with the dress in school hours, and bounding and jumping with joy when the children returned at night.—Christian Endeavor World.

THE APPETITE OF A BIRD.

When an old-fashioned bird says Answers, urges her [illegible] eat, after the conventional manner showing hospitality, and remarks: "Why, you haven't the appetite of a bird!" she really speaks the truth, though she does not intend to.

The average man [illegible] bird's appetite, would [illegible] thirty to thirty-one pounds of food a day, which would be a tax on the larder of his hostess.

Recent experiments have shown that the average bird must eat about one-fifth of its own weight daily with ease, if he can get the right food; and in a wild state the average bird has to hunt for his daily food. In order, he is eating a large part of the time during the day, and must work to get his full rations.

The smaller the bird, the more voracious seems to be its appetite and its power of absorption. A famous scientist recently kept a canary under observation for a month. The little creature weighed only sixteen grams, but in the course of the month it managed to eat 512 grams' worth of food! that is, about thirty-two times its own weight. The bird must therefore have eaten its own weight in food every day.

An ordinary man with a good appetite would consume 150 pounds of food a day. But the canary is an extreme case. The ordinary bird in good health, will be satisfied with one-fifth of its weight a day in the way of food.

A Terse Sermon.

Perhaps the tersest sermon ever delivered was that by Dean [illegible] who taking as his text, "He that giveth to the poor lendeth to the Lord," began and ended thus: "Brethren, do you like the security, down with your dust."

The temperance committee of the Southern M. E. Conference [illegible] in favor of a rule which would prohibit the use of tobacco by [illegible] pastors.

In Atchison there is a rule [illegible] the attention of the sheriff to the machine when you lose five [illegible] succession.

EPARTMENT.

o adults were allowed inside,
ept teachers and other guardia
he little folk. One wondered, th ere, why the ticket speculators w n their usual place on the sidew
A big policeman near the door, erving these men in confer ept an eye on them. Presently ndignation burst bounds
Well," he exclaimed, "that's irty a trick as I've seen"
The ticket speculators were ering the peanut market
The Italian venders, whose oke the ticket speculators ought, were ordered to put the into hats the disgusted
ers looking helplessly on.
The ticket speculators now on each side of the entrance, rowded wagons and various came tumbling up, la
Children's Aid," "Orphans'
Home for Crippled Children."
As the little ones were put in ed marched or hobbled or were ed across the sidewalk to the each one received a big peanuts, free.
Well, now, I'll— Say, I take back." The big policeman off s hand to a speculator.
"What!" cried the specula
Did you think we wanted to se profit to those little fellers not get anything at all?"—Yo Companion.

A LAMB THAT LOVED OLIV

A few years ago my little si ld was presented with a young l which was brought up by hand, hich soon became a great pet.
uickly grew to love Olive and ttle brother, and was often le f the pen where the sheep ept to become an interested pa ant in all their romping games.
As the warm days of May cam became necessary to drive eep to a distant pasture, but headed so earnestly for her pet he was finally allowed to keep home. About the same time nd her brother began to attend istrict school. The lamb, m oth his four-legged and two-le iends, immediately became me-some and inclined to stray ome, so that it was thought b e him to an apple-tree not fa
ant. But poor Dickany rebelle his indignity and bleated incess
One day he broke his rope, a ound him in the back room ch is end and peacefully standing live's old familiar dress, which ew down upon a nail.
This gave us an idea; and,
Dickany went back to the apple
he dress went too, and was h branch where he could reach
After this the lamb stopped ng and led a very quiet and h ife, wearing his rope with pat n school hours, and bounding umping with joy when the chil eturned at night.—Christian eavor World.

THE APPETITE OF A BIRD

When an old-fashioned h ays Answers, urges her guest at, after the conventional ma howing hospitality, and rem
Why, you haven't the appetite nd" she really speaks the t ough she does not intend to.
The modern man, if he h ould devour pounds of f
, who would be a tax on the
of his hostess.
experiments have bird manages to
of his own w
with ease, if he can get so ed and in a wild state, though ard has to hunt for his daily
, he is eating a large part o me during the day, and ma get his full rations.
The smaller the bird, the mor
rious seems to be its appetite s power of absorption. A Ge ientist recently kept a canary bservation for a month. The reature weighed only sixteen ut in the course of the mo anaged to eat 512 grams' w od, that is, about thirty-two t s own weight. The bird herefore have eaten its own w food every day.
An ordinary man with a ca
ppetite would consume 150 p f food a day. But the canary xtreme case. The ordinary h ood health, will be satisfied ne-fifth of its weight a day i food.

A Terse Sermon.

Perhaps the tersest sermon
elivered was that by Dean ho taking as his text, "He tha h to the poor lendeth to the L an and ended thus: "Brethr u like the security, down w

M. E. Conference favor of a rule which would the use of tobacco by ers.

tween there is a rule of the sheriff to achine when you lose five ression.

EPISODE.

h Love's flag half-mast high,
e, but Love passed by.
Hope his colors bore;
ed wide the door,
d a little space,
he turned away his face.
them shall alike repent to entered, that he went.

Though noon glory be withdrawn,
Grateful was the radiant dawn.
Master of the subtlest art,
Hope has gladdened soul and heart;
Folly more than Truth was wise,
While she dwelt in Paradise.
Better far my flag half-mast,
Than that Love had never passed.
—F. Robbins, in Lippincott's.

THE LOSS OF HIS MOTHER-IN-LAW.

Bill's Long Search Rewarded. By John Fleming Wilson.

figure of haggard and bewilinebriation came in through swinging doors of the Seaman's Saloon, and came to an un-y halt against the bar. "I didn't a small tin bucket in here, did the new-comer asked of the bar-
?"
The official cast a bleared eye the questioner, and shook his
"No, you ain't left no such around here, Bill. Maybe it was the Bowhead?"
It just came from there," said the , thickly. "It ain't there. I do der now what I did with them remains." He threw a flutter-glance at the bartender, and then deep into a pocket. "Lemme some gin," he continued, more ly.
The barkeeper set the bottle out,
watched his customer imbibe.
he put the bottle away again, he
"Maybe you'll find 'em at
's. Look there?"
That's so. I may have left them ings right 'here.'" He smiled ely, and wavered on his legs. "By I'll jest bet that's where they I'll go see." And with labored
Bill departed.
Poor chap!" said Twizzle. "That rtune did for Bill."
What misfortune?" I asked.
Who's Bill?"
Bill was terribly unlucky," was response. "Bill lost his mother-law."
don't see how that should af-him," I retorted.
Twizzle drained his beer glass, and ok his head with an understand-look at the bartender. The lat-also shook his head, and both med stricken with a sad and poigt memory. "It's a terrible mis-tune," murmured the barkeeper.
To think," continued Twizzle, "of at Bill has suffered every night en he goes home and his wife s 'Bill, where's mother?' and Bill
't know. Awful!"
"Orrible!" assented the other.
Lost his mother-in-law in a tin ket," Twizzle went on, raising his ice.
And set it down without ever ow r where he left it!" exclaimed bartender.
Awful!" boomed Twizzle.
"Orrible!" the bartender respond-
.
ocked Twizzle strongly by the
. "Look here," I protested, m all in the dark. Tell me how ll lost his mother-in-law. What's is nonsense about a tin pail?"
It was an awful misfortune," rizzle answered, solemly. "It did up. He ain't never held his head since."
Since what?" I cried, in vexation.
Since he lost his mother-in-law
a tin bucket," roared Twizzly, rously. "What do you suppose I ean?"
Easy now, Sam," urged the bareeper. "The gent don't know the ticulars."
I don't," said I, "and I'm anx-
s to learn them."
Why didn't you say so before?"
Twizzle demanded, suspiciously, "and me go a-doubting of my word?"
His protestations of credulity neary anticipated another flurry on Twizzle's part, but the bartender ame to my aid, and between us we othed 'im into a narrative mood.
Bill was my mate on the Oom ul," he explained, "and he got arried to a little woman living on Russian Hill here in San Francisco.
Bill was terrible pleased. 'Never ew such a woman, Cap'n,' says he.
nd she and her mother run that ouse shipshape a. you please.'
'Mother-in-law living with you?'
asks.
"Bill sort of edges away. 'Of ourse,' says he. 'I couldn't expect Mary to live all by her lone while I'm at sea. She needs company.'
"But Bill didn't cotton to that other-in-law the way he wanted to.
She sat heavy on his digestion. He couldn't warm up the way he ought to, and the way his wife thought he should. But Bill didn't say much except one day before we got into port he says, 'Cap'n, I wonder if my mother-in-law likes me.'
'Do you like her?' I demands, real blunt.
'I try to do my duty,' says he.
'An unpleasant duty?' I suggests.
'She seems to sort of hoodoo me,' he blurts out. 'I'm afraid she'll be a misfortune to me yet.' And which same she was. Poor Bill!' he tasted what was coming.
The years went on for voyages and voyages. He seems sad in his mind when he thinks of his wife's kin, and speaks considerable about his children, but she never sent Blackeyed woman with id as to the contrary. We got back to San Francisco and I leaves for Rub-dux hill in his best clothes. In a couple o' hours he comes back. 'Can I have a couple of days off?' he inquires.
"'What for?' I demands.
"'My wife's ma is dead,' says Bill,
'and I want to bury her.'
"'Take a week,' says I real hearty,
'seeing it's your mother-in-law. Do the job up well, and good luck!'
"'I'm afeard,' says Bill. 'I'm afeard of misfortune. She never liked me.'
"'She can't do you dirt now,' I comforts him. 'Stow her away in the ground, and batten her down under a white stone.'
"'But she's left a will,' says Bill.
"'What's the difference?' I retorts.
'Bury her.'
"'I can't,' says Bill. 'She left it in her will that she was to be cremated.'
"'Cremated!' I exclaims. 'Do you mean she wants to be stuffed and put on the mantle-piece? Don't you do it, Bill.'
"'It's not that,' says he. 'She wants to be burned to ashes—cremated in an oven.'
"'I see,' I remarks, real hearty,
'and you don't fancy eating vittles cooked after her.'
"'No!' he yells. 'I've got to take her to a crematory and burn her in a place made for that. It's a ceremony same as burying.'
"'Well, why don't you go ahead?'
I demands, some vexed at his stupidity. 'I'd burn my mother-in-law in a minute. I take it kind that your wife's ma left word to do it.'
"'I'd rather bury her,' says Bill.
'You see when she's burned, Mary wants the ashes back to keep in the house. She says it's the proper thing.'
"I din't just see what the trouble was, but as Bill was low in his mind
I cheered him up as best I could, and told him to take as many days as was needful to make a good job of burning his wife's ma.
"Next day Bill turns up in the afternoon, quite solemn in black clothes. 'I want you to do me a favor,' says he.
"'What is it?' I asks.
"'Come with me to the cremation,' he says. 'Mary says she can't bear to go, and I don't want to be alone.
Doesn't seem scarcely decent.'
"'I aint a good mourner,' I says,
'but I never desert a shipmate.' So we trotted off to the crematory, and sat on chairs in front of a furnace while Bill's wife's ma was cremated.
It was terribly gloomy, specially when the man in command came and says very solemn and blue, 'It's all over. What shall you do with the ashes?'
"'She's gone,' says Bill. 'Poor woman! Did she leave many ashes?'
"'Not many,' says the man. 'Will you take 'em with you?'
"'That's the proper thing?' Bill demands.
"'It is,' says the man.
"'All right,' says Bill, resigned. 'I thought maybe Mary was wrong, but what's proper must be done.'
"So the man sweeps up the ashes and brings them out in a little pot.
'Here are the remains,' he explains.
"'How'll I carry her?' asks Bill, all in a cold sweat, looking at the little pot.
"'Put her in your pocket,' I says.
"'It don't seem decent,' Bill protests. 'I can't carry my wife's ma home to her in my pocket.'
"So we discusses the matter, and
I suggests a hearse. 'Too big,' says Bill. 'I aint going to make a joke of it hauling this little through San Francisco in a big wagon.'
"It all ends by us starting out with the pot in our hands very gin-gerly. So we goes for a few blocks, when Bill gets an idea. 'I'll buy a bucket,' says he, 'and put the pot in that. There won't be no scandal that way.'
"I was doubtful in my mind, but let it go, seeing it wasn't my funeral.
We got a tin pail stowed the remains in it, and started on. Presently Bill says, 'This is a sorrowful occasion. 'Lot's have a drink.' So we had a drink, and Bill felt better. We had another, and Bill thought it was all for the best. We stopped in another place, and he said it was queer to think how death came to all of us.
'I thought she never would die,' he remarks, lugubriously.
"'You better get home with them remains,' I exhorts him.
"'Looks like a lunch-pail,' says
he. 'I must comfort Mary for the loss of her ma.'
"'Do,' says I. 'Excuse me if I quit chief mourning and go back to the ship.'
"So I left him and went back to the Oom Paul, where I ate a dinner and breathed a sigh of relief for thinking of a tin bucket with a mother-in-law in it. I was smoking my pipe afterwards when in comes Bill, all flustered.
"'What's the matter?' I demands, for he looked terrible upset.
"'I've lost her,' he retorts.
"'Lost who?' I inquires.
"'My mother-in-law,' says he.
'She's around somewhere in a tin-bucket.'
"Come to find out Bill had been terrible low after I left him, and stopped several times for drinks.
When he gets home he's some exalted. 'Where's ma's remains?' demands his wife.
"Then Bill was up against it, and can't explain. 'How could I?' he demands, tearful, 'when I'd left the old woman sitting on some bar?'
"'You couldn't,' I answers. 'But haven't you found her?'
"'No!' he bawls. 'She ain't nowhere to be found. I knew she'd bring me bad luck.' And he ain't to be consoled."
Twizzle heaved his huge shoulders in commiseration. "You saw him just now? Well, Bill's been hunting that tin pail with them remains in all these years. Of course, every bar he goes into to inquire he takes a drink. When he said that old woman would bring him misfortune, he was right. He ain't been sober since that funeral, if so you might call it. Poor Bill! He was a good seaman, too. But marriage undid him. They say his wife takes on awful."
"Do you mean to say," I remarked,
"that you've let that man go to the dogs just because of his mother-in-law's remains being lost in a tin
bucket?"
Twizzle looked at me with renewed suspicion. "What of it?" he demanded.
I took him to one side and spoke in his ear. A grin overspread his heavy visage, and the bartender was called into consultation. "It's a scheme," said the latter, genially.
Twizzle swore with vociferous jubilation. "If there's anything I cherish," he said, boomingly, "it's the thought of fooling that ma of Bill's wife."
Two weeks later I went down to see Twizzle off for Shanghai. He introduced me to his mate, a somewhat pinched-looking seaman. "Bill's been suffering from the loss of his mother-in-law," Twizzle explained.
"I hope it's all right," I said.
The captain of the Oom Paul took me into his cabin. "He found her in a tin pail in the Bowhead," he told me with prodigious solemnity, "just where he lost her."
"Funny he shouldn't have found it before," I remarked.
"You never can tell what a mother-in-law will do," was the response.
"But them ashes looked wonderful natural."—San Francisco Argonaut.

Sparrows Beaten by a Hen.

Few mothers have triumphed over more difficulties in the rearing of their families than Nellie, a little brown hen whose home is in a box on the bank of the Chicago River, near North avenue. Besides the perils of steam and street cars, of heavy traffic and deep ditches, Nellie has been forced, literally, to fight for the protection of her brood ever since she brought the little ones into the world three weeks ago. In that time she has killed twenty sparrows, members of a colony seemingly entered into a pact to destroy her offspring. The birds have killed four of Nellie's chicks, half of her family.

War was declared between Nellie and the sparrows the morning the little hen proudly came from her nest with her eight tiny chicks. The trouble started over a dish of cornmeal provided by a bridge tender for the hen and chickens. The sparrows wanted the meal, and to get it made a concerted attack on the hen and chicks. Nellie killed four sparrows in the first battle, while the birds took the lives of two little chickens.

The scrimmage ended with the sparrows in flight, but a guerrilla warfare has followed. The sparrows have succeeded only twice in their efforts to isolate Nellie's young ones, but on those occasions quickly beat the little chicks to death with their wings and bills. The chickens have now reached an age to be able to fight back when attacked, and the sparrows are giving up the fight.—Chicago News.

Spinning Wheels Vanishing.

The Russian manufacturers went after the Irish linen industry a few years ago. They imported some of the best of the Belfast factory hands. They went over the world for looms and other machinery. They brought Irishmen from country districts to bleach the flax, but the result was as sorry as when the spinners of Paisley tried the same experiment. With every Irish bride goes presents in linen that would be more acceptable to our sensible girls than the silver articles lavished on them. A generation ago no Irish wedding was complete without a spinning wheel, but now the linen comes of finer texture from the mills of Belfast.—New York Press.

West Virginia Bear Hunt.

A large black bear caused quite an excitement in this section last week. He was first discovered near Aleck Park's residence with an air of bravery not altogether lovely.

Aleck has two fierce dogs that chased him up against the garden fence, and, as is often the case, no gun could be found loaded, and after tossing the dogs around over the meadow with apparent ease he crossed over to near Harper Wetherly's on the creek and made his escape in the jungle, hotly pursued by a dozen or more men and dogs with short breath and fast beating hearts. —Hampshire Review.

THE PULPIT.

AN ELOQUENT SUNDAY SERMON BY REV. I. W. HENDERSON.

Subject: The Christ Life.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—Preaching at the Irving Square Presbyterian Church on the theme, "The Christ Life," the Rev. I. W. Henderson, pastor, took as his text Philippians i:21: "For me to live is Christ." He said in the course of his sermon:

It is my desire to convey to your minds and to press lastingly upon your hearts some homely, yet helpful, truths relative to the Christ life. Persuaded of the similarity of your cares, trials, difficulties, problems, to my own, and recognizing the common needs of all men, I would talk to you about this text.

Horace, the old Roman poet, sings the praises of him to whom it is sweet and honorable to die for his country. I bring to you from the Book of Books no note of death, but a psalm of life. "For me to live is Christ," and to pass beyond the veil is but to enter into life more abundant." Thus says Paul. For him and for us there is no death. To live the Christ life here is to dwell within the glory of His presence there. "For me to live is Christ"—a plan of self-dedication to His service here, an earnest of our entrance into joy eternal there. "For apart from Me ye can do nothing," saith the Lord.

St. Paul, the most strenuous of Christians, epitomizes the Christian life in these words to the church at Philippi. His utterance states the sum and substances of the complete spiritual life. Our aim and our pleasure it should be, as it is our duty, as men and women who love our Lord, to so live, that men, looking upon us, may view in us the risen Christ.

The text presents to our minds a fourfold thought. Broadly speaking we may say that men have four relations in this life—to God, to society, to the home and to themselves. To set forth the same thought differently: Men have spiritual, civil, domestic and personal duties. Relation might be multiplied upon relation; duty upon duty could be indefinitely remarked. But that would be to suggest subdivisions rather than fundamentals. Indeed, I am cognizant that the moral duty to the home may easily be included under the head of social relations. But for the purpose of the moment we will resolve the ethics of the Christ life into the aforementioned divisions.

The first, the greatest, the noblest imperative in the life of the man who desires to conform to the pattern of the true Christ life, who wishes to make the words of Paul his motto for right living, is to love and to serve and obey our Heavenly Father. I may say that the whole duty of man is bound up in this declaration. For, Christianly speaking, there is no department of life into which the service of our God does not enter. Loyalty to God is the basis of all purest living and highest thinking. To be true to the Father is to be loyal to society and strong for self. We may not be true to God and untrue to the social, civil and domestic conditions with which the mere fact of life confronts us.

"The earth is the Lord's and the fulness thereof," sings the psalmist. To be a traitor to the world is to be craven toward the Maker. We may not praise God with our lips and disobey Him in our every act. Our words, honeyed though they be, will count naught for us unto righteousness. The test of fealty is in action. We must measure true to the ideals that we preach. Prayer and praise are worthy, but they are not service. Prayer pleases God and it strengthens us. Praise, no doubt, makes joy among the angels who surround the throne. But it is the service which does things; the prayer which resolves itself into action; the praise that is founded upon the knowledge of a task, through His grace, well done, which makes most for pleasure and for joy in the heart of our King.

The Christ was true to God and to man and to self. The happiness of His Father's universe was His hope and care. To His home, to His neighbors, to His country, to all trusts, the Saviour was faithful. He had an eye singly toward holy and hallowing service. Preaching a gospel of life, He lived a life of love.

And so, to be like Christ we must live like Christ. His hopes must be our hopes; His pleasures must be our pleasures. The motive in His life must be the force which, in our lives, will make for goodness and godliness. And godliness is but goodness raised to infinity.

As the Christ was, so must the Christian be, truly spiritual. His guide and his guard must be the Comforter who cometh from above. Divinity, deep down in his heart, will be the power and the mainspring in his life.

Christianity is pure politics, clean business methods, sturdy honesty and noble purpose, all rolled into one. A clear conscience means a brave ballot; and, conversely, a dirty ballot means a smeared soul. Upright business methods earn their own reward; perhaps not in undeserved dividends and wrongly divided or diverted profits, but in happiness of heart. Honesty is but a step toward holiness. Nobility and sincerity are mighty forces. And these facts the civic and the business worlds are recognizing more and more. Dishonesty is a bad asset; and the Christian man, who stands four square to the world upon the rock Christ Jesus, is to have the call. Time-serving politicians may scoff; those who define character in the terms of preferred stock, and who prefer gold to goodness, may continue to misjudge what is highest in life; sin may seem still to have the stranglehold upon the world; Christians may stumble, yea fall, upon the King's highway, be derelict to duty and to faith, may imitate poor, forewarned Peter and deny the Christ, but the eternal principles of individual and of social righteousness are bound to win.

But while many of us are, through the grace of God, enabled to approximate righteousness in our wider social relations, there are but few of us who are Christlike in the home life. I have sinned must be our plea; for pardon must be our prayer. A renewed life must be our resolution, that Christ may be our portion.

The gross sins of the believing Christian are, largely, not those of immense or awful delinquency. Most of us managed to keep out of prison. Few of us have to stand for trial upon charges of overt crime. Most of us, by the mercy of God, are guiltless of the sins which shock the senses. The defiling sins of the Christian in his home life are what we are likely to term the weaknesses of life. For you and for me, petty faults are oftentimes the greatest sins. With us the proneness to say the unkind word; think the unworthy thought; to do the hard act or to speak the stern sentiment; to give the rein to anger or to let passion rule; these are the most detrimental and defiling sins. Many a mother who would give up life itself for the child who nestled at her breast; many a father who not only would, but does, work long and weary hours for the loved ones of his home and hearth; many such a man and many such a woman finds the love of those most dear to them is lost and lost to them perhaps forever, because of un-Christian uncharitableness in the home.

"For me to live is Christ," you say. But do you live the life? Are you thoughtless of the rights of others? Are you self-centred rather than world loving? Are you heedless of the needs of men? These are minor things in life; these are the trifles. But to the soul that is growing up toward God, and out toward men, and that is spreading roots through the eternities, they spell either failure or success. As has been said, "success is made up of trifles and success is no trifle."

Selfishness, hastiness, inconsiderateness, all these are the sins which weight the soul. For those of us who have laid our hearts at the feet of Christ, they are the sins which keep us from attainment unto spiritual perfection and the strength of the Saviour. They are the cancers which gnaw at the vitals of the man spiritual, and which consume the very life's blood. Leaving behind these lesser sins we may grow into the stature of the Son of God. Putting meanness and pettiness behind us we may become like Him who was in all things pure. But only as we exclude the smallnesses of life from our natures do we grow.

But we must always remember that we have a duty to self as well as to society and to the Saviour. Here, again, duty to God presupposes and implies a right relation with self. We cannot be true to God and untrue to self. Right relations with God preclude an evil inner life. "To thine own self be true," the poet sings, "and it must follow, as the night the day, thou canst not then be false to any man." He might have said, with equal surety, that loyalty to God precludes disloyalty to man and to self. Trueness to self implies Christianly speaking, that the man is in harmony with mankind and with God.

Trueness to the highest and holiest motives and ideals that are within us brings greatest happiness and peace. Right thoughts produce and conserve a right life. High thinking is a tonic. Low thinking breeds disease. Cleanness of heart means clearness of head. To grovel spiritually is to declare one's self to be a sloven mentally. We must keep ourselves purified of unwholesomeness if we would attain the heights where holy men dwell.

Education is not salvation. Knowledge is power and should induce purity. But the pure in heart—mind you, not the strong in mental force—the pure in heart alone see God. The vile of soul are always in the depths of hell, and all the wisdom of all the ages could not pull them out.

A clean heart fits a man for life's labors. We cannot submit ourselves to the rule of our evil passions if we would escape ruin. "Our bodies are good servants, but poor masters," is an apt and a wise saying. The Christ was a power, because He had a healthy mind and a pure heart. To Him evil was hateful. For Him love was the law and the light of the world. For God is love.

To be pure, to be gentle, to be noble, to think kindly and to act worthily, to be right toward man and in the sight of God, to be growing constantly into God-likeness, that is to be truly Christlike. And to those of us alone who are trying, as Channing has said, "to let the spiritual, unbidden and unconscious grow up through the common," who are living nearest to the source of all love and of all life, is it given to say, with very truth, "For me to live is Christ."

Seeds That Grew, Seeds That Didn't.

"I have noticed that when the green leaves have appeared, and have lifted themselves a little above the soil, it often happens that a bit of soil adheres to them and seem to weight them. But, as the plants go on growing, they cast off these specks of earth and push on valiantly. Some of my seed must have been dead, for though they had abundant time for sprouting, they did not all appear; they lay there inertly amid the earth.

"Which things have been a kind of a parable to me. Though the living seeds in their growing have carried on their leaves some of the soil as they grow they are flinging it off, while the dead seeds are helpless under the earth. A Christian may be carrying some mean and unseemly earthliness. But if he be really athrill with the new life and growing, he will be quite sure to slough it off in time. Let me be patient with him and give him a chance. God does. The hopeful fact is that he is alive and growing. Dead seeds are powerless. So are dead souls."—Dr. Wayland Hoyt.

The Footstool and the Watchtower.

How many answers have been missed simply because we did not follow our petition with a heavenward eye and with the calm waitings of expectant faith! Remember, when you pray, go at once from the footstool to the tower.—J. Vaughan.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

INTERNATIONAL LESSON COMMENTS FOR AUGUST 19.

Subject: The Judge, the Pharisee and the Publican, Luke xviii., 1-14—Golden Text, Luke xviii., 13—Topic: Effective Prayer.

I. The judge and the widow (vs. 1-8). 1. "Spake a parable." In response to a question of the Pharisees as to when the kingdom of God should come. Jesus gave them warnings and instruction as to the coming, and especially as to the need of being always prepared (17:20-37), and naturally turns to the subject of prayer as a means of preparation. "Men ought." It is their "duty" to do this. "Always to pray." The habit of prayer in private, in the family and in public should be cultivated. "Not to faint." Not to grow weary and discouraged because of the delay of the answer. Why must prayer be importunate? 1. Not because of God's unwillingness to answer. 2. To cherish and cultivate our faith. 3. To intensify our desire to receive. Prayer that is not persevering indicates a lack of faith.

2. "A judge." According to Deut. 16:18, Israel must have in all the gates of the city judges, who were under obligation to administer justice, without respect of persons. See Exod. 23:6-9; Lev. 19:15. "Feared not God—man." He was unprincipled and cared for no one but himself. 3. "A widow." A widow, without influence and unable to bribe, had little to hope from a wicked judge. "Avenge." The original means "to vindicate one's right." The rights of this widow were interfered with and she was asking the judge for protection. The widow is often taken as a representation of the church after Christ's death.

4, 5. "For a while." These verses show the abandoned character of the judge referred to. 6. "The Lord." That is, Jesus. 7. "Shall not God." We are not to suppose that the character of God is at all represented by this judge. The great truth which our Saviour designed to teach is that "men ought always to pray, and not to faint." The application of the parable may be made by contrast. 1. God is not compared to the unjust judge, but contrasted with him. If a hard-hearted, wicked judge, who cared for neither God nor man, but only for himself and his own interests, would yet grant justice on account of the perseverance of the widow, how infinitely more readily will God give us the help we need. 2. And if the unjust judge does this for a poor widow, in whom he has no interest, how much more will our Father grant the prayers of His own children. 3. And if the unjust judge will do it for the sake of deliverance from some vexation in common life, how much more will God save His children from their adversaries.

8. "Speedily." Suddenly, unexpectedly. "Son of man cometh." Whedon thinks this entire parable has reference to the second coming of Christ. He says: The church is a widow in Christ's absence; she has an oppressive adversary, being the persecuting world, or the devil. "Faith." This word is sometimes taken to denote the whole of true religion.

II. The Pharisee's prayer (vs. 9-12). 9. "Trusted in themselves." Jesus now proceeds to show another reason why many prayers are not answered. The Pharisees did not trust to God, or the Messiah for righteousness, but in their own works. They vainly supposed they had themselves complied with the demands of the law of God. "Despised others." Disdained, treated them with contempt.

10. "Two men." Both Jews. Two extreme cases are here chosen—a rigid, exclusive, self-satisfied member of the religious society of Israel; and a Jewish officer of the hated Roman government.

11. "Pharisee stood." The Jews were accustomed to pray standing. The Pharisee went to the temple to pray, because it was a public place, and therefore he would have many eyes on him. "I thank Thee." His prayer is a thanking, his thanking is a boasting, not of God but alone of himself. At first he boldly contrasts himself with all men considering himself better than they. "Extortioners." Selfish, greedy men who take away the goods of others by force and violence. "Unjust." Those who are unfair and dishonest in their dealings. 12. "I fast," etc. The law required but one fast day in the year, the day of Atonement (Lev. 16:29). "Tithes." A tenth. "Of all that I possess." Rather of all that I require. See Revised Version. He was clothed with phylacteries and fringes, not with humility. He felt no need of confessing sins.

III. The publican's prayer (vs. 13, 14). 13. "Publican." One employed as collector of the Roman revenue. It was the basest of all livelihoods. He felt that he was a sinner, and shame and sorrow caused him to look down. It was usually the custom to pray with uplifted hands, and with look turned toward heaven (1 Tim. 2:8; Psa. 123:1, 2). "Smote—breast." A token of anguish and self-reproach. I am a sinner and cannot be saved but in Thy way.

14. "Justified." His sins were blotted out, and he was accepted. "That exalteth himself." Boasts of his own goodness. "Abased." Shall be brought to shame. "That humbleth himself." By confessing his sin and unworthiness, and pleading for mercy from God. "Exalted." Lifted up from the depths of sin, and made an heir of God. From sorrow he is admitted into the realm of praise.

Women Suffragists End Sessions.

Copenhagen.—The sessions of the conference of the International League of Women Suffragists have terminated, but there will be an executive meeting to settle the unfinished business. It has been decided to publish a paper in London, to be called the International Record of Women Suffrage. By royal invitation the delegates to the conference visited Rosenberg castle.

DEPARTMENT.

no adults were allowed inside cept teachers and other guardi the little folk. One wondered, fore, why the ticket speculators in their usual place on the side

A big policeman near the doo serving these men in confi kept an eye on them. Present indignation burst bounds.

"Well," he exclaimed, "tha dirty a trick as I've seen!"

The ticket speculators were nering" the peanut market.

The Italian venders, whose stocks the ticket speculators bought, were ordered to put th nuts into bags—the disgusted hucksters looking helplessly on.

The ticket speculators now upon each side of the entrance presently wagons and various cles came rumbling up, la "Children's Aid," "Orphans' "Home For Crippled Children."

As the little ones were put i and marched or hobbled or wer ried across the sidewalk to th trains, each one received a bi of peanuts, free.

"Well, now, I'll— Say, I take back!" The big policeman o his hand to a speculator.

"What!" cried the speci "Did you think we wanted to a profit to those little fellers didn't get anything at all?"—Y Companion.

A LAMB THAT LOVED OLI

A few years ago my little six old was presented with a young which was brought up by hand which soon became a great pet quickly grew to love Olive an little brother, and was often l of the pen where the sheep kept to become an interested p part in all their romping game

As the warm days of May ca it became necessary to driv sheep to a distant pasture, but pleaded so earnestly for her pe she was finally allowed to kee at home. About the same time and her brother began to atte district school. The lamb, m both his four-legged and two- friends, immediately became lonesome and inclined to stray home, so that it was thought b tie him to an apple-tree not f tant. But poor Dickany rebel this indignity and bleated incess

One day he broke his rope, a found him in the back room ch his cud and peacefully standi Olive's old familiar dress, which low down upon a nail.

This gave us an idea; and, Dickany went back to the appl the dress went too, and was h a branch where he could reach

After this the lamb stopped ing and led a very quiet and life, wearing his rope with p in school hours, and boundin jumping with joy when the ch returned at night.—Christia deavor World.

THE APPETITE OF A BI

When an old-fashioned h says Answers, urges her gue eat, after the conventional ma showing hospitality, and re "Why, you haven't the appeti bird!" she really speaks the though she does not intend to.

The average man, if he bird's appetite, would devour thirty to thirty-one pounds of day, which would be a tax on t der of his hostess.

Recent experiments have that the average bird manages about one-fifth of his own daily with ease, if he can get s food; and in a wild state, thou bird has to hunt for his daily f der, he is eating a large part time during the day, and m to get his full rations.

The smaller the bird, the m racious seems to be its appeti its power of absorption. A G scientist recently kept a canary observation for a month. Th creature weighed only sixteen but in the course of the mo managed to eat 512 grams' wo food! that is, about thirty-two therefore have eaten its own in food every day.

An ordinary man with a c appetite would consume 150 of food a day. But the canar extreme case. The ordinary good health, will be satisfie one-fifth of its weight a day of food.

A Terse Sermon.

Perhaps the tersest sermo delivered was that by Dean who taking as his text, "He th eth to the poor lendeth to the began and ended thus: "Breth you like the security, down w dust."

The temperance committee Southern M. E. Conference r in favor of a rule which wou hibit the use of tobacco by pastors.

In Atchison there is a rule the attention of the sheriff machine when you lose succession.

EPISODE.

With Love's flag half-mast high,
Sorrow, but Love passed by.
Hope his colors bore;
Bid wide the door,
He stopped a little space,
He turned away his face.
Thou shalt alike repent
He entered, that he went.

Though noon glory be withdrawn,
Grateful was the radiant dawn.
Master of the subtlest art,
Hope has gladdened soul and heart;
Folly more than Truth was wise,
While she dwelt in Paradise.
Better far my flag half-mast,
Than that Love had never passed.
—F. Robbins, in Lippincott's.

THE LOSS OF HIS MOTHER-IN-LAW.

Bill's Long Search Rewarded. By John Fleming Wilson.

figure of haggard and bewil- inebriation came in through swinging doors of the Seaman's Saloon, and came to an un- built against the bar. "I didn't a small tin bucket in here, did the new-comer asked of the bar-

His official cast a bleared eye the questioner, and shook his "No, you ain't left no such around here, Bill. Maybe it was Bowhead?"

just came from there," said the thickly. "It ain't there. I do er now what I did with them remains." He threw a flutter- glance at the bartender, and then deep into a pocket. "Lemme some gin," he continued, more barkeeper set the bottle out, watched his customer imbibe. put the bottle away again, he "Maybe you'll find 'em at Look there?"

that's so. I may have left them right there." He smiled and wavered on his legs. "By I'll lest bet that's where they I'll go see." And with labored gait departed.

"Old chap!" said Twizzle. "That some did for Bill."

"What misfortune?" I asked.

"Bill?"

"Bill was terribly unlucky," was reply once. "Bill lost his mother-

"I don't see how that should af- him," I retorted.

Twizzle drained his beer glass, and nodded his head with an understand- look at the bartender. The lat- also shook his head, and both looked stricken with a sad and poig- memory. "It's a terrible mis- fortune," murmured the barkeeper.

"To think," continued Twizzle, "of poor Bill has suffered every night when he goes home and his wife asks, 'Bill, where's mother?' and Bill doesn't know. Awful!"

"Orrible!" assented the other.

"Losing his mother-in-law in a tin bucket," Twizzle went on, raising his voice.

"And set it down without ever know'n where he left it!" exclaimed the bartender.

"Awful!" boomed Twizzle.

"Orrible!" the bartender respond-

Twizzle clutched Twizzle strongly by the sleeve. "Look here," I protested, "it's all in the dark. Tell me how Bill lost his mother-in-law. What's this nonsense about a tin pail?"

"It was an awful misfortune," Twizzle answered, solemly. "It did happen up. He ain't never held his head up since."

"Since what?" I cried, in vexation. "Since he lost his mother-in-law in a tin bucket," roared Twizzly, angrily. "What do you suppose I mean?"

"Easy now, Sam," urged the bar- tender. "The gent don't know the particulars."

"I don't," said I, "and I'm anx- ious to learn them."

"Why didn't you say so before?" Twizzle demanded, suspiciously, "and go a-doubting of my word?"

The protestations of credulity near- ly precipitated another flurry on Twizzle's part, but the bartender came to my aid, and between us we coaxed him into a narrative mood.

"Bill was my mate on the Oom Paul," he explained, "and he got married to a little woman living on Russian Hill here in San Francisco. She was terrible pleased. 'Never had such a woman, Cap'n,' says he. 'Me and she and her mother run that ship shipshape as you please.'

"'Mother-in-law living with you?' says I.

"Bill sort of edges away. 'Of course, says he. 'I couldn't expect Mary to live all by her lone while I'm at sea. She needs company.'

"But Bill didn't cotton to that mother-in-law the way he wanted to. She sat heavy on his digestion. He couldn't warm up the way he ought and the way his wife thought he should. But Bill didn't say much ex- cept one day before we got into port and says, 'Cap'n, I wonder if my moth- er-in-law likes me.'

"'Do you like her?' I demands, rather blunt.

"'I try to do my duty,' says he.

"'An unpleasant duty?' I sug- gests.

"'She seems to sort of hoodoo me,' he blurts out. 'I'm afraid she'll be a visitor unto me yet.' And which sure she was. Poor Bill! he tasted what was coming.

"So things went on for voyages and several. Bill he seems sad in his room when he thinks of his wife's ma, and speaks considerable about misfortunes. You see she was a small, black-eyed woman with ideas.

"One voyage we got back to San Francisco, and Bill leaves for Rus- sian Hill in his best clothes. In a couple of hours he comes back. 'Can I have a couple of days off?' he in- quires.

"'What for?' I demands.

"'My wife's ma is dead,' says Bill, 'and I want to bury her.'

"'Take a week,' says I real hearty, 'seeing it's your mother-in-law. Do the job up well, and good luck!'

"'I'm afeard,' says Bill. 'I'm afeard of misfortune. She never liked me.'

"'She can't do you dirt now,' I comforts him. 'Stow her away in the ground, and batten her down under a white stone.'

"'But she's left a will,' says Bill.

"'What's the difference?' I retorts. 'Bury her.'

"'I can't,' says Bill. 'She left it in her will that she was to be cre- mated.'

"'Cremated!' I exclaims. 'Do you you mean she wants to be stuffed and put on the mantle-piece? Don't you do it, Bill.'

"'It's not that,' says he. 'She wants to be burned to ashes—cre- mated in an oven.'

"'I see,' I remarks, real hearty, 'and you don't fancy eating vittles cooked after her.'

"'No!' he yells. 'I've got to take her to a crematory and burn her in a place made for that. It's a cere- mony same as burying.'

"'Well, why don't you go ahead?' I demands, some vexed at his stupid- ity. 'I'd burn my mother-in-law in a minute. I take it kind that your wife's ma left word to do it.'

"'I'd rather bury her,' says Bill. 'You see when she's burned, Mary wants the ashes back to keep in the house. She says it's the proper thing.'

"I din't just see what the trouble was, but as Bill was low in his mind I cheered him up as best I could, and told him to take as many days as was needful to make a good job of burn- ing his wife's ma.

"Next day Bill turns up in the afternoon, quite solemn in black clothes. 'I want you to do me a favor,' says he.

"'What is it?' I asks.

"'Come with me to the cremation,' he says. 'Mary says she can't bear to go, and I don't want to be alone. Doesn't seem scarcely decent.'

"'I aint a good mourner,' I says, 'but I never desert a shipmate.' So we trotted off to the crematory, and sat on chairs in front of a furnace while Bill's wife's ma was cremated. It was terribly gloomy, specially when the man in command came and says very solemn and blue, 'It's all over. What shall you do with the ashes?'

"'She's gone,' says Bill. 'Poor woman! Did she leave many ashes?'

"'Not many,' says the man. 'Will you take 'em with you?'

"'That's the proper thing?' Bill demands.

"'It is,' says the man.

"'All right,' says Bill, resigned. 'I thought maybe Mary was wrong, but what's proper must be done.'

"So the man sweeps up the ashes and brings them out in a little pot. 'Here are the remains,' he explains.

"'How'll I carry her?' asks Bill, all in a cold sweat, looking at the little pot.

"'Put her in your pocket,' I says.

"'It don't seem decent,' Bill pro- tests. 'I can't carry my wife's ma home to her in my pocket.'

"So we discusses the matter, and I suggests a hearse. 'Too big,' says Bill. 'I aint going to make a joke of it hauling this little through San Francisco in a big wagon.'

"It all ends by us starting out with the pot in our hands very gin- gerly. So we goes for a few blocks, when Bill gets an idea. 'I'll buy a bucket,' says he, 'and put the pot in that. There won't be no scandal that way.'

"I was doubtful in my mind, but let it go, seeing it wasn't my funeral. We got a tin pail stowed the re- mains in it, and started on. Present- ly Bill says, 'This is a sorrowful oc- casion. 'Lot's have a drink.' So we had a drink, and Bill felt better. We had another, and Bill thought it was all for the best. We stopped in an- other place, and he said it was queer to think how death came to all of us. 'I thought she never would die,' he remarks, lugubriously.

"'You better get home with them remains,' I exhorts him.

"'Do,' says I. 'Excuse me if I quit chief mourning and go back to the ship.'

"So I left him and went back to the Oom Paul, where I ate a dinner not so hearty as usual for thinking of a tin bucket with a mother-in- law in it. I was smoking my pipe afterwards when in comes Bill, all flustered.

"'What's the matter?' I demands, for he looked terrible upset.

"'I've lost her,' he retorts.

"'Lost who?' I inquires.

"'My mother-in-law,' says he. 'She's around somewhere in a tin bucket.'

"Come to find out Bill had been terrible low after I left him, and stopped several times for drinks. When he gets home he's some ex- alted. 'Where's ma's remains?' de- mands his wife.

"Then Bill was up against it, and can't explain. 'How could I?' he de- mands, tearful, 'when I'd left the old woman sitting on some bar?'

"'You coulda't,' I answers. 'But haven't you found her?'

"'No!' he bawls. 'She ain't no- where to be found. I knew she'd bring me bad luck.' And he ain't to be consoled."

Twizzle heaved his huge shoulders in commiseration. "'You saw him just now? Well, Bill's been hunting that tin pail with them remains in all these years. Of course, every bar he goes into to inquire he takes a drink. When he said that old woman would bring him misfortune, he was right. He ain't been sober since that funeral, if so you might call it. Poor Bill! He was a good seaman, too. But marriage undid him. They say his wife takes on awful."

"Do you mean to say," I remarked, "that you've let that man go to the dogs just because of his mother-in- law's remains being lost in a tin bucket?"

Twizzle looked at me with renewed suspicion. "What of it?" he de- manded.

I took him to one side and spoke in his ear. A grin overspread his heavy visage, and the bartender was called into consultation. "It's a scheme," said the latter, genially.

Twizzle swore with vociferous ju- bilation. "If there's anything I cher- ish," he said, boomingly, "it's the thought of fooling that ma of Bill's wife."

Two weeks later I went down to see Twizzle off for Shanghai. He in- troduced me to his mate, a somewhat pinched-looking seaman, "Bill's been suffering from the loss of his mother- in-law," Twizzle explained.

"I hope it's all right," I said.

The captain of the Oom Paul took me into his cabin. "He found her in a tin pail in the Bowhead," he told me with prodigious solemnity, "just where he lost her."

"Funny he shouldn't have found it before," I remarked.

"You never can tell what a moth- er-in-law will do," was the response. "But them ashes looked wonderful natural."—San Francisco Argonaut.

Sparrows Beaten by a Hen.

Few mothers have triumphed over more difficulties in the rearing of their families than Nellie, a little brown hen whose home is in a box on the bank of the Chicago River, near North avenue. Besides the per- ils of steam and street cars, of heavy traffic and deep ditches, Nellie has been forced, literally, to fight for the protection of her brood ever since she brought the little ones into the world three weeks ago. In that time she has killed twenty sparrows, members of a colony seemingly en- tered into a pact to destroy her off- spring. The birds have killed four of Nellie's chicks, half of her family.

War was declared between Nellie and the sparrows the morning the little hen proudly came from her nest with her eight tiny chicks. The trouble started over a dish of corn- meal provided by a bridge tender for the hen and chickens. The sparrows wanted the meal, and to get it made a concerted attack on the hen and chicks. Nellie killed four sparrows in the first battle, while the birds took the lives of two little chickens.

The scrimmage ended with the sparrows in flight, but a guerrilla warfare has followed. The spar- rows have succeeded only twice in their efforts to isolate Nellie's young ones, but on those occasions quickly beat the little chicks to death with their wings and bills. The chickens have now reached an age to be able to fight back when attacked, and the sparrows are giving up the fight.—Chicago News.

Spinning Wheels Vanishing.

The Russian manufacturers went after the Irish linen industry a few years ago. They imported some of the best of the Belfast factory hands. They went over the world for looms and other machinery. They brought Irishmen from country districts to bleach the flax, but the result was as sorry as when the spinners of Paisley tried the same experiment. With every Irish bride goes presents in linen that would be more acceptable to our sensible girls than the silver articles lavished on them. A genera- tion ago no Irish wedding was com- plete without a spinning wheel, but now the linen comes of finer texture from the mills of Belfast.—New York Press.

West Virginia Bear Hunt.

A large black bear caused quite an excitement in this section last week. He was first discovered near Aleck Park's residence with an air of bravery not altogether lovely.

Aleck has two fierce dogs that chased him up against the garden fence, and, as is often the case, no gun could be found loaded, and after tossing the dogs around over the meadow with apparent ease, he crossed over to near Harper Wel- ford's on the creek and made his es- cape in the jungle, hotly pursued by a dozen or more men and dogs with short breath and fast beating hearts. —Hampshire Review.

AN ELOQUENT SUNDAY SERMON BY REV. J. W. HENDERSON.

Subject: The Christ Life.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—Preaching at the Irving Square Presbyterian Church on the theme, "The Christ Life," the Rev. J. W. Henderson, pastor, took as his text Philippians 1:21: "For me to live is Christ." He said in the course of his sermon:

It is my desire to convey to your minds and to press lastingly upon your hearts some homely, yet help- ful, truths relative to the Christ life. Persuaded of the similarity of your cares, trials, difficulties, problems, to my own, and recognizing the com- mon needs of all men, I would talk to you about this text.

Horace, the old Roman poet, sings the praises of him to whom it is sweet and honorable to die for his country. I bring to you from the Book of Books no note of death, but a psalm of life. "For me to live is Christ," and to pass beyond the veil is but to enter into life more abund- ant." Thus says Paul. For him and for us there is no death. To live the Christ life here is to dwell within the glory of His presence there. "For me to live is Christ"—a plan of self- dedication to His service here, an earnest of our entrance into joy eternal there. "For apart from Me ye can do nothing," saith the Lord.

St. Paul, the most strenuous of Christians, epitomizes the Christian life in these words to the church at Philippi. His utterance states the sum and substances of the complete spiritual life. Our aim and our pleasure it should be, as it is our duty, as men and women who love our Lord, to so live, that men, look- ing upon us, may view in us the risen Christ.

The text presents to our minds a fourfold thought. Broadly speaking we may say that men have four rela- tions in this life—to God, to society, to the home and to themselves. To set forth the same thought different- ly: Men have spiritual, civil, domes- tic and personal duties. Relation might be multiplied upon relation; duty upon duty could be indefinitely remarked. But that would be to suggest subdivisions rather than fun- damentals. Indeed, I am cognisant that the moral duty to the home may easily be included under the head of social relations. But for the pur- pose of the moment we will resolve the ethics of the Christ life into the aforementioned divisions.

The first, the greatest, the noblest imperative in the life of the man who desires to conform to the pattern of the true Christ life, who wishes to make the words of Paul his motto for right living, is to love and to serve and obey our Heavenly Father. I may say that the whole duty of man is bound up in this declaration. For, Christianly speaking, there is no department of life into which the service of our God does not enter. Loyalty to God is the basis of all purest living and highest thinking. To be true to the Father is to be loyal to society and strong for self. We may not be true to God and un- true to the social, civil and domestic conditions with which the mere fact of life confronts us.

"The earth is the Lord's and the fulness thereof," sings the psalmist. To be a traitor to the world is to be craven toward the Maker. We may not praise God with our lips and dis- obey Him in our every act. Our words, honeyed though they be, will count naught for us unto righteous- ness. The test of fealty is in action. We must measure true to the ideals that we preach. Prayer and praise are worthy, but they are not service. Prayer pleases God and it strength- ens us. Praise, no doubt, makes joy among the angels who surround the throne. But it is the service which does things; the prayer which re- solves itself into action; the praise that is founded upon the knowledge of a task, through His grace, well done, which makes most for pleasure and for joy in the heart of our King.

The Christ was true to God and to man and to self. The happiness of His Father's universe was His hope and care. To His home, to His neighbors, to His country, to all trusts, the Saviour was faithful. He had an eye singly toward holy and hallowing service. Preaching a gos- pel of life, He lived a life of love.

And so, to be like Christ we must live like Christ. His hopes must be our hopes; His pleasures must be our pleasures. The motive in His life must be the force which, in our lives, will make for goodness and godliness. And godliness is but goodness raised to infinity.

As the Christ was, so must the Christian be, truly spiritual. His guide and his guard must be the Comforter who cometh from above. Divinity, deep down in his heart, will be the power and the mainspring in his life.

Christianity is pure politics, clean business methods, sturdy honesty and noble purpose, all rolled into one. A clear conscience means a brave ballot; and, conversely, a dirty ballot means a smeared soul. Up- right business methods earn their own reward; perhaps not in unde- served dividends and wrongly divid- ed or diverted profits, but in happi- ness of heart. Honesty is but a step toward holiness. Nobility and sin- cerity are mighty forces. And these facts, the civic and the business worlds are recognizing more and more. Dishonesty is a bad asset; and the Christian man, who stands four square to the world upon the rock Christ Jesus, is to have the call. Time-serving politicians may scoff; those who dodge character in the terms of "preferred stock," and who prefer gold to goodness, may con- tinue to misjudge what is highest in life; sin may seem still to have the stranglehold upon the world; Christians may stumble, yea fall, upon the King's highway, be derelict to duty and to faith, may imitate poor, fore- warned Peter and deny the Christ, but the eternal principles of individ- ual and of social righteousness are bound to win.

But while many of us live, through the grace of God, enabled to approach- ate righteousness in one wider as-

INTERNATIONAL LESSON COMMENTS FOR AUGUST 19.

Subject: The Judge, the Pharisee and the Publican, Luke xviii., 1-14.

Golden Text, Luke xviii., 13.

Topic: Effective Prayer.

I. The judge and the widow (vs. 1-8). 1. "Spake a parable." In re- sponse to a question of the Pharisees as to when the kingdom of God should come. Jesus gave them warn- ings and instruction as to the coming, and especially as to the need of being always prepared (17:20-37), and naturally turns to the subject of prayer as a means of preparation. "Men ought." It is their "duty" to do this. "Always to pray." The habit of prayer in private, in the family and in public should be cultivated. "Not to faint." Not to grow weary and discouraged because of the delay of the answer. Why must prayer be im- portunate? 1. Not because of God's unwillingness to answer. 2. To cher- ish and cultivate our faith. 3. To in- tensify our desire to receive. Prayer that is not persevering indicates a lack of faith.

2. "A judge." According to Deut. 16:18, Israel must have in all the gates of the city judges, who were un- der obligation to administer justice, without respect of persons. See Exod. 23:6-9; Lev. 19:15. "Feared not God —man." He was unprincipled and cared for no one but himself. 3. "A widow." A widow, without influence and unable to bribe, had little to hope from a wicked judge. "Avenge." The original means "to vindicate one's right." The rights of this widow were interfered with and she was asking the judge for protection. The widow is often taken as a repre- sentation of the church after Christ's death.

4, 5. "For a while." These verses show the abandoned character of the judge referred to. 6. "The Lord." That is, Jesus. 7. "Shall not God." We are not to suppose that the char- acter of God is at all represented by this judge. The great truth which our Saviour designed to teach is that "men ought always to pray, and not to faint." The application of the parable may be made by contrast. 1. God is not compared to the unjust judge, but contrasted with him. If a hard-hearted, wicked judge, who cared for neither God nor man, but only for himself and his own inter- ests, would yet grant justice on ac- count of the perseverance of the widow, how infinitely more readily will God give us the help we need. 2. And if the unjust judge does this for a poor widow, in whom he has no in- terest, how much more will our Father grant the prayers of His own children. 3. And if the unjust judge will do it for the sake of deliverance from some vexation in common life, how much more will God save His children from their adversaries.

8. "Speedily." Suddenly, unex- pectedly. "Son of man cometh." Whedon thinks this entire parable has reference to the second coming of Christ. He says: The church is a widow in Christ's absence; she has an oppressive adversary, being the persecuting world, or the devil. "Faith." This word is sometimes taken to denote the whole of true re- ligion.

II. The Pharisee's prayer (vs. 9- 12). 9. "Trusted in themselves." Jesus now proceeds to show another reason why many prayers are not an- swered. The Pharisees did not trust to God, or the Messiah for righteous- ness, but in their own works. They vainly supposed they had themselves complied with the demands of the law of God. "Despised others." Dis- dained, treated them with contempt.

10. "Two men." Both Jews. Two extreme cases are here chosen—a rigid, exclusive, self-satisfied member of the religious society of Israel; and a Jewish officer of the hated Roman government.

11. "Pharisee stood." The Jews were accustomed to pray standing. The Pharisee went to the temple to pray, because it was a public place, and therefore he would have many eyes on him. "I thank Thee." His prayer is a thanking, his thanking is a boasting, not of God but alone of himself. At first he boldly contrasts himself with all men considering him- self better than they. "Extortion- ers." Selfish, greedy men who take away the goods of others by force and violence. "Unjust." Those who are unfair and dishonest in their deal- ings. 12. "I fast," etc. The law re- quired but one fast day in the year, the day of Atonement (Lev. 16:29). "Tithes." A tenth. "Of all that I pos- sess." Rather of all that I require. See Revised Version. He was clothed with phylacteries and fringes, not with humility. He felt no need of confessing sins.

III. The publican's prayer (vs. 13, 14). 13. "Publican." One employed as collector of the Roman revenue. It was the basest of all livelihoods. He felt that he was a sinner, and shame and sorrow caused him to look down. It was usually the cus- tom to pray with uplifted hands, and with look turned toward heaven (1 Tim. 2:8; Psa. 123:1, 2). "Smote— breast." A token of anguish and self-reproach. I am a sinner and can- not be saved but in Thy way.

14. "Justified." His sins were blotted out, and he was accepted. "That exalteth himself." Boasts of his own goodness. "Abased." Shall be brought to shame. "That hum- bleth himself." By confessing his sin and unworthiness, and pleading for mercy from God. "Exalted." Lifted up from the depths of sin, and made an heir of God. From sorrow he is admitted into the realm of praise.

Women Suffragists End Sessions.

Copenhagen.—The sessions of the conference of the International League of Women Suffragists have terminated, but there will be an executive meeting to settle the unfinished business. It has been decided to publish a paper in London, to be called the International Record of Women Suffrage. Dr. Aletta Jacobs invitation the delegates to the conference visited Rosenborg castle.

Seeds That Grew, Seeds That Didn't.

"I have noticed that when the green leaves have appeared, and have lifted themselves a little above the soil, it often happens that a bit of soil adheres to them and seem to weight them. But, as the plants go on growing, they cast off these specks of earth and push on valiant- ly. Some of my seed must have been dead, for though they had abundant time for sprouting, they did not all appear; they lay there inertly amid the earth.

"Which things have been a kind of a parable to me. Though the liv- ing seeds in their growing have car- ried on their leaves some of the soil as they grow they are flinging it off, while the dead seeds are, help- less under the earth. A Christian may be carrying some mean and un- seemly earthiness. But if he be really at all with the new life and growing, he will be quite sure to slough it off in time. Let me be patient with him and give him a chance. God does. The hopeful fact is that he is alive and growing. Dead seeds are powerless. So are dead souls."—Dr. Wayland Hoyt.

The Footstool and the Watchtower.

How many answers have been missed simply because we did not follow our petition with a heaven- ward eye and with the calm wait- ings of expectant faith! Remember, when you pray, go at once from the footstool to the tower.—J. Vaughan.

THE UNION

Published every Thursday at Clanton, Chilton County, Alabama.

Wallace C. Edler, Ed. and Pub.

Subscription price, in advance, per year, $1.

For advertising rates, call at the office, Seventh street, between First and Second avenues.

Entered April 15, 1906, at Clanton, Ala., as second class matter, under act of congress of March 3, 1879.

NOTICE TO CORRESPONDENTS.

All communications to the Union must be signed by the writer's real name as well as that name which they wish to put in the paper. Letters must reach the editor Tuesday morning to get in the same week. While we will publish any and all communications complying with these requirements that do not contain any improper language, we are not responsible for the opinions expressed. tf.

CLANTON, ALA., Aug16, 1906.

Union Clubbing List

THE UNION And Yellow Jacket	$1.00
THE UNION And Southern Ruralist	1.00
THE UNION And Union Educator	1.00
THE UNION And Home and Farm	1.00
THE UNION And Weekly Age-Herald	1.35
THE UNION and Weekly Atlanta Constitution	1.35
THE UNION and Twice-a-Week Globe Democrat	1.00
THE UNION and Tri-W'kly Atlanta Constitution	1.00
THE UNION And Tom Watson's Magazine	1.50
THE UNION and Tri-Weekly N. Y. World	1.50
THE UNION And Rural South	1.50
THE UNION And Weekly Advertiser and Map of Alabama, U. S. and world	1.50

If there are any other papers you want call at THE UNION office, and we will get them for you at the lowest rates. tf

FOR REPRESENTATIVE.
J. Osmond Middleton.

FOR SHERIFF.
Felix J. Fitts.

FOR COMMISSIONER.
First District—W. H. Conway.
Second District—S. E. Waldrup.
tf

WHICH "ITE?"

Editor Union:

Again, and contrary to the advice of the "Grizzly Bear," we were up to hear the Demies orate Tuesday, and must say that their "Mr. Compton" made the thing roar, for he seemed to be like the negro preacher, he had a powerful voice, and knew some of the words. He gave us a dissertation on the railroad rate extortion, and of the great and unequal burdens the common people have to suffer at the hands of these unholy monopolies and heartless trusts.

Then came Mr. Comer, and after some little nursery talk, of how to raise boys and about "Bob Taylor's candy pulling," he then began to lead off in the field of politics, dishing up some funny ideas on high wages and low wages, making a curious mixture of tariff, emigration, etc., and then proceeded to harpoon the railroads and to arraign these monsters of monopoly and greed in no tender and affectionate style as to how they fatten and grow rich off the sweat and toil of the people, shirking their rightful share of taxation, granting special favors to some and putting it hard and heavy on others, all of which is doubtless true; but here comes the curious and stronge feature of Mr. Comer's logic, for as a remedy for these great evils from which we suffer he urged everybody to join the Democratic party, as an effectual remedy and means of salvation.

Well! well! ha! ha! We must confess that right here he gets beyond the common mind with his logic, and his remedy, for have not the Democrats been wholly and completely in control of the affairs of the state for more than a quarter of a century? Have not nine-tenths of this railroad condition grown up and attained its present formidable proportions under a Democratic administration? And how about this great hue and cry now going on in the state? Is it between the Democratic party and some other party, or is it just a big family row between some of the pie grabbers in the Demie camp? It looks that way to a man up a tree, and if Cunningham and his gang win out in the scramble what will the Comer crowd do? Selah! And again I imagine that Mr. Gulledge felt like 30 cents when Mr. Comer was skinning the Palmer and Buckner folks, as I have been informed that Gulledge supported Palmer et al. And again, we wonder which one of the many Democratic factions—whether the Bryanites, the Clevelandites, Parkerites, Advertiserites, or what old "ites"—would he have us join. Now we just feel like saying to Mr. Comer, and of his side in this fight or scramble, to "come ye out from among them, sayeth the Lord, and he will be unto you a God, and you may be unto Him a people."

X. RAY.

Make the best of life.

ANOTHER BARREL.

Mr. Editor:

Say, the primary is over and the opposition can see their finish; but didn't we have a whopper, wasn't there a good turn-out, no campaign having been made, nothing done to stir the boys up? I was just thinking if so many turned out so easy to the primary, what a big victory we will have in November. As to electing our ticket, that's easy; we've got all the Pops and Republicans and a great many Democrats (even some of their committee). But some of those poor half-baked Democrats that want office are going around and telling the people that these nominations were made by the court house clique. Ah, well! I was just thinking that if the court house clique could have so much influence (and some of them away in the far West), what will they do to the Democrats in November? But every one knows this is false. You know a rogue always locks up his house when he leaves home. Still it is funny to me when these fellows talk about Fitts being the court house nominee, and the very fellows (two ex-Pops) that are talking this rot went to Fitts and told him that if he would come home into the Democratic party that they would guarantee him the nomination for Sheriff in the famous (?) mass meeting that they were going to hold. How does that sound to you when you hear talk aboout ring rule? Here you have Democrats running for an office, and two of the bosses go to a man of another party and guarantee him the nomination for that office if he will come into their party. In the name of common sense, if it was going to be a mass meeting of the people, how could two men guarantee the nomination to one of our men? But, say, didn't the mass meeting fly up? When it was first talked about two or three were claiming the parentage of the blamed thing. One said he was the daddy, and another said he was, but since that Clanton ring got caught up with in their scheming, and their real purpose showed up to the people, no one wants to "daddy" the idea, and it looks now like it will go down as a bastard. I wish, though, that one of these alleged "daddies," who used to go around and tell the people that this meeting was called so all the people could go into it, would tell why it was pulled off. I don't they don't want the people now. By the way, did you read the letter from Kincheon written by (?) A. W. Powell in the Banner last week? Didn't he whoop Gulledge up and go after Middleton? I've been making some little investigation as to who A. W. Powell is, as this is the first time I ever heard of him dictating the politics of Chilton county, and I find that he has got a history, but not in politics. Well, Powell says, "We fail to see where Mr. Middleton's sincerity is when he claims to be such a good Republican. Just a short time ago he was making the proud boast that he was a Democrat, etc." Powell evidently don't think a man can change his politics and be sincere. Now, listen, fellows. In looking up the history of Powell we earned something of his family connection. He is a half-brother of Elijah B. Deason. Now, if Powell don't think a man can be honest and change his politics, it does seem as if family pride would cause him to keep silent on the subject, for when he makes the statement that a man who changes his politics is insincere he brands his half-brother, Deason, as being a traitor and dishonest. You know it is a matter of history that Deason while holding an office to which the Populists and Republicans had elected him turned his back upon them both and announced for office on the Democratic ticket. And this same Deason is a half-brother of Writer Powell, who in his fight on Middleton simply "knocks the stuffing" out of the whole Democratic organization in this county. There is the impetuous S. W. Adams, who when swollen with Populist pride and seeking a Populist office would have preferred to "turn his right arm off" than vote a Democratic ticket, and after being honored by the same Populists and Republicans that are supporting Mr. Middleton left them and ever since has been running for an office on the Democratic ticket. There is Crichton, editor of the Banner, who belched forth indignation Democracy to the people of Chilton county for some years in the paper put up and paid for by the same people that are supporting Mr. Middleton, and being put on a good financial basis by those same people, showed his gratitude by deserting them, and now poses as the paragon of "independent Democracy." According to Powell's contention, the Democracy is merely a political mess! The people are in behind Mr. Middleton, and they are going

JOHN A. WATSON.

GOOD CHEER FROM WINSTON.

Haleyville, Ala., Aug. 11, 1906.

Editor Union:

Enclosed please find money order for $1 to pay for The Union one year, tobe sent to my address. I also say, hurrah for the People's primary ticket. Old Winston is also all right, and she will elect a Republican ticket in November. I am an F. E. & C. U. of A. man from the crown of my head to the soles of my feet. Yours in the cause,

J. M. WARD, JR.

CARD FROM MR. GENTRY.

Thorsby, August 14, 1906.

Editor Union:

Please give me space in your paper to tell the people why I was not at Clanton Saturday for the final count. There was a distfict meeting at New Salem, which is near me, and I thought it was right for me to be there and lend a helping hand. But I want to say that I am satisfied and will be with my people in the November election. And let me say to the nominees that my feeling is good toward them and I will help to elect them in November. Being defeated don't change my principles. But I've heard that some of the other candidates say they won't vote the ticket; boys, that won't do, for that is just what the Democras like to hear. Now, boys, let's all put our shoulders to the wheel and roll up the largest vote that we have polled in a long time. In conclusion, I want to thank the people that voted for me; may God bless you. I feel under as many obligations to you all as if I had been the nominee. With best wishes to you all, and hurrah for our ticket, I remain,

D. H. GENTRY.

TEACHERS LICENSED.

Montgomery, Ala., August 13.—The state has licensed the following teachers:

Chilton County—Jerome Williams, John Jackson Mims, Julia Parrish, Marian E. Aldridge, Senie Jones, Clanton; Alma T. Lefstad, Thorsby; Rosalie H. Moore, Ollie E. Wilson, Clanton, Route 2; John C. Dennis, Clanton, Route No. 2; F. B. Williams, Jemison, Route No. 4; James Orman Dickinson, Billingsley; Leroy R. Sawyer, Henry Mims, Clanton; Oscar P. McGraw, Vincent; L. P. Shaw, Calcis; Mary Peters, Montevallo; Zemma Webb Pitts, Columbiana; Lottie Glenn Perry, Stanton; Braddie Boyd, Calera; Fannye Mae Evans, Thomasville; W. M. Oakes, Vincent; W. S. McEwin, Montevallo, Route No. 1; W. S. Harper, Longview; Emma Hicks, Columbiana; Daisy Mary Cross, Leeds, Route No. 1; Clara Louise Pitts, Columbiana; Mae Jordan, Shelby; Janie Maske, Quito; R. F. Lyon, Wilsonville; C. M. Nolen, William H. Gilbert, Columbia, Route No. 2; G. B. Wheeler, Wilsonville, Route No. 1, box 30.

Colored—J. F. McClellan, Shelby; Amanda J. Heath, Vincent; Effie Lindsey, Calera; Shepherd Prince Robinson, Sycamore.

OFFICIAL COUNT OF PRIMARY.

A number of Republicans and Populists were at the court house Saturday to attend the counting by the subcommittee of the vote cast at the people's primary. After the result was announced, it being practically the same as estimated last week (for particulars look at the table published in this issue) the candidates, successful or otherwise, were called on to speak. Hon. J. O. Middleton spoke first, saying, among other good things, that he would accept Mr. Gulledge's challenge and he "hoped to meet him on every stump in the county, and would give Gulledge "the hottest shot he had in the locker. Next Sheriff Fitts also voiced his thanks to the people for their magnificent vote of confidence (he got a majority over all) and said that he had no doubt but that those who opposed his nomination would now, like all true men, fall into the ranks and help swell the majority in November.

Mr. Gentry was not present, but Mr. Pounds spoke for him, saying that "Doc" had told him that he "was a Gentry man until Monday night, but that now he was a Fitts man." J. F. Goodgame was absent and no one seemed authorized to speak for him. Lee Hayes came out in grand style, pledging himself and friends to the support of our ticket. Mr. Hayes made some good points in his talk and ripped the Democratic ringsters up the back. He also said he felt that the people by their votes had rebuked him for having faltered once and temporarily "bent the knee to Baal." Commissioner Conway returned thanks for the confidence shown him in an unopposed re-election, saying he felt sure of being able to give the people better service the next four years on account of his added experience. "Squire" Watkins, from the coastal district, was not present, nor was Sam Pate, his opponent. A spicy talk was made by Gant Riggins, and short speeches were made by Judge Reynolds, Assessor Pounds and others on the general results, and about all the sentiments expressed met with the most cordial approval from the audience.

There will be a general rally and mass meeting when the Republican and Populist committees meet to make arrangements for a "general dust-up," and "we'll all turn out."

A CARD FROM MR. FITTS.

Maplesville, Ala., August 14, 1906.

Editor Union:

I desire, through your paper, to express to the Populists and Republicans of Chilton county my sincere appreciation of the honor which they have given me by making me their nominee for sheriff of this county. For those who worked and voted against me in the primary I have only the kindliest feeling, for I realise that it was their privilege as honest men to support their choice; but now that I have been nominated I expect their hearty support and feel sure that I will get it. I want to thank my opposing candidates in the primary for the clean manner in which they conducted their campaign. While they fought me vigorously, the fight was made, with one or two miner exceptions, on a high plane. I harbor no ill feeling against any of them, but have a high regard for them all.

I desire especially to express my gratitude to Mr. Hayes for the manly way in which he accepted his defeat, and for the cordial way in which he assured me of his untiring support. While I have not seen Mr. Gentry, yet his friends have assured me of his hearty co-operation, and this I appreciate very much. All of us promised our friends that, in case of defeat, we would stand by the nominee, and I trust that all will abide by the result.

In conclusion, I desire to say that the prospects are indeed bright for a glorious triumph of the people's cause. But I wish to impress upon all the necessity for activity on the part of each other. We must not be satisfied with a mere victory. Let every man work from now until the polls are closed in November and we will give the Democrats the worst defeat they have had in years. For my part, I shall leave nothing undone to secure the election of our ticket, and if we win (and I know we will) I pledge you an honest and faithful discharge of my official duties, guaranteeing "to every one a square deal."

FELIX J. FITTS.

SOUTH BESSIE.

Dear Union:

Everybody seems well pleased with the results of the recent primary. No discordant voices in South Bessie. Henry Bros.' saw mill at the ford of Six Mile creek is in full blast. Several of our people took in the meeting at Mars Hill last week and report the congregations immense. Mr. and Mrs. M. L. Foshee visited J. M. Foshee at Mars Hill last week. The south side is getting very well covered with a net work of telephone lines. S. N. Waldrup visited Prof. N. A. Logan at Longview on the 4th inst. He was accompanied by his daughter, Miss Maude, who visited relatives near Ocampo. Z. J. Jones took in a part of the recent L. P. Adams meeting near Walnut Creek. He reports large congregations, interest good and preaching fine. John S. Waldrup, who for several weeks has been a juror in the federal court at Montgomery, has returned home. Let everybody read the temperance paper by Mr. Horn in the last Union. It is simply fine. S. N. Waldrup's corn crop in Six Mile creek bottom is beautiful. J. C. Edwards, of Mulberry, was up here at church service Sunday. Nature is now taking on a pensive appearance, thus indicating that sweet summer is waning, but each passing season only brings the consummation of Jehovah's plan nearer. We have sometimes great revivals of religious enthusiasm; then people lapse into lethargy and coldness. Yet neither affects Jehovah's plan. It is not thwarted by man's apathy, but is going on to victory. Man's indifference only injures himself. See the raging cyclone, leaving death and destruction in its wake. The heavens are black with the clouds of the storm king's power. After they have blown over the bright stars glitter, the moon shines with her usual radiance. The course of nature is not disturbed. In like manner man cannot thwart Jehovah's plans. "That his own work will to his own eternal interests." "Onward" marches the great Eternal in the order of His plan." Ah, those little vindictive party things we sometimes hear. Pleased to note The Union's liberality from each in its editorials. Give us another legend of democratism.

"ONE OF THE BOYS."

MACEDONIA.

Editor Union:

Please give me space in your paper to say that Evangelist J. H. Hendrix is holding a meeting at Macedonia, and will hold a meeting at Vincent, the [illegible]

[illegible] will preach the first Sunday in September at Mount Pleasant school house on the afternoon of the first Sunday in September. Everybody is invited to come.

tf

THORSBY LETTER.

Prof. Wm. J. Lamkie arrived here Monday morning from Boston to take up his duties as principal of the Thorsby Institute. The school expects to have its catalogue and curriculum ready in a short time.

Theodore Lefstad was a Montgomery visitor last week.

Miss Ada Blalack, of Maplesville, is visiting her aunt, Mrs. Mary Raspberry.

M. J. Soberg returned from Lawrenceburg, Tenn., Monday, where he has been investigating the growing of cantaloupes. Mr. Soberg was very favorably impressed with the business, although there has been too much rain this year for the best results. It is his opinion that the growing of cantaloupes at Thorsby would be much more profitable than some other crops that are now grown in this vicinity.

Tom Edwards came up from Wetumpka Monday evening for a visit with relatives, Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Stanley.

A Democratic rally was held at Thorsby Monday night, August 13. Hon. B. B. Comer, H. C. Compton and others addressed the meeting. Mr. Comer delivered the principal address of the evening, which was very much appreciated by those present. The attendance was good, though the threatening weather kept many away.

Thorsby and Clanton played ball on the home grounds Tuesday afternoon. The game was in favor of the visiting team.

Miss Lulu Sorrell left Sunday evening for a few weeks' visit with relatives at Birmingham.

Will Yaeger, of Birmingham, visited friends here from Saturday until Sunday evening.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the United Protestant church had a birthday party at the home of Mrs. A. Horn Tuesday afternoon. During the year they have collected over $103 and have only twelve members.

Ed Billingsley is home for a visit.

Monroe Sorrell, of Birmingham, spent a few days here last week. He returned Sunday evening.

Mrs. Anderlin and children returned to Chicago Friday. Miss Emma Gronquist, accompanied them and expects to be gone for some time.

Mrs. L. Reagan returned to her home at Calera after a pleasant visit here with friends and relatives.

Mrs. Flowers and daughter, Miss Sally, are visiting friends here.

Mrs. T. W. Robinson and children spent a few days last week with relatives at New Salem.

Mrs. Fannie Honeycutt is at home again from her visit at Longview.

The baseball boys of the second ninegave a necktie social at the public school house Friday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Dyrhood, Mr. and Mrs. P. W. Peterson and Mr. Brumberg left Sunday morning for a visit in Minnesota and neighboring states.

Martin Sorrell transacted business in Birmingham Monday.

Glenn Warnick returned to his home at Powderly Sunday evening.

"ANON."

BASEBALL.

The game on the 10th inst. between the Yellow Jackets and Clanton was won by the Yellow Jackets; score, 8 to 2. The two Headley boys played with the winners and were of great assistance in beating Clanton. On the 11th the Yellow Jackets defeated the Red Rippers by a score of 15 to 4. The Yellow Jackets aim to play Clanton on the 12th; and they will play the Red Rippers on the 13th. With best wishes to The Union and you ball players, I'll switch off.

V. J.

The Chilton County Farmers' Union will meet with Mount Pleasant Union on August 29-30, 1906.

J. H. THOMAS, President.
J. N. DENNIS, Secretary. tf

COME TO PREACHING.

The Rev. A. C. Swinsell will preach at Mount Pleasant school house on the afternoon of the first Sunday in September. Everybody is invited to come.

tf

...ll official forms ...Peace, ... for sale at The Union Office. Only best approved forms are used. Come in and give us your order. tf

FOR SALE!

A saw mill outfit consisting of engine, boiler, saw mill, Challoner shingle machine, three Challoner shingle saws, one small planer and matcher. All in first class condition. Will sell on easy terms, or exchange for other property, except saw mill outfit.

C. E. Wheelock, Mgr.
Fixico, Ala.

FOR SALE OR RENT

Land for sale, or to rent. One, two, three and four horse farms; two miles north of Jemison. Call on or address,

J. C. DUBOSE,
tf. Jemison, Ala.

MONEY TO LOAN

On real estate. Call or write me at my abiding place with Mr. G. O. Rushee, one mile northeast of Clanton, R. F. D. No. 1. Come during banking hours, as I keep my money in the bank.

tf JAMES GLASS.

Notice No. 20906.

NOTICE FOR PUBLICATION.

Department of the Interior, Land Office at Montgomery, Ala., July 1906.

Notice is hereby given that the following-named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim, and that said proof will be made before Clerk Circuit Court, at Clanton, Ala., Sept. 1, 1906, viz.: George W. Pate, Homestead entry No. 34394, for the E 1-2 of Ne 1-4, E 1-2 of Se 1-4 of Section 2, Tp. 23, in R 15 E.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of said land, viz:

Rollfee F. Bates, of Clanton, Ala.; John Davis, of Clanton, Ala.; William L. Littleton, of Shelby, Ala.; and William M. Willis, of Shelby, Ala.

ROBERT D. JOHNSTON,
Register.

CRAWFORD & SAMMONS

Blacksmiths Horseshoers and wheel wrights. At the "Old Vine stand" Clanton, Ala. Horse-shoeing 80 cent; Shrinking Buggy tires 50 cents. New tires 65 cents. Other work in proportion. Come and see us. tf.

GINNING SFASON 1906

We have engaged Joe and Walter Maddox to run and operate our gins for the coming season. We have the best machinery and with these men to operate it, we can guarantee entire satisfaction to those who patronize us. Bring us your cotton. Respectfuly

Chilton Warehouse & M,f,g, Company. tf.

FOR SALE

At all times, high grade hogs and pigs, Berkshires and Poland China, crossed.

M. J. BARRETT,
tf Thorsby, Ala.

BUSINESS PROPOSITION

The best whiskey in the country is here. If you don't believe it, try me.

J. M. COLLINS,
Palace Saloon, Calera, Ala.
tf.

FOR SALE!

300 acres land, 150 acres in cultivation. All in Sec. 6, T., 20, R., 14, 9 miles S. W. of Clanton. Good dwelling house and out buildings and 3 good tenant houses. Good and lasting well of water. This good farming land will be sold at a bargain. Call and see.

tf J. H. CARTER,
Clanton, R. F. D. No.

NOTICE

Blank Deeds, Mortgages and all official forms Justices of the Peace, for sale at The Union Office. Only best approved forms are used. Come in and give us your order. tf

FOR SALE!

A saw mill outfit consisting of engine, boiler, saw mill, Challoner shingle mill, three Challoner shingle presses, one small planer and matcher. All in first class condition. Will sell on easy terms, or exchange for other property, except saw mill outfit.

C. E. Wheelock, Mgr.
Fixico, Ala.

FOR SALE OR RENT

Land for sale, or to rent. One, two, three and four horse farms; two miles north of Jemison. Call on or address,

J. C. DUBOSE,
tf. Jemison, Ala.

MONEY TO LOAN

On real estate. Call or write me my abiding place with Mr. G. G. Shee, one mile northeast of Clanton R. F. D. No. 1. Come during bank hours, as I keep my money in the bank.
tf JAMES GLASS

Notice No. 20906.

NOTICE FOR PUBLICATION.

Department of the Interior, Land Office at Montgomery, Ala., July 1906.

Notice is hereby given that the following-named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim, and that said proof will be made before Clerk Circuit Court, at Clanton, Ala., Sept. 1, 1906, viz.: George W. Pa... Homestead entry No. 34394, for the E 1-2 of Ne 1-4, E 1-2 of Se 1-4 of Section 2, Tp. 23, in R 15 E.

He names the folowing witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of said land, viz.:

Rollfee F. Bates, of Clanton, Ala.; John Davis, of Clanton, Ala.; Willie L. Littleton, of Shelby, Ala.; and William M. Willis, of Shelby, Ala.

ROBERT D. JOHNSTON,
Register.

CRAWFORD & SAMMON
Blacksmiths Horseshoers and wheel wrights. At the "O... Vine stand" Clanton, Ala. Horse-shoeing 80 cent; Shri... ing Buggy tires 50 cent... New tires 65 cents. Othe... work in proportion. Com... and see us. tf.

GINNING SFASON 1906
We have engaged Joe an... Walter Maddox to run an... operate our gins for the com... ng season. We have th... best machinery and wit... these men to operate it, w... an guarantee entire satis... action to those who patron... ze us. Bring us your cotton...
Respectfuily
Chilton Warehouse & M,f,g Company. tf.

FOR SALE
At all times, high grad... ogs and pigs, Berkshire an... oland China, crossed.
M. J. BARRETT,
Thorsby, Ala.

USINESS PROPOSITION
The best whiskey in th... untry is here. If yo... n't believe it, try me.
J. M. COLLINS,
alace Saloon, Calera, Ala... tf.

FOR SALE!
300 acres land, 130 acres... cultivation. All in Sec. ... 20, R., 14, 9 miles S. W... Clanton. Good dwellin... use and out buildings an... good tenant houses. Goo... d lasting well of water... his good farming land w... sold at a bargain. Co... d see,
J. H. CARTER,
Clanton, R. F. D. No...

AND COUNTY OFFICIALS

Circuit Court.
...—Third Monday in May
...—Fourth Monday in Sept.

...L. Brewer, Tuskegee.
...—W. B. Bowling, Underwood.
...Sam W. Collins.

Chancery Court.
...Term—Second Monday in
...—Second Monday in Sept.
...ller—Hon. W. W. Whitesides.
...—Mrs. S. A. Stewart, Clanton.

County Court.
...Monday in each month.

Commissioners' Court.
...Monday February, first Mon...
...d, first Monday June, second ...July, second Monday August, ...day November.

COUNTY OFFICERS.

...of Probate—L. H. Reynolds.
...—W. T. Callen.
...—J. M. Morgan.
...—W. M. Adams.
...Assessor—L. B. Pounds.
...Collector—T. J. Hubbard.

County Commissioners.
...District—W. H. Conway.
...District—Alex Glasscock.
...District—R. P. Kendrick.
...District—Moses Robinson.

Supt. of Education.
J. W. Moore, Clanton.

County Surveyor.
...R. Dahl, Calera.

State Senator.
W. R. Oliver, Calera.

COUNTY CHURCHES.

MISSIONARY BAPTIST.
...ANY—Rev. J. L. Neeley, pas... Sunday and Saturday be... L. Hand, clerk.

...SALEM—Rev. M. J. Parrish, ... B. Popwell, clerk.

...CREEK—Rev. J. L. Busbey, ... First Sunday and Saturday ... W. E. Thomas, clerk.

...NS CHAPEL—Rev. J. H. ... pastor. Third Sunday and ... before. J. D. Collins, clerk.

...S HILL—Rev. J. H. Thomas, ... First Sunday and Saturday ... G. W. Scott, clerk.

...DONIA—Rev. J. H. Thomas, ... Fourth Sunday and Saturday ...3:30 p. m. H. H. Armstrong, ...

...ANT GROVE—Rev. J. H. ... pastor. Fourth Sunday and ... before at 11 a. m. D. H. ... clerk.

...IDENCE—Rev. W. W. Robin... ...r. Second Sunday and Sat... ...fore. Riley Robinson, clerk.

...OOTH (Bibb Co.)—Rev. J. H. ... pastor. Second Sunday and ... before. D. C. Smitherman, ...

PRIMITIVE BAPTIST.
...L—Elder J. P. Nobles, pas... ...nd Sunday and Saturday be... ...T. Abernathy, clerk.

METHODIST EPISCOPAL.
...T MOUNT—Rev. A. T. Van... ...astor. Second Sunday. Sing... ...y second and fourth Sunday ... Prayer meeting every Wed... ...ight. Ladies' prayer meeting ...turday afternoon.

FRATERNAL SOCIETIES.

Masonic.
...R. A. Chapter, No. 116—... ...rday, Clanton.

...Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No... ...th Saturday, Cooper.

...Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No... ...t Saturday, Clanton.

...Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No... ...t Saturday, Billingsley.

...Lodge, A. F. and A. M.; ...Saturday on or before full ...hary.

...Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No... ...day on or before full moon.

...Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No... ...day on or before full moon.

I. O. O. F.
...Lodge—First and third Sat...

...Lodge, No. 204—Second and ...urdays.

Woodmen of the World.
...ock Camp, No. 190—First and ...days.

I. O. R. M.
...Tribe, No. 90—First and ...days sleep. Visiting chiefs ...invited. E. B. Langston, C. ...M. Patton, Seshem.

...Tribe No. 98—2nd and 4th ...days. Visiting chiefs are ...ed. J. M. Grant, Seshem; ...th, C. of R.

F. E. & C. U. OF A.

Chilton Co. Division Officers.

J. H. Thomas, President, Jemison, Rte. 1.
J. W. Hayes, Vice Pres., Thorsby, Rte 1.
J. N. Dennis, Sec-Treas., Clanton, Rte 4.
G. W. Thomas, Chaplain, Clanton, Rte 2.
J. W. Sorrell, Bus. Agent, Jemison, Rte 4.
C. N. Elland, Lecturer, Clanton, Rte 4.
N. A. Dobbs, Asst. Lect., Clanton, Rte 3.
W. J. Bean, Conductor, Clanton, Rte 4.
W. F. Culpepper, Doorkeeper, Clanton, ...te 3.
W. A. Barnett, Ex. Committee, Jemison, Rte 2.
E. H. Mims, Ex. Committee, Clanton, Rte 1.
J. Wiley Foshee, Ex. Committee, Clanton, Rte 4.

F. E. & C. U. O A.

A resolution was adopted at the last county meting of the Farmers' Union requiring the county lecturer to visit each local in the county at least once every year. Locals who want me to lecture to them will please write me, giving their location, so as to enable me to make a tour of the county in July and August. Address

C. N. EILAND,
tf Route 4, Clanton, Ala.

THE NEW YORK WORLD

Thrice-a-Week Edition.

Read Wherever the English Language is Spoken.

The Thrice-a-Week World hopes to be in 1906 a better paper than it has ever been before, and it has made its arrangements accordingly. Its news service covers the entire globe, and it reports everything fully, promptly and accurately. It is the only paper, not a daily, which is as good as a daily, and which will keep you as completely informed of what is happenng throughout the world.

The Thrice-a-Week World is fair in its political reports. You can get the truth from its columns, whether you are Republican or Democrat, and that is what you want.

A special feature of the Thrice-a-Week World has always been its serial fiction. It publishes novels by the best authors in the world, novels which in book form sell for $1.50 each, and its high standard in this respect will be maintained in the future as in the past.

The THRICE-A-WEEK WORLD'S regular subscription price is only $1.00 per year, and this pays for 156 papers. We offer this unequaled newspaper and THE UNION together for one year for $1.50.

The regular subscription price of the two papers is $2.00. tf

The Union, Weekly Montgomery Advertiser, and a great white and black map of Alabama, United States and world, three in one, with a picture of every president from Washington to Roosevelt, all for $1.50.

STRAYED OR STOLEN.

From near my residence on June 25, one iron gray mare colt, one year old; one iron gray horse colt, with star on face, and scar on left hind leg above hock, one and a half years old. Any information leading to their recovery will be liberally rewarded.

C. C. MARTIN,
tf Calera, Ala., Rte 1.

FOR SALE.

160 acres land, 65 acres in cultivation; two miles south of Calera; good dwelling and outbuildings; good and lasting water; very good soil. Will be sold at a bargain.

H. M. BUSHEY,
tf Calera, Ala.

FOR SALE.

30 young cockerels. Silver Spangled Hamburgs, Golden Laced Wyandotts, Buff, Brown and White Leghorns. Prices 50c to $1.50. All birds pure bred and of good quality.

J. B. Downs,
tf Clanton, Ala.

JOHN W. HARRELL,

Jemison, Ala.

Photographer. Dealer in all grades of enlarging. Frames made to order. Work done at your own home by appointment.

CLANTON COTTON MARKET.

Total receipts to Aug. 15, 1906 ... 6548
Price same date ... 9 7-8
Receipts same time in 1905 ... 8061
Price same date ... 10.00

LOCAL AND PERSONAL.

Mrs. J. J. Grant died Sunday night. The remains were taken to Cooper Tuesday for interment.

A daughter of Enoch Wilson died Saturday night. The young lady had been ill some time.

J. E. Littlejohn has closed out his entire stock of merchandise to Cooper Bros., the same firm who also bought out J. Wiley Smith's stock. In addition to these two stocks of goods Cooper Bros. are getting in a large stock of new merchandise of every description. See their advertisement in The Union.

Elbert Littlejohn is buying crossties and paying cash for them; so if you have any ties to sell look for him. He pays the highest market price.

John S. Dennis was in Clanton Thursday.

W. D. Z. Foshee was in town Thursday.

Mrs. J. H. Jackson and daughters, Misses Mattie and Ola, and Miss Carrie Golden, were pleasant visitors to The Union office on Thursday. The ladies were escorted by J. H. Golden and the presence of so many good looking ladies brightened up the office wonderfully. Mrs. Jackson left the same day for Cullman county, where she will visit her brother, John Wade

C. C. Buckhalter was in Clanton Thursday.

R. C. Riggins was in town Thursday.

T. N. Howard, J. R. Hammell and J. M. Grant were in Clanton Thursday looking up the law on the road question.

Aaron Littleton, a prominent farmer of Collins Chapel community, dropped into The Union office Friday and left an ear of corn 15 inches long with 890 grains. Cany any one beat that for corn, eh?

Gust Berlin and P. W. Peterson, two of Thorsby's leading citizens were in Clanton Friday.

G. W. Edwards was in town Friday.

J. A. O. C. and J. S. Weldon were Clanton visitors Saturday.

Clerk Samuel Collins brought The Union a fine watermelon which he had raised on his farm. Come aagin, Samuel.

Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Devaughan wore Clanton visitors Monday.

M. N. Walker was in town Monday. He says his brother J. M., who has been residing in Birmingham for some time, has moved to Chaffee, Mo. Good luck attend him.

Attorney J. Osmond Middleton is spending several days in Birmingham this week on business.

Mrs. Judge Reynolds and dughters, Winnie and Willie, and son, Omar, left Thursday for Watkinsville, Ga., to visit Mrs. Reynolds' parents and other relatives. They expect to make a couple of weeks' stay.

Charles W. Reynolds has rented the store building formerly occupied by Elbert Littlejohn and will open up a fine large stock of merchandise between now and September 1. Charlie has been East to buy his new goods, and starting as he will with a brand new stock, he intends to make things hum in the mercantile line. Watch for his opening.

W. Y. Nix, of Maplesville, was in Clanton Saturday.

Mrs. W. T. Wells left Tuesday for Elmore county to visit her parents.

J. J. Gallman was in Clanton Tuesday, accompanied by Messrs. W. A. and C. A. Stewart, of Rockford. W. A. subscribed for The Union, Yellow Jacket and Union Educator. He is an enthusiastic Farmers' Union man, and also votes "agin free soup and patched breeches." C. A. Stewart will likely stay in Chilton, as so many other Coosa county men have done in the past, and the great majority of them are good people, but once in a while a sorry one bobs upt.

J. W. Kicker was in Clanon Tuesday.

W. A. Baker was in town Tuesday.

F. B. and Mrs. McCastey, of Wetumpka, are guests at the Hotel Wilson. Mr. McCastey is Mayor of Wetumpka, but their little babe haging been very ill for some time, the doctor ordered change of air and they brought the little one to healthy old Chilton, and pleasant to say, the infant shows marked improvement.

United States Deputy Marshal Alex Kelley was in our burg Tuesday. Mr. Kelley is keeping his territory in good order.

Messrs. B. B. Comer and H. C. Compton were hunting votes in Clanton Tuesday and took dinner at the Hotel Wilson.

Waxahatchee Tribe No. 9, Improved Order of Red Men, kindled its council fire on Tuesday night and the following chiefs were raised by Bro. W. S. Smith, Great Chief of Records of the Great Council of Alabama: J. P. Vanderveer, sachem; J. E. Robinson, chief of records; E. C. Jones, prophet; H. M. Simpson, senior sagamore; J. E. Robinson, Jr., junior sagamore.

The county commissioners were in session Monday and Tuesday, paying county bills, etc. Mrs. R. D. Johnston gave a description of the work being done at the Boys' Industrial School at East Lake to the court and they appropriated $50 toward its support. Mrs. Johnston is doing a great work for this institution. She has [illegible] and is well remembered in [illegible] forts by the ladies. Commissioners Moses Robinson, W. H. Conway, Alex Glasscock and R. P. Kendrick were present. The court also inspected the electric lights put in the court house by J. P. Vanderveer and expressed its satisfaction with the work.

MARRIAGE LICENSES.

J. B. Rainwater and Miss May Adkins; Henry Rayhon and Miss Almar Grace Parker.

Colored.

Woodson Peoples and Fannie Ward; Richard Foster and Laura Latham.

PROGRAM

Chilton County Teachers' Institute, to Be Held at Pleasant Grove, Shoults, on September 7 and 8, 1906.

Friday.

10 a. m. Devotional exercises—Rev. P. G. Manees.

10:30. Welcome address—Prof. W. A. Haggard.

10:45. Response—Prof. H. A. Harris.

11. Enrolling teachers.

11:15. "Psychology of the School Room"—Prof. R. A. Rasco, Miss Celestia Dunlap.

Recess for dinner.

1:30 p. m. "The Needs of Our County, Educationally"—Prof. G. L. Spear, Mrs. A. G. Dunlap.

2:30. "Unconscious Training"—Rev. P. G. Manees.

3:30. "How to Secure Attention During Recitation"—Prof. W. A. Haggard, Mrs. Etta Apperson.

Saturday.

9 a. m. Devotional exercises.

9:30. "Methods and Helps in Teaching Agriculture"—Prof. L. J. Thompson.

10:15. "Manual Training"—Prof. Robert Jones.

11. Educational address—W. B. Craig.

This institute will be held in the western part of the county, at Shoults, on the M. & O. R. R. We insist that all the teachers of the county attend this one, especially those who have not yet attended the county institute this year. This will be the last institute in this scholastic year, and the law requires teachers to attend at least one during each year. Do not let the last opportunity slip.

J. W. MOORE,
J. N. DENNIS,
tf Committee.

NOTICE.

Jemison, Ala., August 7th, 1906.

Lost—One light clay bank mare, branded on the left shoulder with a heart; the last time heard from she was at Ashby; she weighs about 700 pounds. I will reware any one liberally for information as to where she is, or if returned to me, I will pay well for the trouble.

T. S. DAVENPORT,
tf Jemison, Ala.

PETITION TO SELL LANDS FOR DIVISION.

In the Probate Court of Chilton, County, Alabama, July 24th, 1906.

This day came Julia E. Cook, wife of J. W. Cook, and Carrie W. Martin, wife of G. Frank Martin, of Dallas and Bibb counties, Alabama, respectively, and have filed their joint petition, in writing, alleging that they are joint owners in certain real estate particularly described in said petition, lying and being in Chilton county, Alabama, with John T. Dungan, William R. Dungan and David B. Dungan, of Humboldt, Tennessee; Joseph A. Dungan, of Memphis, Tennessee; Lillie B. Williams, of Jackson, Tennessee; John A. McLeod, of Atlanta, Georgia; Robert M. McLeod, of the State of Texas; Carl McLeod, Bessie McLeod and Lilian McLeod, each of Elliott, Texas; Clara Sales, of Dallas, Texas; William Martin, Edward Martin and Jacob C. Vaughan, each of Bardwell, Kentucky, and Annie Belle O'Neal and Willie C. Gandy, each of Yale, Texas, alleging that each of said parties and persons are over the age of twenty-one years, and praying that said real estate described in their said petition be sold for partition and division, on the ground that the same cannot be equitably divided without a sale thereof.

It is ordered, that the 10th day of September, 1906, be appointed a day for hearing said petition, and that notice of the same be given to said non-residents of the State of Alabama, by publication for three successive weeks in The Union, a newspaper published at Clanton, in Chilton county, Alabama, and a copy of said notice be sent by mail, post paid, to each of said parties residing without the State of Alabama. L. H. REYNOLDS,
8-9-06-3w Probate Judge

BARBECUE AND PICNIC.

A barbecue and picnic will be given, under the auspices of the Improved Order of Red Men, at the Soldiers' Home on August 18, 1906. Everybody is invited to come and bring a full basket. We have the promise of the Great Sachem and other prominent men in the order, who will be with us that day. All refreshments, etc., that will be on sale will be under control of the order.

By order of committee. tf

There is an awful lot of money wasted buying drinks on a hot day, when they are just as [illegible]

L. G. Rollins & Co.

—DEALERS IN—

General Merchandise, Clothing, Shoes and Fancy Groceries.

CLANTON, ALABAMA.

WOODLAWN FARM

Barred Plymouth Rocks

PURE BRED

Setting of 15 fresh eggs for 50c. Packing for shipping 10c extra.

PURE BRED

Duroc Jersey Hogs.

Write us for prices before you buy. Address,

W. Y. NIX,
Maplesville, Alabama.

A. A. JACKSON

Lomax, Alabama.

General merchandise, corn, hay, shorts, shoes, men's hats, Ladies hats. Best quality and lowest prices in all goods.

Highest Market Price Paid for Chickens and Eggs.

We Have the Goods
You Have the Money
Let Us Exchange.

Having bought out the stocks of J. W. Smith and J. E. Littlejohn, we are selling them out at prices that will astonish you.

Shoes

Of all kinds to be sold regardless of cost.

New line of General Merchandise also at remarkably low figures. Highest prices paid for eggs, chickens and all country produce. Come and lets us get acquainted.

Cooper Brothers,

At the New Store Next to J. W. Smith's Old Stand

Clanton, Alabama.

Fallacy of the Exaggerated Salary

By President Charles W. Eliot, of Harvard.

IN general, secret management and secret acts in important corporations have a pernicious tendency; and particularly they tempt directors to malfeasance, and excite in the public mind suspicions sometimes just and some times unjust but always injurious. Legislation which prevents publicity is, of course, to be deprecated, in spite of its occasional convenience.

The attention of the public has been directed by several recent instances to the fact that corporations are sometimes capable of defeating the purpose of laws intended to regulate the conduct of their business, and to secure publicity by falsifying their accounts, or making nominal but not real shifts of their investments at or near the day when they are required to make returns to the state concerning their business and their property. Such falsifications are enough to destroy utterly public confidence in the honest management of the corporations guilty of them, and to excite against corporate management in general an extreme and pervasive distrust.

A great abuse has of late years grown up in corporations which do a large business, or hold and use great properties, namely, the exaggeration of salaries and perquisites. In the first place, the acceptance of several salaries from different companies or corporations is always to be distrusted. Inasmuch as the underlying supposition ought to be that a man owes all his time and strength to the company which pays him an adequate salary, and that his interest should not be divided between different corporations or different services. In the next place, unusually salaries are injurious, because they overpay the recipient. The large disbursements of recent times thus overpay their recipients. The common and simple test upon that is exhibited in a large business like that of manufacturing is that the wisely paid chief of all gets [illegible] The salary of the president is thus the commercially safest salary [illegible]

THE POEM HE HEARD.

In the vale of the Cornwallis
Lettice lies asleep.
And the tides forever mosting
All about her creep.
And the five sea-rivers flowing
Day and night, keep coming, going,
But they rouse not little Lettice
From her sleep.

Through the marshes of Cornwallis,
Through the rusty red,
Slips the sea his shining fingers
All about her bed.
And the zigzag birds are stringing
Up above the bleak Cornwallis,
And the sad brown grasses singing
Round her head.

Little Lettice was my sister,
And we used to play
On the hills and by the beaches,
In the salt sea-spray.
Lettice loved the squirrel's chirring
And the crumpled leaves a-stirring
In the vale of the Cornwallis
All the day.

—Florence Wilkinson.

—THE— Salvation of Lummux

By ELLIOT WALKER.

"What's that down on the pond, Billy?"

"Got me, Fred; what is it?"

In the nipping air the two boys stood, shading their eyes with mittened hands from the glare of the afternoon sun.

A hundred feet below them at the hill's base nestled Mud Pond, now

But that is true as to man in general. The city has achieved its great frozen fast in the embrace of early winter. Beyond, the land, thinly covered with light snow through which dead grasses and dry stalks showed sere and brown, stretched in different degrees of elevation to thrifty farm houses banked up against the cold.

Some fifteen feet from the shore of the small, oval lake, a motionless object attracted the attention of the pair, who gazed open mouthed, vainly trying to imagine it a source of terror, with that desire of thrill peculiar to early youth.

"Looks like a bear to me."

"Pshaw! No bears round here, Billy. More like a dog, ain't it?"

"Let's go down and find out. It's a dead thing, I guess."

"Come on. I'll beat yer."

It was a slippery descent, made almost dangerous by a spirit of rivalry. Sliding recklessly with many a sudden check of their heedless feet, they brought upon the edge of the pond, breathless.

"Nothing but a calf, a miserable old dead calf," puffed Fred.

"Shucks!" responded the other, not to be outdone in disgust. "Thought at least it was a—a——" He paused in mental groping for some possible dangerous animal and finished, "Let's go out and kick it."

"That's what I say." They proceeded cautiously.

The supposed corpse, as if in apprehension of assault, here lifted a feeble head and gave voice to a despairing "Moo!" The boys jumped in pleased excitement at the unexpected.

"'Tain't dead. It's fell down."

"It's froze down. Yes, sir."

"Fell down and froze down," they agreed in simultaneous conclusion. "What a fool!"

The unhappy creature lowered its head resignedly and made a few impotent kicks.

Billy and Fred gazed at it with the unsympathetic eye of the small boy stifling better feelings, then exchanged a glance indicative of a proper hardening of the spirit.

"'Tain't our calf! Come along!"

"All right. Where'll we go now?"

They took a step backward. The calf groaned.

"I suppose," observed Billy reflectively, "I suppose we might help him up. He will die there, sure. Just for fun, you know," he added, hastily.

"We might," assented Fred in an absent way. "Getting late though," but he moved to the sufferer with a quick slide. "Huh! I slipped."

The boys fell on their knees beside the prostrate form. "He ain't frozen down very hard," remarked Billy, shoving a hand under the unfortunate who struggled in non-appreciation. "Let's get him up. Co-boss! Co-boss! What a lummux he is."

"He's a whopping big critter!"

"That's his name, I guess. Let's call him 'Lummux.'"

This pleasantry had an uplifting effect on all three. The lads bent to their work, laughing and succeeded in rolling the animal half over. It flopped back heavily in spite of their efforts.

"Pshaw!" panted the ranchers. "We'll never get him on his feet. You pull and I'll push, now!"

By dint of much hard work and malediction loudly expressed, the protesting Lummux was finally dragged and shoved to the shore, there to lie aimlessly. Behind him showed a melted imprint decorated with tufts of hair.

"Dear me!" sighed Fred. "Now what?"

"Boost him. Get on the other side." They tugged and tugged. The calf wobbled slowly to an upright position and stood trembling.

"Steady him now. There! Go on, Lummux!"

A faltering step, another, then a collapse. Down went Lummux dragging the boys with him. They arose in high wrath. "Kick him!" exclaimed Billy. "Find a stick."

Fred kicked gingerly. Lummux sighed.

"Harder," said Billy.

Suddenly the big calf stumbled up, bellowed loudly and started along a path running over a low hill. He lumbered with action and presently capered.

His rescuers stared in amazement. "He knows the way home. He's all right!" cried Fred. "Follow him. Hold on, Lummux."

Surely this was a turning of the tables. The boys had difficulty in keeping up but it was pleasant diversion. "We'll see where he lives, any way," panted Billy.

Over the hill and down a lane sped the calf. Close upon his heels were the lads, shouting with merriment. Lummux scooted into a farm yard.

"Hey! Whatcher chasin' thet critter fer?" yelled an indignant voice, and the rescuers were confronted by a grizzled and menacing individual, whose eye and hand held warning and a horse whip respectively.

The calf savers halted, appalled. The man came up. "Here, 'm I a-lookin' high an' low, an' you a-runnin' him 'round the lots. What d'yer mean?" He flourished the whip.

"We only brought him home," explained Billy, whose outraged sense of justice lent him voice. "He was froze on the ice and we got him ashore."

"Yes, sir," chimed Fred. "He couldn't move himself a mite, and we thought he was dead."

"Wall!" said the farmer coming close. "He come to quick. Down on the pond, hey?" grinning. "I believe yer. The marks is on yer. Didn't yer leave no hair on him et all?" He pointed at their clothes and haw-hawed. "Yer good boys ter do thet for a dumb critter," he added, "an' I'm obleeged. Come in the house an' I'll bres yer off."

Ten minutes later two smiling youths were walking on the road to the village. Each had a doughnut in his hand and conversation somewhat impeded. Their pockets bulged.

"Fred" observed Billy, "ou ain't going to tell what we did?"

"Not much!" was the reply. "I'm just as ashamed of it as you are."—Criterion.

Tried in the Fire.

The words of wisdom which Mrs. Hall from time to time let fall for the enlightenment of her children were always treasured and often repeated. "You don't want to get the wrong notion about what makes a room homelike to a man," she said to her oldest daughter, who was soon to be married.

"Somebody once gave me a story to read, when your father and I were just engaged, that told how a young woman that married an old bachelor kept leaving a glove or a little piece of sewing or a handkerchief on his desk, so that when he came home at night and saw it there he had a sudden glow at his heart, thinking that his lonely days were forever gone.

"I thought it was a lovely idea, and I tried it. I'd leave my crocheting on your father's writing-table, or drop my gloves carelessly on his particular book-shelf, and all such things. He always brought them to me, and he never said anything; but he wasn't a great talker, and I felt sure his heart was glowing just like the man's in the story.

"I thought so for as much as three months. Then one day he came bringing home that great brass-bound box that stands on top of my old bureau—you know the one I mean? Well, he came bringing that, and he collected a glove from his shelf, and a handkerchief from in among his pipes, and my crochet pattern from the writing-table, and he brought them all to me.

"'Now here's a box,' he said, 'that ought to be big enough to keep all your little extras in,'—he said it pleasantly, but real firm, 'and you see if having one place for all of them won't help you to remember where they are.'

"All the time I thought his heart was glowing he was just bearing with me—that was all.

"If you want to give a 'feminine, homelike touch' to Edmund's belongings you lay out his clean clothes and put in his cuff links, if you're sure you've got the right ones, and warm his slippers, if he wears slippers; but if I were in your place I shouldn't leave so much as a spool of thread around with the idea of putting his heart in a glow."

Celluloid Articles.

A manufacturer of celluloid articles says that the danger of these articles exploding into flame when near a fire is greatly exaggerated. Nevertheless he adds this long list of "don'ts:" "Don't place hot curling irons near your celluloid hair comb; don't drop a match on the celluloid back of a hair brush or hand glass after you have lighted the gas in your dressing room; don't use the celluloid handle of your paper cutter to press down the tobacco in your lighted pipe; don't put your celluloid beads near a light; don't hang a celluloid bead curtain where there is an unprotected light; don't keep loose matches in the same pocket with your celluloid cardcase or diary." It would be simpler not to use celluloid at all, as a matter of fact.

Where Germany Fails.

The effort of Germany to become independent of foreign countries for a number of products by developing them in her colonies has failed in the matter of cocoa, coffee, tobacco and ginger. The only definitely successful venture is that with sisal hemp. Peanuts have done fairly well.

HUMAN BEINGS BOUGHT AND SOLD IN MOROCCO.

The Trade in Christian Slaves Almost Entirely Stopped by Queen Victoria; but Rumor Says There Are Even Now White Women Secretly Held as Slaves.

Slavery has been almost rooted out of Africa, but the Arabs remain slave traders at heart, and there is more buying and selling even in this year of grace than most people imagine.

Many of Morocco's crumbling cities owe their walls and battlements to the unremitting labor of Christian slaves. There are men still living and working who can remember the days when slaves were openly bought and sold in all Morocco's coast towns.

Thanks chiefly to the intercession of Queen Victoria this traffic was stopped in the latter part of the last century, and today the slave markets of Morocco are held either in the great capital cities or at some of the big country fairs. In Marrakesh, the Sultan's southern capital, you can count slaves by the hundred; and during the two hours of the daily sale the transactions include scores of human beings.

I may also mention a fact that is perhaps quite unknown in this country and seems to be a jealously guarded secret in Morocco, says G. L. Bensusan in the Wide World magazine. It is that there are white women slaves in several parts of the country; not Circassians, but seemingly women from western Europe!

When the market is about to begin a dozen men file through the entrance. They are the auctioneers, the dilals, who have been occupied with the representative of the Government, giving him a list and description of all who are to be offered for sale.

This preliminary work done they are now coming to the serious business of the afternoon. They move in a line to a point where there is some shade, and then they turn toward the east, the sloping sun behind them. The chief auctioneer now offers up an opening prayer.

He praises Allah who made the world and gave the True Faith. He curses Satan who has sought vainly without ceasing, to destroy mankind. He praises the patron saint of the city of Marrakesh and calls upon him to intercede with Allah in order that all who buy and sell in the slave market may have health, prosperity and length of days.

Such are his appeals, delivered slowly, solemnly and with a certain measure of dignified gesture; and to one and all of them the dilals on either hand and the buyers sitting at their ease along the central arcade or by the walls respond with a pious "Amen." They hold it is no more than a seemly thing that business should commence with prayer, and the fact that the business happens to be buying and selling slaves does nothing to obviate the necessity.

Prayers over, the dilals break up and proceed each to his pen, or pens, to summon the occupants to range themselves in line. For a few moments the confusion is indescribable. The dilals rush hither and thither, arranging their human chattels in groups. Then, having placed themselves at the head of their respective groups, they promenade slowly around the market.

We cannot watch them all, so we select an average one containing a boy and a girl, brother and sister, who have been brought in by a caravan and are facing a slave market for the first time in their lives. Beside them are two vigorous men, two able women, two young children and a very old and very black man.

There is no sign of great excitement or unrest among the slaves. Only the boy and girl who are already grown up seem to feel their position acutely.

The children are obviously unconcerned, and if they take any interest at all in the proceedings it is associated with their own bright garments, which, by the way, have been lent to them by the auctioneers in charge, in order that they may present a more attractive figure. When they have been purchased their new owners must pay for these gaudy rags or return them.

As he goes for the first and second time in a wide circle around the central arcade our auctioneer proclaims the merits of his wares in general terms, and then a purchaser demands the price of the two middle aged men, who seem to have years of considerable activity before them. The dilal pauses and presents the two slaves, who reply to various questions that the intending purchaser puts to them.

The dilal himself talks very volubly and the result must be satisfactory, for the patron names a price and the dilal, with a pious "Praise be to Allah, who made the world," gathers his company around him once again and moves off, proclaiming that the price of the two men is so many dollars, and urging the assembled buyers to do better still. Apparently they are not inclined to take advantage of their chances, for after the circle has been completed twice more the dilal pauses again and hands the two slaves over to their new master.

By this time he has a bid for the grown boy and girl, and summoning one of his companions to complete the negotiation and sign the papers relating to the purchase just concluded, he hurries off again, extolling the merits of the pair he hopes to sell next. In this case there is some short, sharp competition.

BEES IN AN AQUARIUM.

Keeping Them There a Good Way of Finding Out How Doth the Little Busy.

Everybody is curious to see bees actually at work.

Take a rectangular glass aquarium and place it on a window sill, elevated slightly at the side nearest the window, so that when the latter is raised an inch the bees may pass in and out. If desired, the bees may be kept for some time in confinement, by raising the aquarium an inch on blocks and using a strip of wire screen cloth to prevent the bees from escaping.

When confined, the bees should be fed a syrup of equal parts of sugar and water. A frame or two of bees may be purchased for a trifling sum.

Put within this glass aquarium some rustic supports to represent projecting, undecayed portions of the inside of the hollow trunk. Keep all covered by an opaque cloth when not observing what is going on within this glass bee home.

Then the bees will be free to work, and to adapt themselves to the environment. They can suit their own fancy about attaching combs to the sticks; they may build diagonally or in any other form that they may prefer, and they may attach the comb to sides or ends just when and where they think it is necessary.

In the artificial hives the combs are attached only at the edges, but in natural conditions within the bee tree or in its counterpart, as represented by the old-fashioned box hive with opaque sides and in our transparent inverted aquarium, the bees can build combs and attach them in any way that they see fit.

One of the most interesting objects for study is to note when the bees think it necessary to put out a side support from a long comb. They seem to believe that they are really within a hollow tree, and that it is likely to be swayed by the gales. Of course, when so swayed long combs laden with honey or with young bees would be too much for the unyielding rigidity of the upper part of the combs. These, if they had no side stays, would bend, crack and be crushed against each other.

The bees have learned this, and give the combs a firm support, whenever it is necessary. They do this, it is true, to a certain extent, in the regular eight or ten-frame hive, but not with the naturalness with which they do it in a large, unobstructed space.

Not long ago a veteran bee keeper took a colony of bees from an attic, where they had been for many years.

"Well," said he, "you should have seen the funny forms of those combs—most interesting thing I ever saw. There was one pillar almost round—a solid centre right up and several feet long—and then combs around that; the most fantastic shapes you ever saw."—Suburban Life.

Use for Walls of Seoul.

The wall which runs around Seoul serves no useful purpose whatever; in fact, by restricting traffic between the city and suburbs to a few narrow gates, it is a great nuisance. There are enough stones in the wall to reconstruct the greater part of the drainage in the city, and with a little levelling the banks upon which the wall is built would make admirable building sites and the money obtained from them would go a long way toward the cost of city improvements.—Korean Daily News.

Music for South Africa.

One of the greatest markets in the world for musical instruments is South Africa, which spends on the average of £200,000 a year, about £100,000 of which goes in pianos.—London Sketch.

RECALLS MIGRATIONS OF OLD DAYS.

One Plentiful in the East—Ornithologist Tells of One Flock a Mile Wide and Two Hundred and Forty Miles Long.

It is most welcome news, if the reports be true, says the Providence Tribune, that the wild pigeon has been seen in some parts of the Western country. It is many years since those immense flocks which were a wonder to the beholder disappeared all of a sudden, and no man could tell the cause of their disappearance nor the place to which they had flown. They were seen as late as the middle seventies in New York State, but before that time they had ceased to visit New England. Sixty years ago they were numerous in some parts of Maine, especially where the India wheat was grown in large quantities, and where the blueberry pastures offered their tempting fruit. In those days the Boston markets supplied them sometimes at fifty cents a dozen and the memories of pigeon stew with dumplings or the juicy pot pie are fragrant to many a man who has reached the Psalmist's limit of age.

A remarkable characteristic of these birds was their associating together, both in their migrations and during the time of incubation, in such prodigious numbers as almost to be beyond belief; no one of the other feathered tribes is at all like the wild pigeon in this respect.

The migrations of the bird do not seem to have been caused simply by the cold of the climate, for as late as December they used to be found in the northern regions around Hudson's Bay. It was rather in quest of the food that they made their flights. As the beechnut was the chief food of the wild pigeon, in those seasons and places where it was most abundant corresponding multitudes of pigeons might be expected.

When they had consumed all the beech nuts in one district they would discover another, perhaps a hundred miles off, to which they would go, returning at night to their general roosting place, which was always in a large forest. When they frequented one of these places for any length of time great havoc was made. All the tender grass and other herbage beneath their roost was utterly destroyed, large limbs of trees were broken down by the weight of the birds, and the trees themselves, for hundreds of acres, as completely killed as if girdled by an axe.

The breeding place was of greater extent than the place where they roosted. There was one in Kentucky which was said to stretch through the woods, in a north and south direction, nearly forty miles in length and several miles in breadth. In this tract almost every tree was furnished with nests wherever the branches could hold them. At this place the pigeons made their first appearance about April 11 and left it altogether with their young before May 25.

Space is wanting to describe the sad havoc made among the birds by the people in whose section they nested. The natives came from all the surrounding districts and encamped for days among the immense nurseries. Ther cut down the trees which were most crowded with nests, and the falling of one tree sometimes produced two hundred squabs little inferior in size to the old ones and almost one mass of fat.

From the account given of the flight of vast flocks of the wild pigeons one is reminded of the locust swarms of the East. Wilson, in his "American Ornithology," describes a flight which he once saw on his way to Frankfort, Ky.

It travelled in a compact body at a height beyond gunshot, with great rapidity and steadfastness. Curious to know how long the passage would continue he took out his watch and waited more than an hour. But the procession seemed only to increase in numbers and so he continued on his journey. When he reached Frankfort, four hours after he first saw the flock the living torrent over the head was as extensive as ever.

Mr. Wilson afterward made a curious calculation of this flock. If we suppose the column to have been only one mile in breadth (and he believed it to be much more) and that it moved at the rate of a mile a minute, four hours, the time it continued passing, would make the whole length two hundred and forty miles. Again, supposing that each squab yard of this moving body enclosed three pigeons, the square yards in the whole space multiplied by three would give two billion two hundred and thirty million, two hundred and seventy-two thousand.

It could not be possible that simply the daughter by mag was the cause of the total disappearance of such huge flocks. Perhaps the continuance of the civil war was the reason of their migrating to some more congenial district of our immense country where man has not discovered them. Anyhow, if they are really coming back the old song of seventy years ago will be revived and we can "bid farewell to pork and beans and live on pigeon pie."

BADGER FOUND GOLD MINE.

Strange Story of an Old Miner's Discovery in Nevada.

N. H. George, Santa Fe yardmaster, has taken a layoff of three weeks and gone to Nevada to develop a gold mining claim which he has there.

Mr. George grub stak[illegible] and struck [illegible] Nevada. This miner [illegible] excellent surface indications [illegible] Nevada Mountains and [illegible] claims. The prospects were [illegible] that Mr. George, his brother-in-law took [illegible] claims. The old grizzled [illegible] ed away all winter on the [illegible] plied him by Mr. George. [illegible] velopments were encouraging [illegible] not pan out large quantities [illegible] yellow metal.

A short time since [illegible] miner, in hard luck, came [illegible] first miner's claim, carrying [illegible] of tools with him. Mr. [illegible] friend was naturally lonesome [illegible] vited the stranger to take [illegible] and after looking over the [illegible] this stranger decided to do [illegible] evening or two later the two [illegible] sat on a ledge of rock talking [illegible] a badger came into sight. The [illegible] gave chase, and the badger [illegible] a hole on the stranger's claim [illegible]

They went to work with [illegible] and soon dug the badger out [illegible] doing so they made a remarkable [illegible] covery. His bed, in the bottom [illegible] hole, was made on a big chunk [illegible] very richest of gold ore. [illegible] in the stone on which he [illegible] worth $10,000. In this way [illegible] covered a rich vein of gold [illegible] quarts which runs through [illegible] mines as well as those belonging [illegible] Mr. George, his brother and [illegible] er-in-law. Mr. George's trip [illegible] vada is for the purpose of [illegible] vestigating his new gold mine [illegible] ington Mail.

"Will There Be Room?"

An interesting calculation [illegible] made as to the dimensions of [illegible] as given in the 21st of [illegible] 16th verse, which reads:

"He measured the city [illegible] reed, twelve thousand furlongs [illegible] length and the breadth [illegible] heighth are equal."

Twelve thousand furlongs [illegible] 000 feet cubed, or 497,793,000,000,000 feet. If one-half of [illegible] was reserved for the throne [illegible] of heaven and one-half of the [illegible] for streets, there would still [illegible] no less than 124,198,272,000,000 feet cubic. Divide this into [illegible] feet square with 4,096 cubits [illegible] a room, and there will be, [illegible] numbers, 30,321,843,750,000,000. We will now suppose that [illegible] contains, always did contain [illegible] 000 people, and that a generation [illegible] for one-third of a century, [illegible] all 2,970,000,000 every century. [illegible] then, the world was to endure [illegible] 000 centuries, or one million [illegible] the aggregate census would be [illegible] 000,000,000,000. Plainly, there [illegible] would be afforded more than [illegible] rooms, each 16 feet square, [illegible] person.

All this is something [illegible] figures, but if one will "take [illegible] and paper, and figure it out, [illegible] never question but what there [illegible] be "rooms in heaven," even [illegible] versalism is true.—Dr. W. [illegible] in Hartford Times.

Traveling From the Cape to Cairo.

Miss Mary Hall, the first [illegible] accomplish the feat of crossing [illegible] whole length of the Africas [illegible] from the Cape to Cairo, is making a stay in Cairo to rest [illegible] fatigue of her wonderful journey. [illegible] most remarkable feature of [illegible] ploit is perhaps that Miss Hall, [illegible] of course, is no novice at [illegible] or even exploration, journeying [illegible] no companion of her own sex. [illegible] wonderful is the fact that the [illegible] the thousands of miles of [illegible] plains, rivers and lakes traversed [illegible] the interpid lady, she was [illegible] long away from the haunts of civilization. Livingstone would [illegible] Stanley would exclaim in wonder. [illegible] Miss Hall's travels emphasize [illegible] amazing change that has come [illegible] the face of Africa within [illegible] space of fifteen or even ten years. [illegible] was marvellous enough when [illegible] koro and the Upper Nile were [illegible] within the sphere of tourist [illegible] but that sphere is now spreading [illegible] Uganda and the equatorial lakes, [illegible] eventually it will embrace [illegible] lies between the seat of civilization [illegible] the Mediterranean and the Cape [illegible] Good Hope—Cairo Correspondence [illegible] the London Globe.

The Prime of Life.

The larger part of the great [illegible] of this country have been [illegible] ed after their amassers have [illegible] 40. In fact, the first 40 years [illegible] man's life are the preparatory [illegible] the years of training and [illegible] A large part of this time [illegible] the foundation—just getting [illegible] rear the superstructure. Many [illegible] stumble around many years [illegible] get into the right place and [illegible] additional years, we make [illegible] takes. Most men do not get [illegible] til they have passed 40. [illegible] get knowledge before this, [illegible] much wisdom. Wisdom is a [illegible] process. It takes time.

At the age when Dr. Osler [illegible] men are becoming useless, [illegible] was trying to get an appointment [illegible] a land commissioner, and [illegible] the same age nobody outside [illegible] own little community knew [illegible] Grant. He had not then [illegible] ed anything of note, and [illegible] same the greatest military [illegible] his day.

Every man makes his own [illegible] Some reach it at 35, some at [illegible] at 50; some do not reach it [illegible] some never reach it, but [illegible] never cease to grow.—Success.

Methodist

[illegible] May Be Found at Skiiro.

[illegible]ting attractions of Skiiro, [illegible]rie's Highland home, are [illegible]ed up: The extent of this [illegible] is about 20,000 acres, of [illegible]t 10,000 acres are moor, [illegible] arable, and 4000 acres [illegible]; 300 brace grouse, 22 [illegible]low bucks, 42 roe deer, [illegible]k game, partridges, pheasants, [illegible] woodcock, hares, rabbits, [illegible]fowl may be expected. There [illegible]mon and sea trout fishing [illegible]15 miles of the Evelix, and [illegible] fishing in Lochs Migdale, [illegible]Lars and Buidhe.—Westminster.

[illegible]ew/Dance: Nervous Diseases permanently cured by Dr. Kline's Great Nerve [illegible] $2 trial bottle and treatise free. [illegible]line, Ld., 931 Arch St., Phila., Pa.

[illegible] a deaf man can't keep on [illegible]ose same old stories.

[illegible]w's Soothing Syrup for Children [illegible]thens the gums, reduces inflammation, [illegible]pain, cures wind colic, 25c a bottle [illegible] the contents of your cup of [illegible]nd more or less happiness [illegible]mid therein.

[illegible]rs's Sons, of Atlanta, Ga., are [illegible]ccessful Dropsy Specialists in the [illegible] their liberal offer in advertisement [illegible]nother column of this paper.

[illegible] they do not readily enter [illegible]t only when put to it from [illegible] the squirrel and the rabbit [illegible]g the fastest swimmers of all [illegible]mals.

OR CURED OF ECZEMA.

[illegible] Physician Cures Himself—Dr. [illegible]r Says: "Cuticura Remedies [illegible] Possess True Merit."

[illegible]e was afflicted with eczema in [illegible]897. I used the Cuticura Remedies [illegible]s entirely cured. I am a practician, and very often prescribe [illegible] Resolvent and Cuticura Soap in [illegible] eczema, and they have cured [illegible] formulas have failed. I am [illegible] habit of endorsing patent medicines, [illegible] when I find remedies possessing [illegible] such as the Cuticura Remedies [illegible] broad-minded enough to proclaim [illegible] virtues to the world. I have [illegible]ticing medicine for sixteen years, [illegible]ay I find your Remedies A No. [illegible]. at liberty to publish this letter. [illegible]M. Fisher, M. D., Big Pool, Md., [illegible]1899."

[illegible]plomat and Philosopher.

[illegible]y is told in Paris of a diplo[illegible]who represented a South American [illegible]public a few years ago. There [illegible] so many revolutions at home [illegible] financiers there had no time [illegible] him his salary. But he took [illegible]fortune philosophically, sold [illegible]rniture of the legation except [illegible] table and some chairs, and occupied [illegible]e room with his principal attaché, [illegible]who cooked the meals. Any [illegible] called early on the minister [illegible]robably find him cleaning the [illegible] "What would you have?" he [illegible]ay, waving a boot expressively, [illegible] poor country is in another [illegible]d has forgotten us again. But [illegible] go back I shall make a revolution [illegible]nd appoint myself president. [illegible] shall have our reward for all [illegible]dential."

Artful Persons.

[illegible] one of the most artful men [illegible] to deal with," said a sanitary [illegible] in a London police court of [illegible]an who was fined. "I remember [illegible] one occasion I met his sister [illegible] some milk, and as soon as [illegible] me she fell on her back and [illegible]he whole of the milk in the London-Paris Visits.

[illegible] hundred Paris butchers made [illegible]rsion to London recently and [illegible]ive hours. They were correspondingly received. Such excursions are [illegible]ible now, on account of the [illegible] cordiale. Several hundred [illegible] sewermen recently paid a [illegible]it to Paris.

A WINNING START.

[illegible]ctly Digested Breakfast Makes [illegible]erve Force For the Day.

[illegible]ything goes wrong if the [illegible]t lies in your stomach like a [illegible]. What you eat does harm [illegible]n't digest it—it turns to poison.

[illegible]ght lady teacher found this [illegible]true, even of an ordinary light [illegible]t of eggs and toast. She [illegible]0 years ago I contracted a [illegible]moying form of indigestion. [illegible]omach was in such condition [illegible] simple breakfast of fruit, toast [illegible] gave me great distress.

[illegible]as slow to believe that trouble [illegible]come from such a simple diet, [illegible]ally had to give it up, and [illegible] a great change upon a cup of [illegible]Postum and Grape-Nuts with [illegible] for my morning meal. For [illegible]than a year I have held to this [illegible], and have not suffered except [illegible]judiciously varying my diet. [illegible]have been a teacher for several [illegible]and find that my easily digested [illegible]breakfast means a saving of nerve [illegible]force for the entire day. My [illegible] of ten pounds in weight also [illegible]me to want to testify to the [illegible] of Grape-Nuts.

[illegible]pe-Nuts holds first rank at [illegible]ia."

[illegible]e given by Postum Co., Battle [illegible], Mich.

[illegible]e's a reason." Read the little [illegible], "The Road to Wellville," in

A NEW YO[illegible]

More Persons [illegible] Than on Tre[illegible]

Wherever [illegible] York skyscrap[illegible] vague idea of [illegible] of these colossa[illegible] been formed, [illegible] that few perso[illegible] metropolis hav[illegible] study of the a[illegible] mercial centres [illegible] those who wou[illegible] statement trav[illegible] New York is e[illegible] persons, or as [illegible] ulation of Ha[illegible] similar cities o[illegible] Houston, Texa[illegible] coln, Neb., and [illegible] persons in citi[illegible] gomery, Ala. [illegible] ment may be [illegible] essary only to [illegible] an accurate co[illegible] by F. T. H. Bu[illegible] the Park Row [illegible] one of the mo[illegible] New York sky[illegible] son who ente[illegible] that edifice. [illegible] to station gua[illegible] to the building [illegible] entering a tic[illegible] taken up by th[illegible] the close of [illegible] were counted, [illegible] something mo[illegible] had ridden on [illegible] This is said to [illegible] fares collected [illegible] car system of [illegible] single day, th[illegible] from a former [illegible] trolley service [illegible] subsequently e[illegible] agents of the [illegible] —Remsen Cra[illegible] azine.

Handling [illegible]

"Money? [illegible] much of it m[illegible] Not at all. T[illegible] like so much [illegible] Thus spoke [illegible] bank yesterda[illegible] a young man [illegible] the counter [illegible] gold and silve[illegible] paper money.

"I'm sure [illegible] constant temp[illegible] for my own u[illegible] side.

"Yes you c[illegible] ler. "You cou[illegible] here a week. [illegible] the money wo[illegible] you, and you'd [illegible] power to keep [illegible] after a week [illegible] like money. [illegible] article you de[illegible] seem to the [illegible] $60 a month [illegible] sand who th[illegible] money he ha[illegible] debt and is be[illegible] To the bank [illegible] debts paid and [illegible] keep from th[illegible] need for cash [illegible] Handling mor[illegible] to a teller. A[illegible] food in his st[illegible] for more, and [illegible] steak has no[illegible] But let him go[illegible] he'll covet t[illegible] way for a ma[illegible] In a bank to b[illegible] tion to approp[illegible] of debt and [illegible] and expensive [illegible] Post.

Thinks [illegible]

A strange [illegible] tice Joyce's c[illegible] that of a st[illegible] gentleman gr[illegible] had been u[illegible] "sorcery," an[illegible] phathic mea[illegible] "caused him [illegible]

As Mr. Jo[illegible] who is bring[illegible] gard to trans[illegible] when he wa[illegible] these accusat[illegible] er, Sir Alfre[illegible] emphanized h[illegible] not which he[illegible]

"Are you [illegible] ence?" asked [illegible] "It has not [illegible] probably ne[illegible] Thomas, rais[illegible] He added [illegible] difference to [illegible] was conveyed [illegible] ence" might [illegible] brother's age[illegible] In adjourn[illegible] expressed as [illegible] in dispute o[illegible] court.—Lond[illegible]

The use of [illegible] ably begins [illegible] employed it [illegible] foundation [illegible] from the ti[illegible] ancient city [illegible] walls existin[illegible] which are b[illegible] stone. Thes[illegible] state of pre[illegible] time; in fact [illegible] still bear the [illegible] which made [illegible] the concrete [illegible] at the time [illegible] interesting [illegible] modern pre[illegible] masses of st[illegible] follows exact[illegible] building the[illegible] dad Rodrigo [illegible] reduces the [illegible] fabric, but a [illegible] Scientific Am[illegible]

THE PURE IN HEART.

In the vale of the Cornwallis
Lettice lies asleep.
And the tides forever moving
All about her creep.
And the five sea-rivers flowing
Day and night, keep coming, going,
But they rouse not little Lettice
From her sleep.

Through the marshes of Cornwallis,
Through the rusty red,
Slips the sea his shining fingers
All about her bed
And the zigzag birds are stringing
Up above the bleak Cornwallis,
And the sad brown grasses singing
Round her head.

Little Lettice was my sister,
And we used to play
On the hills and by the beaches,
In the salt sea spray
Lettice loved the squirrel's chirring
And the crumpled leaves a stirring
In the vale of the Cornwallis
All the day.

—Florence Wilkinson.

THE Salvation of Lummux

By ELLIOT WALKER.

"What's that down on the pond, Billy?"

"Got me, Fred, what is it?"

In the nipping air the two boys stood, shading their eyes with mittened hands from the glare of the afternoon sun

A hundred feet below them at the hill's base nestled Mud Pond, now But that is true as to man in general. The city has achieved its great frozen fast in the embrace of early winter. Beyond, the land, thinly covered with light snow through which dead grasses and dry stalks showed sere and brown, stretched in different degrees of elevation to tarifty farm houses banked up against the cold.

Some fifteen feet from the shore of the small, oval lake, a motionless object attracted the attention of the pair, who gazed open mouthed, vainly trying to imagine it a source of terror, with that desire of thrill peculiar to early youth

"Looks like a bear to me."

"Pshaw! No bears 'round here, Billy More like a dog, ain't it?"

"Let's go down and find out. It's a dead thing, I guess."

"Come on. I'll beat yer."

It was a slippery descent, made almost dangerous by a spirit of rivalry. Sliding recklessly with many a sudden check of their heedless feet, they brought upon the edge of the pond, breathless.

"Nothing but a calf, a miserable old dead calf," puffed Fred.

"Shucks!" responded the other, not to be outdone in disgust. "Thought at least it was a—a——" He paused in mental groping for some possible dangerous animal and finished, "Let's go out and kick it."

"That's what I say." They proceeded cautiously.

The supposed corpse, as if in apprehension of assault, here lifted a feeble head and gave voice to a despairing "Moo!" The boys jumped in pleased excitement at the unexpected.

"'Tain't dead. It's fell down."

"It's froze down. Yes, sir."

"Fell down and froze down," they agreed in simultaneous conclusion. "What a fool!"

The unhappy creature lowered its head resignedly and made a few impotent kicks.

Billy and Fred gazed at it with the unsympathetic eye of the small boy stifling better feelings, then exchanged a glance indicative of a proper hardening of the spirit.

"'Tain't our calf! Come along!"

"All right. Where'll we go now?"

They took a step backward. The calf groaned.

"I suppose," observed Billy reflectively, "I suppose we might help him up. He will die there, sure. Just for fun, you know," he added, hastily.

"We might," assented Fred in an absent way. "Getting late though," but he moved to the sufferer with a quick slide. "Huh! I slipped."

The boys fell on their knees beside the prostrate form. "He ain't frozen down very hard," remarked Billy, shoving a hand under the unfortunate who struggled in non-appreciation. "Let's get him up. Co-boss! Co-boss! What a lummux he is."

"He's a whopping big critter!"

"That's his name, I guess. Let's call him 'Lummux.'"

This pleasantry had an uplifting effect on all three. The lads bent to their work, laughing and succeeded in rolling the animal half over. It flopped back heavily in spite of their efforts.

"Pshaw!" panted the rescuers. "We'll never get him on his feet. You pull and I'll push, now!"

By dint of much hard work and malediction loudly expressed, the protesting Lummux was finally dragged and shoved to the shore, there to lie aimlessly. Behind him showed a melted imprint decorated with tufts of hair.

"Dear me!" sighed Fred. "Now what?"

"Boost him. Get on the other side." They tugged and tugged. The calf wobbled slowly to an upright position and stood trembling.

"Steady him now. There! Go on, Lummux!"

A faltering step, another, then a collapse. Down went Lummux dragging the boys with him. They arose in high wrath. "Kick him!" exclaimed Billy. "Find a stick."

Fred kicked gingerly. Lummux sighed.

"Harder," said Billy.

Suddenly the big calf staggered up, bellowed loudly and started along a path running over a low hill. He limbered with action and presently capered.

His rescuers stared in amazement. "He knows the way home. He's all right!" cried Fred. "Follow him. Hold on, Lummux."

Surely this was a turning of the tables. The boys had difficulty in keeping up but it was pleasant diversion. "We'll see where he lives, any way," panted Billy.

Over the hill and down a lane sped the calf. Close upon his heels were the lads, shouting with merriment. Lummux scooted into a farm yard.

"Hey! Whatcher chasin' thet critter fer?" yelled an indignant voice, and the rescuers were confronted by a grizzled and menacing individual, whose eye and hand held warning and a horse whip respectively.

The calf savers halted, appalled. The man came up. "Here, 'm I a-lookin' high an' low, an' you a-runnin' him 'round the lots. What d'yer mean?" He flourished the whip.

"We only brought him home," explained Billy, whose outraged sense of justice lent him voice. "He was froze on the ice and we got him ashore."

"Yes, sir," chimed Fred. "He couldn't move himself a mite, and we thought he was dead."

"Wall!" said the farmer coming close. "He come to quick. Down on the pond, hey?" grinning. "I believe yer. The marks is on yer. Didn't yer leave no hair on him et all?" He pointed at their clothes and haw-hawed. "Yer good boys ter do thet for a dumb critter," he added, "an' I'm obleeged. Come in the house an' I'll bres.. yer off."

Ten minutes later two smiling youths were walking on the road to the village. Each had a doughnut in his hand and conversation somewhat impeded. Their pockets bulged.

"Fred" observed Billy, "you ain't going to tell what we did?"

"Not much!" was the reply. "I'm just as ashamed of it as you are."—Criterion.

Tried in the Fire.

The words of wisdom which Mrs. Hall from time to time let fall for the enlightenment of her children were always treasured and often repeated. "You don't want to get the wrong notion about what makes a room homelike to a man," she said to her oldest daughter, who was soon to be married.

"Somebody once gave me a story to read, when your father and I were just engaged, that told how a young woman that married an old bachelor kept leaving a glove or a little piece of sewing or a handkerchief on his desk, so that when he came home at night and saw it there he had a sudden glow at his heart, thinking that his lonely days were forever gone.

"I thought it was a lovely idea, and I tried it. I'd leave my crocheting on your father's writing-table, or drop my gloves carelessly on his particular book-shelf, and all such things. He always brought them to me, and he never said anything; but he wasn't a great talker, and I felt sure his heart was glowing just like the man's in the story.

"I thought so for as much as three months. Then one day he came bringing home that great brass-bound box that stands on top of my old bureau—you know the one I mean? Well, he came bringing that, and he collected a glove from his shelf, and a handkerchief from in among his pipes, and my crochet pattern from the writing-table, and he brought them all to me.

"'Now here's a box,' he said, 'that ought to be big enough to keep all your little extras in,'—he said it pleasantly, but real firm,—'and you see if having one place for all of them won't help you to remember where they are.'

"All the time I thought his heart was glowing he was just bearing with me—that was all.

"If you want to give a 'feminine, homelike touch' to Edmund's belongings you lay out his clean clothes and put in his cuff links, if you're sure you've got the right ones, and warm his slippers, if he wears slippers; but if I were in your place I shouldn't leave so much as a spool of thread around with the idea of putting his heart in a glow."

Celluloid Articles.

A manufacturer of celluloid articles says that the danger of these articles exploding into flame when near a fire is greatly exaggerated. Nevertheless he adds this long list of "don'ts:" "Don't place hot curling irons near your celluloid hair comb; don't drop a match on the celluloid back of a hair brush or hand glass after you have lighted the gas in your dresseing room; don't use the celluloid handle of your paper cutter to press down the tobacco in your lighted pipe; don't put your celluloid beads near a light; don't hang a celluloid bead curtain where there is an unprotected light; don't keep loose matches in the same pocket with your celluloid cardcase or diary." It would be simpler not to use celluloid at all, as a matter of fact.

Where Germany Fails.

The effort of Germany to become independent of foreign countries for a number of products by developing them in her colonies has failed in the matter of cocoa, coffee, tobacco and ginger. The only definitely successful venture is that with sisal hemp. Peanuts have done fairly well.

AN AFRICAN SLAVE MARKET

HUMAN BEINGS BOUGHT AND SOLD IN MOROCCO.

The Trade in Christian Slaves Almost Entirely Stopped by Queen Victoria; but Rumor Says There Are Even Now White Women Secretly Held as Slaves.

Slavery has been almost rooted out of Africa, but the Arabs remain slave traders at heart, and there is more buying and selling even in this year of grace than most people imagine.

Many of Morocco's crumbling cities owe their walls and battlements to the unremitting labor of Christian slaves. There are men still living and working who can remember the days when slaves were openly bought and sold in all Morocco's coast towns.

Thanks chiefly to the intercession of Queen Victoria this traffic was stopped in the latter part of the last century, and today the slave markets of Morocco are held either in the great capital cities or at some of the big country fairs. In Marrakesh, the Sultan's southern capital, you can count slaves by the hundred; and during the two hours of the daily sale the transactions include scores of human beings.

I may also mention a fact that is perhaps quite unknown in this country and seems to be a jealously guarded secret in Morocco, says S. L. Bensusan in the Wide World magazine. It is that there are white women slaves in several parts of the country; not Circassians, but seemingly women from western Europe!

When the market is about to begin a dozen men file through the entrance. They are the auctioneers, the dilals, who have been occupied with the representative of the Government, giving him a list and description of all who are to be offered for sale.

This preliminary work done they are now coming to the serious business of the afternoon. They move in a line to a point where there is some shade, and then they turn toward the east, the sloping sun behind them. The chief auctioneer now offers up an opening prayer.

He praises Allah who made the world and gave the True Faith. He curses Satan who has sought vainly without ceasing, to destroy mankind. He praises the patron saint of the city of Marrakesh and calls upon him to intercede with Allah in order that all who buy and sell in the slave market may have health, prosperity and length of days.

Such are his appeals, delivered slowly, solemnly and with a certain measure of dignified gesture; and to one and all of them the dilals on either hand and the buyers sitting at their ease along the central arcade or by the walls respond with a pious "Amen." They hold it is no more than a seemly thing that business should commence with prayer, and the fact that the business happens to be buying and selling slaves does nothing to obviate the necessity.

Prayers over, the dilals break up and proceed each to his pen, or pens, to summon the occupants to range themselves in line. For a few moments the confusion is indescribable. The dilals rush hither and thither, arranging their human chattels in groups. Then, having placed themselves at the head of their respective groups, they promenade slowly around the market.

We cannot watch them all, so we select an average one containing a boy and a girl, brother and sister, who have been brought in by a caravan and are facing a slave market for the first time in their lives. Beside them are two vigorous men, two able women, two young children and a very old and very black man.

There is no sign of great excitement or unrest among the slaves. Only the boy and girl who are already grown up seem to feel their position acutely.

The children are obviously unconcerned, and if they take any interest at all in the proceedings it is associated with their own bright garments, which, by the way, have been lent to them by the auctioneers in charge, in order that they may present a more attractive figure. When they have been purchased their new owners must pay for these guady rags or return them.

As he goes for the first and second time in a wide circle around the central arcade our auctioneer proclaims the merits of his wares in general terms, and then a purchaser demands the price of the two middle aged men, who seem to have years of considerable activity before them. The dilal pauses and presents the two slaves, who reply to various questions that the intending purchaser puts to them.

The dilal himself talks very volubly and the result must be satisfactory, for the patron names a price and the dilal, with a pious "Praise be to Allah, who made the world," gathers his company around him once again and moves off, proclaiming that the price of the two men is so many dollars, and urging the assembled buyers to do better still. Apparently they are not inclined to take advantage of their chances, for after the circle has been completed twice more the dilal pauses again and hands the two slaves over to their new master.

By this time he has a bid for the grown boy and girl, and summoning one of his companions to complete the negotiation and sign the papers relating to the purchase just concluded, he hurries off again, extolling the merits of the pair he hopes to sell next. In this case there is some short, sharp competition.

The price rises by five and even ten dollars at a time, and then—ominous sign—there is separate bidding for the boy and the girl, bidding that hints at separation. However, in the end, a great country Kaid, who has travelled from Tarudant, secures the pair, and they pass out of the promenading circle into the care of one of his stewards—himself a slave. I watched carefully for some expression of emotion on the faces of these two young people who had been stolen and sold as though they were chattels, but it was perfectly impossible to note anything more than bewilderment.

Presently there was a sudden interruption in the market place from a little group in front of me. Here we saw the one dramatic incident of the afternoon. Since the market opened a woman, who was approaching middle age, had been tramping round and round without interesting the buyers. Now at last there had been some small bid for her.

It had been accompanied by the usual queries that all buyers make. There had been no hesitation about reply, but at the very last moment, when the sale was completed, the women raised her voice and cried aloud that she was of the true faith and had been stolen.

Instantly there was an outcry, and the concern of the auctioneer was very genuine indeed. If the woman's protest was correct, and she would hardly have made it otherwise, here was a scandal of some dimensions, for it is no small matter, even in Morocco, to sell a free Moslem woman into slavery.

After her story had been heard the sale of the woman was held to be invalid. Notice was sent to her owner, and by the time this little matter was settled the muezzin was calling from the nearest minaret that the hour of evening prayer had come.

BEES IN AN AQUARIUM.

Keeping Them There a Good Way of Finding Out How Doth the Little Busy.

Everybody is curious to see bees actually at work.

Take a rectangular glass aquarium and place it on a window sill, elevated slightly at the side nearest the window, so that when the latter is raised an inch the bees may pass in and out. If desired, the bees may be kept for some time in confinement, by raising the aquarium an inch on blocks and using a strip of wire screen cloth to prevent the bees from escaping.

When confined, the bees should be fed a syrup of equal parts of sugar and water. A frame or two of bees may be purchased for a trifling sum.

Put within this glass aquarium some rustic supports to represent projecting, undecayed portions of the inside of the hollow trunk. Keep all covered by an opaque cloth when not observing what is going on within this glass bee home.

Then the bees will be free to work, and to adapt themselves to the environment. They can suit their own fancy about attaching combs to the sticks; they may build diagonally or in any other form that they may prefer, and they may attach the comb to sides or ends just when and where they think it is necessary.

In the artificial hives the combs are attached only at the edges, but in natural conditions within the bee tree or in its counterpart, as represented by the old-fashioned box hive with opaque sides and in our transparent inverted aquarium, the bees can build combs and attach them in any way that they see fit.

One of the most interesting objects for study is to note when the bees think it necessary to put out a side support from a long comb. They seem to believe that they are really within a hollow tree, and that it is likely to be swayed by the gales. Of course, when se swayed long combs laden with honey or with young bees would be too much for the unyielding rigidity of the upper part of the combs. These, if they had no side stays, would bend, crack and be crushed against each other.

The bees have learned this, and give the combs a firm support, whenever it is necessary. They do this, it is true, to a certain extent, in the regular eight or ten-frame hive, but not with the naturalness with which they do it in a large, unobstructed space.

Not long ago a veteran bee keeper took a colony of bees from an attic, where they had been for many years.

"Well," said he, "you should have seen the funny forms of those combs—most interesting thing I ever saw. There was one pillar almost round—a solid centre right up and several feet long—and then combs around that; the most fantastic shapes you ever saw."—Suburban Life.

Use for Walls of Seoul.

The wall which runs around Seoul serves no useful purpose whatever; in fact, by restricting traffic between the city and suburbs to a few narrow gates, it is a great nuisance. There are enough stones in the wall to reconstruct the greater part of the drainage in the city, and with a little levelling the banks upon which the wall is built would make admirable building sites and the money obtained from them would go a long way toward the cost of city improvements.—Korean Daily News.

Music for South Africa.

One of the greatest markets in the world for musical instruments is South Africa, which spends on the average of £200,000 a year, about £100,000 of which goes in pianos.—London Sketch.

WILD PIGEONS RETURN.

GREAT FLOCKS SEEN IN WEST RECALLS MIGRATIONS OF OLD DAYS.

Once Plentiful in the East—Ornithologist Tells of One Flock a Mile Wide and Two Hundred and Forty Miles Long.

It is most welcome news, if the reports be true, says the Providence Tribune, that the wild pigeon has been seen in some parts of the Western country. It is many years since those immense flocks which were a wonder to the beholder disappeared all of a sudden, and no man could tell the cause of their disappearance nor the place to which they had flown. They were seen as late as the middle seventies in New York State, but before that time they had ceased to visit New England. Sixty years ago they were numerous in some parts of Maine, especially where the India wheat was grown in large quantities, and where the blueberry pastures offered their tempting fruit In those days the Boston markets supplied them sometimes at fifty cents a dozen and the memories of pigeon stew with dumplings or the juicy pot pie are fragrant to many a man who has reached the Psalmist's limit of age.

A remarkable characteristic of these birds was their associating together, both in their migrations and during the time of incubation, in such prodigious numbers as almost to be beyond belief; no one of the other feathered tribes is at all like the wild pigeon in this respect.

The migrations of the bird do not seem to have been caused simply by the cold of the climate, for as late as December they used to be found in the northern regions around Hudson's Bay. It was rather in quest of the food that they made their flights. As the beechnut was the chief food of the wild pigeon, in those seasons and places where it was most abundant corresponding multitudes of pigeons might be expected.

When they had consumed all the beech nuts in one district they would discover another, perhaps a hundred miles off, to which they would go, returning at night to their general roosting place, which was always in a large forest. When they frequented one of these places for any length of time great havoc was made. All the tender grass and other herbage beneath their roost was utterly destroyed, large limbs of trees were broken down by the weight of the birds, and the trees themselves, for hundreds of acres, as completely killed as if girdled by an axe.

The breeding place was of greater extent than the place where they roosted. There was one in Kentucky which was said to stretch through the woods, in a north and south direction, nearly forty miles in length and several miles in breadth. In this tract almost every tree was furnished with nests wherever the branches could hold them. At this place the pigeons made their first appearance about April 11 and left it altogether with their young before May 25.

Space is wanting to describe the sad havoc made among the birds by the people in whose section they nested. The natives came from all the surrounding districts and encamped for days among the immense nurseries. Then cut down the trees which were most crowded with nests, and the falling of one tree sometimes produced two hundred squabs little inferior in size to the old ones and almost one mass of fat.

From the account given of the flight of vast flocks of the wild pigeons one is reminded of the locust swarms of the East. Wilson, in his "American Ornithology," describes a flight which he once saw on his way to Frankfort, Ky.

It travelled in a compact body at a height beyond gunshot, with great rapidity and steadfastness. Curious to know how long the passage would continue he took out his watch and waited more than an hour. But the procession seemed only to increase in numbers and so he continued on his journey. When he reached Frankfort, four hours after he first saw the flock the living torrent over the head was as extensive as ever.

Mr. Wilson afterward made a curious calculation of this flock. If we suppose the column to have been only one mile in breadth (and he believed it to be much more) and that it moved at the rate of a mile a minute, four hours, the time it continued passing, would make the whole length two hundred and forty miles. Again, supposing that each squab yard of this moving body enclosed three pigeons, the square yards in the whole space multiplied by three would give two billion two hundred and thirty million, two hundred and seventy-two thousand.

It could not be possible that simply the daughter by man was the cause of the total disappearance of such huge flocks. Perhaps the continuance of the civil war was the reason of their migrating to some more congenial district of our immense country where man has not discovered them. Anyhow, if they are really coming back the old song of seventy years ago will be revived and we can "bid farewell to pork and beans and live on pigeon pie."

BADGER FOUND GOLD MINE.

Strange Story of an Old Miner's Discovery in Nevada.

N. H. George, Santa Fe yardmaster, has taken a layoff of three weeks and gone to Nevada to develop a gold mining claim which he has there. There is quite a story going.

Mr. George grub stake[d] er who had struck a [lu]luck. This miner found excellent surface indi[ca]Nevada Mountains and claim. The prospects [we]that Mr. George his brother-in-law took [the]claims. The ore grizzly ed away all w[ith] plied him by M[r.] velopments w[ere] not pan out [a]yellow metal

A short [time] miner, in ha[ste] first miner's [re]of tools with friend was na[med] vited the stra[nger] and after look[ing] this stranger evening or ta[ke] sat on a ledge a badger came gave chase, a[nd] a hole on the

They w[ere] and soon dug doing so they [un]covery. His bed hole, was made o[f] very richest o[re] in the stone worth $10,000 covered a rich vein quartz which ran [in]mines as well as Mr. George, his brother-in-law. Mr. [Ge]vada is for the vestigating his new gold ington Mail

"Will There Be Room?"

An interesting [re]made as to the [fu]as given in the 16th verse, which reads:

"He measured [the] reed, twelve th[ousand] length and the breadth heighth are equa[l]

Twelve thousand furlongs 000 feet cubed, or 4[8]000,000 feet. If one-[ei]was reserved for the [ci]of heaven and one-[ei]for streets, there [would] no less than 124,[000,]feet cubic. Divide [by] feet square with [the] a room, and there [will] numbers, 30,321,84[3,]We will now suppose [the] contains, always [did] 000 people, and that [a]for one-third of a [cen]all 2,970,000,000 [every] then, the world was [to] 000 centuries, or one [hu]the aggregate [consists] 000,000,000,000. [Plac]would be afforded [the] rooms, each 16 feet [square] person.

All this is somethi[ng] figures, but if one [will] and paper, and figure [it] never question but [what] be "rooms in heaven, [no]versalism is true.—[Dr. W.] in Hartford Times.

Traveling From the Cape to Cairo.

Miss Mary Hall, the first accomplish the feat of whole length of the [Af]from the Cape to Cairo [dur]ing a stay in Cairo to [re]fatigue of her wonderful most remarkable [fe]ploit is perhaps that Miss of course, is no novice [at] or even exploration. [She] no companion of her own wonderful is the fact that the thousands of miles plains, rivers and lakes the interpid lady, she long away from the [civ]tion. Livingstone would Stanley would exclaim Miss Hall's travels amazing change that [has] the face of Africa [would] space of fifteen or even [twenty] was marvellous enough koro and the Upper Nile within the sphere of but that sphere is now Uganda and the equatorial eventually it will [embrace] lies between the seat of the Mediterranean and Good Hope—Cairo Correspondence the London Globe.

The Prime of Life.

The larger part of the [people] of this country have [passed] ed after their [usefulness] 40. In fact, the first [40] man's life are the [preparatory] the years of training [and] A large part of this time the foundation—just [getting] rear the superstructure. stumble around many [years] get into the right place [and] additional years, we make takes. Most men do not [know] til they have passed [40.] get knowledge before [that] much wisdom. Wisdom [is a] process. It takes time.

At the age when Dr. [Osler] men are becoming [useless] was trying to get an [appointment] a land commissioner, [and] the same age nobody [knew] own little community knew Grant. He had not then [accomplish]ed anything of note, [and] came the greatest [military] his day.

Every man makes his [own] Some reach it at 35, [some] at 50; some do not [reach] some never reach it, [but] never cease to grow.—[Boston]

Smithdeal's

[...] college in Va. to own its building. [...] Ladies and Gentlemen. [...] Penmanship, Typewriting, Telegraphy, [...] by mail also. [...] valley south of the Potomac [...] Address, SMITHDEAL, President, Richmond, Va.

May Be Found at Skibo.

[...]rting attractions of Skibo [...]ie's highland home are [...]ed to. The estate [...]s about 30,000 acres, [...]ut 10,000 are arable, and [...] to 500 head of [...]allow bucks 42 [...]ck game partridges [...] was quite [...] [...]ver, but [...] 35 miles of the Evelix [...] [...] Perdix [...]

Traveling Salesmen Wanted.

[...] Nursery Co. [...] [...] [...]

RN.

WEST OF

Ornith-
a Mile Forty

the re-idence
s been Western those a won d all d tell e nor flown middle out be o visit
o they r's of India
ntries, ss of tance pplied lozen
w with no are o has age
r of ng tons and n such to be other
the do not pay by s fate nd in dison's
of the
s. As od of rs and ndant igeons ll the would ndred ll go, eneral ays in mented gth of
All the ge be de twen
of the s, for y left greater they ucky rough th di-length n this nished anches ee the rance gether
e the ds as they m all nd enmense trees nests, etimes little s and the d pig locust n his bes a s way dy a"
great arious and ut the se in on his akfort, flock
d was a cur
If we n only moved
, four assing,
o hun-uppos-s now
s, the multi-billion
, two nd simply cause such nance on of eva-coun-overed really eventy
e can s and NE.
's Disaster, weeks
a gold
there.

There is quite a story going.

Mr. George grub staked er who had struck a luck. This miner
excellent surface indica Nevada Mountains and claim. The prospects were that Mr. George, his bro brother-in-law took three claims. The old grizzled ed away all winter on the plied him by Mr. George, velopments were encoura
not pan out large quanti yellow metal.

A short time since miner, in hard luck, came first miner's claim, carry of tools with him. Mr.
friend was naturally lonesome vited the stranger to take and after looking over the this stranger decided to do evening or two later the sat on a ledge of rock talk a badger came into sight. T gave chase, and the badger a hole on the stranger's cl They went to work with and soon dug the badger doing so they made a remark covery. His bed, in the bott hole, was made on a big cha very richest of gold ore.
in the stone on which he worth $10,000. In this way covered a rich vein of gold quartz which runs through mines as well as those be Mr. George, his brother and or in-law. Mr. George's tri vada is for the purpose of vestigating his new gold mi ington Mail.

"Will There Be Room

An interesting calculation made as to the dimensions of as given in the 21st of R 16th verse, which reads:

"He measured the city
reed, twelve thousand furlo length and the breadth heighth are equal."

Twelve thousand furlongs
000 feet cubed, or 497,793,0 000,000 feet. If one-half of was reserved for the throne of heaven and one-half of the for streets, there would still no less than 124,198,272,000,0 feet cubic. Divide this into feet square with 4,096 cubic a room, and there will be mansions, 30,321,843,750,000,0
We will now suppose that contains, always did contain 000 people, and that a genera for one-third of a century, all 2,970,000,000 every cen
then, the world was to endur 000 centuries, or one millio
the aggregate census would 000,000,000,000. Plainly, th would be afforded more th rooms, each 16 feet square person.

All this is something form figures, but if one will "ta and paper, and figure it out, never question but what th be "rooms in heaven," even versalism is true.—Dr. W. in Hartford Times.

Traveling From the Cape

Miss Mary Hall, the first accomplish the feat of cro whole length of the African from the Cape to Cairo, is n ing a stay in Cairo to rest fatigue of her wonderful jou most remarkable feature of jaunt is perhaps that Miss H of course, is no novice at t or even exploration, journe no companion of her own sex.
wonderful is the fact that th
the thousands of miles of plains, rivers and lakes tra the interpid lady, she was long away from the haunts of tion. Livingstone would Stanley would exclaim in w
Miss Hall's travels emphas amazing change that has c the face of Africa within space of fifteen or even ten was marvellous enough wh koro and the Upper Nile were within the sphere of tourist but that sphere is now spre Uganda and the equatorial eventually it will embrace lies between the seat of auth the Mediterranean and the Good Hope—Cairo Correspo
the London Globe.

The Prime of Life

The larger part of the great of this country have been ed after their amassers ha
40. In fact, the first 40 y man's life are the preparat
the years of training and A large part of this time he the foundation—just getting rear the superstructure. M stumble around many year get into the right place and additional years, we make takes. Most men do not get til they have passed 40.
get knowledge before this much wisdom. Wisdom is a process. It takes time.

At the age when Dr. Ch men are becoming useless was trying to get an appo a land commissioner, and the same age nobody could own little community knew Grant. He had not then a ed anything of note, and came the greatest military his day.

Every man makes his own
Some reach it at 35, some at 50; some do not reach some never reach it. Some never cease to grow.—Sel

Smithdeal's

business college in Va. to own its build-Ladies and Gentlemen.
Penmanship, Typewriting, Tele-taught by mail also.
college south of the Potomac.
Address
SMITHDEAL, President, Richmond, Va.

May Be Found at Skibo.

interesting attractions of Skibo, and Home, are the extent of this acres, of acres are moor, and 4,000 acres
grouse, 22
deer,
game, partridges, pheas-
woodcock, hares, rabbits, may be expected. There and sea trout fishing miles of the Evelix, and fishing in Lochs Migdale, and Buidhe.—Westmin-

Dance, Nervous Diseases per-
Dr. Kline's Great Nerve trial bottle and treatise free.
St., Phila., Pa.

can't keep on stories.

Syrup for Children reduces inflamma-allays pain. 25c a bottle.
of your cup of less happiness Grove.

Sons, of Atlanta, Ga., are Piano Specialists in the liberal offer in advertise-of this paper.

they do not readily enter only when put to it from the squirrel and the rabbit the fastest swimmers of all mals.

OR CURED OF ECZEMA.

Physician Cures Himself—Dr.
Says: "Cuticura Remedies Possess True Merit."

was afflicted with eczema in 1905. I used the Cuticura Reme-was entirely cured. I am a praccian, and very often prescribe Ointment and Cuticura Soap in cases, and they have cured other remedies have failed. I am right of endorsing Patent Mediwhich I find remedies possessing , such as the Cuticura Remedies broad minded enough to pro-virtues to the world. I have using medicine for sixteen years, say I find your Remedies A No.
at liberty to publish this let-
M. Fisher, M. D., Big Pool, Md., 1906.

Diplomat and Philosopher.

story is told in Paris of a diplowho represented a South Amer-public a few years ago. There so many revolutions at home financiers there had no time him his salary. But he took misfortune philosophically, sold furniture of the legation except table and some chairs, and oc-one room with his principal at-who cooked the meals. Any who called early on the minister probably find him cleaning the
"What would you have?" he
, waving a boot expressive-poor country is in another and has forgotten us again. But go back I shall make a revo-and appoint myself president.
shall have our reward for all dental."

Artful Persons.

is one of the most artful men to deal with," said a sanitary in a London police court of man who was fined. "I remem-one occasion I met his sister some milk, and as soon as saw her on her back and the whole of the milk in the London Park Visits.

butchers made recently and were cor-versions are count of the hundred daily paid a

A WINNING START.

Easily Digested Breakfast Makes Nerve Force For the Day.

anything goes wrong if the that lies in your stomach like a
What you eat does harm can't digest it—it turns to pöi-right lady teacher found this true, even of an ordinary light that of eggs and toast. She years ago I contracted a annoying form of indigestion.

stomach was in such condition simple breakfast of fruit, toast just gave me great distress.
was slow to believe that trouble come from such a simple diet, finally had to give it up, and a great change upon a cup of Postum and Grape-Nuts with for my morning meal. For than a year I have held to this , and have not suffered except injudiciously varying my diet.
have been a teacher for several and find that my easily digestbreakfast means a saving of nerforce for the entire day. My of ten pounds in weight also me to want to testify to the of Grape-Nuts
Grape-Nuts holds first rank at table."
name given by Postum Co., Battle
, Mich.
There's a reason." Read the lit-book, "The Road to Wellville," in

A NEW YORK SKYSCRAPER.

More Persons Ride on Its Elevators Than on Trolleys of a Small City.

Wherever the fame of the New York skyscrapers has spread some vague idea of the enormous capacity of these colossal structures must have been formed, but it is not improbable that few persons living right in the metropolis have ever made a careful study of the activities of these commercial centres. Perhaps there are those who would laugh to scorn the statement that a single building in New York is entered daily by 50,000 persons; or as many as the entire population of Harrisburg, Pa., or other similar cities of the United States like Houston, Texas; Akron, Ohio; Lincoln, Neb., and more than there are persons in cities of the size of Montgomery, Ala. Wherever such a statement may be discredited, it is necessary only to point out the fact that an accurate count was made one day by F. T. H. Bacon, superintendent of the Park Row Syndicate Building, one of the most conspicuous of the New York skyscrapers, of every person who entered the elevators of that edifice. It was a simple matter to station guards at every entrance to the building and give each person entering a ticket, which ticket was taken up by the elevator drivers. At the close of the day these tickets were counted, and it was found that something more than 50,000 persons had ridden on the elevators that day. This is said to exceed the number of fares collected by the entire street car system of Nashville, Tenn., in a single day, this information coming from a former superintendent of the trolley service of that city, who was subsequently employed as one of the agents of the Park Row skyscraper. —Remsen Crawford, in Success Magazine.

Handling Money Like Mud.

"Money? Don't the sight of so much of it make me hungry for it? Not at all. To tell the truth, it is like so much mud to me."

Thus spoke the teller in a Denver bank yesterday. He was talking to a young man outside the cage. On the counter were heaped piles of gold and silver coin and bunches of paper money.

"I'm sure I couldn't stand the constant temptation to appropriate it for my own use," said the man outside.

"Yes you could," replied the teller. "You could easily after being in here a week. For the first few days the money would look pretty good to you, and you'd have to use your will power to keep away from it. But after a week or so it doesn't seem like money. It seems like merely an article you deal in, just as potatoes seem to the grocer. There isn't a $60 a month bank clerk in a thousand who thinks of stealing the money he handles, unless he is in debt and is being crowded for funds. To the bank employe who has his debts paid and has enough money to keep from thinking of an urgent need for cash, money has no value. Handling money is just like eating, to a teller. As long as he has enough food in his stomach he has no desire for more, and even a big, fine, juicy steak has no temptation for him. But let him get good and hungry and he'll covet that steak. The only way for a man who handles money in a bank to be free from the temptation to appropriate it is to keep out of debt and not develop any urgent and expensive ambitions."—Denver Post.

Thinks He's Hoodooed.

A strange sight was seen in Justice Joyce's court yesterday. It was that of a staid, lawyerlike, elderly gentleman gravely declaring that he had been under the influence of "sorcery," and controlled by a telephathic mesmeric influence which "caused him intense pain at night."

As Mr. Joseph William Thomas, who is bringing an action with regard to transactions which took place when he was in an asylum, made these accusations against his brother, Sir Alfred Thomas, M. P., he emphasized his points with a pince-nez which he carried in his hand.

"Are you still under the influence?" asked Mr. Isaacs, K. C.

"It has not ceased absolutely, and probably never will," replied Mr. Thomas, raising his pince-nez.

He added that distance made no difference to the "influence," which was conveyed at night. The "influence" might be exercised by his brother's agents.

In adjourning the case the judge expressed an opinion that the matter in dispute ought to be settled out of court.—London Mirror.

Roman Way.

The use of concrete masonry probably begins with the Romans, who employed it in road building and foundation work. Coming down from the time of the Romans, the ancient city of Ciudad Rodrigo has walls existing at the present day in which are buried large bowlders of stone. These walls are in a good state of preservation at the present time; in fact, so much so that they still bear the imprints of the boards which made up the forms which held the concrete in its semi-liquid state at the time it was put in. It is an niteresting matter to note that the modern practice of putting large masses of stone in concrete masonry folows exactly the scheme used in buildihg these ancient walls of Ciudad Rodrigo. This method not only reduces the cost of the resulting fabric, but also makes it stronger.—Scientific American.

An Old Painter's Ideas.

The Autumn season is coming more and more to be recognized as a most suitable time for house-painting.

There is no frost deep in the wood to make trouble for even the best job of painting, and the general seasoning of the Summer has put the wood into good condition in every way. The weather, moreover, is more likely to be settled for the necessary length of time to allow all the coats to thoroughly dry—a very important precaution.

An old and successful painter said to the writer the other day:

"House owners would get more for their money if they would allow their painters to take more time, especially between coats. Instead of allowing barely time for the surface to get dry enough not to be 'tacky,' several days (weeks would not be too much) should be allowed so that the coat might set through and through. It is inconvenient, of course, but, if one would suffer this slight inconvenience, it would add two or three years to the life of the paint.

"All this is assuming, of course, that the paint used is the very best to be had—the purest of white lead and the purest of linseed oil, unmixed with any cheapener. If the cheap mixtures, often known as 'White Lead' and oil which has been doctored with fish oil, benzine, corn-oil, or other of the adulterants known to the trade, are used, all the precautions of the skilled painter are useless to prevent the cracking and peeling which make houses unsightly in a year or so and, therefore, make painting bills too frequent and costly.

"The house owner should have his painter bring the ingredients to the premises separately—white lead of some well-known, reliable brand and linseed oil of equal quality — and mix the paint just before applying it."

Painting need not be expensive and unsatisfactory if the old painter's suggestions are followed.

BIRD MOTIONS.

Points of Difference Which Will Help the Observer to Identify Them.

Among perching birds thrushes usually stand motionless; sparrows stand or sit, but are less at ease than the thrushes, more restless. Both these families generally assume a slanting position on the bough.

Orioles usually progress in trees by sidling along the branches, vireos by flitting from bough to bough, repeatedly hovering under the leaves; warblers by hopping from twig to twig, while exploring one main branch and scanning the twigs and upper side of leaves.

A flycatcher, says St. Nicholas, selects a dead or exposed bough, where he sits motionless, upright, tail drooped, until he leaves the tree entirely, though perhaps to return after the pursuit of a flying insect.

Of inland water birds, geese, loons and grebes may be distinguished from gulls and terns by a straight forward flight, never zigzagging or slowly soaring like the long winged swimmers. Ducks have a more rapid wing beat than geese; which in turn fly with a rather heavy motion, somewhat like the loon's.

The several families may usually be further distinguished by the size and the shapes of the flocks. Loons usually go singly and are more often to be seen in flight than grebes, who also travel without flocking. Compare the upright position of the owls with the prone nighthawk and the whippoorwill; one sleeps standing up and one lying down.

Among the tree climbers there are still nicer distinctions, both in the manner of climbing and the courses of the birds upon the trunks. The woodpeckers, with feet and tail adapted to clinging to an upright surface and with bill adapted to drilling even in hard wood, goes straight up the trunk, then comes the slender billed and weak footed creeper, who must keep to the cracked bark, since he cannot bore for his food.

His course over the tree stem is, therefore, zigzag, from crevice to crevice. The nuthatches go winding up a tree as if they were living vines, or else they climb by turning from side to side with every step or two, but the tail is no use as a prop, so it is held off the bark.

Still another climber and creeper is the black and white warbler, who having nearly the feet, bill and tail of a nuthatch, progresses in about the same way, but has rather more of a liking for crutches and the less upright branches.

In the woodpecker family the yellow bellied sapsucker has a way of edging around a tree trunk. His course is marked by his borings, or rather drillings, which girdle the trees instead of being scattered or running up them, like those of other woodpeckers.

Prepared.

A Kansas City druggist says a wealthy west side man came into his store Sunday morning and, throwing a dime on the show case, said:

"Give me two nickels for that, please."

"Going to try a slot machine?" asked the druggist, pleasantly.

"No," replied the wealthy man; "I'm going to church."—Kansas City Times.

"IF YOU DON'T GET WELL, I WILL GIVE YOU BACK YOUR MONEY"

THIS IS WHAT YOUR DRUGGIST TELLS YOU WHEN HE SELLS YOU

OXIDINE

HE DOES THIS BECAUSE HE KNOWS

IT WILL CURE CHILLS AND FEVERS

IT IS MADE IN TWO FORMS—REGULAR AND TASTELESS

(Sweet, children like it). Ask for either one. They are both guaranteed to cure Chills and Fevers. Sold by all druggists. It is the Chill Tonic that contains no poison.

Read the following analysis made by the state chemist who analyzed three bottles of Oxidine sent to him by the Secretary of the State Pharmaceutical Association (The Texas Retail Druggists Association):

Houston Laboratories
Chemical and Biological
Analysis and Valuation of Cotton Seed and Rice Products a Specialty. Waters, Soils, Oils, Ores, Etc., Carefully Examined and Reported Upon. Reports Made on Economic Geology.
P. S. TILSON, Director, Analytical and Consulting Chemist
215 1-2 MAIN STREET

HOUSTON, TEXAS, June 27, 1906.

Mr. R. H. Walker, Secretary Texas State Pharmaceutical Association, Gonzales, Texas.

DEAR SIR: Herewith I beg to hand you certificate of analysis of the Oxidine you submitted a few days since.

I trust this will be duly received and found entirely satisfactory. I have kept you waiting for a little while, but I appreciate the responsibility which you have seen fit to place upon me; for that reason I have taken my time to be certain and accurate about my results.

If I can serve you in the future please advise me. Thanking you, I beg to remain, Yours very truly,

P. S. TILSON, Chemist.

Houston Laboratories
Chemical and Biological
Analysis and Valuation of Cotton Seed and Rice Products a Specialty. Waters, Soils, Oils, Ores, Etc., Carefully Examined and Reported Upon. Reports Made on Economic Geology.
P. S. TILSON, Director, Analytical and Consulting Chemist
215 1-2 MAIN STREET

CERTIFICATE OF ANALYSIS
Of Three Bottles of Oxidine Submitted by R. H. Walker, of Gonzales, Texas, Secretary of the State Pharmaceutical Association.

HOUSTON, TEXAS, June 27, 1906.

I find this Oxidine to contain absolutely no poisonous or injurious drugs or chemicals and not a trace of Arsenic, Codeine, Morphine, Bucine or Strychnine; nor, in fact, anything that would produce a harmful effect whatever.

Respectfully submitted,
P. S. TILSON, Chemist.

OXIDINE, THE CHILL CURE THAT CURES CHILLS

Sometimes, nearly all the time, it is a crank that turns the world over.

Positions GUARANTEED BY A $5,000 BANK DEPOSIT
R. R. Fare Paid, Notes Taken
500 FREE COURSES
Board at Cost. Write Quick
GEORGIA-ALABAMA BUSINESS COLLEGE, Macon, Ga.

TELEGRAPHY, SHORTHAND AND BOOKKEEPING
Bookkeeping, Penmanship, Shorthand, Typewriting, Telegraphy. Railroad Main Line Wires connected to College: from College to position. Positions guaranteed. Write for free catalog. The American Telegraph & Commercial College, Milledgeville, Ga., Box 530.

Wintersmith's CHILL TONIC
A BOTTLE WILL BREAK YOUR CHILLS
CURES CHILLS
AND ALL MALARIAL FEVERS.
Has been a standard household remedy for over 40 years. Pleasant to take; leaves no bad effects like quinine; harmless for children. Guaranteed by all druggists. Put up in 50c and $1 bottles. Sent express paid on receipt of price, if not on sale at the home drug store. Address
ARTHUR PETER & CO., General Agents, Louisville, Ky.

WINCHESTER

Smokeless Powder Shells
"LEADER" and "REPEATER"
The superiority of Winchester Smokeless Powder Shells is undisputed. Among intelligent shooters they stand first in popularity, records and shooting qualities. Always use them
For Field or Trap Shooting.
Ask Your Dealer For Them.

MOTHER'S FAVORITE

For Baby's Skin & Scalp
Because of its Delicate Medicinal, Emollient, Sanative, and Antiseptic Properties combined with the purest of Cleansing Ingredients and most refreshing of Flower Odors.
Sold throughout the world. Cuticura Soap, 25c., Ointment, 50c., Resolvent, 50c. (in form of Chocolate Coated Pills, 25c. per vial of 60). A single set often cures. Depots: London, 27 Charterhouse Sq.; Paris, 5 Rue de la Paix; Boston, 137 Columbus Ave. Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., Sole Props.
Send for "How to Preserve, Purify, and Beautify the Skin, Scalp, Hair, and Hands of Infants and Children."

An Asquith Story.

There is a good House of Commons story which is to be found in the monographs on Mr. Asquith which has just been written by Mr. Alderson. Mr. Asquith was piloting through the House of Commons a bill on sweating. It was a hot afternoon in July, and one of Mr. Asquith's clauses to prevent sweating was being "reported" from the committee to the House when a South London member, who had a loud and raucous voice, rose and shouted: "Mr. Speaker, I want to know who sweats? I say, the question is, who sweats?" Even the immobile face of Speaker Peel broke into a grin.—M. A. P.

HERITAGE OF CIVIL WAR.

Thousands of Soldiers Contracted Chronic Kidney Trouble.

The experience of Capt. John L. Ely, of Co. E, 17th Ohio, now living at 500 East Second street, Newton, Kansas, will interest the thousands of veterans who came back from the Civil War suffering tortures with kidney complaint. Capt. Ely says: "I contracted kidney trouble during the Civil War, and the occasional attacks finally developed into a chronic case. At one time I had to use a crutch and cane to get about. My back was lame and weak, and besides the aching, there was a distressing retention of the kidney secretions. I was in a bad way when I began using Doan's Kidney Pills in 1901, but the remedy cured me, and I have been well ever since."

Sold by all dealers. 50 cents a box. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

Agricultural Committee's Delay.

In a debate on the agricultural appropriation bill, Congressman Rixey, of Virginia, was denouncing the agricultural committee vigorously because it had been promising for years to do something for Virginia and had not done it yet. Chairman Wadsworth tried to pour oil on the troubled waters. "The gentleman from Virginia must remember," said he, "that Rome wasn't built in a day." "I know it wasn't," retorted Rixey, "and if Romulus and Remus had been on the agricultural committee it wouldn't be built yet."

Love and common sense—but what has love in common with sense, anyway.

People may applaud a kicker at the start, but they feel like kicking before the finish.

CAPUDINE
CURES INDIGESTION and ACIDITY
It acts immediately—you feel its effects in 10 minutes. You don't have to wait a week to know it's good. It cures HEADACHE ALSO by removing the cause. 10 cents.

The Tulane University OF LOUISIANA
NEW ORLEANS.
EDWIN B. CRAIGHEAD, L. L. D., Pres.
The Tulane University of Louisiana, founded in 1845 as the University of Louisiana, is the logical head of the entire system of public educational institutions of the State.
Full courses are offered in Languages, Sciences, Engineering, Law, Medicine. Splendid department for women in Newcomb College. Tulane makes leaders in all vocations. Its facilities for instruction in engineering are unsurpassed. Unexcelled opportunities for the study of Sugar and Industrial Chemistry. Many Scholarships in academic department. Expenses low. Board and accommodations in dormitories at low rates. Next session begins October 1st. Send for catalogue. Address
R. K. BRUFF, Secretary.

YOU CANNOT CURE all inflamed, ulcerated and catarrhal conditions of the mucous membrane such as nasal catarrh, uterine catarrh caused by feminine ills, sore throat, sore mouth or inflamed eyes by simply dosing the stomach.
But you surely can cure these stubborn affections by local treatment with Paxtine Toilet Antiseptic
which destroys the disease germs, checks discharges, stops pain, and heals the inflammation and soreness.
Paxtine represents the most successful local treatment for feminine ills ever produced. Thousands of women testify to this fact. 50 cents at druggists.
Send for Free Trial Box
THE R. PAXTON CO., Boston, Mass.

Dropsy CURED
Gives Quick Relief.
Removes all swelling in 8 to 20 days; effects a permanent cure in 30 to 60 days. Trial treatment given free. Nothing can be fairer. Write Dr. H. H. Green's Sons, Specialists, Box B Atlanta, Ga.

60 Bushels Winter Wheat Per Acre
That's the yield of Salzer's Red Cross Hybrid Winter Wheat. Send 2c in stamps for free sample of same, or also catalogue of Winter Wheats, Rye, Barley, Clovers, Timothy, Grasses, Bulbs, Trees, etc., for fall planting.
SALZER SEED CO., Box A. C. LaCrosse, Wis.

WANTED Address of (1) persons of part Indian blood who are not now living with any tribe, (2) of men who served in the Federal army, or (3) the nearest kin of such soldiers or sailors, now deceased. NATHAN HICKFORD, Washington, D. C.

Am. 33, 1906.

Birmingham Seminary,
BIRMINGHAM, ALA.
IDEAL SCHOOL FOR GIRLS AND YOUNG LADIES.
Limited number boarding pupils. Unexcelled city advantages. Refined, christian home life. High standards, superior faculty. For catalogue and further information address
MISS LOULIE COMPTON, 1722 Fifth Avenue, Birmingham, Ala.

Plantation Chill Cure is Guaranteed
To Cure, or Money Refunded by Your Merchant. So. Why Not Try IT? Price, 50c, Retail.

Stylish Clothing For Young Men.

Make up your mind to have the best suit possible this season, it must be smart, the very latest weave and color. You can have all these things if you get an I. & S. Bing Suit.

Latest Ideas in Furnishings

Our line for spring wear is now complete, the styles are decided and we are showing absolutely correct styles. New Dress Goods, New Waist Goods, New Hats, New Shirts, New Neckwear.

Spring Models in Footwear

See our new line of Star Brand Oxfords for men, women and children. Our stock is complete and the prices are right. Let us show you the goods.

J. C. JONES,

Clanton, - - Alabama.

Wouldn't You Like

BETTER WHISKIES FOR LESS MONEY?

than the kind youvl been getting? Then send your orders to us

THE BIG MAIL ORDER HOUSE

The house that sells nothing but the purest goods and guarantees every article it sells. If it's drugs or whiskies you want

WE CUT THE PRICE,

	Our Price.	Regular Price
Shehan's Canada Malt Whiskey	75	1 00
Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey	75	1 00
Weller's Pure Malt Whiskey	75	1 00
Mason's Old Kentucky Rye	50	75
Dan Patch Virginia Rye	60	1 00
Private Stock Virginia Rye	65	1 00
J. Martin's Five-year-old Virginia Rye	75	1 00
Asa Holt Rye Whiskey	75	1 00
Old Style Country Club Rye Whiskey	85	1 25
Richmond Club Virginia Rye	1 00	1 50
Stewart's Old Virginia Rye	1 25	2 00
Paul Jones Four Star Rye	84	1 50
Murray Hill Club	1 00	1 50
Hunter's Baltimore Rye	1 00	1 50
Golden Cream Rye	1 00	1 50
I. W. Harper Rye	1 00	1 50
Wilson Whiskey	85	1 50
J. M. Atherton bottled in bond	1 00	1 50
Mammoth Cave bottled in bond	1 25	1 75
Old Jordon bottled in bond	1 50	2 00
Green River, the whiskey without a headache	1 00	1 25
Old Shades Mountain Corn	50	75
Old Mountain Due Corn	75	1 00
Old Lincoln County	65	1 00
Old Holland Gin	50	75
Old Crown Gin	75	1 00
Old Peach or Apple Brandy	50	75
California Sherry or Port	50	75

Mellow Old Liquors and Wines by the Gallon in Jugs.

	Per Gallon		Per Gallon
Old Sand Mountain Corn	$2.00	Old Mason's Pure Rye	$2.00
Old Mountain Due	3.00	Private Stock Virginia Rye	2.50
Old Tennessee	2.00	J. Martin's 5-year-old Va. Rye	3.00
Old Holland Gin	2.00	Old Style Country Club	3.40
Old Crown Gin	3.00	Old Lincoln County	2.50
Old Peach or Apple Brandy	2.00	Richmond Club Virginia Rye	4.00
Old California Port or Sherry	1.50	R. A. Stuart's Old Va. Rye	5.00

COLLIER DRUG COMPANY,

The Big Cut Rate Drug Store

2012 FIRST AVENUE, BIRMINGHAM, ALABAMA.

Imported Jack "LIJE"

Fee $8.00, Insured

Stands for service at his owners', JOHN THAMES, ½ mile East of Rocky Mount Church, Beat 1.

STEALS $100,000

Paying Teller Resorts to Theft to Cover Gambling Losses On Cotton and Stocks.

RETURNS FROM VACATION.

W. L. Sims, Manager for Gibert & Clay, and C. M. Hayes, His Bookkeeper, Are Also Arrested.

Birmingham, Ala.—Alex R. Chisholm, a member of one of the most prominent families in Birmingham, is under arrest charged with embezzling the sum of $100,000 from the First National Bank of Birmingham, of which he was paying teller.

Warrants charging complicity have been issued against P. G. Smith, W. L. Sims and a Mr. Hays.

Chisholm has made a confession to the directors of the bank, stating that the money went into local stock and cotton exchanges. The three mentioned above, against whom warrants have been issued, are connected with local stock and cotton exchanges.

The alleged defalcation of the officer will have no effect whatever upon he status of the bank, as Chisholm was under heavy bond, and as the whole matter so far as it concerns the finances of the bank has been adjusted.

The money seems to have been taken from the cash reserve fund of the bank. The institution had been preparing for it for several weeks, and there was no rush of any sort. Ample cash reserve funds have also been laid in by every other bank in the city, in order to meet a possible demand.

The arrests were made at the instigation of President W. P. G. Harding, ratified by the action of all the directors who are in the city. The loss to the bank is the net four months' profits. So far as the books of the institution are concerned these already show a balance, a sufficient appropriation from the funds on hand having been already secured.

Alex R. Chisholm is 24 years of age. He is a son of Col. Robert Chisholm, formerly of Charleston, but for many years a prominent and honored citizen of Birmingham. No family in the south stands higher. Nor did any young man in Birmingham possess more thoroughly the confidence of his associates and employes. He started with the Berney National Bank as a boy of 16. When that bank was bought by the First National he went to the latter, where by merit alone he rose to the position of paying teller. It was simply the old story—first of dabbling in cotton and stocks on small margins on his own account, getting deeper and deeper and finally using the bank's money in hopes of evening up. The calls for margins were incessant. First, he took from the bank's cash a few hundreds, then a few thousand and so on until the $100,000 mark was reached and with it the climax.

The employes of the brokerage firm of Gibert & Clay, Messrs. C. M. Hays and W. L. Sims, who were named in one of the warrants against Chisholm as aiding and abetting the embezzlement, were released—Sims under a bond of $50,000 and Hays under a bond of $10,000. Sims' bond was signed by G. W. Sherling and Gen. E. W. Rucker. Messrs. Walker Percy, Culpepper Exum, W. H. Hassinger and John L. Kaul acted as bondsmen for Hays. These four last named gentlemen, who are directors of the First National Bank, were present at the hearing before Commissioner Watts and signed Hays' bond immediately afterward.

Must Answer Questions.

San Francisco, Cal.—Charles Hendry, local representative of the London and Lancaster Fire Insurance Company, must answer all questions propounded by the grand jury or go to jail for contempt of court. Such is the judgment of Presiding Judge Graham, before whom Hendry appeared on a citation, directing him to show cause why he should not divulge the names of the companies in London and Lancashire whose policies are reinsured and whose "embargo" on the London and Lancashire has made it necessary for the latter to make a horizontal cut on all policies upon payment.

Can't See France's President.

Paris.—It was expeced that Mr. Bryan would see President Falleries, but the foreign office sent him a most courteous note, saying that the president deeply regretted the fact that Mr. Bryan's stay in Paris was so short that it did not permit the time for M. Falleries to return from Rambouillet in order to receive such a distinguished citizen.

Seven Persons Hurt.

Fort Scott, Kan.—A St. Louis and San Francisco freight engine ran into the Missouri, Kansas & Texas fast passenger No. 6, northbound, at the crossing of the two roads near this city, overturning a chair car and one sleeper. Seven persons were hurt and a number of others were thrown from their seats or berths, but escaped injury. None of the injured are seriously hurt.

Railroad Man Killed.

Selma, Ala.—J. T. Vanheise, a white man employed in the yards of the Southern railway, was accidentally killed. The man was screwing up a box car with jack screws, when the lever of the jack suddenly flew loose and struck him under the right side of his chin. The blow broke his neck and right shoulder and killed him instantly. The remains were prepared for burial and shipped to Jackson, Tenn., where Vanheise formerly lived and where he is said to have a family. Vanheise came to Selma about two weeks ago and was preparing to bring his family here when he met his death.

To Drive Out Bucket Shops.

Topeka, Kan.—A crusade against bucketshops is to be inaugurated by Attorney-General Coleman under the state bucket shop law enacted seven years ago, but which has never been enforced.

"We shall try to drive the bucket shops out of the state," said F. S. Jackson, assisant attorney-general. "They can be closed under the nuisance clause of the statute, and we can fine and imprison the owners of the buildings in which bucket shops are allowed to operate."

Fined for Hissing Flag.

Bayonne, N. J.—James Pierce, an Englishman, was fined $25 in the police court for hissing the American flag during the performance at a theatre. The judge who imposed the fine was a member of the audience. Piere's action in hissing the stars and stripes as they were waved by a performer at the reception of a song almost caused a riot in the audience.

Oklahoma After Railroads.

Guthrie, Okla.—W. O. Cromwell, attorney-general of Oklahoma, has begun his investigation of railroads in Oklahoma at the suggestion of Governor Frantz to ascertain whether any road has violated its charter in discriminating in freight rates.

Tranquil on the Isthmus.

New York.—Dr. R. A. Amador, consulting engineer of Panama in this city, received a cable dispatch from the secretary of his father, President Amador, of Panama, assuring him that all was tranquil on the isthmus.

Cleared of Charge.

Savannah, Ga.—The police committee concluded its investigation of the charges against the department. Detective Davis proved no connection with the gambling rooms. The committee will sift the charges, it is stated, and give Superintendent Garfunkle an opportunity to answer material ones. He will also answer fifteen questions formulated by the committee, it is said.

Smallest Class at Naval Academy.

Washington, D. C.—The new fourth class at the naval academy will consist of only 200 members, making it the smallest class at the academy since 1903. There are 100 vacancies to go over for the next academic year, places to be filled in anticipation of the examinations to be held in April and June of 1907. These places, with the vacancies created by the graduation of next June, will afford an opportunity to appoint more than 400 midshipmen during the next year.

Bubonic Plague on Board.

Plymouth, Eng.—On board the steamship Arabia, which arrived here from Bombay, was a Lascar sailor suffering from bubonic plague. The man became ill August 6 and was isolated. The liner was fumigated and passengers were allowed to land. The sailor has been transferred to a hospital ship.

Orders Switchmen's Strike Ended.

New Haven, Conn.—Second Grand Vice-President Val Fitzpatrick has ordered the switchmen's strike here to end at once, declaring that it was illegal and unwarranted. The brotherhood will aid the New York, New Haven and Hartford road in filling vacancies. The strike began Tuesday morning.

Cook County Official Sentenced.

Chicago, Ill.—John A. Coooke, former clerk of the circuit court, who was adjudged guilty of irregularities in handling the funds of the office, was sentenced to an indeterminate term, not to exceed five years, in the penitentiary by Judge Smith in the criminal court. He was also sentenced to pay a fine of $2,000.

New Bank for Ensley.

Birmingham, Ala.—The Bank of Alabama has been formed and business will be commenced about Wednesday of the coming week in Ensley, the steel manufacturing point of the industrial section of Alabama. The old quarters of the First National Bank in Ensley have been secured and everything is being gotten ready for business. The capital stock is $50,000.

San Francisco, Cal.—The fire commission approved a recommendation of Chief Shaughnessy favoring the establishment at the earliest possible date of an auxiliary salt water system, so planned as to protect the business portion of the city. The chief urged that cisterns holding at least 100,000 gallons be established on the various hills throughout the city. Two high power fire boats were also recommended for use on the water front.

Thorsby, Alabama

Business Directory.

Commercial Club
OF THORSBY
DEFINITE and RELIABLE information furnished to parties who desire to locate in the South.

A. HORN
LICENSED PHARMACIST.
Drugs, Stationery and Toilet Articles.

City Bakery
BREAD, CAKES and PIES
of all kinds, fresh every day.
K. A. EKBLAD

A. M. Johnson
Groceries and Delicatessen

E. H. Adams
General Merchandise.

J. R. PARNELL
General Merchandise.

J. L. FOSS
Meat Market.

Thorsby Winery Co.
Lofthus & Brunberg, Props.

Thorsby Real Estate
(INCORPORATED)
J. M. BARRETT, Pres.
G. H. GERALD, Sec.
G. C. MICHELSON, Treas.

OLAF SCHU
Watchmaker & Jeweler
FRANZEN, Supt.
Full line of watches etc. Repair work guaranteed

A. Langville & Co.
Blacksmith and Horseshoer
—DEALER IN—
WAGONS AND BUGGIES

P. C. SMITH
Brown Leghorn Fowls
Eggs.
BERKSHIRE PIGS

The Thorsby Inn
G. C. Michelson, Prop.
Good Beds and Meals

J. J. Stanley
General Merchandise

MRS. MARY R. RASH
General Merchandise

J. BICE
Charcoal Ovens

Cor. 2nd Ave and 7th St.

THE BIG STORE,

—Is at The Head of The Procession.—

Dry Goods, Clothing, Hats, Shoes

FURNITURE,

COFFINS AND BURIAL NECESSITIES

W. I. MULLINS,

Clanton, - - Alabama

UNION RALLY

At Mars Hill Church, Friday, August 17, 1906, Commencing at 9:30 a. m.

"Why Should We, as Farmers, Be Organized?" Discussion by County President J. H. Thomas and others.

"What Benefits Should We, as Farmers, Derive by Being Organized?" Discussion by County Lecturer C. N. Eiland and others.

"Should the Farmer's Wife Be Organized; If Not, Why?" Discussion by T. M. Driver and others.

"To What Extent Does the Mortgage System Depress Us as Farmers?" Discussion by Judge L. H. Reynolds and others.

"Will Crop Diversification Pay; If So, in What Way?" Discussion by W. H. Conway and others.

"Why the Farmers' Union Should Be a Secret Organization." Discussion by A. J. Scott and others.

We have written to the State officials for some of them to be present at this meeting. We want to make it an interesting day to the public as well as to the union man. The larger part of the day will be public and everybody is cordially invited to come and bring a large basket filled with eatables. Come and bring your wives and children and show them the necessity of being in an organization. There will be at least a half dozen local unions at the above named place and date. So come one, come all. Our editor is cordially invited. Yours for success.

A. J. SCOTT,
W. R. COFER,
J. D. TERRY,
Committee.

G. W. Scott, Local No. 246. tf

FOR SHERIFF.

I hereby announce myself a candidate for sheriff of Chilton county, subject to the action of the people at the November election, 1906.

ROLLEFFE BATES.

adv (tf)

Collins' Chapel, July 31, 1906.

Dear Editor:

We aim to have a great day at Chapel Institute on August 11th in interest of the F. E. & C. U. All of the unions are asked to come and bring their baskets and help us take care of the people. Yours,

tf J. D. COLLINS.

PROGRAM

For Meeting of Second District of Chilton County Association, to be held at Macedonia on the Fourth Sunday in August, 1906.

9 a. m. Devotional exercises—H. Armstrong.

9:30. "Explain the Present Need of Pastors in the Service of Christ"—John Martin, Jackson Palmer.

10. "The Duty of Churches to the Pastor and Sunday School"—Rev. J. T. Williams.

11. "Can a Preacher Under Present Existing Circumstances Be a Successful Pastor?"—W. H. Shaw, G. W. Scott.

1 p. m. "How Is the Best Way to Get a Christian to Show His Love for Christ"—J. Fleming, J. S. Wright.

1:45. "What Relation Ought to Exist Between the Pastor and Church"—James Franklin, Clint Veazey.

2:30. "When Is the Best Time to Call a Pastor, and Does Not the Annual Call of a Pastor Cause Confusion?"—P. G. Mason, Crumpton.

"How Get Church Members to Attend Prayer and Sunday School"—T. U. Cleveland.

The speeches will be interspersed with singing by the choir and such leaders as may be present. We want delegates from every church in the Second district; also invite correspondence from First district and other associations in reach. Signed by pastor and committee.

J. H. THOMAS,
J. W. ARMSTRONG,
M. C. CRUMPTON.

, Alabam
s Directory.

b BLE rties uth.

Thorsby Real Estat
(INCORPORATED)
J. M. BARRETT, Pres.
G. H. GERALD, SEC.
G. C. MICHELSON, Tr

OLAF SCHI
Watchmaker & Jewele
FRANZEN, BUILD
Full line of watches je
etc. Repair work guarant

ST.
ilet

y
A. Langville &
Blacksmith and
Horseshoer
—DEALER IN—
WAGONS AND BUGG

P. C. SMIT
Brown Leghorn Fowls
Eggs.
BERKSHIRE PI

en
The Thorsby
G. C. Michelson, Pr
Good Beds and Meals

J. J. Stanle
General Merchandi

MRS. MARY R. RASBE
General Merchandis

J. BICE
Charcoal Ovens

G STORE,
Cor.
Ave
7th of The Procession.—
thing, Hats, Sho
NITURE,
URIAL NECESSITIES
MULLINS,
Alabam

Collins' Chapel, July 20,

Dear Editor:

We aim to have a grest day
Chapel Institute on August 1 interest of the F. E. & C. U. of of the unions are asked to co bring their baskets and help take care of the people. Yours
tf J. D. COLL

PROGRAM

For Meeting of Second District of ton County Association, to at Macedonia on the Fourth in August, 1906.

9 a m. Devotional exercises
H. Armstrong.

9.30. "Explain the Present of Pastors in the Service of Ch
—John Martin, Jackson Palmer.

10. "The Duty of Churches
Pastor and Sunday School"—Rev.
J. T. Williams

11. "Can a Preacher Under Existing Circumstances Be a Pastor?"—W. H. Shaw, G. W. G

1 p. m. "How Is the Best W a Christian to Show His Love?"
J. Fleming, J. S. Wright.

1:45. "What Relation Ought ist Between the Pastor and Ch
—James Franklin, Clint Veazey.

2:30. "When Is the Best T
Call a Pastor, and Does Not th nual Call of a Pastor Cause C Confusion?"—P. G. Mc
Crumpton.

Get Church Members to Attend and Sunday School"—T. U. Cr

The speeches will be inter with singing by the choir and leaders as may be present. We delegates from every church Second district; also invite pondence from First district and associations in reach. Signed by pastor and committee.

J. H. THOMAS
J. W. ARMSTR
tf M. C. CRUMPT

THE UNION.

EQUAL RIGHTS TO ALL, SPECIAL FAVORS TO NONE.

VOL. IV. CLANTON, ALA., AUGUST 23 1906. NO. 22

LPARAISO WRECKED BY AN EARTHQUAKE

er of Dead in Chilean Seaport Estimated at Two Thousand.

PERTY LOSS PUT AT $250,000,000

ke Used With Good Effect to Check the Fires That Followed Destructive Shocks—Ruin More Complete Than at San Francisco, Captain Says—Cable Companies Estimate That 7000 Persons Were Killed in Chile and 100,000 Homeless—Fugitives Huddle on Icy Hills—Wintry Rain Drenches Hundred Thousand Refugees From Ruins.

Valparaiso, Chile.—At 7.52 o'clock Thursday evening Valparaiso experienced an earthquake of great severity. That night eighty-two shocks were felt. The shocks continue, but are gradually diminishing in force.

Most of the buildings of the city are either ruined or damaged.

The property loss will be enormous, probably reaching $250,000,000.

Seven thousand persons killed is considered to be a fair estimate of the casualties.

The captain of a steamship which has arrived from San Francisco says that the situation here is worse than that following the disaster at San Francisco. It is generally considered that the destruction here is more complete than that which befell San Francisco.

Vina del Mar (three miles from Valparaiso and having a population of over 10,000), Quirihue (225 miles to the southward, with a population of 5,000); Salto, Limache (fifteen miles to the northwest, with a population of 6500); Quillota (twenty-five miles to the northwest, with a population of 10,000), and villages around were destroyed. All the towns in the Aconcague Valley have suffered terribly.

Most of the damage was due to fires which started immediately after the first shock.

The whole population is sleeping in the parks or the streets. The necessaries of food are very scarce. Milk costs two Chilean dollars a liter and it is almost impossible to obtain meat, even at high prices. It is not, however, believed that a famine will occur, as thousands of tons of flour, wheat and rice are in stores and on the ships. The authorities have taken charge of the distribution of food.

The railroads are all destroyed.

The rain, which began to fall immediately after the first shock, stopped only an hour afterward.

The nights are very cold and many and the people sleeping in the open are suffering greatly. Couriers have been dispatched both north and south for troops. Martial law has been declared in Valparaiso since the first of the shocks.

The conformation of the whole country area has been greatly changed. The sea now washes over most of the low lying district, which was given almost exclusively to business. Most of the wharves have disappeared and only the roofs of some of the warehouses now show above the surface of the bay. The southern end of the encircling chain of hills seems to have dropped many feet, while directly back of the city there are great fissures in the hillsides. Much damage has been done by the quakes sending down the hills on the city. One of these rocks fell into one of the big grain elevators and killed six persons. The elevators were used for storing the residence quarters on the high terraces, but all of them are out of commission.

The fires that started after the first destructive shock defied all the efforts of the firemen. The water mains were broken, and the only source of supply was from the bay. The peculiar formation of the country saved it from being swept clean by the conflagration. While some districts were left trails of ashes, others, above and below, were not even touched. But in the lowlands the fire rolled almost without hindrance, and tens of millions in property were consumed.

Many ghouls have been shot, but the police order on the whole has been remarkably good. One of the worst features is the lack of light. The gas and electric light plants were both destroyed, and not a street car is in operation. The railroads, too, are crippled and the only open means of communication is by the sea. The inland telegraph wires are down, but the city keeps in touch with the outside world by two lines of cables, one running south, and the other north. A repair gang started out this afternoon to attempt to open communication by land with Santiago. It is expected there will be little difficulty in repairing the wires, as it is reported there was not much damage done between here and the capital.

All the suburbs of Valparaiso are in ruins. For many miles also up and down the coast whole towns and villages have been wiped out. Vina del Mar, lying on the hills, three miles directly behind the city, was leveled to a building, and the 10,000 inhabitants are camping in the ruins. Salto and Limarch, two villages fifteen miles to the northwest, with a combined population of 6500, are desolate, and Quillota, with 10,000 persons, twenty-five miles to the northwest also has been blotted out. From every town and village from which news has been received the destruction has been complete.

Santiago, Chile. — Tremendous damage has been done by the earthquakes all over the middle portion of Chile. In this city the property loss is estimated at $3,000,000. The shocks continued for about fourteen hours, and the great quake early on Friday morning was followed by several disastrous fires. The firemen eventually succeeded, however, in averting a general conflagration.

The panic was so terrible during the vibrations that several persons, crazed with fright, flung themselves from the balconies of their homes and were dashed to death in the streets below. Nearly all the churches were destroyed. The Congress buildings, the municipal buildings, the normal school, the courts, the Peruvian Legation, the residence of President Riesce, the Central Market, the Prefecture of Police and the National Telegraph office all were seriously damaged. The wires of the tramway system and the electric light plant were short-circuited and the city is still without car service or light.

The scenes in the hospitals were distressing in the extreme. Some of the patients left their beds and fought desperately with the nurses and attendants. One woman, who had just undergone an operation for appendicitis, jumped from a fourth-story window and was killed on the pavement. There were also shocking happenings in the prisons. All the prisoners, filled with terror, made frantic efforts to escape and some of them were shot down by the guards. The worst damage was done in the poorer districts, where hundreds of houses collapsed. Eight bodies were taken out of the ruins, making a total of thirty-eight since the working parties were impressed by the police. All lines of railway to the north and the line to Talca are interrupted. It is reported that in several places the tracks are covered by landslides.

A majority of the sufferers from the disaster were residents of the poorer sections of the city, where many small houses were thrown to the ground.

While the fires which followad the earthquake lasted they greatly augmented the terror of the people. But they were promptly put out.

The lines of the electric street car system and the electric light wires were short-circuited, interrupting street car travel and plunging the city into darkness.

Many slept in street cars, in carriages and in the open air in the public squares and streets.

There have been several return shocks of slight intensity which have kept the people in alarm. The astronomical observatory, however, has given out a statement that it does not appear to be possible that there will be a repetition of the severe shocks.

The Government has taken steps to restore quiet. An inspection of all houses left standing has been ordered and directions have been issued for the distribution of relief supplied to those in need.

A traveler who came here by express train says that when the train was near Las Vegas, about half way between Valparaiso and Santiago, the cars were shaken violently and the engine nearly left the track. A stop was made and the terrified passengers alighted. Later they proceeded to Llaillai, which they found in almost total ruin.

As all telegraph and telephone lines were damaged, the exact situation throughout the country is not clear, but advices have been received that the towns of Viriage and Casablanca were entirely destroyed and that San Felipe, Rancagua, Millipilla and Llaillai were severely damaged.

At Concepcion the shock was severe and a number of persons were killed or injured.

The towns of Rengo, San Fernando, Quillotta and San Antonio and many villages are in ruins.

All railway service in the Central Zone is either stopped or greatly delayed and trade is practically at a standstill.

All lines of railway to the north and the line to Talca are greatly damaged.

A troop of cavalry has been sent to re-establish communication with Valparaiso.

The alarming news first received by the Government from Valparaiso has not been confirmed, but it is known that numerous buildings in the vicinity of the port were destroyed and that there have been severe fires in the Almendral quarter. The Mayor of Valparaiso sent word that he did not know the number of killed or injured.

The known number of dead does not exceed one hundred, according to the best estimates.

Among the dead is the wife of Admiral Montt, a distinguished naval commander.

People arriving here from Valparaiso say the situation there, though distressing, has been exaggerated.

Senor Grez, one of the refugees from Valparaiso says:

"The first shock was prolonged and threw the whole city into indescribable panic. People crowded the streets and the squares, crying and lamenting. The first shock also threw down a number of buildings.

"The second shock was still more severe and resulted in the crumbling of most of the buildings in the Almendral quarter.

"Immediately after the second shock the city was plunged into terrifying darkness, but this did not last long, for fires soon started. The lights from the flames came as a welcome relief to the darkness. The people were in an extreme state of terror, many believing that the end of the world had come."

According to others the people of Valparaiso are utterly exhausted and will flee the city as soon as the railways are running again.

The water pipes were broken and water poured through the streets. There is even lack of water to drink.

Provisions are scarce and hunger is beginning to make itself felt. The Government has ordered its warships stationed at Talcahuano to take to Valparaiso immediately the most needed necessities of life.

More than 60,000 persons have taken refuge in the hills surrounding Valparaiso, which were not much disturbed by the shocks.

Among the buildings destroyed were the Victoria Theatre, the Bellavista Railroad station and the Club de Setrembe. Most of the severe damage was done on the low ground reclaimed from the sea.

The Church of the Espiritu Santo and the Church of La Marced, as well as a large part of the buildings on Victoria street, were destroyed.

Avenue Brazil is almost completely wrecked.

The masses of material that were thrown into the streets made going about impossible.

That portion of the city where are the customs house and the City Hall was not seriously damaged. A large majority of the houses are not fit for habitation. The storehouses of the customs house are almost totally destroyed.

An employe of the telegraph company sent word from Salto, near Valparaiso, confirming the news of serious fires in the Almendral quarter. This employe also sent news that the Spanish-Italian Bank Building of Valparaiso was destroyed by the earthquake.

TOWN DROPPED INTO SEA.

Report Regarding Mincha—Estimate That Earthquake Killed 7000.

New York City.—Advices received from Valparaiso by the cable companies were to the effect that the small towns and villages along a large part of the Chilean coast suffered terrible destruction by the earthquake, some of them being completely wiped out.

It was estimated that the loss of life in Valparaiso and elsewhere in Chile would reach 7000, with a dozen important places still to be heard from. Mincha, a little town on the coast, had, it was thought, been completely wiped out, as couriers arriving at Coquimbo reported that Mincha had dropped into the sea. Ligua also suffered greatly, losing about half its population and the majority of its finest buildings.

PALMA PUTS RIVALS IN JAIL.

Plot to Assassinate Cuban President is One of Grave Charges.

Havana, Cuba.—Half a dozen highly prominent leaders of the Liberal party have been taken into custody on the charge of conspiracy against the Government and plotting to assassinate President Palma.

The events have shown that the Government was fully aroused to the necessity of putting down not only the open outlawry in Western Cuba, but also to the necessity of capturing and confining the alleged leaders of this movement, who were strongly suspected of plotting the assassination of the President and overthrowing the present Government by force.

The men arrested here are General Carlos Garcia Velez and his brother Fausto, ex-Cuban Consul at Bremen; ex-Senator Monteagudo, Colonel Manuel Piedra, Chief of Police in the House of Representatives, and General Enrique Loynaz del Castillo, a former Congressman from Puerto Principe Province. The five abovementioned men are charged with conspiracy. They say they are merely the victims of persecution.

DEFEATS THE MAD MULLAH.

Sultan of Mijertain Victorious After a Fierce Battle.

London.—According to the correspondent at Aden of the Daily Mail, after devastating nineteen Ogaden villages the Mad Mullah attacked the territory of the Sultan of Mijertain.

Both sides lost heavily in a battle. The Sultan had nine near relatives and 700 warriors killed, but eventually repulsed the Mullah, who retreated toward Illig and the coast.

CHINESE PIRATES SEIZE VESSELS AND LOOT THEM

British Lighter With Valuable Cargo Boarded by Coolies.

ROBBER HELD FOR TORTURE

Ship Taken—Crew Overpowered by Native Passengers, Who Then Set About Killing the Whites—Pursuit Begun.

Victoria, B. C.—Advices brought here by Captain Robinson and officers of the Canadian Pacific steamship Monteagle say that daring piracy is being practiced along the China coast.

At Kobe an armed party of coolies boarded a large cargo lighter filled with valuable freight for India for shipment by the steamship China, overpowered those on board, pulled the lighter out of the harbor, looted it and set it adrift.

While the British coasting steamship Sainam, Joslin master, was en route to Canton by the West River, and at a point just below Samshiu, eighty of the native passengers at a given signal took possession of the ship, all being provided with firearms. They terrorized the native crew and would have put to death all the whites on board but for the presence of mind of Captain Joslin and Chief Engineer McTavish. These two, with an East Indian quartermaster, were running the steamship with a coolie crew, and were the only foreigners on board, with the exception of Dr. McDonald, a medical missionary of the Wesleyan Mission in Wuchow.

Captain, engineer and missionary were enjoying an after-dinner smoke and chat when the pirates took charge, the first intimation of trouble being revolver shots and the sight of the Indian quartermaster holding the horde at bay with a heavy oar, with which he knocked over half a dozen before he was shot.

In attempting to rescue the quartermaster Captain Joslin was shot in the chest. McDonald and McTavish dragged him into the dining saloon, which was hastily barricaded and held until windows were broken in and a raking revolver fire directed upon the three whites, who had taken shelter under the dining table.

In making a dash for the upper deck Dr. McDonald was shot through the head and instantly killed. McTavish gained the engine room and secreted himself above the boilers, where he was undiscovered, although he narrowly escaped being burned to death.

Captain Joslin, weak from his wound, could not flee, and threw himself upon the floor as if dead. The robbers stripped him and left him with a parting kick. The crew were robbed and beaten or killed if resistance was offered.

The pirates then made off in five native boats waiting at their rendezvous. The Chinese pilot took the ship to Samshiu, where the affair was reported to Commander Vaughan, of the British cruiser Moorhen, which within an hour started on the trail of the pirates. One of the pirates has since been taken and the Chinese authorities purpose to torture him until he divulges the names of the leaders.

FAST TRAIN KILLS FOUR BOYS.

They Were Struck by a Pennsylvania Express at Elizabeth.

Elizabeth, N. J.—Four boys were killed on the Pennsylvania Railroad tracks here. They were run over by an eastbound express on their way home from a ball game. Two of the bodies fell on the tracks of the Central Railroad of New Jersey, and one landed in Broad street. The fourth rolled down the embankment of the Pennsylvania tracks. The train was traveling so fast that although the power was shut off before the boys were struck the train ran almost to North Elizabeth before it could be stopped.

The dead boys are Lloyd Griffin, ten years old, and his brother Walter, eight years old, sons of John Griffin, of 111 Catherine street, this city; Willie Griffin, nine years old, son of Michael Griffin, of Wilkesbarre, Penn., and Raymond Daubner, of 148 Catherine street, this city. The Griffin boys were cousins..

BIG CROP IN KANSAS.

100,000,000 Bushels of Wheat and 200,000,000 of Corn.

Topeka, Kan.—The crop report issued by the State Agricultural Department snows a total yield of winter wheat of over 91,000,000 bushels. The spring wheat yield will swell the grand total to 100,000,000 bushels. Corn is rated at eighty-eight per cent. of a full crop; this means a yield of 200,000,000 bushels of corn.

If the money on deposit in the Kansas banks were divided, it would give to every man, woman, and child nearly $600.

Cannon Defies Organized Labor.

Speaker Cannon will defy organized labor by making no canvass for re-election in his Illinois district.

King Visits Emperor.

King Edward left London for the Continent to meet Emperor William.

MACEDONIA.

Editor Union:

Please allow me space in your valuable paper for a few words. Health of this community is fairly good, corn crop is good and fodder pulling is the order of the day; cotton crop is quite short on account of too much rain. Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Gipson are the happy parents of a fine baby girl. On the night of the 17th there was an entertainment and concert at this place, which was a grand success and a beautiful sight to all. We are glad to see the teachers take so much pride in training the children. On the 13th inst. Monroe Nix's little son, D. J., happened to a bad accident; he was riding a mule and it ran under a shelter with him and dragged him off, breaking his left arm in several places above the elbow. We all hope for his speedy recovery. On Monday, August 20, a singing school will start here, taught by Prof. J. C. Veazey, which we believe will add much to the singing at this place. Well, we will kindly ask our correspondent of the Waldrup school house to head his announcements of the Watch Tower Bible and Tract Society at the school house instead of Macedonia, as they are strictly two different places. Success to The Union and its numerous readers. MACEDONIA KID.

CARD FROM MR. S. E. WALDRUP.

Dear Editor:

I wish to think the People's Party and Republicans for their hearty support of me in the primary just past. I greatly appreciate it, and when elected will feel that I am the humble servant of the people, and it will be my pleasure to serve them honestly and justly, doing the right thing with all my power. Mr. Pate, who was defeated, is one of my old friends, and he has my sympathy and I feel sure I will have his support. I did not think to go about among the people and bother them, for I thoroughly believe the people will stand by their nominees, and if they do that we will have a grand victory in November. I have been a member of the People's Party since its beginning and will be in it when I am called to my long home. Defeat nor division nor confusion will not separate me from my people. Again thanking you all, I remain yours for success,

S. E. WALDRUP.

SOUTH BESSIE.

Everything quiet in this locality. Had preaching Sunday at the Freeman school house by Mr. Sterkey—a good sermon. Subject, "The Riches of Divine Favor Conferred on Humanity Through the Voluntary Poverty of the World's Redeemer." Johnnie Prim, the popular mail carrier on route No. 1 from Randolph, has become tired of the road and resigned. Monroe Langston, of Bibb, is on the route at present. Bessie is at the front musically. The finest also singer to whom we ever listened resdes here—Miss Leevie Cofer. Cofer's string band furnished the music for the closing exercises of Prof. Crumpton's school at Macedonia last week. Speaking of vocal music, the only way to hear it in its true beauty and most inspiring tones is to hear true Christians sing with the spirit and understanding governed by knowledge of the divine art. Oh, who can then describe its soul-inspiring tones. It is like an echo from heaven. None can duly appreciate its true beauty but those of like character. We have in mind now the beautiful and noble Miss Bertha E. Cox, called from the corn fields of North Carolina, filled with the spirit of true missions. She will sail in September for India, there to labor for the people of that country as a minister of Christ. Her eyes filled with tears as she hoed in her father's corn field. She sought the way of life, and now she is fired with love for India's millions and says "she is going to heaven by way of India." Such can produce music in its true beauty. "ONE OF THE BOYS."

FOR SALE.

Mare mule, 8 years old; fine animal, and will work anywhere you put her. Price, $150. I live three miles west of Jemison, on R. F. D. No. 1.

tf E. M. RAY.

NOTICE.

The Board of County Commissioners of Chilton county, Alabama will meet at the county poor farm (about two miles northeast of Lomax) on Tuesday, September 4, 1906, at 10 a. m., for the purpose of receiving bids and awarding the contract for keeping the county poor for the ensuing year. The board reserves the right to reject any and all bids.

L. H. REYNOLDS,
8-23-06-2t Judge of Probate.

Professional Cards.

William M. Adams,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW
OFFICE; Room 1, Court House.
"Practices in all Courts
Long time loans negotiated on improved Farm Lands.
CLANTON, - - - ALA.

J. EARLE GOWAN,
DENTIST.
Office in Kicker Building
CLANTON, ALABAMA.

A. C. Smith,
Attorney-at-Law
Practice in All Courts
Office 6th St. opp. Court House
CLANTON, :-: ALABAMA.

N. S. JOHNSON, M. D.
PHYSICIAN & SURGEON
Office at Residence
CLANTON, ALABAMA.

L. V. STABLER, M. D
Physician & Surgeon
Office Over Horn's Drug Store
Thorsby, Alabama

J. Osmond Middleton,
Attorney-at-Law
Practice in all Courts.
Office 6th St., Court House
CLANTON, :-: ALABAMA

DR. E. G. HYMAN
DENTIST
Office in Tipton Mullins' Building
CLANTON

H. C. Junkerman
DENTIST
OFFICE: Franzen Building
Thorsby, Alabama.

G. H. GERALD,
NOTARY PUBLIC
Office at Thorsby Inn.
Deeds, Mortgages, Affidavits and other papers carefully made out.

I. S. Gerald, Notary Public
AT THORSBY SAVINGS BANK.

FREE
to Readers of
THE UNION

To everyone who sends us $1.00 for a year's subscription to THE UNION, new subscriber or renewal, we will give as a premium absolutely FREE,

A Year's Subscription
To
The Southern Ruralist

We have examined the Southern Ruralist and consider it to be the best and most practical farm paper published in the South, and it just suits this locality. Drop by The Union Office when you are in town and see a copy of the Ruralist. It will mean dollars in your pocket to read this paper with The Union for a year. tf

60 YEARS' EXPERIENCE
PATENTS
TRADE MARKS
DESIGNS
COPYRIGHTS &c.
Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. HANDBOOK on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents.
Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the Scientific American.
A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.
MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York
Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

LAND FOR SALE.

Eighty acres land in Beat 10, close to Cooper's. For sale cheap. Call on or address L. H. GENTRY,
Mt. Creek, Ala.
tf R. F. D. No. 2.

GOD'S WILL FOR POLITICAL LIFE.

A sermon delivered by William James Beeson at Rocky Mount Church and published by request of C. M. Northcutt and others of that congregation.

"Render therefore unto Caesar the things that are Caesar's, and unto God the things that are God's."—Christ.

"Without me ye can do nothing."—Christ.

"For me to live is Christ."—Paul.

"In Him we live and move and have our being."—Paul.

"O, King Belshazzar, thou hast not humbled thine heart; but hast lifted up thyself against the Lord of heaven—and the God in whose hand thy breath is; and whose are all thy ways; hast thou not glorified."—Daniel.—And Belshazzar lost his kingdom.

We are all agreed doubtless that God has a will for man in governmental life. But we will look briefly at some proof. God made the heaven and the earth, and continued His work until order was brought out of chaos. But to mention the law and order He ordained: Day was separated from the night; water from the land; "every herb yielding seed after its kind;" and God made two great lights, the greater light to rule the day and the lesser light to rule the night;" every fish and fowl and beast brought forth after its kind; then God gave man dominion over all the earth, and He was "God over all."

There is order in all nature without which we could have no natural sciences. There must be law over all man or anarchy will prevail. Napoleon said in the time of France's great revolution that "Whether there be a God or not, you must make men think so or you cannot rule them." Hence we find it written in the constitution of man that he must look to the Almighty Ruler of the universe if he is to be orderly so as to advance in life and civilization.

I. Christ the Center and Source of Correct Life.

"I am the way, the truth, and the life," says Jesus. God is the author of all truth everywhere, and hence of all true government. In all ages as God has been obeyed correct government has resulted. The nations have risen in righteousness and fallen in iniquity. The Egyptian civilization stood until selfishness on the part of the Pharaos caused the people to be oppressed and then it fell. The Hebrews were sucessful against all their enemies, small and great, so long as they obeyed God. The history of Israel may be written in brief as follows: "They walked in the statutes of Jehovah and were victorious; they violated His law and fell into the power of the enemy." No nation could stand against her so long as God fought her battles—so long as she was righteous. What was true of the Egyptians and the Jews was true of all oriental people.

It was also true of Greece and Rome. God had much truth in these civilizations. The Greeks were an imaginative and many-sided resourceful people. They developed a beauty in art and parts of their life that were pleasing to God. Rome developed a law that organized the world. And if these nations had accepted the true "Light that lighteth every man," and as this light came had cleansed their corrupt governmental and other life instead of becoming more corrupt, they might have been standing today. History tells us that Rome, some three or four hundred years before her fall, had defeated the same Parthians and at a time when they were more powerful an enemy. But in 476 A. D. she was more steeped in [illegible] wickedness and corruption to [illegible] and this was the chief cause of her fall.

"Only righteousness exalteth a nation; but sin is a reproach to any people."

II. The Good of Man is the Object of All Government.

It is to the glory of God that man be governed in the most righteous and beneficial way possible. Government is for the benefit of the governed and not as is often in this sin-cursed earth, for the ruler. As Christ said of the Sabbath, "Man is not made for the Sabbath, but the Sabbath for man;" so man is not made for government, but government for man.

All historians agree that in all of the world and all stages of government there has been but one supreme issue between man, and that is the "good of the masses against the oppressive rule of the classes." The chief against his tribesmen, the monarch against his subjects, the aristocratic class against the common people, the rulers lording it over the ruled, the rich against the poor, the capitalists against the laborer, the classes against the masses. In all these contests God would have given complete victory to masses of people if this issue had been appealed to Him. Taken as a whole, throughout these centuries of deadly political conflict, the masses always being oppressed, God has given them partial victory, for they are getting more and more powers of government into their hands. And as they accept and obey God in their whole life, including politics, thus becoming righteous and intelligent in God in political affairs.God will place into their hands the entire concerns of government.

God's ideal government for men is a "government of the people, by the people, and for the people," with Himself as the recognized all-wise, Law-giver and the actual preserver of perfect equity and righteousness in their government, is one in which the supreme effort is made to provide "the greatest possible present and eternal good for every citizen," whether officer or private citizen, rich or poor, merchant or farmer, dweller in the city or in the country.

"The greatest possible real good to every citizen" should be the watch cry of the party that desires the votes of the masses, and the people should see to it that that party proves true to what it promises.

Most government, even in these United States, is run for the benefit of the few. We hear something of "a public office being a public trust;" but we feel more the hurtful trampling of this sacred trust under the feet of the office. But, brethren and fellow citizens, we are learning that the people, especially the bulk of farmers, are ready to heartily support the candidate who accepts principles above party, the good of the many toilers above the few capitalists, the elevation of righteousness in politics and business above the sordid gold of the boodler. This was proven true at places all over our country at the last general election, without respect to party.

In republican Missouri Folk, a democrat, led his ticket by some 70,000 votes, and was elected governor because he dared to prosecute and imprison alike the rich and poor, the corrupt democratic party bosses and the republican leaders. Folk went direct to the farmers of his state, stated his case, told of the enmity of his party machine towards him, said he wanted no rascal of any party to vote for him, but that he wanted the support of every true man of every party who wanted clean, honest, fair government to be executed. He had cleaned up St. Louis when city attorney, and they knew he would again keep his promise if elected governor. Hence his fine majority when the whole republican ticket besides was elected. In Wisconsin La-Follette, a republican, led his state with a split party because he championed the rights of the people against railroad injustice and extortion. In democratic New York city Jerome ran independently on a ticket for righteousness, and was elected with a fine majority over party-nominated opponents, when he could say: "The glory of my father's son is this, that no corrupt political party will dare nominate me." He is a republican in politics when it can be made pure. But he promised if elected district attorney of New York that he would see that every corruptionist and every scoundrel of every kind, without respect to party, position or wealth should be punished to the fullest extent of the law as a common man would be.

All that is needed today is to get your pure, blameless and courageous leaders to come forth and call for the support of all who yet desire government true to the law laid down by Moses and Christ. Oh, for a Folk, a LaFollette or a Jerome in every state and district in our great union. If we train our boys and girls to be true citizens of our state and country and of that heavenly kingdom, God will raise up such leaders and redeem our country from congested wealth on one hand and great poverty and ignorance on the other, and from corrupt politics.

While God's ideal government is one in which the greatest possible eternal good is granted to every one. His law for business life is that quotation: "My God shall supply all your need according to His riches in glory by Christ Jesus." Phil. iv. 19. This is God's promise to every entirely consecrated child of His. But few have all their needs supplied. The over rich need relief from their burden, from the dwarfed spiritual nature caused by hoarding that which rightly belongs to others, and from internal misgivings, and from external beggars. The needs of the poor are too well known and too numerous to mention.

Notice that all our needs are to be supplied "by Christ Jesus," just as all true government must come from Him. This is of supreme importance. For we have almost universal unrest among men; and they are seeking by unholy and selfish and contentious unions to effect the needed changes that will with equity distribute the great wealth that has been produced in the last half century. But union in Jesus will alone bring the distribution of all goods so as to supply all needs.

Further, all attempt at government by the masses where Jesus has been rejected has resulted in utter failure. It is perfectly reasonable that the people must have leaders who themselves are not blind. Jesus says: "Can the blind guide the blind: shall they not both fall into the ditch?" Again: "I can do nothing of Myself but what I see my Father doing." If Jesus could do nothing without He was guided by God, how dare a leader of men today attempt to make himself above the son of God by attempting to lead without divine guidance? Take but one notable example among a galaxy of such: the French revolution. After the corrupt Bourbon family had oppressed the poor laboring classes for generations, forcing the roads to Paris to be built with their blood and bones, extorting one-third of their crops for taxes, at the same time prohibiting the building of fences because these would hinder the aristocratic classes in their fox hunts and demanding that no manure be used under the crops for this, the Bourbons claimed, would make the partridges taste, the partridges that the farmers raised on their own land and upon their own crops; then after the laborers had toiled all day these tyrants forced them to spend the nights beating the ponds with sticks, when an aristocratic lady was sick to prevent frogs from croaking. When the oppressed got into power they abolished the Sabbath, defied God, worshiping reason as God, invented the guillotine which destroyed Bourbon life all too slow. They then invented death by marriage (two tied together and drowned), by baptism (a boat load drowned), and death by lining dozens up and killing them all at one fire of the cannon. The old ruler class were killed so rapidly that it took an extra sewer pipe to carry the blood off from the streets of Paris. Fellow citizens, we need to take warning and demand pure Christian men for our officers. By this we mean men who truly obey the law of God in heart and life and service. Then they will be led of God and none need fall into the ditch. One final point: The demand of a few made intense enough will bring forth such leaders. A few hundred thousand populist votes a decade ago has made the democratic party quite populistic and the republican party largely so. When a few thousands in each state, in the wisdom and power of God demand consecrated Christian men for office they will run, and either with or without one or the leading political parties will be elected, and "righteousness and peace and joy in the Holy Ghost" shall reign in our land.

WILLIAM JAMES BEESON.

NEWSY GLEANINGS.

Starving peasants in Russia are fighting police and troops.

Civil war by the Russian peasants has practically broken out.

The Pennsylvania Railroad is reducing its fare to two and a half cents a mile.

A rumor that America is scheming to buy Santo Domingo made the islanders frantic.

The British Parliament adjourned for the long vacation and will reconvene on October 23.

Negotiations between Russia and Japan for a new shipping and commercial treaty began.

Paterson's butchers propose to manufacture their own ice and sell it to themselves at ten cents.

Washington believes railroad men intend to raise rates to highest point when the new rate law goes into effect.

Charles E. Tripler, of liquid air fame, died at a hotel in Liberty, N. Y., from Bright's disease, after an illness of two months.

"Instead of giving rebates, railroads now manipulate their tariff schedules," said A. B. Stickney, president of the Chicago Great Western Railway.

Secretary Bonaparte divided the armor-plate contract, giving the Midvale Company, the lowest bidder, half, and each of the trust concerns a quarter.

The last saloon license that will be issued in Chicago until the city nearly doubles its present population was given out a few days ago. The license number is 7353.

Despite a decision of the Appellate Division that a consumer need pay no more than eighty cents a thousand feet for gas, the Consolidated Gas Company, of New York City, continues to enforce the dollar rate.

SPORTING BREVITIES.

It has been decided not to race McKinley, 2.06¼, this season.

Sir Maurice Fitz-Gerald's yawl Satanita won the King's cup at Cowes.

Philadelphia Jack O'Brien is in England. He will be gone six weeks.

The Broncho paced a mile in 2.02 at Decatur, Ill., which is a world's record for pacing mares.

There will be no meeting of runners held at Memphis, Tenn., this fall, according to the announcement of the new Memphis Jockey Club.

Abraham Gage, of the West Indian eleven, made a new American record of nine wickets without loss of a run in a game at Prospect Park, Brooklyn.

C. M. Daniels won the 100-yard metropolitan swimming championship at Travers Island, Long Island Sound. He reduced the course record by three-fifths of a second.

Angiola trotted the fastest mile of the season—2.06—and defeated the long unbeaten stallion Mainsheet in a race at the opening of the Poughkeepsie Grand Circuit meeting.

At Norfolk, Conn., Robert Le Roy, the former Columbia University tennis captain, scored his third victory for the Bridgman cup, offered by the Norfolk T. C., winning it outright.

At the trotting meeting of the New York Driving Club at Empire City Park, A. E. Perren drove in six races and won them all, establishing a new record for amateur reinsmen.

L. L. Whitman, in a six-cylinder automobile, on a transatlantic record run, made the trip from San Francisco to Omaha in nine days, cutting the previous record to that point in half.

Indiana had, in 1905, 145,947 miles of telephone.

THE POPE'S SWISS GUARD.

It is Four Hundred Years Since It First Appeared at the Vatican.

That prince of journalists, Burchard, describes, under the date of January 22, 1506, how he saw a sturdy band of 150 Swiss soldiers enter Rome and receive a most cordial welcome from the reigning pontiff, Julius II. They were the first band of that famous corps, known as the Swiss Guard, which forms such a characteristic feature of the Vatican life of to-day. This afternoon the fourth centennary of its establishment was celebrated with solemnity in the Vatican, when Cardinal Merry del Val unveiled a commemorative tablet in the barracks of the corps and Herr Virz, councillor of the Swiss Federation, delivered an eloquent panegyric on the long career of faithful service rendered to the Roman pontiffs by this chosen bodyguard. He referred to that terrible scene on May 6, 1527, the day which opened the "Sack of Rome" by the constable of Bourbon. Clement VII. had taken refuge in the castle of Sant Angelo, selecting a dozen men of the Swiss Guard to protect his person and leaving the rest, 250 in number, at St. Peter's to endeavor to save the shrine of the Prince of the Apostles from pillage. They were not successful, but they allowed themselves to be hacked to pieces, to the very last man, before the invaders were able to penetrate into the basilica.

For twenty years after that fatal day the Swiss Guard was practically non-existent, but in 1548 250 volunteers again enrolled themselves in the service of the Pope, and from that day until this the corps has remained more or less at that strength. Michelangelo is commonly credited with the design for the picturesque uniform they have worn for the last four centuries—without the slightest foundation. Pius VI. made obedience very hard for his faithful Swiss in 1798, when he ordered them to lay down their arms and permit the French revolutionary troops to penetrate into the apostolic palace of the Quirinal. Even Pius IX., hoping to assuage the passions of the Roman mob, consented to disband the Swiss and replace them by a civic guard, but the events of the following months obliged him to reconsider his decision, and the guard has survived to celebrate its fourth centenary to-day.—The Tablet.

Possibilities of Dry Farming.

Estimates of the amount of land that can be reclaimed by irrigation vary all the way from 50,000,000 acres up to 125,000,000 acres, with the weight of authoritative opinion decidedly favoring the lower figure. Yet if one per cent. of the money now being expended for irrigation works were made available for the education of the people who ought to be interested in dry farming, it is probable that five hundred million acres of land—perhaps more than that—could be reclaimed from its present unproductive, and comparatively worthless state just as rapidly as settlers, whether native born, or immigrants from foreign countries, could be taken to it.—Century.

New City For Egypt.

Suakin, on the Red Sea, has proved an unsatisfactory port and is to be superseded by a brand-new rival which has been built up out of coral work and desert sand by the Egyptian authorities. The rival is Port Sudan, the latest addition to the cities of the British Empire, and an enthusiast says that it is destined to be a place of magnitude and importance in the days when cotton shall have made it the New Orleans of the east. The place has hitherto been called Mersa Sheikh Barud. It is about 680 miles south of Suez and is capable of holding a dozen vessels of moderate size. The entrance is 600 feet across, and the land around is six feet above sea level.

Peanut Club is Formed.

The peculiar initiation of a new club formed by several popular young women of Lorain, O., consists in the initiate being required to roll a peanut from Dexter street to the loop, North Broadway, a distance of two miles. The club is known as the Peanut Club, and the feat has so far been performed by the following young women: Lena Gorsage, Delia Cervenka, Pauline Hildebrand, Elsie Ashbolt and Pearl Gorsage. The peanut route is through the central section of the city.

Tramps Know Good Thing.

Vermont papers are complaining that the first tramp of the year was entertained at Turners Falls on Christmas Day, while Burlington, Vt., found itself overrun throughout the year. They say the reason for the difference lies in the fact that the Massachusetts town made their man earn what he ate sawing wood, while Vermont sends her vagrants to loaf around the jails during the cold weather.

Muskrats Sank Steamboat.

The steamer Swan sank at her pier as a result of a leak caused by muskrats. The rodents knawed a hole through the hull near the water line and the boat settled until she rested on the bottom.

The craft was successfully raised with the assistance of a tug whose pumps were employed. The muskrats that caused the trouble were killed. — Lakeside Correspondence Portland Oregonian.

Ben M. Jacobs & Bro

Furniture and Rugs.

—SOLE AGENTS—

Globe-Wernicke Elastic Book Cases

Filing Cabinets.

Catalogue for the asking.

BIRMINGHAM, AL

Farmers' Mutual Insurance Associa

OF ALABAMA.

CHARTERED BY SPECIAL ACT OF THE LEGISLATURE

By the People and for the People.

Chilton County Branch

Organized February 3, 1900.

W. M. WILSON, President. WALLACE C. EDLER, Sec'y.-Treas.

INSURES Farmers' dwellings, outbuildings and con[tents] and live stock against loss by fire, wind and light[ning]. The cheapest, safest and most sensible method of in[surance] ever known to man

Average Yearly Cost for Five and a half Years 43-100 of 1 per ce

Full particulars furnished upon application to

WALLACE C. EDLER, Clanton, A

A GREAT COMBINATION OFFER

We Will Furnish the "TWICE-A-WEEK" Issue of the

St. Louis Globe-Democr

—With—

THE UNION

—For—

$1.50 Both Papers, one year, only $1

The St. Louis Globe-Democrat should not be classed with the many weekly papers. It is a high-grade Semi-Weekly, eight or more pages Tuesday and Friday. It is beyond all comparison the biggest, best and cheapest National News and Home Journal published in the United States. It is Republican in Politics but is above all

A Great Modern Newspaper.

It is not made up indiscriminately from the Daily issue. It is carefully edited with special reference to the needs of the Farmer, the Merchant and the professional man who desires to keep thoroughly posted without spending time to read a large Daily Paper. It also contains a great variety of well selected reading matter, making it invaluable to every member of the family.

This Liberal Clubbing Offer

is open to all old or new subscribers, but may be withdrawn at any time, as we must receive the cash with order. Address

THE UNION,
Clanton, Ala.

PAUL CALAME,

205 21st Street

Birmingham, Ala.

Practical Watchmaker and Optician

Eyes Correctly Fitted

Mail orders promptly

SUBSCRIBE FOR THIS PAPER

DO YOU WANT

Letterheads, Noteheads, Billheads, Envelopes,

OR ANYTHING ELSE PRINTED?

Then Call at

THE UNION OFFICE

and See Fine Work at Low Prices.

500 Noteheads 500 Envelopes All For $2.00

Good Work on Good Material, done on Good Machines.
Don't forget! THE UNION, Clanton, Alabama.

Pure Water Prevents Fevers.

DRILLED WELLS FURNISH PURE WATER

We guarantee water or no charge made.
Estimates given. Address

I. E. SARBER CO.

Thorsby, Ala.

cobs & Bros.
and Rugs.
AGENTS—
stic Book Cases
Cabinets.
HINGHAM, ALA
nsurance Associati
LABAMA.
ACT OF THE LEGISLATURE
nd for the People.
unty Branch
ebruary 3, 1900.
WALLACE C. EDLER,
Sec'y.-Treas.
gs, outbuildings and cont
s by fire, wind and lightn
most sensible method of in 43-100 of 1 per cen
on application to
C. EDLER, Clanton, A
BINATION OFFER
TWICE-A-WEEK" Issue
the——
Globe-Democra
With—— UNION
For——
one year, only $1.5
ould not be classed with the many ch
l-Weekly, eight or more pages, e mparison the biggest, best and cheap lished in the United States. It is ern Newspaper.
from the Daily issue. It is carefu de of the Farmer, the Merchant and thoroughly posted without sparing
o contains a great variety of well sel
every member of the family.
Clubbing Offer
t may be withdrawn at any time, and ress
THE UNION,
Clanton, Ala
Practical Watchmak
and Optician
Eyes Correctly
Fitted
Mail orders promptly fil
IBE FOR PAPER
WANT
, Noteheads,
Envelopes,
ELSE PRINTED?
Call at
ON OFFIC
rk at Low Prices.
l For $2.00
l, done on Good Machi
N, Clanton, Alabama.
events Fevers.
RNISH PURE WATE
or no charge made.
dress
RBER CO.
Alaba

A FEW IFS.

I.

All who sneer would praise us
And prospects all were fair,
And tricks Fortune plays us
Would not be hard to bear;
Those who knock would nod us
And all our hopes came true,
And all our debtors paid us
And all our clothes were new,
And we could borrow Money from brook dimmay
As it seems to-morrow
Or yesterday.

II.

If years were spent
And youth grew old;
If love or pity
Were going to fold
Their tents and came, laying
Their hearts against our own
And kissing our features, saying
That smallest of us alone
Would grumble,
We would fret
Or be humble
Or nothing lower yet.

III.

If every dog were toothless
And millionaires would cease
In lawless ways and ruthless
To make their stores increase;
If gasolene were fragrant
And smoke and dust were sweet,
And every tattered vagrant
Earned all he got to eat,
And all our poor relations
Would cease to sponge, at last,
How scarce the provocations
Would be to feel downcast.

IV.

If prowess, fame and pleasure
To each whose aims are high
Were granted in full measure,
The fools alone would sigh;
If stocks would always hurry
To rise when we invest
How few of us would worry
Or be by want oppressed;
If "buts" and "ifs" would never
Creep in to plague mankind,
We'd have no griefs whatever
To spoil our peace of mind.

—S. E. Kiser, in Chicago Record-Herald.

TAKEN FOR A "RUSTLER."

By FRANKLIN WELLES CALKINS.

It was a lowering morning about the middle of October when I set out from Coots. I had made some miles, and, rather than turn back, when a wind and soft snow began pelting in my face and in a few minutes a fall of snow was in progress. Against this I pushed without reluctance for a couple of hours.

Then I crossed a piece of newly cut timber and were following a wood trail between that [illegible] when the cayuse suddenly made a sudden halt. He stood with head half about, with ears pricked up inquiringly. He was evidently asking what I proposed to do about something in the wind.

I spurred ahead, but the snow was so thick that I could see but a few rods. Soon I had a feeling that there was something to be avoided; and then a muffled rumble came to my ears, and before I could make out from which direction a stampede was coming, Coots and I were in the thick of a long march of cattle going before the wind.

Luckily the herd was swinging along at a trot instead of at a run, or we should have been trampled under foot. As it was, Coots was near-borne to his feet, and before he could recover we were packed too tightly for immediate escape. Then Coots laid his teeth angrily to the flank of a big spotted steer, and followed the tactics of a "cut."

For several minutes we dodged among the hustling cattle. We must have been carried forward a half-mile, working toward the front and to one side, when we parted from the herd.

Instantly Coots put himself between the herd and his "cut," and headed the big steer back toward the trail we had left. I had given the cayuse his head altogether, and now, unthinkingly, I enjoyed his trained performance. But the chase came to an end in a startling fashion.

In a whirl of snow we came fairly against a couple of horsemen, evidently in charge of the running stock. The muzzles of two revolvers were quickly thrust in my face.

"Hands up!" was the order, and of course I quickly obeyed. I saw in the one hand a big, lank fellow with long straw-colored mustache and pale-blue eyes, and on the other a slight, boyish individual, as dark and grim as an Indian.

These men relieved me of my revolver, and cutting the pack-strings from my saddle, tied my wrists behind my back in a twinkling.

"Gettin' pretty foxy, ain't ye, cuttin' out steers in a blizzard?" The big man spoke, and his blue eyes twinkled in a dangerously humorous way.

"Gentlemen, I assure you——" I began.

"Shut up!" The tall man, with Coots' lariat wrapped about his saddle pommel, wheeled and galloped on after the cattle. The smaller cowboy followed at my pony's heels.

During a brief rush through the storm I had time to reflect that my thoughtlessness had brought me into a bad scrape. I had been captured red-handed "rustling" a steer! I was dressed in the rough corduroy, slouch-hat and leather leggings of the range, and I rode a cow-pony of the line and carried a lariat at the pommel of one of the best of Cheyenne stock saddles. Moreover, I was a stranger.

How was I to identify myself or convince these men of my innocence? I thought of the papers I usually carried in my pocketbook, but remembered that I had nothing but currency with me. All my personal papers and recent correspondence had been packed in a chest, which would be on its way to Deer Creek as soon as the weather should clear. If I could not prevail upon my captors to listen to me my case was hopeless.

When we came up with the tail of the herd, the tall man halted and tossed my rope to the younger. "Take care of him, Bill," he said; "the rest of us'll herd the steers."

The one addressed as Bill now drove Coots in front of him. We rode forward at a shuffling trot until we reached the banks of the Platte, where there was a halt to look for a ford.

While my guard and I were sitting our horses I attempted to speak to him, but he stopped me with an angry gesture.

"Don't open your chin to me," he said, "or I'll shoot your teeth out!"

As we sat on the outskirts of the uneasy herd two cow-men, whom I had not seen before, rode by. Each gave me a lowering glance.

Presently we began moving behind the cattle again. A ford had been found, and we crossed the river at a shallow rapid, and thence passed up a narrow creek valley and into the rough bad lands which, above old Fort Fetterman, lie along the river for many miles.

Each minute now was bearing me hopelessly beyond the range of the railroad camps. In these bad lands I could hope for no chance encounter of an acquaintance. Whether these men would even give me the brief formality of trial by lynch-law was an open question.

For an hour or more, going slowly now, we threaded a deep valley, where the wind whistled high above and the snow dropped upon us as if shaken from a sieve. Here one could see at times the length of the herd, and I noted that there were five men on the "drive." One, whom I had not seen before, led a pack-pony.

In the forenoon a halt was ordered in a flat, sheltered basin, where the stock could find good grass under the snow. At the upper end of this basin and in the dry creek channel the man with the pack-pony had found a pile of drift stuff. He had halted, unpacked his pony kit, and lighted a brisk fire when my guard and I came up. This man was short, fat and good-natured. He greeted us hilariously.

"So," he said, "that's our cheeky rustler! — I admire that kind of a man. He's got nerve."

My surly guard's face relaxed in a brief grin, but he growled, "Dry up, Jake! This ain't no funny business!"

I was ordered to get off my horse, and the animals were bridled and turned loose, with their saddles on and lariats dragging. Having only to look after me, Bill now seated himself on a blanket roll and watched the cook preparing to fry bacon.

I sat in the snow against a hummock, where I could cool my aching wrists and, incidentally, wet the leather strings which tied them. I made no attempt to speak to either of the men before me. But as the minutes passed I prepared myself mentally for the effort of gaining a hearing before the men when they should all assemble at dinner. They should listen to me or they should do their worst at once, and I had not much doubt as to what they would do.

While I was bracing myself for this ordeal the cook looked up from his work and noted that his unsaddled pack-pony was making off.

"Hang it, Bill, that pinto of mine's takin' the back trail!" he said. "You go after him."

"Go after him yourself!" was the reply. "I'll hold your fryin'-pan."

Accordingly the cook ran and Bill took his place at the fire. I watched the man running for his pony until his figure showed dimly in the sifting snow. Then I looked at Bill. He was stooping toward the fire to put some coffee into the boiling pot. He had his back to me, and was apparently oblivious of my existence.

An uncontrollable impulse seized upon me. I leaped to my feet and jumped at the stooping man, planting my heels in his back. He pitched headlong among the firebrands.

Then I sped toward Coots. The cayuse, with two others, was digging for grass on the flat a little way out toward the herd. I called him by name as I ran, fearing he might take to his heels at my swift approach. But Coots lifted his head and stood as usual, and I thrust a foot into one stirrup and threw myself in a side-swing into his saddle.

With a yell I set him going, and with a pressure of one knee, to which he answered as to a rein, I turned his head to the back trail. As we wheeled about I saw my late guard dancing like a Sioux, holding his left hand to a face burned by bacon grease or scalded by boiling coffee, while with his right he fumbled for his pistol. He was hors de combat, and I gave a whoop of joy.

Coots struck the running gait like a rabbit, and responded to my urging with a speed which added to my success the delight of a discovery. In cowboy phrase, we simply "cut the wind," and I knew that my legs were hugging the flanks of a racer. I had loosened my wrists a trifle, and I gripped the tree of my saddle behind and leaned as far forward as I could.

I turned anxious eyes toward the cattle herd, and was overjoyed to see its outlines fade and vanish in a whirl of falling snow.

I had forgotten the cook in my excitement. Coots had sped a quarter of a mile or more when we came up with him, just mounting his pinto, which he had captured in a depression of the valley.

We were upon him almost before the man could make a motion, and before he could bring his revolver to bear we were flying fifty yards away, and going faster than any wind which blew that day. I looked back, to see him gallop up a rise, banging at me. His bullets went wide of their mark, and the last I saw of him he had halted in the dim distance, and was waving his hat in farewell.

I do not know whether any of those men chased me farther, but I do know that they had not a horse in their outfit which could have overtaken Coots.

When we came to the Platte I felt safe enough to get off my steaming cayuse and soak my wrists in cold water until I got my bonds loosened, and later on I reached a railway camp in safety.

Some weeks later, long after the snow had melted, I was riding down my grade-line one morning when I saw a familiar figure approaching. It was the tall man of the tawny mustache, who had taken me for a rustler.

He halted his pony in much confusion.

"Say, stranger," he said, "I've rode forty miles to—"

"Never mind," I interrupted him. "I've never mentioned that little affair. Fine morning, isn't it?"

The man was visibly embarassed. He sat staring at me with his face red and working for a moment. Then he spoke.

"Say," he said, "I'll give you a hundred dollars for that cayuse you're ridin'."

"Not for sale," I replied. "Good morning!" and I rode on.—Youth's Companion.

Canada to Irrigate Dry Lands.

Consul Conant, of Windsor, briefly describes what is being done to promote irrigation in the Canadian Northwest:

"An irrigation project unique in the history of America is being carried out by the Canadian Pacific Railway just east of Calgary, Alberta. Some time ago the Canadian Pacific Railway undertook to provide a monster irrigation scheme to put water on dry lands lying between Calgary and Medicine Hat for wheat culture. Already sixty miles of the main and secondary canals and more than one hundred miles of laterals have been completed, and about 110,000 acres of land brought under ditch. The main canal in the undertaking is sixteen miles in length, fifty-four feet wide at the bottom, eighty-four at the water line, and carries ten feet of water.

"This is only the first or western section of the vast scheme by which it is ultimately proposed to irrigate nearly 2,000,000 acres, at an expenditure of $8,000,000. The water is taken from the Bow River, which even at low water has a surplus after irrigating these lands. It will be some years before the undertaking is complete, but water will be turned on early in the spring on the first section of more than 100,000 acres.

Society Youth a Hard Worker.

Rhinelander Waldo, the young society man of New York, who occupies the post of deputy police commissioner, is disappointing his enemies by showing a capacity for hard work in his new post. He arrives at the office at 9 a. m., and sticks to his desk until 5. Then he makes an evening tour of the city to familiarize himself with the actual workings of the department.

Nature's Mys

By George L. Brow

NATURE has many mysteri
dom, that no student of intelligently explain, sec been locked and the ke

When I was a boy
weeks old, bringing it
two miles. While takir
bag and at once started in a bee line
the road over which it had been bro
through a piece of woodland, across a
hours was back from where it was ta

What hidden hand guided it where none of the so-called higher animals could have found the way? Many of our migratory birds find their way across the trackless waters to the distant shores of South America and return each season and the guide that bids them forward go never fails the way to show.

Some would call that guide instinct, some would call it reason, others would say the sixth sense, direction.

No one knows, it is simply one of nature's mysteries. No scientist can tell you why nature's law is reversed in the case of birds of prey, and the woodcock and snipe families, where the females are larger than the males.

Neither can they tell you why the hop vine climbs around the pole with the sun from east to south, while the bean vine climbs around in the opposite direction. Although scientists have demonstrated beyond a doubt that no animal on the face of the earth was created for its own benefit, from the tiniest insect up to man, still they are unable to tell us what mission for good, or for whose benefit some of them were created.

Nature never duplicates, either in man, beast, bird, fruit or flower. Though multiplied by millions the result will be the same—each will have an individuality of its own.

Such are nature's mysteries which we find all through the animal and vegetable kingdom, and as such they will remain.—Forest and Stream.

Is the Democracy of Our Colleges in Danger?

By President Arthur T. Hadley, of Yale.

THERE is no doubt that the democratic spirit in our colleges is subject to more dangers today than it was fifty years ago. The old graduate is right in thinking that it is easier to keep up the democratic spirit where everybody is doing the same thing and where nobody has much money. But the old graduate is wrong in thinking that we can legislate ourselves back to this condition when the world outside has passed beyond it; or that men trained in such a college as he remembers would be able, after they graduated, to meet the demands and the temptations of the present age. Lycurgus made Sparta into an old-fashioned college, with no electives and no money. How miserably the Spartans failed when they were called upon to do anything which made for human progress is a matter of history. Our college graduates are going out into a world of political life more complex than anything with which the Lacedaemonians had to deal. It is only by training them for the enjoyment and the use of wealth in their school days that we shall enable them to deal with the greater problems which freedom and wealth are creating throughout the country. It is one of the most hopeful signs in the undergraduate life of the present day that the students, and particularly the wealthier students, are preparing themselves with open eyes for the assumption of political responsibility. The studies and efforts of our undergraduates in our college clubs will probably not advance them very much in the direction of getting office during their earlier years of professional life. But these studies and efforts will help them, and will help the country as a whole, toward the establishment of a system under which the man with money feels that he holds that money in trust for the public, and the man who desires office desires it primarily for what he can put into it rather than for what he can get out of it.—Harper's Magazine.

For City Farmers as Well as Country Folks

Don't Leave Stones in the Road Even if You're Not Going That Way Again.

By E. S. Martin.

DON'T leave stones in the road. If your horse doesn't stumble over them somebody's else's horse may. When you see in the beaten track a loose stone fit to give a wheel a hard jolt or bring down a stumbling horse, stop and throw it to one side. It will pay you to take that trouble even on a strange road that you expect never to travel again. It is good for your character. It helps to justify your claim to be a civilized man, living in a civilized community. Every truly civilized community rests upon the theory that the care of all is the duty of each, and its civilization is high or low according to the prevalence or scarcity of individual responsibility for the general welfare.

There are two large classes of folks in the world, those who go through life leaving messes behind them to be cleared up, and those who clear up the messes. If you clear up faithfully after yourself, that is much, but it is not quite enough. You must expect also to contribute part of your time and strength to clearing up after the weak and the shiftless. If everybody did his duty there would be little need of government. The purpose of government is to defend the weak, to constrain the lazy, to restrain the greedy, and to make the best sense of the wisest people available for the benefit of the general community. If we were all responsible and dutiful and picked out of the road the stones that we saw there, the work of government would be light.

Hard bargains, hard words, neglected chances to give help where help was needed, slanders, ill-natured gossip, misrepresentation—all such things are stones in the road. Don't leave them behind you, to plague you when you come that way again, or else to plague some other traveller. Clear up as you go along.—From "The Farmer's Seasons," in the Fiction Number of Scribner.

Danger of Plutocracy.

By Joseph Tausek.

WHILE an oppressed people on one side of the globe are struggling for the liberties which have long since become the priceless heritage of their Western brethren, it will be well for men to weigh heavily the words so eloquently set forth by Justice Brewer in his recent speech before the Texas and Arkansas Bar Association.

Emanating as they do from a representative of one of the highest tribunals in the world, his remarks have a very deep significance.

In these days of political antagonism, inspired more than ever before by motives of self-aggrandizement, it is an encouraging sign to find that there are still among us men who hold their lives and the high principles upon which our nation is founded to be one and inseparable.

Nine-tenths of the legislation in the United States is the result of the abnormal growth of wealth. As this legislation is controlled by a class whose only aim seems to be a purposeless accumulation of wealth, it is necessarily partial and undemocratic and our nation is in danger of falling under the yoke of a plutocracy which would pale the tyranny of ancient Rome.

If the "brotherhood of man" is to become anything more than an empty combination of words, it will be when the men who control and distribute wealth and power extend a helping hand and afford a beneficient example to those under them, and by promoting as far as possible a community of interest among their less fortunate fellowmen instead of competing for possible gains in a common field.

He Stopped the Coughing.

One Sunday morning a clergyman was greatly annoyed by the unusual amount of coughing among his congregation. He had not a strong voice and could only be distinctly heard when the people were still and attentive. As the coughing went on, and even grew worse, he suddenly stopped right in the middle of the sermon. All eyes were instantly turned to the pulpit, every cough was hushed and there was perfect silence.

"My friends," said the minister, with a smile, "it seems you stop when I stop."

This gentle rebuke had the desired effect. The people found that their coughing could be kept down when they liked to a great extent, and the minister proceeded with his sermon under far more favorable conditions.

Length of Wall-Paper.

Most persons have an idea that all pieces of wall-paper are necessarily of one length. Our domestic papers run eight yards to the piece. Those from France and Germany measure nine yards, while the English rolls contain twelve yards. Then, of course, there's the repeat. On some of the new papers with the smallest figures this is next to nothing, on some others, notably that le tailed bird pattern, if the bit over figure is required for each length means a loss of five feet on each st put on the wall. —Philadelphia R ord.

SECRET OF BOILING WATER.

To boil a thing well it is not necessary to boil it hard, says Farming. To average kitchen Mary thinks that the more commotion in the water the hotter it is, and in order to produce this she burns a great deal of fuel and ruins the stove by keeping it red hot. Water placed in a stew-pan directly over a red hot lid will, of course, boil more vehemently, yet it will not cook meat or potatoes any quicker, and not so well as water that just keeps at the boiling point and quietly simmers.

MAKING BEDS.

The practice of having beds made in the early morning, though exceedingly tidy, is one which should be discouraged, for it is bad. Constantly we see a bed made half an hour after the sleeper has left the room, wherefore all the exhalations from the skin during the night are confined beneath the sheets and are inhaled again when the bed is next used. It is an excellent practice, and one which ought to be encouraged in all young people, to turn off the clothes of the bed immediately on rising. The mattress, too, should be turned back, so that all may be properly aired and quite cold before being re-made.

CANNING WITHOUT COOKING.

It is claimed that rhubarb, gooseberries and several other kinds of tart fruits may be readily kept by canning them in cold water. Fill the sterilized jars with the fruit, pressing in well, then set under a spout of running water, letting the water fill in until every air-bubble is expelled, then seal perfectly air-tight, as in other canning. Rhubarb may be put into a wooden or earthenware vessel and mashed with a pestle, and canned in its own juice, being sure to press the solid parts well about the liquid. Have the can absolutely full, so there will be no air-bubbles, and then can as you would in other methods. Sour fruits, such as gooseberries and rhubarb keep better in glass, but they, as all other fruits, must have the light excluded by wrapping the jar, or setting in a very dark place. Many women work very hard to put up fruits and vegetables, and lose their work as well as their fruit by not giving strict attention to these details. —The Commoner.

INFORMATION FOR THE COOK.

Most cooks young in experience will welcome this information as to the length of time the different vegetables should be cooked:

Bake potatoes from thirty to forty minutes.

Steam potatoes twenty to forty minutes.

Boil potatoes (in their skins), twenty to thirty minutes.

Boil potatoes (pared), twenty-five to forty-five minutes.

Asparagus (young), fifteen to thirty minutes.

Beets (young), twelve to twenty minutes.

Corn (green), twelve to twenty minutes.

Cauliflower, twenty to forty minutes.

Cabbage (young), thirty-five to sixty minutes.

Celery, twenty to thirty minutes.

Carrots, one to two hours.

Lima or shell beans, forty-five minutes to one and quarter hours.

Onions, thirty to sixty minutes.

Oyster plant, forty-five to sixty minutes.

Peas, twenty to sixty minutes.

Parsnips (young), thirty to forty-five minutes.

Spinach, twenty to sixty minutes.

String beans, thirty to sixty minutes.

Summer squash, twenty to sixty minutes.

Turnips (young), forty-five to sixty minutes.

Tomatoes, forty-five to sixty minutes.

DAINTY SANDWICHES.

Sandiwches are essentially warm weather fare. They are eaten in the woods, by the seashore, on the hillside and mountain tops. Here are recipes for some of the newest and daintiest sandwiches ever devised. They can be made at home and are not expensive. Each is delicious:

Tongue and Tomato Sandwiches—This is the only meat allowable in slices. If sliced let it be very thin, and all edges cut off. Tomatoes made into a nice thick sauce is best in this case. If tongue is chopped and pounded slice the tomatoes only.

Salmon Cucumber Sandwiches — Cut rounds of bread slightly larger than the slice of cucumber. Spread these with butter, sprinkle the under sides with a few grains of celery salt, then spread with a layer of chopped and pounded salmon. Next a few drops of vinegar and a little white pepper, then a thin slice of cucumber and the top round of bread. Garnish with a few slices of cucumber or crisp lettuce hearts.

Egg and Cress Sandwiches—Rub several hard-boiled eggs through a sieve, season with salt, pepper and [illegible] well with butter

cobs & Bros
and Rugs.
AGENTS—
stic Book Cases
Cabinets.
z.
HINGHAM, AL
nsurance Associati
LABAMA.
ACT OF THE LEGISLATURE
nd for the People.
unty Branch
ebruary 3, 1900.
WALLACE C. EDLER,
Sec'y.-Treas.
gs, outbuildings and conte
s by fire, wind and lightni
most sensible method of in 43-100 of 1 per cen
on application to
C. EDLER, Clanton, A
BINATION OFFER
TWICE-A-WEEK" Issue
the Globe-Democra
ith UNION
for
one year, only $1.
ould not be classed with the many ch
l-Weekly, eight or more pages, e mparison the biggest, best and chea lished in the United States. It is
ern Newspaper.
from the Daily issue. It is carefu ds of the Farmer, the Merchant and thoroughly posted without sparing
o contains a great variety of well
every member of the family.
Clubbing Offer
t may be withdrawn at any time, and ress
THE UNION,
Clanton, Al
Practical Watchmak
and Optician
Eyes Correctly
Fitted
Mail orders promptly fi
IBE FOR PAPER
WANT
, Noteheads,
Envelopes,
ELSE PRINTED?
Call at
ON OFFIC
rk at Low Prices.
1 For $2.00
l, done on Good Machi
ON, Clanton, Alabama.
revents Fevers.
RNISH PURE WAT
or no charge made.
dress
RBER CO.
Alab

A FEW IFS.

I.

All who sneer would praise us
And prospects all were fair,
And tricks Fortune plays us
Would not be hard to bear;
Those who knock would aid us
Could all our hopes come true,
And all our debtors paid us
And all our clothes were new,
We could borrow
Without a shock tomorrow
The money we owe today.

II.

Our years would be pretty
And women never grew old;
And if a man or pity
Were going to be sold
The auctioneer's game, laying
Within our arms against our own
Would make our features, saying
"This article is alone
Worth more," would grumble,
And would not trot
Unless we were humble
And nothing lower yet.

III.

If every dog were toothless
And millionaires would cease
In lawless ways and ruthless
To make their stores increase;
If gasolene were fragrant
And smoke and dust were sweet,
And every tattered vagrant
Earned all he got to eat,
And all our poor relations
Would cease to sponge at last,
How scarce the provocations
Would be to feel downcast.

IV.

If prowess, fame and pleasure
To each whose aims are high
Were granted in full measure,
The fools alone would sigh;
If stocks would always hurry
To rise when we invest
How few of us would worry
Or be by want oppressed;
If "buts" and "ifs" would never
Creep in to plague mankind,
We'd have no griefs whatever
To spoil our peace of mind.

—S. E. Kiser, in Chicago Record-Herald.

TAKEN FOR A "RUSTLER."

By FRANKLIN WELLES CALKINS.

[illegible] slouching yellow cayuse [illegible] the door of my tent near [illegible]rman. The owner, Mr. [illegible] of Klickitat County, [illegible] offered the animal for [illegible]

[illegible]t my bunch to your [illegible] but I've saved my [illegible]eir bosa."

[illegible]ttering, but I looked [illegible]er and shook my head

[illegible]" said Keeler, "this cay[illegible]d in my own herd on the [illegible]nge, and I broke him [illegible] carried me four [illegible]can take him at thirty-[illegible] I'll ship him home."

[illegible] pony.

[illegible]e is Coots," said Keeler, [illegible]ring his check, "and [illegible] him you don't want [illegible] or spurs. When you [illegible]where, no matter how [illegible]ks ribs once in four [illegible] do the rest."

I rode Coots on my [illegible] the line of railway grade [illegible] constructed under [illegible]rson. Apparently there [illegible] remarkable about Coots [illegible] rather uncommon willing[illegible] an easy, ambling gallop. [illegible]singly docile, could be [illegible] for any reasonable [illegible]th of time if his saddle were not [illegible]ed, and could be approached at [illegible] one called out his name.

[illegible] really discover Coots, [illegible] until an accident and, as it [illegible] very perilous encounter [illegible] quality to light.

We had finished our contract at [illegible]rman and most of my outfit moved to new work on Deer [illegible], some thirty miles up the [illegible] had lingered over unfin[illegible]business at the old camp, and I [illegible] allowed my men on horseback [illegible]

It was a lowering morning about [illegible] middle of October when I set out [illegible] Coots. I had made some miles, [illegible] turn back, when a wind [illegible] and soft snow began pelting in [illegible], and in a few minutes a fall [illegible] was in progress. Against [illegible] Coots resisted without reluctance [illegible] a couple of hours.

We had crossed a piece of newly [illegible]ded prairie and were following [illegible] trail between that [illegible] when the cayuse sur[illegible] to a sudden halt. He [illegible] head half about, with ears [illegible] inquiringly. He was evi[illegible] asking what I proposed to do [illegible] coming in the wind.

[illegible] ahead, but the snow was [illegible] that I could see but a few [illegible]. Yet I had a feeling that there [illegible] something to be avoided; and [illegible] a muffled rumble came to my [illegible] and before I could make out [illegible] which direction a stampede was [illegible]ing. Coots and I were in the thick [illegible] a big bunch of cattle going before [illegible] wind.

Luckily the herd was swinging [illegible] at a trot instead of at a run, [illegible] should have been trampled un[illegible]. As it was, Coots was near[illegible] borne off his feet, and before he [illegible] recovered we were packed too [illegible] for immediate escape. Then [illegible] laid his teeth angrily to the [illegible] of a big spotted steer, and fol[illegible] the tactics of a "cut."

For several minutes we dodged [illegible] the hustling cattle. We must [illegible] been carried forward a half-[illegible], working toward the front and [illegible] one side, when we parted from the [illegible]

Instantly Coots put himself be[illegible] the herd and his "cut," and [illegible] the big steer back toward the [illegible] we had left. I had given the [illegible] his head altogether, and now, [illegible]hkingly, I enjoyed his trained [illegible]formance. But the chase came to [illegible] end in a startling fashion.

In a whirl of snow we came fairly [illegible]ainst a couple of horsemen, evi[illegible]ly in charge of the running stock. [illegible]he muzzles of two revolvers were [illegible]uickly thrust in my face.

"Hands up!" was the order, and [illegible] course I quickly obeyed. I saw [illegible] the one hand a big, lank fellow [illegible]th long straw-colored mustache [illegible]nd pale-blue eyes, and on the other [illegible] slight boyish individual, as dark [illegible]nd grim as an Indian.

These men relieved me of my re[illegible]ver, and cutting the pack-strings [illegible]rom my saddle, tied my wrists be[illegible]nd my back in a twinkling.

"Gettin' pretty foxy, ain't ye, cut[illegible]n cow-steers in a blizzard?" The [illegible] man spoke, and his blue eyes twinkled in a dangerously humorous way.

"Gentlemen, I assure you——" I began.

"Shut up!" The tall man, with Coots' lariat wrapped about his saddle pommel, wheeled and galloped on after the cattle. The smaller cowboy followed at my pony's heels.

During a brief rush through the storm I had time to reflect that my thoughtlessness had brought me into a bad scrape. I had been captured red-handed "rustling" a steer! I was dressed in the rough corduroy, slouch-hat and leather leggings of the range, and I rode a cow-pony of the line and carried a lariat at the pommel of one of the best of Cheyenne stock saddles. Moreover, I was a stranger.

How was I to identify myself or convince these men of my innocence? I thought of the papers I usually carried in my pocketbook, but remembered that I had nothing but currency with me. All my personal papers and recent correspondence had been packed in a chest, which would be on its way to Deer Creek as soon as the weather should clear. If I could not prevail upon my captors to listen to me my case was hopeless.

When we came up with the tail of the herd, the tall man halted and tossed my rope to the younger. "Take care of him, Bill," he said; "the rest of us'll herd the steers."

The one addressed as Bill now drove Coots in front of him. We rode forward at a shuffling trot until we reached the banks of the Platte, where there was a halt to look for a ford.

While my guard and I were sitting our horses I attempted to speak to him, but he stopped me with an angry gesture.

"Don't open your chin to me," he said, "or I'll shoot your teeth out!"

As we sat on the outskirts of the uneasy herd two cow-men, whom I had not seen before, rode by. Each gave me a lowering glance.

Presently we began moving behind the cattle again. A ford had been found, and we crossed the river at a shallow rapid, and thence passed up a narrow creek valley and into the rough bad lands which, above old Fort Fetterman, lie along the river for many miles.

Each minute now was bearing me hopelessly beyond the range of the railroad camps. In these bad lands I could hope for no chance encounter of an acquaintance. Whether these men would even give me the brief formality of trial by lynch-law was an open question.

For an hour or more, going slowly now, we threaded a deep valley, where the wind whistled high above and the snow dropped upon us as if shaken from a sieve. Here one could see at times the length of the herd, and I noted that there were five men on the "drive." One, whom I had not seen before, led a pack-pony.

In the forenoon a halt was ordered in a flat, sheltered basin, where the stock could find good grass under the snow. At the upper end of this basin and in the dry creek channel the man with the pack-pony had found a pile of drift stuff. He had halted, unpacked his pony kit, and lighted a brisk fire when my guard and I came up. This man was short, fat and good-natured. He greeted us hilariously.

"So," he said, "that's our cheeky rustler! I admire that kind of a man. He's got nerve."

My surly guard's face relaxed in a brief grin, but he growled, "Dry up, Jake! This ain't no funny business!"

I was ordered to get off my horse, and the animals were bridled and turned loose, with their saddles on and lariats dragging. Having only to look after me, Bill now seated himself on a blanket roll and watched the cook preparing to fry bacon.

I sat in the snow against a hummock, where I could cool my aching wrists and, incidentally, wet the leather strings which tied them. I made no attempt to speak to either of the men before me. But as the minutes passed I prepared myself mentally for the effort of gaining a hearing before the men when they should all assemble at dinner. They should listen to me or they should do their worst at once, and I had not much doubt as to what they would do.

While I was bracing myself for this ordeal the cook looked up from his work and noted that his unsaddled pack-pony was making off.

"Hang it, Bill, that pinto of mine's takin' the back trail!" he said. "You go after him."

"Go after him yourself!" was the reply. "I'll hold your fryin'-pan."

Acordingly the cook ran and Bill took his place at the fire. I watched the man running for his pony until his figure showed dimly in the sifting snow. Then I looked at Bill. He was stooping toward the fire to put some coffee into the boiling pot. He had his back to me, and was apparently oblivious of my existence.

An uncontrollable impulse seized upon me. I leaped to my feet and jumped at the stooping man, planting my heels in his back. He pitched headlong among the firebrands.

Then I sped toward Coots. The cayuse, with two others, was digging for grass on the flat a little way out toward the herd. I called him by name as I ran, fearing he might take to his heels at my swift approach. But Coots lifted his head and stood as usual, and I thrust a foot into one stirrup and threw myself in a side-swing into his saddle.

With a yell I set him going, and with a pressure of one knee, to which he answered as to a rein, I turned his head to the back trail. As we wheeled about I saw my late guard dancing like a Sioux, holding his left hand to a face burned by bacon grease or scalded by boiling coffee, while with his right he fumbled for his pistol. He was hors de combat, and I gave a whoop of joy.

Coots struck the running gait like a rabbit, and responded to my urging with a speed which added to my success the delight of a discovery. In cowboy phrase, we simply "cut the wind," and I knew that my legs were hugging the flanks of a racer. I had loosened my wrists a trifle, and I gripped the tree of my saddle behind and leaned as far forward as I could.

I turned anxious eyes toward the cattle herd, and was overjoyed to see its outlines fade and vanish in a whirl of falling snow.

I had forgotten the cook in my excitement. Coots had sped a quarter of a mile or more when we came up with him, just mounting his pinto, which he had captured in a depression of the valley.

We were upon him almost before the man could make a motion, and before he could bring his revolver to bear we were flying fifty yards away, and going faster than any wind which blew that day. I looked back, to see him gallop up a rise, banging at me. His bullets went wide of their mark, and the last I saw of him he had halted in the dim distance, and was waving his hat in farewell.

I do not know whether any of those men chased me farther, but I do know that they had not a horse in their outfit which could have overtaken Coots.

When we came to the Platte I felt safe enough to get off my steaming cayuse and soak my wrists in cold water until I got my bonds loosened, and later on I reached a railway camp in safety.

Some weeks later, long after the snow had melted, I was riding down my grade-line one morning when I saw a familiar figure approaching. It was the tall man of the tawny mustache, who had taken me for a rustler.

He halted his pony in much confusion.

"Say, stranger," he said, "I've rode forty miles to—"

"Never mind," I interrupted him. "I've never mentioned that little affair. Fine morning, isn't it?"

The man was visibly embarassed. He sat staring at me with his face red and working for a moment. Then he spoke.

"Say," he said, "I'll give you a hundred dollars for that cayuse you're ridin'."

"Not for sale," I replied. "Good morning!" and I rode on.—Youth's Companion.

Canada to Irrigate Dry Lands.

Consul Conant, of Windsor, briefly describes what is being done to promote irrigation in the Canadian Northwest:

"An irrigation project unique in the history of America is being carried out by the Canadian Pacific Railway just east of Calgary, Alberta. Some time ago the Canadian Pacific Railway undertook to provide a monster irrigation scheme to put water on dry lands lying between Calgary and Medicine Hat for wheat culture. Already sixty miles of the main and secondary canals and more than one hundred miles of laterals have been completed, and about 110,000 acres of land brought under ditch. The main canal in the undertaking is sixteen miles in length, fifty-four feet wide at the bottom, eighty-four at the water line, and carries ten feet of water.

"This is only the first or western section of the vast scheme by which it is ultimately proposed to irrigate nearly 2,000,000 acres, at an expenditure of $8,000,000. The water is taken from the Bow River, which even at low water has a surplus after irrigating these lands. It will be some years before the undertaking is complete, but water will be turned on early in the spring on the first section of more than 100,000 acres.

Society Youth a Hard Worker.

Rhinelander Waldo, the young society man of New York, who occupies the post of deputy police commissioner, is disappointing his enemies by showing a capacity for hard work in his new post. He arrives at the office at 9 a. m., and sticks to his desk until 5. Then he makes an evening tour of the city to familiarize himself with the actual workings of the department.

Nature's Mys

By George L. Brow

NATURE has many mysteri
dom, that no student of intelligently explain, se
been locked and the ke

When I was a boy
weeks old, bringing it
two miles. While takir
bag and at once started in a bee line
the road over which it had been bro
through a piece of woodland, across a
hours was back from where it was ta

What hidden hand guided it where none of the [illegible] higher animals could have found the way? Many of our migratory birds find their way across the trackless waters to the distant shores of South America and return each season and the guide that bids them forward go never fails the way to show.

Some would call that guide instinct, some would call it reason, others would say the sixth sense, direction.

No one knows, it is simply one of nature's mysteries. No scientist can tell you why nature's law is reversed in the case of birds of prey, and the woodcock and snipe families, where the females are larger than the males.

Neither can they tell you why the hop vine climbs around the pole with the sun from east to south, while the bean vine climbs around in the opposite direction. Although scientists have demonstrated beyond a doubt that no animal on the face of the earth was created for its own benefit, from the tiniest insect up to man, still they are unable to tell us what mission for good, or for whose benefit some of them were created.

Nature never duplicates, either in man, beast, bird, fruit or flower. Though multiplied by millions the result will be the same—each will have an individuality of its own.

Such are nature's mysteries which we find all through the animal and vegetable kingdom, and as such they will remain.—Forest and Stream.

Is the Democracy of Our Colleges in Danger?

By President Arthur T. Hadley, of Yale.

THERE is no doubt that the democratic spirit in our colleges is subject to more dangers today than it was fifty years ago. The old graduate is right in thinking that it is easier to keep up the democratic spirit where everybody is doing the same thing and where nobody has much money. But the old graduate is wrong in thinking that we can legislate ourselves back to this condition when the world outside has passed beyond it; or that men trained in such a college as he remembers would be able, after they graduated, to meet the demands and the temptations of the present age. Lycurgus made Sparta into an old-fashioned college, with no electives and no money. How miserably the Spartans failed when they were called upon to do anything which made for human progress is a matter of history. Our college graduates are going out into a world of political life more complex than anything with which the Lacedaemonians had to deal. It is only by training them for the enjoyment and the use of wealth in their school days that we shall enable them to deal with the greater problems which freedom and wealth are creating throughout the country. It is one of the most hopeful signs in the undergraduate life of the present day that the students, and particularly the wealthier students, are preparing themselves with open eyes for the assumption of political responsibility. The studies and efforts of our undergraduates in our college clubs will probably not advance them very much in the direction of getting office during their earlier years of professional life. But these studies and efforts will help them, and will help the country as a whole, toward the establishment of a system under which the man with money feels that he holds that money in trust for the public, and the man who desires office desires it primarily for what he can put into it rather than for what he can get out of it.—Harper's Magazine.

For City Farmers as Well as Country Folks

Don't Leave Stones in the Road Even if You're Not Going That Way Again.

By E. S. Martin.

DON'T leave stones in the road. If your horse doesn't stumble over them somebody's else's horse may. When you see in the beaten track a loose stone fit to give a wheel a hard jolt or bring down a stumbling horse, stop and throw it to one side. It will pay you to take that trouble even on a strange road that you expect never to travel again. It is good for your character. It helps to justify your claim to be a civilized man, living in a civilized community. Every truly civilized community rests upon the theory that the care of all is the duty of each, and its civilization is high or low according to the prevalence or scarcity of individual responsibility for the general welfare.

There are two large classes of folks in the world, those who go through life leaving messes behind them to be cleared up, and those who clear up the messes. If you clear up faithfully after yourself, that is much, but it is not quite enough. You must expect also to contribute part of your time and strength to clearing up after the weak and the shiftless. If everybody did his duty there would be little need of government. The purpose of government is to defend the weak, to constrain the lazy, to restrain the greedy, and to make the best sense of the wisest people available for the benefit of the general community. If we were all responsible and dutiful and picked out of the road the stones that we saw there, the work of government would be light.

Hard bargains, hard words, neglected chances to give help where help was needed, slanders, ill-natured gossip, misrepresentation—all such things are stones in the road. Don't leave them behind you, to plague you when you come that way again, or else to plague some other traveller. Clear up as you go along.—From "The Farmer's Seasons," in the Fiction Number of Scribner.

Danger of Plutocracy.

By Joseph Tausek.

WHILE an oppressed people on one side of the globe are struggling for the liberties which have long since become the priceless heritage of their Western brethren, it will be well for men to weigh heavily the words so eloquently set forth by Justice Brewer in his recent speech before the Texas and Arkansas Bar Association.

Emanating as they do from a representative of one of the highest tribunals in the world, his remarks have a very deep significance.

In these days of political antagonism, inspired more than ever before by motives of self-aggrandizement, it is an encouraging sign to find that there are still among us men who hold their lives and the high principles upon which our nation is founded to be one and inseparable.

Nine-tenths of the legislation in the United States is the result of the abnormal growth of wealth. As this legislation is controlled by a class whose only aim seems to be a purposeless accumulation of wealth, it is necessarily partial and undemocratic and our nation is in danger of falling under the yoke of a plutocracy which would pale the tyranny of ancient Rome.

If the "brotherhood of man" is to become anything more than an empty combination of words, it will be when the men who control and distribute wealth and power extend a helping hand and afford a beneficient example to those under them, and by promoting as far as possible a community of interest among their less fortunate fellowmen instead of competing for possible gains in a common field.

He Stopped the Coughing.

One Sunday morning a clergyman was greatly annoyed by the unusual amount of coughing among his congregation. He had not a strong voice and could only be distinctly heard when the people were still and attentive. As the coughing went on, and even grew worse, he suddenly stopped right in the middle of the sermon. All eyes were instantly turned to the pulpit, every cough was hushed and there was perfect silence.

"My friends," said the minister, with a smile, "it seems you stop when I stop."

This gentle rebuke had the desired effect. The people found that their coughing could be kept down when they liked to a great extent, and the minister proceeded with his sermon under far more favorable conditions.

Length of Wall-Paper.

Most persons have an idea that all pieces of wall-paper are necessarily of one length. Our domestic papers run eight yards to the piece. Those from France and Germany measure nine yards, while the English rolls contain twelve yards. Then, of course, there's the repeat. On some of the new papers with the smallest figures this is next to nothing, on some others, notably that [illegible] tailed bird pattern, if the bit over figure is required for each length means a loss of five feet on each s put on the wall. —Philadelphia R ord.

SECRET OF BOILING WATER.

To boil a thing well it is not necessary to boil it hard, says Farming. To average kitchen Mary thinks that the more commotion in the water the hotter it is, and in order to produce this she burns a great deal of fuel and ruins the stove by keeping it red hot. Water placed in a stew-pan directly over a red hot lid will, of course, boil more vehemently, yet it will not cook meat or potatoes any quicker, and not so well as water that just keeps at the boiling point and quietly simmers.

MAKING BEDS.

The practice of having beds made in the early morning, though exceedingly tidy, is one which should be discouraged, for it is bad. Constantly we see a bed made half an hour after the sleeper has left the room, wherefore all the exhalations from the skin during the night are confined beneath the sheets and are inhaled again when the bed is next used. It is an excellent practice, and one which ought to be encouraged in all young people, to turn off the clothes of the bed immediately on rising. The mattress, too, should be turned back, so that all may be properly aired and quite cold before being re-made.

CANNING WITHOUT COOKING.

It is claimed that rhubarb, gooseberries and several other kinds of tart fruits may be readily kept by canning them in cold water. Fill the sterilized jars with the fruit, pressing in well, then set under a spout of running water, letting the water fill in until every air-bubble is expelled, then seal perfectly air-tight, as in other canning. Rhubarb may be put into a wooden or earthenware vessel and mashed with a pestle, and canned in its own juice, being sure to press the solid parts well about the liquid. Have the can absolutely full, so there will be no air-bubbles, and then can as you would in other methods. Sour fruits, such as gooseberries and rhubarb keep better in glass, but they, as all other fruits, must have the light excluded by wrapping the jar, or setting in a very dark place. Many women work very hard to put up fruits and vegetables, and lose their work as well as their fruit by not giving strict attention to these details. —The Commoner.

INFORMATION FOR THE COOK.

Most cooks young in experience will welcome this information as to the length of time the different vegetables should be cooked:

Bake potatoes from thirty to forty minutes.

Steam potatoes twenty to forty minutes.

Boil potatoes (in their skins), twenty to thirty minutes.

Boil potatoes (pared), twenty-five to forty-five minutes.

Asparagus (young), fifteen to thirty minutes.

Beets (young), twelve to twenty minutes.

Corn (green), twelve to twenty minutes.

Cauliflower, twenty to forty minutes.

Cabbage (young), thirty-five to sixty minutes.

Celery, twenty to thirty minutes.

Carrots, one to two hours.

Lima or shell beans, forty-five minutes to one and quarter hours.

Onions, thirty to sixty minutes.

Oyster plant, forty-five to sixty minutes.

Peas, twenty to sixty minutes.

Parsnips (young), thirty to forty-five minutes.

Spinach, twenty to sixty minutes.

String beans, thirty to sixty minutes.

Summer squash, twenty to sixty minutes.

Turnips (young), forty-five to sixty minutes.

Tomatoes, forty-five to sixty minutes.

DAINTY SANDWICHES.

Sandiwches are essentially warm weather fare. They are eaten in the woods, by the seashore, on the hillside and mountain tops. Here are recipes for some of the newest and daintiest sandwiches ever devised. They can be made at home and are not expensive. Each is delicious:

Tongue and Tomato Sandwiches—This is the only meat allowable in slices. If sliced let it be very thin, and all edges cut off. Tomatoes made into a nice thick sauce is best in this case. If tongue is chopped and pounded slice the tomatoes only.

Salmon Cucumber Sandwiches—Cut rounds of bread slightly larger than the slice of cucumber. Spread these with butter, sprinkle the under sides with a few grains of celery salt, then spread with a layer of chopped and pounded salmon. Next a few drops of vinegar and a little white pepper, then a thin slice of cucumber and the top round of bread. Garnish with a few slices of cucumber or crisp lettuce hearts.

Egg and Cress Sandwiches—Rub several hard-boiled eggs through a sieve, season with salt, pepper and [illegible] well with butter

THE UNION

Published every Thursday at Clanton, Chilton county, Alabama.

Wallace C. Edler, Ed. and Pub.

Subscription price, in advance, per year, $1.

For advertising rates, call at the office, Seventh street, between First and Second avenues.

Entered April 15, 1903, at Clanton, Ala., as second class matter, under act of congress of March 3, 1879.

NOTICE TO CORRESPONDENTS.

All communications to the Union must be signed by the writer's real name as well as that name which they wish to put in the paper. Letters must reach the editor Tuesday morning to get in the same week. While we will publish any and all communications complying with these requirements that do not contain any improper language, we are not responsible for the opinions expressed. tf.

CLANTON, ALA., Aug 23, 1906.

Union Clubbing List

The Union And Yellow Jacket	$1.00
The Union And Southern Ruralist	1.00
The Union And Union Educator	1.00
The Union And Home and Farm	1.00
The Union And Weekly Age-Herald	1.25
The Union and Weekly Atlanta Constitution	1.25
The Union and Twice-a-Week Globe Democrat	1.50
The Union and Tri-W'kly Atlanta Constitution	1.50
The Union And Tom Watson's Magazine	1.50
The Union and Tri-Weekly N. Y. World	1.50
The Union And Rural South	1.50
The Union And Weekly Advertiser and Map of Alabama, U. S. and world	1.50

If there are any other papers you want call at THE UNION office, and we will get them for you at the lowest rates. tf

NOMINEES OF THE People's Primary

Held August 6, 1906, under the direction of the Republican and Populist Executive Committees of Chilton County, Ala.

FOR REPRESENTATIVE.
J. Osmond Middleton.

FOR SHERIFF.
Felix J. Fitts.

FOR COMMISSIONER.
First District—W. H. Conway.
Second District—S. E. Waldrup.
tf

A REAL FARMER.

"Hon. J. A. Wilkinson, of Autauga county, candidate for Commissioner of Agriculture, was in town Saturday. He is a good farmer, and demonstrated that fact by marketing the State's first bale of cotton this year, which he sold for 17 1-2 cents per pound. He has many friends and supporters in this county."—Talladega "Our Mountain Home."

Mr. Wilkinson is also heartily recommended by the Executive Committee of the Fifth Congressional District, consisting of John T. Heflin (chairman), Randolph county; C. E. Thomas, Autauga county; W. L. Lancaster, Elmore county; G. H. Hollingsworth, Chambers county; C. E. Brooks, Lowndes county; W. A. Cloud, Macon county; J. M. Parker, Coosa county; R. L. Johnson, Tallapoosa county; E. J. Garrison, Clay county.

MORGAN QUITS RACE.

Sheriff J. M. Morgan has withdrawn from the race for the Democratic nomination for Sheriff of Chilton county, thus leaving the fight in that primary between Mr. Traywick and Mr. Campbelle. This act on the part of Mr. Morgan is very significant so far as the political situation is concerned. Every observing person realizes that Sheriff Morgan is easily the strongest man with the people the Democrats have at this time. This being true, the question naturally presents itself: What prompted Mr. Morgan to withdraw from the race? There is no doubt but what Mr. Morgan would have received the nomination in the August primary, and then his real fight would have begun. Mr. Morgan evidently realized that it would be impossible to win with the ticket which will be nominated in the August 27 primary, and he preferred to withdraw now than to meet defeat in November. There are numbers of voters in the county who would have supported Mr. Morgan had it not been for his running mate, Mr. Gulledge. It looks like Mr. Morgan has found out that Mr. Gulledge is so objectionable to his friends as to materially curtail his strength, and this is the cause of his retirement from the race.

"BENEATH HIS NOTICE!"

Clanton, Route 6.

Editor Union:

Please allow me a few words this week. The health of this community is fairly good. Fodder pulling is the order of the day. I notice that Mr. F. A. Gulledge desires the Banner man to say "that the attacks made upon him in the 'Birmingham Union' are beneath his notice." Now, if he has reference to our paper, The Union, I beg to say that while I do not endorse ALL the articles in said paper, that it is the only paper PUBLISHED in Chilton county that voices the sentiments of the majority of the Chilton county people. So, fellow citizens, if our sentiments as expressed in OUR paper, THE UNION, are beneath Mr. Gulledge' notice before election, what consideration may we expect from him if he should be elected? That statement of his only shows the manner of Democrat he is; so BEWARE and let us speak out at the November election in such decisive tones that the Democracy must "sit up and take notice." Yours truly, J. N. DENNIS.

FARMERS, READ AND HEED.

The Cotton Situation.

The selling period of the new crop has begun in earnest according to the daily reports from the southwestern portion of the cotton belt. New cotton is beginning to move rapidly to the markets from Southern Texas. As the Texas farmers seem determined to sell their cotton as fast as gathered without regard to prices, the speculative element thinks that fact presents a fine opportunity to hammer down the market.

We have been sounding a note of warning to the farmers with reference to the sale of the coming crop for the past two months. There is no disguising of the fact that speculators, cotton dealers and spinners believe that the present maturing crop will be a very large one. They believe, further, that as the Southwest will make a splendid crop, and that as the farmers in that section are unusually fast sellers, no matter what the price, the market can be successfully depressed to very low prices. The power of resistance to a depressed market during the next few months must come from the farmers themselves. Practically the whole cotton trade is against the market for the time being, and their position is upheld upon the idea of the production of an abnormally large crop. If the crop, as it is harvested, is sold rapidly it is hard to tell how low speculation can drive prices. There is but one sensible way to handle this crop from the producer's stanpoint, and that is to market the crop slowly. One of the most depressing factors which we now have to contend with is the fact that considerable cotton has already been sold by planters and merchants for future delivery in September, October and November at prices around 10 cents per pound. To what extent this future selling of spot cotton from the farms has been indulged in this year can only be ascertained by future developments. It is said to be quite large, especially in the Southwest. The cotton trade knows full well that a large part of the crop must be marketed by the bulk of growers to meet maturing obligations for supplies and guanos furnished to make the crop by supply dealers. When people owe debts and are called upon to liquidate the power of resistance from that class of the growers amounts practically to nothing. Those farmers who are able to finance their cotton can make themselves important factors by withholding their cotton from the market.

Will They Hold?

The question of supreme importance just now is, whether those farmers who are financially able to hold their cotton back and market it slowly will do so, or whether they will also be found in the front ranks of the early rush to market. A great many will promise to hold and then sell; at least this has been the experience of the past. Each individual may decide for himself, in which event there will be no general concert of action. Only one year in our recollection was any determined stand made by the farmers to hold cotton in the early months of harvesting, and that was in the fall of 1900.

That memorable holding movement was broken by Texas farmers selling their crop rapidly as it turned out to be the largest crop ever made in that State.

Last fall farmers generally rebelled at prices under 10 cents, but sold freely at 10 cents and above. This was done with the knowledge of prospects for a small crop, and in the face of an enormous consumption. Their action in refusing to sell under 10 cents and the splendid trade conditions existing at that time operated as important factors in maintaining prices. If the present crop turns out as the trade now anticipates, will the farmers in the Southwest, where two-thirds of the crop will be grown this year, again combine and refuse to sell their staple under 10 cents, or will they sell regardless of price manipulation? The farmers in the old States, we are sure, can be depended upon to enter into a holding movement to the best of their ability, provided the farmers west of the Mississippi give their support.

The president of the Farmers' Union, Mr. Duckworth, said two weeks ago that the union had always maintained the minimum price fixed by their organization, and that it was the Southern Cotton Association which had always failed to make good its promises to the people. Mr. Duckworth will have an opportunity this fall of demonstrating the strength and power of the Farmers' Union in maintaining the price of cotton at profitably high figures. The main strength of the Farmers' Union is in the Southwest, where it is said the large part of the present crop will be harvested. The Southern Cotton Association is strongest in the old States, where this year the crop has been materially cut off. Mr. Duckworth can depend upon the active co-operation of the farmers in the eastern section of the cotton belt if he will hold solidly in line the hundreds of thousands of union men in the western section. If this co-operation can be secured, and we trust it may, the coming crop, whether large or small, can be handled by the growers upon a profitable basis. We have previously stated that the growers will be put to their utmost this fall to hold the spot market steady and on a profitable margin. Perfect harmony between the leaders of the two great farmers' organizations and in the ranks must be had if satisfactory results are to be obtained. The market is now going down like an avalanche, due entirely to manipulation and bright prospects for a good crop in the Southwest. It will continue to go down until a point is finally reached where the growers will refuse to sell. There is nothing in the present or future of trade conditions which warrants the present depression in the contract or spot markets of the country.—Harvie Jordan's Cotton Journal.

SOME TIMELY WORDS.

Editor Union:

Here lately I've heard quite a little talk about going into the Democratic primary on the 27th, that I feel like saying a few words to the people of Chilton county. In the first place I can see no earthly reason for any of our people going into the Democratic party. How on earth can we keep up with the Democratic party? Just a few days ago their proud boast was that there was going to be a great mass meeting, where all the people could meet and every one have a fair chance. But the mass meeting has been called off, why, no one seems to know. Well, if the mass meeting was called, so that everybody, Populist and Republican, could have a fair show, the only conclusion is that it has been changed so that there will not be a fair show for everybody. I've listened with patience to the pleadings of one of the smartest men in the Democratic party, viz., Hon. B. B. Comer. Last week he spoke at Clanton for over an hour, and nearly all of his speech was the most severe arraignment of the Democratic party I've ever heard in my life. He told us how the people had been robbed for the last twenty years by the great corporations and especially the railroads. Of course every sensible man knows that the Democratic party has made the laws that have permitted the corporationus to rob the people. Two years ago Mr. Comer went all over the state and told the people that they were being robbed and that if you would elect him railroad commissioner he would put an end to it all. Well, he was elected, but the corporations went right on, and the poor people were told to wait a little longer, that the laws that the Democratic party had made were no good, and now he comes back and says "Elect ME Governor and I will correct all the evils"; but you wait and see what the results will be. Any sensible man can see now that the railroads are going to control the senate. Haven't they in nearly every instance where they have made nominations nominated railroad lawyers? And what they lack they will finish up next Monday. When the last legislature was elected, wasn't the same cry made about the railroads? And yet the first act of that body after it met was to elect Mr. Tunstall, a railroad lawyer, speaker of the house. And he was not only a railroad lawyer, but he was a son of the Mr. Tunstall (railroad commissioner) that Mr. Comer says has kept him from doing anything on the commission. Yes my friends, the Democratic party has been, for the last ten years, talking about the great corporations, and how they have robbed the people; but I ask you, where have they ever laid their hands on one of them? When did any corporation have to so much as appear in court to answer for their wrongdoings, called there by the Democratic party? Not a single instance can be referred to. But, on the other hand, let's look at what the Republicans have done or just a few of their acts. Take three of the largest packing houses in the world—Armour & Co,. Sulsburger & Schwartzchild and Cudahy & Co.—all three fined $25,000 each. These three companies are doing business in this state under Democratic laws and they are not bothered, but permitted to go on wih their business and rob the people. Why they might put meat so high that the people could not buy it, and the Democratic officers would never mention it, except in some campaign they would jump on them. Look at the Standard Oil Company; in several states they are being prosecuted by Republicans, but I would like to know where any Democratic administration has ever advised them to quit robbing the people. Look in Ohio; three of the largest ice men have been put in the penitentiary for combining and putting up the price of ice; but in Alabama the ice men might combine and put ice up to 5 cents per pound and they would not be molested. Just the other day the Chicago and Alton railroad was fined $20,000, and former officials were fined $5,000 each, for robbing the people, and the Burlington railroad and four packing houses in Kansas City were fined $15,000 each. I could go on and enumerate numbers of other cases where Republican administrations had punished trusts; I would be glad to have one case pointed out to me where any Democratic administration had ever hurt any trust, except by graft in some campaign. Who do they ask you to vote for for representative in this county (now I've got nothing against Mr. Gulledge; personally I like him and he is a jolly good fellow), but a few years ago when the Democratic party kinder cut loose from the trusts and nominated Mr. Bryan for President, how was he defeated? Every well posted man knows that the corporations of the Democratic party organized what was known as the Palmer and Buckner party, and it was the cause of Bryan's defeat. It is said that Mr. Gulledge was a member of that party, that he left his own party to help defeat Bryan; it is said further that Mr. Gulledge supported a Palmer and Buckner man for Congress, and helped defeat the regular Democratic nominee; and as a reward for his services for the Republicans, I understand he was given the postoffice at Verbena. And yet at this time we are told that all corporations must be put down, but I tell you it looks mighty suspicious. I could go on until I worried your patience in reading this article, and show where the Republicans had punished corporation after corporation, United States Senators have been punished, Congressmen have not escaped. Now, in conclusion, I ask in the name of common sense if the Democratic party in Alabama does not represent the corporations, who on earth does? That party is responsible for the laws of the state by means of which they have robbed the people, and I make the assertion that there is not a single state in the Union that has better laws for the corporations than Alabama. I ask the voters of Chilton county to think before they vote in the coming primary. Look at the ticket the people have nominated, and look at the ticket that (is already nominated) you will have to vote for if you go into their primary. We are going to have some good speaking here next Saturday (The 25th) by such men as the Hons. J. O. Thompson and P. M. Long, of Birmingham, and perhaps others. I hope as many people as can will come out and hear the speaking. Hear both sides. Respectfully,

L. H. REYNOLDS.

THORSBY.

Martin Sorrell made a business trip to Columbiana Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Scott Caverno left for Birmingham last week, where they expect to make their future home.

Mrs. J. F. Peterson left Friday for Laporte, Ind., for a visit with relatives.

T. W. Robinson is home for a visit.

The Baptists have begun work on their new church.

Master Percy Johnson, of Jemison visited with Paul Smith over Sunday.

The Baptists have been holding revival meetings since Thursday evening.

Rev. Hubbard, of Troy, Ala., had charge of the services until Monday, when he had to leave on account of illness. Rev. O'Hara, of Montgomery, arrived Tuesday evening to assist Rev. Beal during the remainder of the services. ANON.

HIGH SCHOOL OPENING.

The Clanton High School will open on Monday, September 3, 1906. The faculty is composed of Profs. L. J. Thompson and J. W. Moore, Mrs. Leila Mullins and Miss Ola Jones. Good board can be had at very reasonable rates for non-resident pupils.

A. C. SMITH,
tf Secretary School Board.

ALL-DAY SINGING

Will be held at Ocampo on Sunday, August 26, conducted by Mars Hill and Rocky Mount choirs. Bring your books, "Singing for Joy." Bring your baskets. Dinner on the ground. Everybody invited.

S. D. SMITHERMAN.

JACKSON'S CHAPEL SCHOOL HOUSE.

Lomax Local, F. E. & C. U. of A., will be addressed by Rev. M. F. Lett on the second Saturday afternoon in September (8th). Mr. Lett will preach at the chapel that night and the next day (Sunday). tf

REGISTRATION NOTICE.

Beat No. 4, at Clanton, on Aug. 27, 28, 29, 30, 31 and Sept. 1, 1906, for the purpose of considering the case of each elector whose name it is proposed to strike from the registration list and determine same.

Beat No. 4, at Clanton, on Sept. 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 1906, for the purpose of registering voters.

Beat No. 4, at Clanton, on Friday and Saturday before the election in November, 1906.

R. H. GAINES,
B. L. JONES.
P. M. MOORE,
Board of Registrars Chilton County.
tf

PROGRAM

Chilton County Teachers' Institute, to Be Held at Pleasant Grove, Shoults, on September 7 and 8, 1906.

Friday.

10 a. m. Devotional exercises—Rev. P. G. Maness.

10:30. Welcome address—Prof. W. A. Haggard.

10:45. Response—Prof. H. A. Harris.

11. Enrolling teachers.

11:15. "Psychology of the School Room"—Prof. R. A. Rasco, Miss Celestia Dunlap.

Recess for dinner.

1:30 p. m. "The Needs of Our County, Educationally"—Prof. G. L. Spear, Mrs. A. G. Dunlap.

2:30. "Unconscious Training"—Rev. P. G. Maness.

3:30. "How to Secure Attention During Recitation"—Prof. W. A. Haggard, Mrs. Etta Apperson.

Saturday.

9 a. m. Devotional exercises.

9:30. "Methods and Helps in Teaching Agriculture"—Prof. L. J. Thompson.

10:15. "Manual Training"—Prof. Robert Jones.

11. Educational address—W. B. Craig.

This institute will be held in the western part of the county, at Shoults, on the M. & O. R. R. We insist that all the teachers of the county attend this one, especially those who have not yet attended the county institute this year. This will be the last institute in this scholastic year, and the law requires teachers to attend at least one during each year. Do not let the last opportunity slip.

J. W. MOORE,
J. N. DENNIS,
tf Committee.

NOTICE.

Road overseers in Beat 10 must attend to their duty or take the consequences.

J. W. KICKER,
J. M. GRANT,
T. N. HOWARD,
tf Apportioners.

COMMISSIONER'S SALE.

Under and by virtue of an order and decree rendered by the honorable Probate Court of Chilton county, on the 14th day of August, 1906, whereby the undersigned was appointed commissioner to sell the hereinafter described real estate, for the purpose of an equitable division thereof; now, therefore, in pursuance of and in accordance with said order and decree, I will proceed to sell to the highest bidder, for cash, in front of the court house door in Clanton, Alabama, on

MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 10, 1906,

the following described real estate, to-wit: Beginning at the northwest corner of the Episcopal church lot, on the south side of Second avenue, and running thence west along said Second avenue 120 feet to the northeast corner of the Chilton Warehouse and Manufacturing Company's lot; thence south along the east line of said lot 210 feet to the Chilton Warehouse and Manufacturing Company's property; thence east along the north line of said property 120 feet; thence north 210 feet to point of beginning, situated west of the Louisville and Nashville railroad, in the town of Clanton, Chilton county, Alabama.

N. A. KICKER,
8-16-06-3wks Commissioner.

Notice No. 20906.

NOTICE FOR PUBLICATION.

Department of the Interior, Land Office at Montgomery, Ala., July 9, 1906.

Notice is hereby given that the following-named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim, and that said proof will be made before Clerk of Circuit Court, at Clanton, Ala., on Sept. 1, 1906, viz.: George W. Pate, Homestead entry No. 34394, for the E 1-2 of Ne 1-4, E 1-2 of Se 1-4 of Section 2, Tp. 23, in R 15 E.

He names the folowing witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of said land, viz.:

Rolifee F. Bates, of Clanton, Ala.; John Davis, of Clanton, Ala.; William L. Littleton, of Shelby, Ala.; and William M. Willis, of Shelby, Ala.

ROBERT D. JOHNSTON,
Register.

NOTICE TO LAND-OWNERS.

I wish to say that I am ... maps or plats of each ... property, giving a written ... of the land, as it should be ... in assessments. I am prepared ... plats for the purpose of ... rors corrected, and at the ... furnish every party an ... rect way to keep their ... rect and avoid future mistakes ... noyance, as well as (sometimes) ... siderable expense. These ... made of excellent bond paper ... last a lifetime, and only cost ... each, except where plats ... large, when they will cost ... Every one that has seen the ... am making pronounce them ... and worth many times their ... well calculated to save their ... times over. Any one wishing ... can obtain it by coming to ... in Clanton with their deeds ... insure an accurate description.

L. B. POTTS,
tf Tax A...

NOTICE.

Blank Deeds, Mortgages ... and all official forms ... Justices of the Peace, ... for sale at The Union ... Only best approved ... are used. Come in and ... us your order

FOR SALE!

A saw mill outfit consisting of engine, boiler, ... mill, Challoner shingle ... three Challoner shingle ... ses, one small planer ... matcher. All in first ... condition. Will sell on ... terms, or exchange for ... property, except saw ... outfit.

C. E. Wheelock, Mgr.
Fixico, A...

FOR SALE.

30 young cockerels ... Spangled Hamburgs, ... Laced Wyandotts, ... Brown and White Leg... Prices 50c to $1.50. ... birds pure bred and of ... quality.

J. B. Down...
tf Clanton, A...

MONEY TO LOAN

On real estate. Call or write ... my abiding place with Mr. G... shee, one mile northeast of C... R. F. D. No. 1. Come during ... hours, as I keep my money h...

tf JAMES G...

FOR SALE.

160 acres land, 65 acres in ... tion; two miles south of Calera ... dwelling and outbuildings ... lasting water; very good ... be sold at a bargain.

H. M. BUSS...
tf Calera...

GINNING SFASON ...

We have engaged Joe ... Walter Maddox to run ... operate our gins for the ... ing season. We have ... best machinery and ... these men to operate ... can guarantee entire ... faction to those who p... ize us. Bring us your c...

Respectfuly
Chilton Warehouse & ...
Company.

FOR SALE

At all times, high ... hogs and pigs, Berkshi... Poland China, crossed.

M. J. BARRETT,
tf Thorsby, A...

BUSINESS PROPOSI...

The best whiskey ... country is here. If ... don't believe it, try ...

J. M. COLLINS,
Palace Saloon, Calera...

FOR SALE!

300 acres land, 150 ... in cultivation. All in ... T., 20, R., 14, 9 miles ... of Clanton. Good ... house and out buildings ... 3 good tenant houses. ... and lasting well of ... This good farming la... be sold at a bargain ... and see,

tf J. H. CARTER,
Clanton, R. F. D. ...

AND COUNTY OFFICIALS.

Circuit Court.
Term—Third Monday in May ...
—Fourth Monday in No...
...L. Brewer, Tuskegee.
...—W. B. Bowling, Dadeville.
...n W. Collins.

Chancery Court.
Term—Second Monday in ...
...—Second Monday in Sep...
...—Hon. W. W. Whitesides, ...
...—Mrs. S. A. Stewart, Clan...

County Court.
Monday in each month.

Commissioners' Court.
...Monday February, first Mon... ...il, first Monday June, second ... July, second Monday August, ...nday November.

COUNTY OFFICERS.
...of Probate—L. H. Reynolds.
...urer—W. T. Callen.
...—J. M. Morgan.
...—W. M. Adams.
...Assessor—L. B. Pounds.
...Collector—T. J. Hubbard.

County Commissioners.
...District—W. H. Conway.
...d District—Alex Glasscock.
...District—R. P. Kendrick.
...District—Moses Robinson.

Supt. of Education.
J. W. Moore, Clanton.

County Surveyor.
...R. Dahl, Calera.

State Senator.
W. R. Oliver, Calera.

COUNTY CHURCHES.

...ISSIONARY BAPTIST.
...ANY—Rev. J. L. Neeley, pas... ...st Sunday and Saturday be... ...D. L. Hand, clerk.

...-SALEM—Rev. M. J. Parrish, ...E. B. Popwell, clerk.

... CREEK—Rev. J. L. Busbey, ... First Sunday and Saturday ...W. E. Thomas, clerk.

...INS CHAPEL—Rev. J. H. ..., pastor. Third Sunday and ...y before. J. D. Collins, clerk.

... HILL—Rev. J. H. Thomas, ... First Sunday and Saturday ...G. W. Scott, clerk.

...EDONIA—Rev. J. H. Thomas, ... Fourth Sunday and Saturday ...at 3:30 p. m. H. H. Armstrong, ...

...SANT GROVE—Rev. J. H. ..., pastor. Fourth Sunday and ...y before at 11 a. m. D. H. ..., clerk.

...VIDENCE—Rev. W. W. Robin... ...stor. Second Sunday and Sat... ...before. Riley Robinson, clerk.

...OBOTH (Bibb Co.)—Rev. J. H. ..., pastor. Second Sunday and ...y before. D. C. Smitherman, ...

PRIMITIVE BAPTIST.
...IEL—Elder J. P. Nobles, pas... ...econd Sunday and Saturday be... ...J. T. Abernathy, clerk.

...ETHODIST EPISCOPAL.
...KY MOUNT—Rev. A. T. Van... ...pastor. Second Sunday. Sing... ...ery second and fourth Sunday ...on. Prayer meeting every Wed... ...night. Ladies' prayer meeting ...Saturday afternoon.

FRATERNAL SOCIETIES.
Masonic.
...on R. A. Chapter, No. 116— ...Saturday, Clanton.

...ade Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No... ...ourth Saturday, Cooper.

...on Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No... ...rst Saturday, Clanton.

...ury Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No... ...irst Saturday, Billingsley.

...man Lodge, A. F. and A. M. ...4—Saturday on or before ful... Marbury.

...on Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No... ...aturday on or before full moon.

I. O. O. F.
...son Lodge—First and third ...

...ton Lodge, No. 204— Second ... Saturdays.

Woodmen of the World.
...k Camp, No. 190—First ... Mondays.

I. C. R. M.
...ermo Tribe, No. 90—First ... Mondays sleep. Visiting chi... ...y invited. E. B. Langston, ... J. H. Patton, Sachem.

...ola Tribe No. 38—2nd and ...y sleeps. Visiting chiefs ... invited. J. M. Grant, Sache... Parrish, C. of R.

NOTICE TO LAND-O

I wish to say that I am maps or plats of each property, giving a written of the land, as it should be in assessments. I am prepared plats for the purpose of rors corrected, and at the furnish every party an rect way to keep their rect and avoid future noyance, as well as (some siderable expense. These made of excellent bond paper last a lifetime, and only each, except where plats large, when they will Every one that has seen the am making pronounce them and worth many times their well calculated to save their times over. Any one wishing can obtain it by coming to in Clanton with their deeds, insure an accurate description.

L. B. POUN
tf Tax

NOTICE.

Blank Deeds, Mortg
and all official forms Justices of the Peace, for sale at The Union O
Only best approved
are used. Come in and
us your order

FOR SALE!

A saw mill outfit co
ing of engine, boiler, mill, Challoner shingle three Challoner shingle ses, one small planer matcher. All in first condition. Will sell on terms, or exchange for property, except saw outfit.

C. E. Wheelock, Mgr.
Fixico, A

FOR SALE.

30 young cockerels.
Spangled Hamburgs,
Laced Wyandotts,
Brown and White Legh
Prices 50c to $1.50.
birds pure bred and of quality.

J. B. Downs
tf Clanton, A

MONEY TO LOAN

On real estate. Call or write my abiding place with Mr. G.
shee, one mile northeast of C R. F. D. No. 1. Come during hours, as I keep my money in th
tf JAMES GL

FOR SALE.

160 acres land, 65 acres in tion; two miles south of Calera
dwelling and outbuildings;
lasting water; very good soil.
be sold at a bargain.

H. M. BUSBE
tf Calera,

GINNING SFASON
We have engaged Joe
Walter Maddox to run operate our gins for the ing season. We have best machinery and these men to operate it can guarantee entire faction to those who p
ize us. Bring us your c
Respectfully
Chilton Warehouse &
Company,

FOR SALE

At all times, high hogs and pigs, Berkshi
Poland China, crossed.

M. J. BARRETT,
tf Thorsby, A

BUSINESS PROPOSI

The best whiskey country is here. If don't believe it, try
J. M. COLLINS,
Palace Saloon, Calera,

FOR SALE!

300 acres land, 150
in cultivation. All in T., 20, R., 14, 9 miles of Clanton. Good house and out buildings
3 good tenant houses.
and lasting well of This good farming
be sold at a bargain
and see,

tf J. H. CARTE
Clanton, R. F. D.

COUNTY OFFICIALS.

Circuit Court.
Term—Third Monday in May,
—Fourth Monday in N

L. Brewer, Tuskegee.
W. B. Bowling, Dadeville.
W. Collins.

Chancery Court.
Term—Second Monday in
—Second Monday in Sep

—Hon. W. W. Whitesides,
—Mrs. S. A. Stewart, Clan

County Court.
Monday in each month.

Commissioners' Court.
Monday February, first Mon
first Monday June, second
July, second Monday August,
day November.

COUNTY OFFICERS.

of Probate—L. H. Reynolds.
—W. T. Callen.
—J. M. Morgan.
—W. M. Adams.
Assessor—L. B. Pounds.
Collector—T. J. Hubbard.

County Commissioners.
District—W. H. Conway.
District—Alex Glasscock.
District—R. P. Kendrick.
District—Moses Robinson.

Supt. of Education.
J. W. Moore, Clanton.

County Surveyor.
R. Dahl, Calera.

State Senator.
W. R. Oliver, Calera.

COUNTY CHURCHES.

MISSIONARY BAPTIST.

HANY—Rev. J. L. Neeley, pas
st Sunday and Saturday be
D. L. Hand, clerk.

SALEM—Rev. M. J. Parrish,
E. B. Popwell, clerk.

CREEK—Rev. J. L. Busbey,
First Sunday and Saturday
W. E. Thomas, clerk.

INS CHAPEL—Rev. J. H.
pastor. Third Sunday and before. J. D. Collins, clerk.

HILL—Rev. J. H. Thomas,
First Sunday and Saturday
G. W. Scott, clerk.

DONIA—Rev. J. H. Thomas,
Fourth Sunday and Saturday
3:30 p. m. H. H. Armstrong,

ASANT GROVE—Rev. J. H.
pastor. Fourth Sunday and
before at 11 a. m. D. H.
clerk.

VIDENCE—Rev. W. W. Robin-stor. Second Sunday and Sat-
before. Riley Robinson, clerk.

BOBOTH (Bibb Co.)—Rev. J. H.
pastor. Second Sunday and
before. D. C. Smitherman,

PRIMITIVE BAPTIST.

EL—Elder J. P. Nobles, pas-
Second Sunday and Saturday be-
J. T. Abernathy, clerk.

METHODIST EPISCOPAL.

KY MOUNT—Rev. A. T. Van-
pastor. Second Sunday. Sing-
very second and fourth Sunday
Prayer meeting every Wed-
night. Ladies' prayer meeting
Saturday afternoon.

FRATERNAL SOCIETIES.

Masonic.

R. A. Chapter, No. 116—
Saturday, Clanton.

Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No.
Fourth Saturday, Cooper.

Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No.
First Saturday, Clanton.

Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No.
First Saturday, Billingsley.

Lodge, A. F. and A. M.,
—Saturday on or before full
Marbury.

Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No.
Saturday on or before full moon,

Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No.
Tuesday on or before full moon,

I. O. O. F.

Lodge—First and third Sat-

Lodge, No. 304— Second and Saturdays.

Woodmen of the World.

Jack Camp, No. 190—First and Mondays.

I. O. R. M.

Tribe, No. 90—First and Mondays sleep. Visiting chiefs
invited. E. B. Langston, C.
J. H. Patton, Sachem.

Tribe No. 48—2nd and 4th
sleeps. Visiting chiefs cor-
invited. J. M. Grant, Sachem;
Parrish, C. of R.

F. E. & C. U. OF A.

Chilton Co. Division Officers.

J. H. Thomas, President, Jemison, Rte. 1.
J. W. Hayes, Vice Pres., Thorsby, Rte 1.
J. N. Dennis, Sec-Treas., Clanton, Rte 6.
G. W. Thomas, Chaplain, Clanton, Rte 2.
J. W. Sorrell, Bus. Agent, Jemison, Rte 4.
C. N. Biland, Lecturer, Clanton, Rte 4.
N. A. Dobbs, Asst. Lect., Clanton, Rte 3.
W. J. Bean, Conductor, Clanton, Rte 4.
W. F. Culpepper, Doorkeeper, Clanton, Rte 3.
W. A. Barnett, Ex. Committee, Jemison, Rte 2.
B. H. Mims, Ex. Committee, Clanton, Rte 1.
J. Wiley Foshee, Ex. Committee, Clanton, Rte 4.

Peoples Rally.

The people are hereby invited to come to Clanton at 10 a. m. on SATURDAY, AUGUST 25, 1906.

The county committees of the Populist and Republican parties will also be there.

Eminent speakers have been invited, among whom are Hons. J. O. Thompson, C. H. Scott, Oscar R. Hundley and P. M. Long.

Come and hear the issues of the day presented as they affect the interests of the people.

W. H. SHAW, Chm'n.
W. R. JACKSON, Chm'n.

LECTURE.

There will be a union lecture at Jackson's Chapel school house on Wednesday, August 29, 1906, at 7:30 p. m. County President J. H. Thomas and County Lecturer C. N. Eiland will lecture for the benefit of the public. Everybody is invited to come, especially the ladies.

J. W. WOODYARD.
tf Secretary Lomax Local No. 316.

NOTICE.

The People's Party Executive Committee of Chilton county is hereby called to meet in Clanton Saturday, August 25, 1906, at 10 a. m. Important campaign business to be attended to. W. H. SHAW, Chm'n.
J. P. COLLINS, Sec'y.

NOTICE.

The Republican Party Executive Committee of Chilton county is hereby called to meet in Clanton Saturday, August 25, 1906, at 10 a. m. Important campaign business to be attended to. W. R. JACKSON, Chm'n.
A. C. SMITH, Sec'y.

The Chilton County Farmers' Union will meet with Mount Pleasant Union on August 29-30, 1906.

J. H. THOMAS, President.
J. N. DENNIS, Secretary. tf

COME TO PREACHING.

The Rev. A. C. Swindall will preach at Mount Pleasant school house on the afternoon of the first Sunday in September. Everybody is invited to come. tf

F. E. & C. U. O A.

A resolution was adopted at the last county meting of the Farmers' Union requiring the county lecturer to visit each local in the county at least once every year. Locals who want me to lecture to them will please write me, giving their location, so as to enable me to make a tour of the county in July and August. Address

C. N. EILAND,
tf Route 4, Clanton, Ala.

STRAYED OR STOLEN.

From near my residence on June 25, one iron gray mare colt, one year old; one iron gray horse colt, with star on face, and scar on left hind leg above hock, one and a half years old. Any information leading to their recovery will be liberally rewarded.

C. C. MARTIN,
tf Calera, Ala., Rte 1.

The Union, Weekly Montgomery Advertiser, and a great white and black map of Alabama, United States and world, three in one, with a picture of every president from Washington to Roosevelt, all for $1.50.

NOTICE.

Jemison, Ala., August 7th, 1906.

Lost—One light clay bank mare, branded on the left shoulder with a heart; the last time heard from she was at Ashby; she weighs about 700 pounds. I will reward any one liberally for information as to where she is, or if returned to me, I will pay well for the trouble.

T. S. DAVENPORT.
tf Jemison, Ala.

CLANTON COTTON MARKET.

Total receipts to Aug. 22, 1906...6573
Price same date 9 1-4
Receipts same time in 1905.....8063
Price same date 10 3-8

LOCAL AND PERSONAL.

Jones, one of the most successful merchants in Clanton, bought the first bale of this season's cotton last Saturday, paying 10.10 cents per pound for a bale weighing 537 pounds.

W. Murse, a farmer from the southwest part of our county, was the happy man. Mr. Jones carries a good stock of goods and does his best to give customers satisfaction. Try him.

William Moore, of Cooper, with his two sons, William Lee and Henry Harrison, were welcome callers Thursday.

G. W. Melton was in town Thursday, accompanied by W. M. Meharg, of Coosa county.

John P. Wilson was a pleasant visitor Thursday.

C. W. Hubbard was a welcome caller Monday.

Another carload of the justly celebrated Studebaker wagons at W. J. Mullins', who has sold 98 of the "real" wagons since January 1 of this year. Our people show good judgment in buying a "true and tried" wagon.

J. N. Dennis and son, Turner, were in Clanton Monday.

Charles Eastlund, the carpenter and builder, was a pleasant visitor Monday. He is recovering fast from the severe attack of fever which he experienced some weeks ago. Dr. Hayes may be congratulated on pulling him through. Mr. Eastlund will now complete Mr. Speigner's residence, which he had in hand when he was taken sick.

Rev. B. H. Vickers and family were in town Tuesday seeing A. B. Vickers and Mrs. Susan Stagner, of Tallapoosa county, Mr. Vickers' brother and sister, off on the train for their home. Preacher Vickers says he conducted a successful meeting at Bay Springs, in Shelby county, lately.

James H. Middleton is home from Cullman, where he has been spending some months. "Jim" will likely remain here now; he is a very successful salesman and will not remain unattached long.

Mrs. L. H. Reynolds and family returned from their trip to Georgia Sunday evening.

W. R. Jackson, of Jemison, was a Clanton visitor Tuesday.

W. J. Dennis went off to Bessemer Tuesday to attend the Farmers' Union meeting there.

Mrs. J. Will Moore and her charming little daughter, Leona Belle, went to Prattville Wednesday, where they will visit Mrs. Moore's father, Albert Thompson.

The L. & N. train going to Birmingham Wednesday morning had many farmers of Chilton, Coosa and Shelby counties on their way to Bessemer to attend the state meeting. Among others we noticed J. N. Dennis, W. C. Jones and son, G. W. Scott, W. H. Conway and daughter, Miss Delphie; T. J. Dorminy, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Rodgers and J. W. Hawkins, all of Chilton county; P. D. Culver and J. P. Atkinson, of Coosa county; Vice-President Pearson, J. F. Hill and W. T. Taylor, of Shelby county. May they have a good time and at the same time do business.

Attorney A. C. Smith, secretary of the Republican County Executive Committee, has received a telegram from Hon. Charles H. Scott, dated from Washington, in which Mr. Scott says he will be at the rally at Clanton on Saturday if he possibly can. Don't fail to come out all of you and hear the speeches. Bring your wives and babies, for this concerns them, too; for under Republican rule you have plenty to eat in the house and clothes for the wife and children.

MARRIAGE LICENSES.

Ed Poole and Gertrude Abbott.
Colored.
E. M. Peoples and Irene Shelton; Ward Burns and Minnie Davis.

THORSBY WAREHOUSE.

Thorsby, Ala., August 21, 1906.

Editor Union:

Please publish the following notice:

All who subscribe for stock to build a warehouse and fertilizer factory at Thorsby and all old stockholders in the Farmers' Warehouse and Fertilizer Company will meet in Thorsby Saturday, September 1, and every one is requested to come. I suppose you all meant business when you subscribed, and now let's be loyal and stand by what we agree to do, for unless each one comes and pays up or makes some arrangement we cannot go on with the business. This warehouse business was gotten up by the county union. Now, brethren, what are you going to do about it? The place of building this warehouse can't be changed unless the county union rescinds its action.

The Clanton warehouse was adopted as a union warehouse, which was right, and the county union at the same time passed a resolution to build a union warehouse at Thorsby. We need them both, so let's go to work and build it. I don't know of anything that will hurt an organization worse than to adopt a thing and then not do it. So I think it is the proper thing for all union men to take stock and build it. I mean all in the neighborhood of Thorsby, the upper half of the county, should help this warehouse; we are going to need it. Where is cotton today and where will it be by fall? It is going down in price every day. Brethren, if we don't cooperate we will lose out. Brethren, let's put our shoulder to the wheel and all stand together. Prepare for [illegible] of peace." "In union there is strength." Success to The Union and its readers. J. BICE.

NEED MORE.

Here I come again. I guess if I want others to write I ought to write a little myself. There sure was a large crowd at Liberty Sunday, and a good sermon was preached. Well there were six new members added to Mt. Pleasant local of the F. E. & C. U. of A. Saturday afternoon. I'm glad to say it's growing wonderfully, and we know it is the thing for us farmers. Now, just let us all stick together and work for ourselves. Brother L. B. Pounds gave us some interesting hints on oat raising and the care of an orchard. The afternoon passed away too quick for me. The county meeting is all the talk, and we feel sure we are going to have a grand time. Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Maddox visited her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Jones, Sunday. With best wishes to The Union and success to the editor, I'm the same BUTTERFLY.

WATSON'S MAGAZINE.

The leading exponent of Jeffersonian Democracy, edited by Hon. Thos. E. Watson, of Georgia, theFather of Rural Free Delivery; author of "The Story of France," "Life of Napoleon," "Life and Times of Thomas Jefferson," "Bethany" and other books. Mr. Watson was the People's party nominee for Vice-President in 1896, and for President in 1904. He is today heading a middle-class reform movement which is bound to sweep the country in a short time.

Watson's Magazine is not a Socialist publication. It does not stand for collective ownership of all the means of production. Mr. Watson believes in public or government ownership of railroads, telegraphs and telephones; in municipal ownership of street railways, gas electric lights, water works, etc.; and he believes in private ownership of all industries not natural monopolies.

The middle class—the home owners, farmers, small business men and property owners—won Jefferson's victory in 1800; won Jackson's victory over Nick Biddle's money power in 1832; won Lincoln's victory in 1860. But each time after the flush of victory had died away they became careless of their rights and went to sleep. They have slept a good portion of the time since 1865, but—

Watson's Magazine is waking them up. Another great victory is in the air. Keep in touch with the movement.

Fifteen cents a copy at news stands; $1.50 a year by mail. Sample copy for four 2-cent stamps and four names of reading friends. Address,

TOM WATSON'S MAGAZINE,
121 West Forty-second Street,
New York City.

SPECIAL CLUBBING RATE.

WATSON'S MAGAZINE AND THE UNION A YEAR FOR ONLY $1.75. WHY NOT SAVE THE 75 CENTS? LEAVE ORDERS AT THIS OFFICE.
tf

THE NEW YORK WORLD

Thrice-a-Week Edition.

Read Wherever the English Language is Spoken.

The Thrice-a-Week World hopes to be in 1906 a better paper than it has ever been before, and it has made its arrangements accordingly. Its news service covers the entire globe, and it reports everything fully, promptly and accurately. It is the only paper, not a daily, which is as good as a daily, and which will keep you as completely informed of what is happenng throughout the world.

The Thrice-a-Week World is fair in its political reports. You can get the truth from its columns, whether you are Republican or Democrat, and that is what you want.

A special feature of the Thrice-a-Week World has always been its serial fiction. It publishes novels by the best authors in the world, novels which in book form sell for $1 50 each, and its high standard in this respect will be maintained in the future as in the past.

The THRICE-A-WEEK WORLD'S regular subscription price is only $1.00 per year, and this pays for 156 papers. We offer this unequaled newspaper and THE UNION together for one year for $1.50.

The regular subscription price of the two papers is $2.00. tf

Examiner G. F. Sedberry has filed reports on the accounts of officials of Cherokee, Marshall and DeKalb counties. Only one slight error was found.

JOHN W. HARRELL,
Jemison, Ala.

Photographer. Dealer in all grades of enlarging. Frames made to order. Work done at your own home by appointment

E. G. Rollins & Co.

—DEALERS IN—

General Merchandise, Clothing, Shoes and Fancy Groceries.

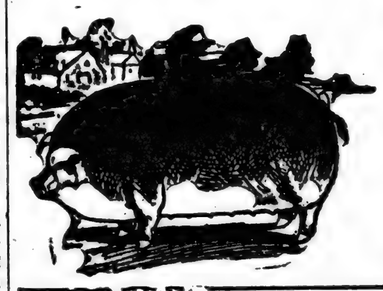
CLANTON, :-: ALABAMA.

WOODLAWN FARM.

Barred Plymouth Rocks

PURE BRED

Setting of 15 fresh eggs for 50c. Packing for shipping 10c extra.



PURE BRED

Duroc Jersey Hogs.

Write us for prices before you buy. Address,

W. Y. NIX,
Maplesville, Alabama.

We Have the Goods
You Have the Money
Let Us Exchange.

Having bought out the stocks of J. W. Smith and J. E. Littlejohn, we are selling them out at prices that will astonish you.

Shoes

Of all kinds to be sold regardless of cost.

New line of General Merchandise also at remarkably low figures. Highest prices paid for Eggs, Chickens and all Country Produce. Come and let us get acquainted.

Cooper Brothers,

At the New Store Next to J. W. Smith's Old Stand

Clanton, Alabama.

A. A. JACKSON

Lomax, Alabama.

General merchandise, corn, hay, shorts, shoes, men's hats, Ladies hats. Best quality and lowest prices in all goods.

Highest Market Price Paid for Chickens and Eggs.

Methods Of Vice Protection in New York

By Former Police Commissioner William McAdoo.

IF there are a considerable number of pool rooms in a police precinct, the suspicion rests on the police captain that he, or those under him, are receiving money for allowing them to operate. It is the same with gambling houses and houses of prostitution, and hotels or other places used for assignation purposes; and where this is wide-spread, in a city like New York, so that these vices are found more or less in a large number of precincts in Manhattan, some in the Bronx, and not a few in Brooklyn, one is face to face with the alarming situation that the toleration of these vices is corrupting and demoralizing the whole police force. If the men in a precinct know or believe that the captain is receiving money for permitting a disorderly house, pool room, or gambling house to run, they will, of course, not only have no faith in him, but they will evade their duty in all respects, because they will have constantly before their eyes the fact that a policeman can be successfully corrupt, and that the officers who command them are not only not doing their duty, but making money by failing to do so. The chances are, therefore, that some of the men who have this example before them will in turn become grafters and blackmailers. If the captain can collect a large sum of money every week or month from a disorderly house, the chances are that the man on post will insist on robbing the unfortunate street walker and making her pay for the privilege of carrying on her infamous trade on his post, and, indeed, become a partner in her infamy, her quondam protector. Once a man has put himself to the plough of grafting and blackmail it seems almost necessary that he run the furrow to its end. The moral courage has oozed out of him entirely; he must henceforth pass his life in the threatening shadow, a slave to those who know his secrets, a weak tool in the face of opposition or threats.—Harper's Weekly.

AT THE WELL.

Once in youth I chanced to wander
Through a fragrant, flowery dell,
And that day I came upon her,
Fairy goddess at the well.

By her stood an earthen pitcher,
And her arms and feet were bare;
She was using Nature's mirror,
Twining blossoms in her hair.

While I stood and gazed upon her,
She had risen from the brink.
"Maid or nymph," at last I queried,
"May I ask you for a drink?"

Then her eyes grew big with wonder,
And a smile began to tease
All her dimples into showing—
"Help yourself, sir, if you please."

As she spoke I felt her magic O'er my lazy senses creep,
And I drew the maiden to me—
Kissed her, kissed her dimples deep.

Then she frowned, took up her pitcher,
And had gone a little way—
When she turned, then hesitated,
Laughed, and dropped her eyes to say—

"I shall come again for water
On the morrow, and I think,
Sir, you're so thirsty
You may want another drink."
—Helen Marvin, in Life.

A CHINA HEART

'Come away! Come away, Natalie!" pleaded Hester, balancing herself on her tiny, pointed heels, and fluttering her azure draperies like a wind-blown bluejay. "I hear the stage horn. You don't want a china heart. You would break it as you do the others, she added, with a wicked laugh.

Natalie held the little heart-shaped tray between her eyes and the light.

"It is excellent china, and beautifully enameled. I never saw a better picture of the fall; but I suppose I can't have it, for the last cent of my allowance was gone long ago. It is horrid to be so wretchedly poor."

"Dear me! If you really want it, you have only to drop a hint to your numerous admirers. They will rise to the bait like hungry trout," suggested Hester, laughing mischeviously as they turned away.

Natalie shrugged her shoulders, not dreaming that one of her numerous admirers had heard every word. He stood looking after her with open mouth. Was the pretty lady, his Heart's Delight, so very poor then? He had always thought her rich, she wore such beautiful clothes. But one might have plenty to eat and wear and not much money, Billy knew. That was his own case.

He tiptoed up to the counter and asked the price of the little tray.

"Two dollars," replied the smiling salesgirl.

Billy fairly staggered out of the store. No wonder the pretty lady could not buy it. Then he sat down and took account of stock.

There were three cents, and never did pennies look so small. Out of the tangle that crammed his pockets he extracted three marbles and a fish-hook that seemed commercially available. Could one small boy earn the required balance in a few weeks? One small boy would certainly try.

During the long, hot days that followed the pennies accumulated slowly. Onion rows are long and time is fleeting; and the value set on a small boy's time is deplorably low. Billy worked cheerfully, but discouragement overtook him at times, as it does all great souls. Then he would trot down to take another look at the china heart, and incidentally to bask in the light of the salesgirl's smile.

She had a wonderfully winning smile, and Billy had long ago told her his secret. That was the reason she kept the china heart hidden away in an Indian moccasin until she saw Billy coming, otherwise some one else might have bought it and broken the china heart, Billy's and all.

She did not approve of the pretty lady with her coquettish airs, but she never told Billy so, for she did most heartily approve of him.

He came into the store one night with despair in his face.

"They're beginnin' to go. She'll be goin' away any day. I can't make it," he said, huskly.

To him the comings and goings of the summer boarders were as aimless as the flittings of the birds and butterflies, and quite as uncertain.

"I wouldn't be discouraged," said the salesgirl, brightly. "It's getting so late in the season that we have had a mark down since you were here last."

"How much?" chirped Billy, with returning hope.

"I can let you have it for a dollar and a half now."

"Jeminee! I've got one forty-five!" cried Billy, fumbling wildly in his pockets.

"I think I could take one forty-five for it," said the salesgirl, thoughtfully.

She took it from the showcase and wrapped it daintily with narrow, white ribbon, while Billy fished pennies and nickels from his pockets. Then as he hurried from the store, holding his dearly bought treasure carefully in both hands, she took fifty-five cents from her own slender purse and dropped it into the cash drawer.

When Billy, bankrupt in fortune but very rich in love, came in sight of the big hotel, he awoke to the fact that he was clad in garments not too whole and clean, and that his face and hands bore unmistakable signs of his wrestle with a stubborn soil.

"I ought to 'a' had my Sunday clo'es on," he murmured distressfully, "but I gotta go on now. She might go to-night."

Heart's Delight was sitting on the long veranda, surrounded by her faithful courtiers. In the shadow, behind the little group, sat a young man with averted face and gloomy eyes. He had come to spend his one poor little week of vacation near Natalie, but he had scarcely had speech with her.

To-morrow he must go back, and —well, the years that lay before him seemed very dark—long weary years of bootless toil. All his thought, all his labor had been for her; although he had never been very hopeful; and now the last shred of hope was gone.

By the time Billy reached the foot of the tall veranda he was apoplectic with embarrassment. Breathing stentorously, he began the long ascent, painfully conscious of the sudden silence above, and the amused eyes that were scanning his worn and scanty garments.

He laid the little packet in his lady's lap and would have turned and fled, but his limbs seemed to have lost the power of locoomtion.

Natalie swiftly untied the string, while Billy watched her adoringly. He was not afraid of her but of the strange people with the mocking eyes.

"Oh, my dear little china heart," she gurgled. "And I thought it was sold. It was never there. But who sent it, Billy Boy?"

"I bought it," said Billy, swelling with pride.

"Why, Billy, Billy Boy! Where in the world did you get so much money?" she cooed tenderly, putting her arm around him and drawing him to her side.

"I worked," answered Billy, displaying his brown, hard little paws. He was not ashamed of them now.

"Why Billy, Billy Boy! And you did all that for me?"

"I'd do more'n that for you. I'd do anything for you," said Billy, stoutly.

The young men laughingly murmured their approval of this sentiment. Involuntarily Natalie turned to the moody face behind her. Clifford had not spoken. He was still looking at the pine-covered hills that frowned darkly against the sunset sky, and it seemed to her that the lines pain had carved in his face had all at once grown deeper and harder.

She glanced down again at the adoring little countenance at her arm. Years before, Clifford's face had worn that same look of boyish idolatry, and it touched her now as his manly devotion had failed to do.

She rose, stooping to kiss Billy's forehead as she did so.

"I shall keep it as long as I live, Billy," she said.

"And you won't break it as you did the others?" Billy asked anxiously.

Natalie smiled strangely. "No, Billy Boy. I shall never break any more, I think—never any more."

Turning again, she said gently. "Isn't it almost time for our walk, Clifford?"

With a great light in his eyes, the young man sprang forward, and the others made way for him as courtiers must do when the king comes.

As the two strolled down the pine-fringed road Billy followed at a respectful distance, turning handsprings that greatly relieved his effervescing spirits.

Had she not kissed him before them all? Ah, she might chatter with these grown young men, dance with them, drive with them, walk with them—very close, as she was walking now; but kiss them? Never! They were far too big and old for that, Billy was sure.—Mary M. Parks, in Household Ledger.

Cats Hear Call of the Wild.

An interesting study of animal nature is found by possum and coon hunters of this city in the 1000 or more acres of dense timber of the Marmaton River bottoms, west of town. It is found that many once tame cats are now inhabiting the timber as wild and more ferocious fighters when treed than any other species of animals which hunters are apt to encounter in these woods.

Nearly every hunting party spending a night in those woods comes up with a cat that has "gone to the wild." The supposition is that these cats have been tempted to the woods by the field and wood mice and other prey upon which cats like to feed, and that they gradually become accustomed to wild life and make their home there. Frequently a party of hunters has chased a cat half a night to have an exciting fight when the dogs finally cornered it.

The cats thus returned to the native life of their species are said by the hunters to grow considerably larger than their civilized brothers and sisters and to be able to engage a whole pack of dogs single handed. —Fort Scott Tribune.

Red Nose "Cure."

In an Indian newspaper appeared an advertisement: "How to Cure Red Noses Permanently; absolute secrecy; send two shillings eight pence and stamped envelope." Many ladies, thinking their noses pinker than was becoming, wrote, and on opening their stamped envelope read: "Go on drinking until it becomes purple."

Children's Corner

THE QUEST.

We followed the Rainbow Road
When the storm had grumbled by.
The rainbow stood by the big east wood
With its top against the sky.
Dot and the dog and I,
—The dog with the curly tail—
And a spade to dig for our treasure big,
A spade and a new tin pail,
(She was the company, I in command,
And the dog went along to guard the band).

The colors came down to the ground,
—Somebody told us so—
And somebody told how a pot of gold
Was hid at the end of the bow.
We hurried along, a-row,
Ready to seek and find;
I led the lot and next came Dot,
With the curly tailed dog behind.
(She was a girl, and so, in case
Of danger, I gave her the safest place.)

O, we were almost there,
And we would have been rich, no doubt,
But the wind came by with a dreadful cry,
And the Beautiful Bow went out.
When we turned to look about
The great black dark had come—
We ran so fast that Dot was lost,
And the dog was the first one home.
(And the rainbows come and the rainbows go,
But Dot and the dog and I—we know!)
—Nancy Byrd Turner in St. Nicholas.

BEN'S BIRTHDAY GOAT.

Ben had a goat named William J. Thompson. He was named so in honor of Ben's uncle, who had given him to Ben as a birthday present. Ben called him Billy for short. He didn't call him William J. Thompson for long, though, for after he had lived in Ben's back yard for three days and had devastated the flower beds and charged and put to flight the grocery boy as he was trudging up to the back door with his basket, Ben's mother said kindly but firmly that William J. Thompson must find another home.

Sadly Ben went down into the yard, untied the white goat from the clothes post and slowly led him out of the back gate and down the road to the village. At the crossroads he met Dick Lloyd.

"S'that your goat?" inquired Dick.

"Nop," said Ben. "Mother won't let me keep him."

"I've got an express wagon," said Dick. "S'pose we go partners and start an express route."

"Bully!" cried Ben. "Can you keep him at your house?"

"Well," said Dick, thoughtfully, "mother's sick in bed and I don't think it's a good time to ask her to let me keep a goat. But if we keep him in the cellar and tell her after he's been there a week, and show her he's been so good and quiet she didn't even know he was there, and he has not been the least bit of trouble, I'm sure she would let him stay. Let's try it anyway."

So it was agreed and the boys walked on to Dick's house leading William J. Thompson. When they got near the back gate Dick went ahead to see if the coast was clear. He peeped in at the kitchen window. Bridget was not there. Back he ran to Ben. "Come quick!" he called.

So Ben and William J. Thompson and Dick ran up to the house and clattered down into the cellar.

"Now," said Ben, "you run and get some straw for a bed and I'll get some carrots for him to eat and then he'll be quite all right."

Everything would have been all right if Bridget had not gone down into the cellar that evening to get some potatoes. William J. Thompson heard her footsteps, and, expecting more carrots, rose on his hind legs with a joyous "n-a-a-a-a!"

Bridget gave one look and dropping the candle, fled shrieking up the cellar stairs.

"Sure and there's an awful creature with horns downstairs. It's a banshee, indade it is!"

Mr. Lloyd heard the noise and rushed down to the kitchen. He peered cautiously into the darkness from the top of the cellar stairs. Sure enough, there was the gleaming eyes and shadowy horns. But just then the plaintive "n-a-a-a!" sounded again and Mr. Lloyd stepped boldly down and dragged forth the luckless goat.

"Dick," he asked severely, "how did this animal get here?"

"It's Ben's birthday goat," confessed Dick. "We wanted to keep him to run the express wagon."

Mr. Lloyd looked from his crestfallen son to Bridget, who sat with the apron over her head rocking backward and forward. Then he laughed.

"Take the goat out in the yard," he said. "I'll persuade mother to let you keep him."—Elizabeth Well, in the Washington Star.

FUNNY BEGINNINGS OF WORDS.

There are some very funny stories told about the derivations of words, since people are likely to twist their language into strange forms. Thus, the Pope is even today called by the name "pontifex," which boys in the Latin class all know is taken by him from the title of the old Roman priests. Now "pontifex" means bridge-builder, and it is true that the Roman priests in the early days of the republic were in charge of bridges; but scholars tell us that the word "pontifex," probably should be "pomptifex," meaning "maker of ceremonies." Many of you have wondered what the priest had to do with bridge building, and this little change of nt to mp makes the whole matter clear.

An astonishing derivation is that of the word "stranger," which we are told comes from the Greek word ex or out of. Absurd as this seems, it is easy to understand. Ex means out, from, or away, the same word as the Latin ex; hence comes extra. Then comes the Latin extraneus, which means outside. The old French word, from this, estrange, means an outsider, but estrange, gave us the word etranger by dropping the s, and stranger by dropping the e.

After this serious example, we shall not be surprised at the old joke that derived the town name, "Middletown," from "Moses," by dropping the "iddletown" and adding "oses."

ABOUT INDIAN DOLLS.

Students of the Indian race tell us that when an Indian girl dies, her mother often substitutes a doll for the last little one. She fills the empty cradle with feathers, arranged in the form of the child, and carries this around with her wherever she goes, talking to it and caressing it as she would her loving child.

The reason the Indian mother carries her "doll' in this pathetic way, is because she thinks that the little dead child is too small to find its way to Paradise. By substituting the doll, it will help along until the dead baby has grown large enough to make its way to the Spirit-land alone, at least this is what the sad Indian mother believes. Christian parents know that when their little ones die they go to be with the Lord forever.

The children of the Passamaquoddy tribe of Indians play with a doll not more than a couple of inches high. In fact, it is smaller than the word which means doll, for this word is "Ampskudahekanek." One had almost rather go without make-believe babies than to be obliged to call them by such an outlandish name, don't you think so? Just fancy a wee papoose crying, "I want a Ampskudahekanek!"

The Sioux doll is made of chamois and deer-skin: The curious thing about it is that it is perfectly flat. To judge from this, one might think that the Sioux babies were systematically starved. This is not the case, for they are as round and fat and jolly as any children you ever saw.—Presbyterian.

BIRD CITIES.

All along the coast of the Atlantic Ocean are little cities inhabited by birds alone. Gardiners Island at the extremity of Long Island, is the place where the fish hawks come during their breeding time, and owing to the friendly attitude of the family on the island the ospreys have become very tame, and build their nests upon the ground instead of in the high trees.

In the Indian river, Florida, is a small island called Pelican Island. It received its name through being one of the favorite settlements for the pelicans during their nesting season.

Away up in the mouth of the St. Lawrence river is the famous Bird rock, "the greatest bird tenement house in the world' as one naturalist expresses it. This rock rises abruptly from the water, and in its formidable clefts thousands of northern sea birds dwell—the snowy feathered gannets. On the crest of this rock rises a light house, whose keeper is on the best of terms with his countless feathered neighbors.

These bird cities, or settlements, are under the protection of the American Ornithological union.

THINGS EVERY GIRL SHOULD LEARN.

Someone has suggested twelve things that every girl can learn before she is fifteen. Not every girl can learn to play or sing or paint well enough to give pleasure to her friends, but the following "accomplishments" are within everybody's reach: Shut the door and shut softly. Keep your room in tasteful order. Have an hour for rising, and rise. Learn to make bread as well as cake. Never let a button stay off twenty-four hours. Always know where your things are. Never let a day pass without doing something to make someone comfortable. Never come to breakfast untidily dressed.

ANIMALS' QUEER WAYS.

Birds, as well as four-footed animals and insects, often avail themselves of the labors of others in home-making. I have a photograph of a barred owl nest in a remodeled hawk nest. Skunks use woodchuck burrows, white-footed mice and flying squirrels are fond of building holes in decaying trees made by woodpeckers, and bumblebees take possession of mice nests in the ground.—From Nature and Science in St. Nicholas.

The Weathercock.

The effigy of the cock so often seen on church steeples is usually connected with a legend in connection with St. Peter. As a matter of fact, however, the figure of a cock used to be placed on the tops of sacred trees long before it was used on buildings. The movement of the bird in the breeze was supposed by the superstitious to ward off evil spirits. On a number of modern churches the familiar vane is missing, but in days gone by a church was hardly ever built without the weathercock on its steeple.—London Standard.

THE PULPIT.

AN ELOQUENT SUNDAY SERMON BY DR. R. A. TORREY.

Subject: Resurrection a Fact.

New York City.—The Rev. Reuben A. Torrey, D.D., the celebrated evangelist, preached Sunday morning in the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church. There was a large congregation, consisting almost entirely of strangers, only a very small percentage being members of the church.

Dr. Torrey's subject was: "The Resurrection a Fact, not Fiction," and his text was I Cor. xv:20 : "But now is Christ risen from the dead, and become the first-fruits of them that slept." He said:

Last Sunday morning we said that the resurrection of Jesus was the most important event in history, and we said that if it could be proved to be a historic fact that everything essential to Christianity was proved, but that if, on the other hand, it could not be proved to be a historic fact, then everything essential to Christianity must go. We started out, without assuming anything as to by whom, or when, the gospels were written, to decide whether they were a record of facts, or merely fiction. First, we discovered that the four gospels were each an independent account, and we were driven to the conclusion that they were a record of actual occurrences. Next, we discovered that each bore the evidences of having been written by an eye-witness. It often happens that a witness tells his story so artlessly, with such an entire absence of any attempt to color it, that his testimony carries weight. We have not only one witness, but four, differing apparently in details (showing that they were not coached) but all agreeing in the essential facts, and each one's story bearing marks of artless simplicity, so that we were driven to the conclusion that the story of the four gospels was a record af actual facts beyond dispute. Sometimes the details of evidence are more conclusive than the direct evidence, because it is not the testimony of the witness, but of the truth that is sought.

We begin here this morning, and we shall show that the narratives in the Gospels prove conclusively that they are not fiction, but fact. One illustration: In St. John's account of Thomas' refusal to believe that the Lord had risen, notice what is said about the character of Thomas and the character of Jesus. How characteristic is Thomas' action and how characteristic is the rebuke of Jesus! When the other disciples tell Thomas that they have seen the Lord, he refuses to believe, and says, "I won't believe it until I see the prints of the nails in His hands." A week passes and the disciples, including Thomas, are gathered together, and Jesus suddenly appears again. He bids Thomas put forth his finger and thrust it into His side, and Thomas cries out, "My Lord and my God." And then Jesus introduces the tender rebuke. "Thomas, you ought to have believed before; but because thou hast seen Me, thou hast believed; blessed are those who believe on sufficient evidence without sight." Is that made up? Is it a lie? If it is made up then the man who drew that picture of Thomas, without a word of explanation, and that picture of Jesus, is the greatest literary master of the centuries. It is not made up; it is the record of reality.

Another illustration: When Peter said to Jesus (John xxi:21), "What shall this man do?" the Lord replied: "What is that to thee? Follow thou Me." The fishers had breakfasted on the shore, and Jesus had told Peter of Peter's coming crucifixion, and then starts down the shore and says, "Follow Me." And Peter, turning round as he goes, sees John following, and says: "Lord, you have told me what my future is to be.. What will this man do?" Now, remember, all though the life of Jesus, as it is recorded in the four Gospels, Jesus never answered questions of mere speculative curiosity. Peter wants to know another man's business, and Jesus says, "What is that to thee? You see that you obey." Is that made up, or it is reality? Is it a lie? Another illustration: In the same chapter Jesus asks Peter, "Lovest thou Me?" three times, and Peter was grieved because He asked him that question three times. Notice these words: "Peter was grieved because He said unto him the third time, 'Lovest thou Me?'" Why was Peter grieved? John offers no explanation. But the Lord's thought went back to the court of Annas and Caiaphas, where three times Peter had denied Him, and, if the narrative had been made up, this would have been explained. Have you ever noticed that the four Gospels insist upon the fact tnat our Lord returned thanks in the breaking of bread? That is something we do three times every day, but I do not think that any one, in writing our lives, would put it on record. We simply return thanks as a matter of form, but when Jesus, in the breaking of bread, lifted up His heart and opened His lips, there was such a real drawing into the presence of God that no one at the table ever forgot it. When, after the walk to Emmaus, Jesus returned thanks, although they had not recognized Him before, notwithstanding that their hearts burned within them as He talked, the disciples knew Him. In a moment their eyes were opened, and they said: "It is the Lord; nobody else ever returned thanks that way." Is this a fiction? If one man wrote the story of the four Gospels, why should he put in all of these details without explanation? It is incredible; and that four should do so is absolutely unbelievable. How comes it? Because this is what occurred, and they told what they saw without realizing the significance of what they put down. Still another illustration: If a man were inventing the story of the Resurrection, why should he put in the fact that the little napkin "was wrapped together in a place by itself?" Who cares whether it was in a place by itself or not? I do not know whether John knew the significance of it or not, but there is a significance in it that no fiction would contain. It showed that as Jesus arose, triumphant over death and the grave, in the supreme moment of the world's history, there was no hurry, no haste, no excitement, that, with the same majestic composure, the same divine calm that characterized Him in the storm on the Sea of Galilee, He rises from the dead, does not tear the handkerchief from His face and fling it across the room, but calmly unbinds His face, lays it aside in a place by itself, and passes out of the tomb, leaving that made up, and put in as a final word of explanation? Who could have read not a picture, but a picture with a detail here and a detail there, of which the writer, apparently, had no conception of the meaning, simply wrote what he saw?

We have a volume of evidence of the resurrection of that kind. Not only the apostles, beyond peradventure, made the resurrection of Jesus the cornerstone of their preaching, but they preached it in the very city where He was crucified and before the court that condemned Him. Furthermore, they gave their lives for this testimony. Men do not die for what they know to be false. Certainly, the early church, which was composed of the Jewish church, changed the Sabbath observance from the seventh day to the first day of the week. Now anyone who has studied Jewish history knows the hardest thing in the world is to change Jewish customs, and something tremendous must have happened to make this change possible, simply by common consent. This third fact is most significant. The moral transformation of the disciples themselves. They were a particularly demoralized cowards, and a few days after we see that same company filled with the most indomitable courage that the world has ever seen. What had happened? Jesus had risen, and they had seen Him. Intelligent men who deny the resurrection admit that the apostles thought they had risen. Strauss says "What is it that they had seen something? Is not this appearance to the disciples extraordinary?" That is the question. Our answer is this: Whenever a group of eleven men having the same experience at the same time; and of similar having the same vision" Another argument against the resurrection has been revived within the last few years, and it was that Jesus was not really dead and was resuscitated. But when they appeal to a historic fact, as in the case of certain Jewish officer was taken down from a cross and brought back to life. We have five objections to this. First, what preceded the crucifixion—the scourging, etc. Second, both Jews and the Romans took the most precautions to prevent this. Third, we remember His broken heart. Fourth, if He had been resuscitated He would have been in a state of absolute physical collapse, as was the case with the Jewish officer, who was invalid all his life. Fifth, if these ones who resuscitated Jesus would have been the apostles and the transformation in them remains to be accounted for. Finally, if it was not resurrection, then the whole thing was a fraud, and a deliberate fraud. No one can believe that Christianity with its lofty precepts of morality and its living rests upon a fraud and that Jesus was a party to it? No one can believe it.

There is only one conclusion. The resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead is the best proved fact in history. There is only one strong argument against it, and that is that no one else was ever raised from the dead. The answer to this is that the life of Jesus was in His mission and nature and character were all unique and it was only to be expected that the issue of that life would be unique. It is unique for any man of loyal mind, who has had any experience of Christ, who wants to know the truth, to come down before the four Gospels and take them up, point by point, and study the statements and thoroughly sift the evidence, to come to any other conclusion than that Jesus Christ actually arose from the dead, as he says in the four Gospels. What is the result? Everything. If Christ rose again, then Christianity is no longer a mere abstract divinity, but a reality, proven facts, and everything that I am and I have been taught to be true, and that is dear to the Christian heart, and the glory of the future come, is an absolute certainty.

LEOPOLD, SEC'Y
LIEDERKRANZ,

Restores Your Age, My System to Its Down Condition. Owes to My Restoration to Health and

ISS RICKA LEOPOLD

RICKA LEOPOLD, 137 Main Menasha, Wis., Sec'y Lieder-
, writes:
years ago my system was in a run-down condition and I was t all over my body. I began to about my condition and I was ry anything which would relieve ng was recommended to me as od remedy and tonic, and I soon it it was worthy of praise.

bottles changed my condition
lly and in a short time I was all trouble.
to Peruna my restoration to d strength. I am glad to endorse

Peru-na Restores Strength.

ettie Green, R. R. 6, Iuka, Ill.,
"I had catarrh and felt miserbegan the use of Peruna and be-mprove in every way. My head hurt me so much, my appetite is d I am gaining in flesh and

Smithdeals

ial Real business college in Va. to earn its build-ons. No vacations. Ladies and Gentlemen.
Shorthand, Penmanship, Typewriting, Tele-
Three first taught by mail also.
ed business colleges south of the Potomac Stenographer.
Address
M. SMITHDEAL, President, Richmond, Va.

Outlawed.

man on the down-town car ding on by a strap next to a om he happened to know, and begging pardons and grant-to his neighbor, he was try-read a few paragraphs in his
One of them, says the Brooklyn ld of a discovery by a Nippur on of the University of Penn—a well-preserved and thor-authenticated tailor's bill
ve thousand years old.
the man who was holding on xt strap is himself engaged in hing business the man with paper thought the item would him, so he read it aloud to t the story left the listener blank look on his face.
you understand?" said the patiently. "It's a tailor's bill
ve thousand years old."
" said the tailor, without ex-
. "what is it good for? They llect it."

a's Increasing Population.

ident Palma's mention in his to the Cuban Congress that the four months from Novo Febuary, both inclusive, the were only 8629, while the births ed 22,252, seems to have given atisfaction to the Cuban peo-ith births two and one-half more numerous than deaths.
e of immigration, they look apid growth in population.

SALLOW FACES.

Caused by Coffee Drinking.

many persons realize that o disturbs digestion that it s a muddy, yellow complex-n days' trial of Postum Food has proven a means, in thou-of cases, of clearing up bad ions.

ashn. young lady tells her ex-
e:
of us—father, mother, sister
other—had used tea and cofmany years until finally we stomach troubles more or were all sallow and troubled mples, breath bad, disagree-te in the mouth, and all of us so many bundles of nerves.

didn't realize that coffee was se of the trouble until one ran out of coffee and went to some from a neighbor. She some Postum and told us to
t. hough we started to make it felt sure we would be sick if ed our strong coffee, but we ded to try Postum and were ed to find it delicious.
read the statements on the t more and in a month and a ou wouldn't have known us.
re all able to digest our food any trouble, each one's skin clear, tongues cleaned off rves in fine condition. We se anything now but Postum
s nothing like it." Name giv
Postum Co., Battle Creek
Read the little book, "The o Wellville." "There's a rea

Seeking to Save.

Christ is in all His redeemed the soul of their soul, the their life. He is the putting and the helping hand of God every needy, praying spirit in the world. He is the sweet light of knowledge of God that breaks on every penitent heart.

He is not only with those who lieve in Him and love Him, but with those who neither believe Him nor love Him, that He to them also Jesus their Saviour.
The Christ of God is in the world waiting and aiming to get sent of thy will, that He may thee. Wherever man is, there is Christ, endeavoring to free from the law of sin and death, becoming Himself the law
spirit of his life.—John Paton.

The Way to Success.

The men whom I have met ceed best in life have always cheerful and hopeful men who about their business with a their faces, and took the chances of their normal life facing rough and smooth alike came, and so found the truth old proverb, that "good time bad times and all times pass."
Charles Kingsley.

A Continuous Prayer.

Avoid diligently those false ceptive thoughts which say little, I will pray an hour must perform this or that. Pray such thoughts a man quiets for business, which lays hold entangles him, so that he can to pray the whole day long.—
Luther.

You can tell how much means his prayers by the way out and pushes things after ing.

The best evidence of your vation is your interest in others.

and the grave, in the ... of the world's history, ... hurry, no haste, no ... that, with the same ... posure, the same divine ... the same majestic calm ... Him in the storm on the ... flee. He rises from the ... does not tear the handk... His face and fling it across ... but calmly unbinds His ... face, lays it aside in a ... and passes out of the ... that made up, and put in ... word of explanation? ... have read not a picture, ... with a detail here and ... of which the writer, appar... no conception of the ... simply wrote what he saw.

We have a volume of ... the resurrection of that ... the apostles, beyond peradv... made the resurrection of J... cornerstone of their preachi... they preached it in the ... where He was crucified and ... the court that condemned H... thermore, they gave their li... testimony. Men do not do ... what they know to be false ... ly, the early church, which ... of the Jewish church, chan... Sabbath observance from the ... day to the first day of the w... anyone who has studied Jew... tory knows the hardest thing ... world is to change Jewish ... an I something tremendous ... happened to make this change ... ble, simply by common consent ... third fact is most significant ... moral transformation of the ... themselves. They were a pack ... terly demoralized cowards, and ... days after we see that same co... filled with the most indomitable ... ago that the world has ever ... What had happened? Jesus had ... and they had seen Him. All ... gent men who deny the resurr... admit that the apostles thought ... had risen. Strauss says: "We ... that they had seen something ... not this appearance ... ego ... lonary?" That is, they saw a ... Our answer is this: Whoever ... of eleven men having the same ... at the same time; and of 50 ... having the same vision? An ... ument against the resurrection ... been revived within the last ... years, and it was that Jesus was ... really dead and was resuscitated ... they appeal to a historic fact ... certain Jewish officer was taken ... from a cross and brought ... life. We have five objections ... First, what preceded the cruc... —the scourging, etc. Second ... Jews and the Romans took ... precautions to prevent this. ... remember His broken heart. ... if He had been resuscitated He ... have been in a state of absolute ... ical collapse, as was the case ... the Jewish officer, who was ... valid all his life. Fifth, if ... ones who resuscitated Jesus ... have been the apostles and the ... formation in them remains ... counted for. Finally, if it was ... resurrection, then the whole th... a fraud, and a deliberate fraud ... can believe that Christianity ... lofty precepts of morality and ... living rests upon a fraud and ... Jesus was a party to it? No man ... believe it.

There is only one conclusion ... resurrection of Jesus Christ ... the dead is the best proved ... history. There is only one ... strong argument against it, and ... is that no one else was ever ... from the dead. The answer to ... is that the life of Jesus was ... His mission and nature and cha... were all unique and it was only ... expected that the issue of the ... would be unique. It is impo... for any man of loyal mind, ... has had any experience of evil ... who wants to know the truth, ... down before the four Gospels ... take them up, point by point, ex... the statements and thoroughly ... evidence, to come to any other ... clusion than that Jesus Christ ... ly arose from the dead, as re... in the four Gospels. What ... Everything. If Christ rose again ... Christianity is no longer a syst... abstract divinity, but a gos... proven facts, and everything that ... and I have been taught to ... and that is dear to the Chr... heart, and the glory of the ... come, is an absolute certainty.

Seeking to Save.

Christ is in all His redeeme... the soul of their soul, the l... their life. He is the pitying ... and the helping hand of God ... every needy, praying spirit ... world. He is the sweet light ... knowledge of God that breaks ... on every penitent heart.

He is not only with those ... lieve in Him and love Him, ... with those who neither believe ... Him nor love Him, that He ma... to them also Jesus their Sa... The Christ of God is in thy ... waiting and aiming to get ... sent of thy will, that He may ... thee. Wherever man is, there ... is Christ, endeavoring to free ... from the law of sin and dea... becoming Himself the law ... spirit of his life.—John Pulsf...

The Way to Success.

The men whom I have seen ... ceed best in life have always ... cheerful and hopeful men who ... about their business with a s... their faces, and took the chan... chances of their normal life ... facing rough and smooth alik... came, and so found the truth ... old proverb, that "good time... bad times and all times pass ... Charles Kingsley.

A Continuous Prayer.

Avoid diligently those false ... ceptive thoughts which say, ... little, I will pray an hour ... must perform this or that. Fo... such thoughts a man quite ... for business, which lays hold ... entangles him, so that he ... to pray the whole day long.—... Luther.

You can tell how much ... means his prayers by the way ... out and pushes things after the ... ing.

The best evidence of your ... vation is your interest in ... others.

LEOPOLD, SECT'Y
LIEDERKRANZ,

...Three Years Ago My System ... a Run-Down Condition. I Owe ... Thanks To Restoration to Health and ...

...RICKA LEOPOLD, 137 Main ..., Menasha, Wis., Sec'y Lieder... writes:

"...years ago my system was in a ...run-down condition and I was ...ot all over my body. I began to ...ad about my condition and I was ...y anything which would relieve ...

"...was recommended to me as ...d remedy and tonic, and I soon ...d it was worthy of praise. ...bottles changed my condition ...ally and in a short time I was all ...trouble.

"...to Peruna my restoration to ...d strength. I am glad to endorse ...

...na Restores Strength.

...Hettie Green, R. R. 6, Iuka, Ill., ...I had catarrh and felt miser... ...began the use of Peruna and be... ...mprove in every way. My head ...n't hurt me so much, my appetite is ...d I am gaining in flesh and ...

Smithdeals

...ond best business college in Va., to own its build... ...ne. No vacations. Ladies and Gentlemen. ...Shorthand, Penmanship, Typewriting, Tele... ...graphy. Three first taught by mail also. ...Smithdeals college south of the Potomac ...Strongest. Address, ...M. SMITHDEAL, President, Richmond, Va.

Outlawed.

...was on the down-town car ...ding on by a strap next to a ...whom he happened to know, and ...n begging pardons and grant... ...m to his neighbor, he was try... ...read a few paragraphs in his ...One of them, says the Brooklyn ...kind of a discovery by a Nippur ...on of the University of Penn... ...—a well-preserved and thor... ...authenticated tailor's bill ...five thousand years old. ...the man who was holding on ...ort strap is himself engaged in ...thing business the man with ...wspaper thought the item would ...him, so he read it aloud to ...hat the story left the listener ...blank look on his face. ...you understand?" said the ...impatiently. "It's a tailor's bill ...five thousand years old." ...said the tailor, without ex... ...what is it good for? They ...collect it."

...n's Increasing Population.

...dent Palma's mention in his ...to the Cuban Congress that ...the four months from Nov... ...to Febuary, both inclusive, the ...were only 8629, while the births ...seems to have given ...satisfaction to the Cuban peo... ...Births two and one-half ...more numerous than deaths, ...of immigration, they look ...rapid growth in population.

SALLOW FACES.

Caused by Coffee Drinking.

...many persons realize that ...disturbs digestion that it ...a muddy, yellow complex...

...days' trial of Postum Food ...has proven a means, in thou... ...of cases, of clearing up bad ...tions.

...a young lady tells her ex... ...

...of us—father, mother, sister ...other—had used tea and cof... ...many years until finally we ...stomach troubles more or ...

...were all sallow and troubled ...pimples, breath bad, disagree... ...ache in the mouth, and all of us ...so many bundles of nerves. ...didn't realize that coffee was ...one of the trouble until one ...ran out of coffee and went to ...some from a neighbor. She ...some Postum and told us to ...

...Though we started to make it ...felt sure we would be sick if ...used our strong coffee, but we ...forced to try Postum and were ...glad to find it delicious.

...We read the statements on the ...got more and in a month and a ...you wouldn't have known us. ...were all able to digest our food ...any trouble, each one's skin ...clear, tongues cleaned off ...nerves in fine condition. We ...use anything now but Postum. ...is nothing like it." Name giv... ...by Postum Co., Battle Creek. ...Read the little book, "The ...to Wellville." "There's a rea...

WORTH QUOTING

Love may be blind, but the way in which the little god walks straight up to a big fortune, observe sthe New York Herald, indicates that he has the gift of second sight.

The Grand Dukes of Russia must be long lived. In 1237, the rebellious peasants addressed an ultimatum to the landed gentry: "If you want peace, give us the tenth of your goods," which brought forth the reply: "When we are dead you may have the whole."

Papa, says the man who is fond of digging up things, may be comparatively a newcomer into the English language, but it is as old as Homer. Nausicaa, in the "Odyssey," called her father "papa phile" dear papa. Oh, yes, suppose they had 'em even in those days. Now, take another peek at the "Odyssey" and see if "Everybody Works but Father" isn't there, says the ribald New York Telegram.

The world never forgets the good citizen. The world immediately forgets the man of money only. Go through our "Who's Who in America," and other books of men of mark, exclaims the Denver News, and not one-tenth of one per cent. of those registered as worthy of having their names printed there are men who are known for their money.

The American dairy and stock farmer can make a fortune in Panama, according to a report from Consul Kellogg. Watered milk is sold at 30 cents a quart and poor meat at 25 cents a pound. Cattle are protected by a tariff of $10 a head on steers and $8 on cows. The United States government, however, being exempt in importing for purely canal purposes.

A large district in the middle of Porto Rico, with a population of 100,000 is afflicted with " the lazy worm," and official efforts are being made to improve the inhabitants' condition. A hospital has been established at Albonito, with an endowment of $15,000 and will do what it can to check the ravages of this minute reptile, of the existence of which the old time native Porto Rican never had the slightest notion. Last year an American medical officer, Captain Ashford, treated 4,500 cases, and nearly all of them were cured. As a result, the population are aroused to much enthusiasm, and the afflicted are applying in great numbers for treatment. Heretofore the malady has been deemed incurable.

We heard a young man remark last week that, "The world owes me a living." It is hoped for that young man's good that he'll get the notion out of his head. It's a mistake, a grave mistake, asserts the Florida Agriculturist. He never entertained a more foolish idea nor one which will bring him a smaller measure of respect. The world owes the young man nothing; but instead he owes the world and society an active, noble manhood, a steady, honest energy which will enable him to associate with decent men and women in a true manliness of character that will make his friendship valuable and his presence and companionship desired. The truly intelligent activity, and this young man should contribute to society's happiness and welfare the grace which comes through study, toil and honest thought.

There could be no greater mistake than for Moslems to infer from Emperor William's refusal to be left out of the plan arranged by France and England for the disposal of Morocco that he would afford support, direct or indirect, to outbreaks against Christians in Algeria and Egypt. All that France and England would need to do to secure his zealous co-operation in pesistance to a Jehad, asserts Harper's Weekly, would be to concede to him ascendency in the Euphrates Valley, the exploitation of which is already contemplated by a German railway company. A Moslem Holy War in the twentieth century would be a glaring anarchonism, which might cause much bloodshed for a while, but which, in the end, would bring the authors and abettors of it to destruction.

Times and manners change. The customs of London, ancient and modern, greatly differ. Says "The London Times" regarding mediaeval days: "Dancing was a passion with everybody. From the Queen to the milkmaid, all the women danced; from the King to the craftsman, all of the young men danced. They danced in the streets whenever it was possible, which was one of the reasons why May Day was so joyous a festival. The more courtly people had dances dignified and stately, such as the Danse au Virlet, in which each performer sang a verse, and then they all danced around, singing the same verse in chorus; the Pas de Brahant, where every man knelt to his partner; the Danse au Chapelet, where every man kissed his partner; they danced together, singing minstrel's songs; they danced in the garden, they danced in the meadow, they went out at night to dance, with tapers in their hands; they danced to beautiful music played by an orchestra. Where is the dancing spirit now? Where the mixed kissing? When did Merry England die? When did it begin? Was it ever so?

Good Colors For Houses.

It is not generally known—not even among painters—why certain tints and colors wear much better than others on houses, and the knowledge of just what tints are best to use is, therefore, rather hazy.

One writer on paint, in a recent book, says that experiments seem to show that those colors which resist or turn back the heat rays of the sun will protect a house better than those which allow these rays to pass through the film.

Thus red is a good color because it turns back, or reflects, the red rays, and the red rays are the hot rays.

In general, therefore, the warm tones are good and the cold tones are poor, so far as wear is concerned. In choosing the color of paint for your house, select reds, browns, grays and olives which, considering the various tones these tints will produce, will give a wide range from which to choose.

Avoid the harsh tints, such as cold yellows (like lemon), cold greens (like grass green, etc.), and the blues.

It must be understood that no virtue is claimed for tints in themselves, irrespective of the materials used in the paint. Any color will fade, and the paint will scale off, if adulterated white lead or canned paint is used, but if one is careful to use the best white lead—some well-known brand of a reliable manufacturer—and genuine linseed oil, the warm tints mentioned above will outwear the same materials tinted with the cold colors.

Perfume to Follow Motors.

M. Deletrain, a young Genevan, claims to have made a discovery for motorists which would be a boon for the public. It consists of a small solid cone, which the inventor has named the motor cone. When it is dissolved in petrol or benzine the cone destroys the odor of burnt gases and leaves an agreeable perfume behind. Motor cones will be sold in small boxes containing six cones at about 25 cents a box, and one cone is said to be sufficient to perfume 60 miles of road.

Land of Sunshine.

Colorado is entitled to be called the land of sunshine. Statistics show that for the year ending March 1, 1905, the sun shone on all but eight days, at Colorado Springs; and that the temperature touched its highest point on July 15, when the thermometer registered 89 degrees.—Four-Track News.

Did you ever hear of a married man wasting any sympathy on an old bachelor?

BABY COVERED WITH SORES.

Would Scratch and Tear the Flesh Unless Hands Were Tied—"Would Have Died But For Cuticura."

"My little son, when about a year and a half old, began to have sores come out on his face. I had a physician treat him, but the sores grew worse. Then they began to come on his arms, then on other parts of his body, and then one came on his chest, worse than the others. Then I called another physician. Still he grew worse. At the end of about a year and a half of suffering he grew so bad I had to tie his hands in cloths at night to keep him from scratching the sores and tearing the flesh. He got to be a mere skeleton, and was hardly able to walk. My aunt advised me to try Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I sent to the drug store and got a cake of the Soap and a box of the Ointment, and at the end of about two months the sores were all well. He has never had any sores of any kind since. He is now strong and healthy, and I can sincerely say that only for your most wonderful remedies my precious child would have died from those terrible sores. Mrs. Egbert Sheldon, R. F. D. No. 1, Woodville, Conn., April 2, 1905."

Mountain Sheep Sacred in Colorado.

State Game and Fish Commissioner Jim Woodard declares that the mountain sheep of Colorado is in the same class as the sacred bull of India. It must not be touched, says Woodard. If the animal is seen browsing upon the mountainside the gun of the hunter must not be pointed in its direction.

The animal, therefore, may be called the "sacred sheep of Colorado." There are not many of them left, but under the protection of the law they are increasing every year. There is a band of them on the hills between Florence and Victor, and Mr. Woodard has a photograph of the bunch grazing on a hillside a short distance away from Florence.

But for the passage of a law which heavily fines those who kill this animal the species would have been extinct long ago.

A letter received in Mr. Woodard's office recently tells of the arrest and conviction of one Fred Kiantzsky for killing mountain sheep. Kiantzsky was fined $300 and costs in the county court at Canon City last Saturday. The costs amounted to $140, and if the accused man does not settle he will have a long term to serve in the county jail.—Denver Republican.

A woman never accuses a man of flattery if he praises her for qualities she knows she doesn't possess.

Nobody knows but father how much it costs to feed a family.

The love-sick are those who have been surfeited with sweet nothings.

IF YOU WANT A CHILL TONIC

Guaranteed NOT to Contain a Particle of POISON and that WILL CURE CHILLS AND FEVERS use

OXIDINE

For Sale by All Druggists Price 50 Cents

Read the following analysis made by the state chemist who analyzed three bottles of Oxidine sent to him by the Secretary of the State Pharmaceutical Association (The Texas Retail Druggists Association):

Houston Laboratories
Chemical and Biological

Analysis and Valuation of Cotton Seed and Rice Products a Specialty. Waters, Soils, Oils, Ores, Etc., Carefully Examined and Reported Upon. Reports Made on Economic Geology.

P. S. TILSON, Director, Analytical and Consulting Chemist
215 1-2 MAIN STREET

HOUSTON, TEXAS, June 27, 1906.

Mr. R. H. Walker, Secretary Texas State Pharmaceutical Association, Gonzales, Texas.

DEAR SIR: Herewith I beg to hand you certificate of analysis of the Oxidine you submitted a few days since.

I trust this will be duly received and found entirely satisfactory. I have kept you waiting for a little while, but I appreciate the responsibility which you have seen fit to place upon me; for that reason I have taken my time to be certain and accurate about my results.

If I can serve you in the future please advise me. Thanking you, I beg to remain, Yours very truly,

P. S. TILSON, Chemist.

Houston Laboratories
Chemical and Biological

Analysis and Valuation of Cotton Seed and Rice Products a Specialty. Waters, Soils, Oils, Ores, Etc., Carefully Examined and Reported Upon. Reports Made on Economic Geology.

P. S. TILSON, Director, Analytical and Consulting Chemist
215 1-2 MAIN STREET

CERTIFICATE OF ANALYSIS

Of Three Bottles of Oxidine Submitted by R. H. Walker, of Gonzales, Texas, Secretary of the State Pharmaceutical Association.

HOUSTON, TEXAS, June 27, 1906.

I find this Oxidine to contain absolutely no poisonous or injurious drugs or chemicals and not a trace of Arsenic, Codeine, Morphine, Strychine or Strychnine; nor, in fact, anything that would produce a harmful effect whatever.

Respectfully submitted,
P. S. TILSON, Chemist.

MANUFACTURED EXCLUSIVELY BY

Dallas, Texas—PATTON-WORSHAM DRUG COMPANY, Manufacturing Druggists—Memphis, Tenn.

Paid in Capital and Surplus, $250,000.00

H. H. ADAMS, President N. H. TURNER, Vice-President R. H. COMPTON, 2nd Vice-President H. O. ADAMS, Secretary and Treas.

DIRECTORS

ROYAL A. FERRIS, Prest. American Exchange Nat'l Bank, Dallas, Texas
GEO. R. ALDREDGE, Director American Exchange Nat'l Bank, Dallas, Texas
ALEX SANGER, Prest. Sanger Bros., Dallas, Texas
H. H. ADAMS, President
R. H. STEWART, Prest. Huron & Stewart, Wholesale Grocers, Dallas, Texas
FRED N. TURNER, Cotton Planter, Dallas, Texas
T. L. BRADFORD, Merchant, Dallas, Texas
N. H. TURNER, Vice-President
R. H. COMPTON, 2nd Vice-President
S. J. ADAMS, Cotton Planter, Bearne, Texas
JNO. H. BEARRE, Prest. Royal National Bank, Palestine, Texas
J. S. McLENDON, Prest. Citizens National Bank, Waco, Texas
H. O. ADAMS, Secretary and Treasurer

OXIDINE, THE CHILL CURE THAT CURES CHILLS

Too Credulous.

Senator Frye of Maine tells the following story of a man who fell asleep in a parlor car. He snored so loudly that every one in the coach was annoyed. Presently an old gentleman approached the sleeper, shook him and brought him out of his slumber with a start.

"What's the matter?" he exclaimed.

"Why, your snoring is annoying every one in the car," said the old gentleman.

"How do you know I am snoring?" queried the source of the nuisance.

"Why, we can't help but hear it."

"Well, don't believe all you hear," replied the stranger and went to sleep again.—Christian Endeavor World.

FITS, St. Vitus' Dance: Nervous Diseases permanently cured by Dr. Kline's Great Nerve Restorer. $2 trial bottle and treatise free. Dr. H. R. Kline, Ld., 931 Arch St., Phila., Pa.

The politician who is always praising the plain people is mighty mad if you class him wth them.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup for Children teething, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, allays pain, cures wind colic, 25c a bottle

TOBACCO SMUGGLERS' TRICKS.

How Contraband Gods Are Carried Into France.

A great effort is being made by the French custom officials to break up the organization of smugglers which has lately been carrying on a lucrative and ever growing trade in contraband between Belgium and France.

During the last fortnight the French custom officials have had several important successes. The first was the capture of a Belgian fishing smack in the Straits of Dover. The vessel carried $5000 worth of tobacco. This contraband cargo was confiscated, the vessel seized and the owners were fined $5000. In the same night a smugglers' haunt was raided at Dunkirk and great quantities of tobacco were seized.

One of the latest devices was that employed by a man who disguised himself as a priest. He was in the habit of journeying from a Belgian frontier town into France every day with a large quantity of tobacco concealed under his cassock.

He returned to Belgium, not a portly priest, but a very lean, emaciated individual.

The capture of the fictitious priest led the authorities to suspect a number of nuns who daily crossed the frontier into France. A careful search had been organized, and in four cases the supposed nun was found to be a smuggler with many pounds of tobacco and cigars hidden beneath her heavy black skirt.

Suspicion next fell upon the drivers, firemen and guards of the trains running between Brussels and Paris, and for some days every train has been carefully searched. Hundreds of pounds of tobacco have been found hidden among the coal on the tenders.

In one case the cushions of a carriage were found to be stuffed with tobacco. In another, a passenger, who was well known as a regular traveler on the line, was searched, and found to be loaded with contraband. In a third case an invalid, reposing on air cushions, was found to be no invalid at all, and the cushions held tobacco instead of air.

Perhaps the most gruesome discovery was made when a coffin, supposed to contain the body of a Frenchman who died in Belgium and was being brought back to be buried in his native country, was searched. It was found to be full of cigars.

At the frontier towns on the roads several ingenious tricks have been discovered. Recently a peasant was stopped when driving across the border with a load of vegetables and an aged relative. The relative was found to be a dummy figure stuffed with tobacco, and the vegetables had their centres cut out and replaced with tobacco.—London Express.

Wintersmith's CHILL TONIC

CURES CHILLS AND ALL MALARIAL FEVERS.

Has been a standard household remedy for over 40 years. Pleasant to take; leaves no bad effects like quinine; harmless for children. Guaranteed by all druggists. Put up in 50c and $1 bottles. Sent express paid on receipt of price, if not on sale at the home drug store. Address

ARTHUR PETER & CO., General Agents. Louisville, Ky.

Story of a Photograph.

The following story of a young lady living in the country who came to London to be photographed is vouched for by a well-known London photographer. After some days the lady, Miss B., was informed the photograph was not a success, and another sitting was suggested.

This she agreed to, but again she was informed that the photograph was a failure. There was a third sitting. In two days' time she received an urgent letter from the photographer, asking her to come up to his studio and to bring a friend with her. Miss B. went, accompanied by her mother, and was shown the amazing results of the three sittings.

The pictures of the girl herself were quite good, but in each plate there was to be seen standing behind her the figure of a man holding a dagger in his uplifted hand. The features, though faint, were clearly discernible, and Miss B. recognized them as those of her fiance, an officer in the Indian army. The effect of this experience was so great that after a few days she wrote to India, breaking off the engagement.—M. A. P.

The proposed erection of a 20-story office building on the American plan in London has aroused vigorous opposition.

Life's rose-colored clouds all have silver or gold linings.

COULD NOT KEEP UP.

Broken Down, Like Many Another, With Kidney Troubles.

Mrs. A. Taylor, of Wharton, N. J., says: "I had kidney trouble in its most painful and severe form, and the torture I went through now seems to have been almost unbearable. I had backache, pains in the side and loins, dizzy spells and hot, feverish headaches. There were bearing-down pains, and the kidney secretions passed too frequently, and with a burning sensation. They showed sediment. I became discouraged, weak, languid and depressed, so sick and weak that I could not keep up. As doctors did not cure me I decided to try Doan's Kidney Pills, and with such success that my troubles were all gone after using eight boxes, and my strength, ambition and general health is fine."

Sold by all dealers. 50 cents a box. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

A Balloon Railway.

Engineer Balderauer of Salzburg has invented a balloon railroad, experiments with which are now being made in the neighborhood of that German city. A stationary balloon is fastened to a slide running along a single rail fastened to the side of a steep mountain which ordinary railroads could not climb. The balloon is to float 35 feet over the ground, and a steel cable connects it with the rail. For going up, motive power is furnished by hydrogen gas, while water poured into a large tank at the upper end of the road serves as ballast for the descent. Suspended from the balloon is a circular car with room for ten passengers.

TELEGRAPHY, SHORTHAND AND BOOKKEEPING

Bookkeeping, Penmanship, Shorthand, Typewriting, Telegraphy. Railroad Main Line Wires connected to College; from College to position. Positions guaranteed. Write for free catalog. The American Telegraph & Commercial College, Milledgeville, Ga., Box 900.

Possibilities of Dry Farming.

Estimates of the amount of land that can be reclaimed by irrigation vary all the way from 50,000,000 acres up to 125,000,00 acres, with the weight of authoritative opinion decidedly favoring the lower figure. Yet if 1 per cent of the money now being expended for irrigation works were made available for the education of the people who ought to be interested in dry farming, it is probable that five hundred million acres of land—perhaps more than that—could be reclaimed from its present unproductive and comparatively worthless state just as rapidly as settlers, whether native born, or immigrants from foreign countries, could be taken to it.—From John L. Cowan's "Dry Farmer—the Hope of the West" in the Century.

CAPUDINE CURES INDIGESTION and ACIDITY It acts immediately—you feel its effects in 10 minutes. You don't have to wait a week to know its good. It cures HEADACHES ALSO by removing the cause. 10 cents.

YOU CANNOT
CURE

all inflamed, ulcerated and catarrhal conditions of the mucous membrane such as nasal catarrh, uterine catarrh caused by feminine ills, sore throat, sore mouth or inflamed eyes by simply dosing the stomach.

But you surely can cure these stubborn affections by local treatment with

Paxtine Toilet Antiseptic

which destroys the disease germs, checks discharges, stops pain, and heals the inflammation and soreness.

Paxtine represents the most successful local treatment for feminine ills ever produced. Thousands of women testify to this fact. 50 cents at druggists.

Send for Free Trial Box
THE R. PAXTON CO., Boston, Mass.

The Tulane University OF LOUISIANA

NEW ORLEANS.

EDWIN B. CRAIGMEAD, L. L. D., Pres.

The Tulane University of Louisiana, founded in 1835 as the University of Louisiana, is the logical head of the entire system of public educational institutions of the State.

Full courses are offered in Languages, Sciences, Engineering, Law, Medicine. Splendid department for women in Newcomb College. Tulane makes leaders in all vocations. Its facilities for instruction in engineering are unsurpassed. Unexcelled opportunities for the study of Sugar and Industrial Chemistry. Many Scholarships in academic departments. Expenses low. Board and accommodations in Dormitories at low rates. Next session begins October 1st. Send for catalogue. Address

R. K. BRUFF, Secretary.

MONARCH STUMP PULLER Will Pull Stumps 4 Feet in Diameter. Guaranteed for 15 mnts. Catalog & Dlsc., address, Monarch Grubber Co. Lone Tree, Ia.

WINTER Wheat, 60 Bushels per acre. Catalogue and samples free. Salzer Seed Co., Box A. C., La Crosse, Wis.

Am. 34, 1906.

If afflicted with sore eyes, use Thompson's Eye Water

You Look Prematurely Old

Because of those ugly, grizzly, gray hairs. Use "LA CREOLE" HAIR RESTORER. Price, $1.00, Prepaid.

Stylish Clothing For Young Men.

Make up your mind to have the best suit possible this season, it must be smart, the very latest weave and color. You can have all these things if you get an I. & S. Bing Suit.

Latest Ideas in Furnishings

Our line for spring wear is now complete, the styles are decided and we are showing absolutely correct styles. New Dress Goods, New Waist Goods, New Hats, New Shirts, New Neckwear.

Spring Models in Footwear

See our new line of Star Brand Oxfords for men, women and children. Our stock is complete and the prices are right. Let us show you the goods.

J. C. JONES,

Clanton, - - Alabama.

Wouldn't You Like

BETTER WHISKIES FOR LESS MONEY?

than the kind youvl been getting? Then send your orders to us

THE BIG MAIL ORDER HOUSE

The house that sells nothing but the purest goods and guarantees every article it sells. If it's drugs or whiskies you want

WE CUT THE PRICE.

	Our Price.	Regular Price
Shehan's Canada Malt Whiskey	75	1 00
Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey	75	1 00
Weller's Pure Malt Whiskey	75	1 00
Mason's Old Kentucky Rye	50	75
Dan Patch Virginia Rye	60	1 00
Private Stock Virginia Rye	65	1 00
J. Martin's Five-year-old Virginia Rye	75	1 00
Asa Holt Rye Whiskey	75	1 00
Old Style Country Club Rye Whiskey	85	1 25
Richmond Club Virginia Rye	1 00	1 50
Stewart's Old Virginia Rye	1 25	2 00
Paul Jones Four Star Rye	84	1 50
Murray Hill Club	1 00	1 50
Hunter's Baltimore Rye	1 00	1 50
Golden Cream Rye	1 00	1 50
I. W. Harper Rye	85	1 50
Wilson Whiskey	1 00	1 50
J. M. Atherton bottled in bond	1 25	1 75
Mammoth Cave bottled in bond	1 50	2 00
Old Jordon bottled in bond	1 00	1 25
Green River, the whiskey without a headache	50	75
Old Shades Mountain Corn	75	1 00
Old Mountain Due Corn	65	1 00
Old Lincoln County	50	75
Old Holland Gin	75	1 00
Old Crown Gin	50	75
Old Peach or Apple Brandy	50	75
California Sherry or Port

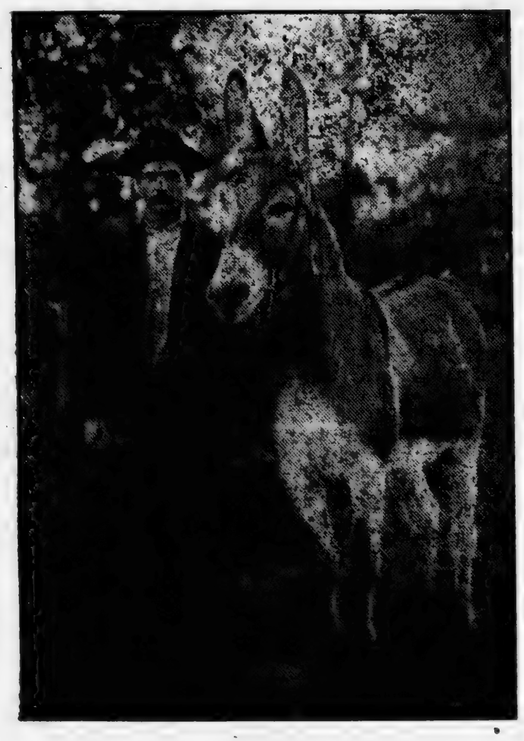
Mellow Old Liquors and Wines by the Gallon in Jugs.

	Per Gallon		Per Gallon
Old Sand Mountain Corn	$2.00	Old Mason's Pure Rye	$2.00
Old Mountain Due	3.00	Private Stock Virginia Rye	2.50
Old Tennessee	2.00	J. Martin's 5-year-old Va. Rye	3.00
Old Holland Gin	2.00	Old Style Country Club	3.40
Old Crown Gin	3.00	Old Lincoln County	2.50
Old Peach or Apple Brandy	2.00	Richmond Club Virginia Rye	4.00
Old California Port or Sherry	1.50	R. A. Stuart's Old Va. Rye	5.00

COLLIER DRUG COMPANY,

The Big Cut Rate Drug Store

2012 FIRST AVENUE, BIRMINGHAM, ALABAMA.



Imported Jack "LIJE"

Fee $8.00, Insured

Stands for service at his owners', JOHN THAMES, ½ mile East of Rocky Mount Church, Beat 1.

Governor Jelks Issues Home-Coming Proclamation

Governor W. D. Jelks has issued an official proclamation, proclaiming Alabama Home Coming Week, which will be held in Birmingham during the State Fair week. In his proclamation the governor embodies a warm invitation to all former Alabamians, wherever they may now be, to return to Alabama in October, meet old friends, see old places and observe the wonderful growth in prosperity which has come to the state. The proclamation of the governor is as follows:

"Whereas, in the years gone by many Alabamians have found homes in other states, and some beyond the confines and boundaries of any of the United States; and,

"Whereas, they must ever have a longing to look again upon old scenes and old faces and renew in actual association the sweet memories of other days, I am moved to extend these wanderers an invitation to come home.

"Therefore, they are invited and urgently requested to return to Alabama for the week beginning October 15, 1906, the days of which will be known as Home Coming Week.

"These self exiles will find the fields they knew more fruitful now; the once pine groves given over to cotton, corn and other cereals; the vast tracts of the then uncultivated soil responding handsomely to the touch of the tiller. They will find that we are making a price for pig iron for the world, and that steel is produced in large quantities, both industries comparatively new. They will find hives of industry, in the great mineral belt, undreamed of a few years ago, while a marvelous prosperity from border to border lights up every community and almost every home.

"Come home. You will find some old faces that will brighten at your presence. You will miss some other faces that have gone to a home beyond the power of this proclamation to reach. Tears for them!

"You have changed your allegiance, but not your affections. The sentiments of your younger years cannot be outgrown. Give them play and come back to the friends you left by the laving sea; along that middle stretch known as the black belt; come back to your friends of the hills. From side to side and end to end of the great state you will receive a welcome which shall be as full as are our abundant harvests, as gracious as is our sweet climate and as rich as are the warm impulses of our hearts.

"Since it is necessary to fix upon some central point for the main celebration, it is ordered that Birmingham shall be such point. It is suggested, however, that the local authorities prepare a Home Coming festival in their respective counties.

"In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and caused the great seal of the state of Alabama to be affixed, at the capitol at Montgomery, this, the 20th day of August, A. D. 1986. WILLIAM D. JELKS.

"By the Governor, E. R. McDAVID, Secretary of State."

Will Rebuild Valparaiso.

New York.—Juan Tonkin, a Chilean civil engineer, was is how in New York, said:

"In Valparaiso local and foreign interests are so great that it is absolutely certain that the city will be rebuilt. The financal burden of rehabilitation will not be thrown on Chile alone, but also on the numerous foreign interests., which include most of the nations of the world.

"Of the foreign interests I believe the English will be the heaviest losers, especially the many English fire insurance companies that suffered such great losses in the destruction of San Francisco. However, it must be kept in mind that Chile enjoys very high financial credit, especially in the London market, where her bonds are quoted at 99 1-2 per cent.

"The external debt of Chile is about $105,000,000, which has always been scrupulously served, and it takes only 12 per cent of the Chilean government's revenue to serve this debt. The Chilean state railway alone represents nearly as much as the external debt, while the salt peter lands represent nearly half as much."

Will Make Sure of Indictments.

Chicago, Ill.—In preparing the indictments upon which the Standard Oil Company is to be tried for accepting rebates, the government attorneys are making an especial effort to have the issue clear cut, and to that end a conference has been called for Wednesday. District Attorney Sullivan, of Cleveland, has been summoned, and in company with Assistant Attorney-General Ragin, Special Prosecutor Morrison and his assistants will examine each indictment carefully and endeavor to draw it so as to prevent it being quashed on a technicality.

In order to give the attorneys all the time needed both juries adjourned until Thursday morning, when it is believed they will make their reports to Judge Bethea, of the United States court.

Sugar Knocked Down.

San Francisco, Cal.—The examiner says:

"After five months' competition between the Western sugar refinery and the California and Hawaiian Sugar Refining Company the price of sugar has dropped from $5.10 to $4.20. In New York the price is $4.80, while at the Missouri river it is $5.00. The $4.30 price in the local market means the ruling figure for all the Pacific coast states. This figure is so low that the southern and other coast beet sugar makers refuse to sell here, and are shipping all their output to the Missouri river. Both the local refineries are also shipping to the Missouri river. Their fight, however, is to control the Pacific coast field.

"It is estimated the 85-cent reduction will affect 150,000,000 pounds and that there will be a reduction of from 27 to 30 cents per hundred pounds on 350,000,000 pounds."

Honolulu.—All efforts have so far failed to pull off the mail steamer Manchuria, stranded off Rabbit Island, on the north shore of Oahu, and a cable may be sent asking for tugs from San Francisco. At high tide another attempt will be made to haul the liner off the reef. It is probable the steamer Alameda may help in the efforts to get the stranded vessel into deep water, but her position is such as to give little hope for success.

Strike Ended.

Birmingham, Ala.—The miners' strike which was inaugurated at the coal mines of the four big furnace companies in this district July 25, 1904, as the result of a failure to agree on a wage scale, is at an end.

By popular vote the miners of the United Mine Workers of America, Alabama District No. 20, have so decided. While the exact vote could not be ascertained it was authoritatively announced by Edward Flynn, president, that the strike was at an end.

Mr. Flynn would not say when the new order would go into effect, but he declared that full instructions would be sent every local order.

New Lumber Plant.

Montgomery, Ala.—With the avowed purpose of establishing a large lumber plant in Montgomery, the Marbury & Speer Lumber Company filed a certificate of incorporation with Probate Judge J. B. Gaston.

The capital stock of the company is placed at $50,000, of which $12,500 has been subscribed by D. H. Marbury, Mrs. Kate Marbury and E. V. Speer, all of Marbury.

D. R. Marbury, who is president of the company, is designated as the agent to open a book of subscriptions to the stock at home in Marbury.

Conecuh County Officers.

Montgomery, Ala.—J. T. Gorman, state examiner, has filed reports with the governor on the officials of Conecuh county. The books and accounts of all the officials were found correct. The examination covered the offices of F. J. Dean, probate judge; S. L. Tisdale, circuit clerk; W. W. Pridgen, sheriff; G. M. Harper, superintendent of education; S. P. Dunn, tax assessor, and J. F. Fincher, ex-tax collector. All of these officials were commended by the examiner for their efficiency.

Gas Explosion.

Pittsburg, Pa.—Three men are dead, two are in a serious condition and nine others were rendered unconscious by a blow out of accumulated gas at the Eliza furnaces of the Jones & Laughlin Steel Company at Soho, this city. The men were engaged in dumping ore and coke into the furnace from the top, when there was an explosion of accumulated gas. Flames shot up and enveloped Andrew Marsley in the deadly fumes and he fell over unconscious. Two others who went to his assistance were rendered insensible.

Hot in Chicago.

Chicago, Ill.—One death and a number of prostrations as a result of heat were reported before noon Tuesday to the police department. The temperature at 9 o'clock, according to official figures, was 85 degrees.

Smelting Plant Burned.

Rapid City, S. D.—Fire of unknown origin started in the plant of the National Smelting Company, causing a loss of about $150,000, partially covered by insurance.

Bryan Coming Home.

Gibraltar.—William J. Bryan and his party boarded the North German Lloyd line steamer Princess Irene at 1:30 p. m. Tuesday. The steamer sailed for New York at 2 p. m.

Mr. Bryan expressed himself as being delighted with his tour, which closed with visits to places of interest "in and about the rock."

Thorsby, Alaba

Business Directory.

Commercial Club
OF THORSBY
DEFINITE and RELIABLE information furnished to parties who desire to locate in the South.

A. HORN
LICENSED PHARMACIST.
Drugs, Stationery and Toilet Articles.

City Bakery
BREAD, CAKES and PIES
of all kinds, fresh every day.
K. A. EKBLAD

A. M. Johnson
Groceries and Delicatessen

E. H. Adams
General Merchandise.

J. R. PARNELL
General Merchandise.

J. L. FOSS
Meat Market.

Thorsby Winery Co.
Lofthus & Brunberg, Props.

Thorsby Real Est
(INCORPORATED)
J. M. BARRETT, Pr
G. H. GERALD, Sec
G. C. MICHELSON, T

OLAF SCH
Watchmaker & Jewe
FRANZEN, ▪ BU
Full line of watches
etc. Repair work guar

A. Langville &
Blacksmith and Horseshoer
—DEALER IN—
WAGONS AND BUG

P. C. SMIT
Brown Leghorn Fow
Eggs.
BERKSHIRE P

The Thorsby
G. C. Michelson, P
Good Beds and M

J. J. Stanl
General Mercha

MRS. MARY R. RAS
General Merchand

J. BICE
Charcoal Ov

Cor. 2nd Ave and 7th St.

THE BIG STORE,

—Is at The Head of The Procession.—

Dry Goods, Clothing, Hats, Sh
FURNITURE,
COFFINS AND BURIAL NECESSIT

W. I. MULLINS,

Clanton. Alab

PETITION TO SELL LANDS FOR DIVISION.

In the Probate Court of Chilton County, Alabama, July 24th, 1906.

This day came Julia E. Cook, wife of J. W. Cook, and Carrie W. Martin, wife of G. Frank Martin, of Dallas and Bibb counties, Alabama, respectively, and have filed their joint petition, in writing, alleging that they are joint owners in certain real estate particularly described in said petition, lying and being in Chilton county, Alabama, with John T. Dungan, William R. Dungan and David B. Dungan, of Humboldt, Tennessee; Joseph A. Dungan, of Memphis, Tennessee; Lillie B. Williams, of Jackson, Tennessee; John A. McLeod, of Atlanta, Georgia; Robert M. McLeod, of the State of Texas; Carl McLeod, Bessie McLeod and Lilian McLeod, each of Elliott, Texas; Clark Sales, of Dallas, Texas; William Martin, Edward Martin and Jacob C. Vaughan, each of Bardwell, Kentucky, and Annie Belle O'Neal and Willie C. Gandy, each of Yale, Texas, alleging that each of said parties and persons are over the age of twenty-one years, and praying that said real estate described in their said petition be sold for partition and division, on the ground that the same cannot be equitably divided without a sale thereof.

It is ordered, that the 10th day of September, 1906, be appointed a day for hearing said petition, and that notice of the same be given to said non-residents of the State of Alabama, by publication for three successive weeks in The Union, a newspaper published at Clanton, in Chilton county, Alabama, and a copy of said notice be sent by mail, post paid, to each of said parties residing without the State of Alabama.

L. H. REYNOLDS,
8-9-06-3w Probate Judge.

PROGRAM

For Meeting of Second District ... ton County Association, to ... at Macedonia on the Fourth ... in August, 1906.

9 a. m. Devotional exercises ... H. Armstrong.

9:30. "Explain the Present ... of Pastors in the Service of C... —John Martin, Jackson Pa...

10. "The Duty of Church ... Pastor and Sunday School"—... J. T. Williams.

11. "Can a Preacher Under ... Existing Circumstances Be ... Pastor?"—W. H. Shaw, G. W. ...

1 p. m. "How Is the Best ... a Christian to Show His L... J. Fleming, J. S. Wright.

1:45. "What Relation Ought ... ist Between the Pastor and C... —James Franklin, Clint Vea...

2:30. "When Is the Best ... Call a Pastor, and Does No... nual Call of a Pastor Cause ... Confusion?"—P. G. Mans... Crumpton.

"How to Get the Best Results ... Get Church Members to Attend ... and Sunday School"—T. U. ...

The speeches will be ... with singing by the choir ... leaders as may be present. ... delegates from every church ... Second district; also invi... pondence from First district ... associations in reach. Sp... pastor and committee.

J. H. THOM...
J. W. ARMS...
M. C. CRI...

tf

FOR SHERIFF.

I hereby announce myself ... date for sheriff of Chilton ... ject to the action of the ... November election, 1906.

ROLLEST...

adv (tf)

T...

OL. IV.

LETON VS. GULLEDGE.

Document No. 1.

...as sent out by Mr. Gulledge ... weeks ago, thus showing ... thought he had the Democratic ... cinched.

A CHALLENGE.

Republican Nominee for Re... ative of Chilton County in t... Campaign, Whoever Yo... be:

By challenge you to joint dis... of the issues of the day ... nes and places as the exec... mmittees of our parties ma... on. I am not yet the nominee ... arty, but I know I am of an... people and I await their ver... pectfully.

F. A. GULLEDGE.

Document No. 2.

...aks for itself.

LETON ACCEPTS CHAL... LENGE.

A. Gulledge, Verbena, Ala...

Sir—I am now the nomi... ublican and Populist pa... county for representative in ... slature, as voiced by the pri... rimary held August 6, and I ... accept the challenge which y... assurance to issue six ... your nomination.

...ampaign committee will be ... within a few days and you ... notified accordingly in order ... , or your committee, may ... ...ter up with them and arrange ... joint discussion. Respectfully, J. OSMOND MIDDLETON.

Document No. 3.

...was written (?) by Mr. Gul... ...d printed in last week's Ban...

...GULLEDGE'S LETTER.

Verbena, Ala., Aug. 2..., 1906.

...D. Middleton, Clanton:

Sir—I note your letter with ... , published in The Union of ... 16, 1906.

...aving a ring backing my can... ...to say who should or ... who ... ...ot run as candidates in the ..., and being unhampered by the ...d collar of any man of set or ...d relying upon pure, conser... Democracy of that pattern ... by Thomas Jefferson, I sub... ...nd submit now, my lot to the ... and the challenge was issued ...ominee of the Republican con... ...ditioned upon my nomination... ...ttally I will have no campaign ...ee, except the people; my pa... the people and springs from ..., in advocacy of the people's ...wants and desires; its cam... ...ommittee, not mine, will, in due ...take the matter up with "your ...ee.

...ect to receive a good size vote ...ands of the Populists, who see ...ke advantage of the chance of ...hem to identify themselves ...e best and most conservative ... of the state. You, as a Re... ...having no plausible or rea... claim to their votes.

...claim your nomination from ...itical organizations, which rep... ...and stand for divergent ideals ...inciples. Therefore, the citi... Chilton county, to whom you ... your candidacy, are entitled ... what your platform is. Upon ...mory of governmental policy do ...t your claim to the votes of ...zens of Chilton county? I call ...u now to set forth in public ...he platform upon which you ...

...ll ask the Banner to publish ...ply this week, and if you will ...e in this request, next week ...us will ask the Banner and the ...to publish this letter or the ... correspondence.

...a physical dis...ility prevents ...meet you at appointments ar... by the campaign committee of ...ocratic party, and in the event ...enforced absence, I shall try ... some one in my stead. Yours

F. A. GULLEDGE.

Document No. 4.

Clanton, Ala., ...ug. 27, 1906.

A. Gulledge, Verbena, Ala.:

Your open letter, addressed to ... published in the Banner, has ...y attention. While as a repl... letter accepting your challenge, ...ighably impertinent, yet there ...tain observations in it to which ... direct attention.

... you lay stress on the fact ...ere is no ...ng backing your ...acy, to say who should or should ... as candidates in the primary ... do not recall that I have heard ...cific charge made that a "ring" ...cking your candidacy, but the ... that, after careful considera... ...seems that your candidacy is ... any backing of any kind or

, Alaba
Directory.

Thorsby Real Estat
(INCORPORATED)
J. M. BARRETT, Pres
G. H. GERALD, Sec.
G. C. MICHELSON, Tr

OLAF SCHI
Watchmaker & Jewe
FRANZEN, - SUR
Full line of watches
etc. Repair work guara

A. Langville &
Blacksmith and
Horseshoer
—DEALER IN—
WAGONS AND BUG

P. C. SMIT
Brown Leghorn Fowl
Eggs.
BERKSHIRE P

The Thorsby
G. C. Michelson, P
Good Beds and Mea

J. J. Stanl
General Merchan

MRS. MARY R. RASB
General Merchandi

J. BICE
Charcoal Ove

G STORE,
of The Procession.—
hing, Hats, Sho
ITURE,
RIAL NECESSITI
MULLINS,
Alaba

THE UNION.

EQUAL RIGHTS TO ALL; SPECIAL FAVORS TO NONE.

OL. IV. CLANTON, ALA., AUGUST 30 1906. NO. 23

LETON VS. GULLEDGE.

Document No. 1.
as sent out by Mr Gulledge weeks ago, thus showing ought he had the Democratic on cached:

A CHALLENGE.

Republican Nominee for Repntative of Chilton County in the Campaign. Whoever You
e
y challenge you to joint dis-of the issues of the day at and places as the execu mittees of our parties may
I am not yet the nominee
, but I know I am of an
and I await their verpectfully
F. A. GULLEDGE.

Document No. 2.
ks for itself

LETON ACCEPTS CHAL-LENGE.

Verbena, Ala.:
Sir—I am now the nominee of and Populist parties of representative in elected by the peo-August 6, and I
ange which you issue six weeks nomination.
campaign committee, will be within a few days and you notified accordingly in order your committee, may take up with them and arrange joint discussion. Respectfully,
J. OSMOND MIDDLETON.

Document No. 3.
was written (?) by Mr. Gul-and printed in last week's Ban-

L. GULLEDGE'S LETTER.

Verbena, Ala., Aug. 25, 1906.
D. Middleton, Clanton:
Sir—I note your letter with-published in The Union of 15, 1906.
During a ring backing my canto say who should or who not run as candidates in the and being unhampered by the or of any man or set of relying upon pure, conser Democracy of that pattern by Thomas Jefferson, I suband submit now, my lot to the
and the challenge was issued chance of the Republican com conditioned upon my nomination.
Frankly I will have no campaign to make except the people; my par-the people and springs from in advocacy of the people's and desires; its cam-nation, not mine, will, in due the matter up with "your"

to receive a good size vote ands of true Populists, who see hopelessness of the chance of to identify themselves and most conservative of the state. You, as a Re-ing no plausible or rea-votes.
nomination from ations, which rep
and for divergent ideals
Therefore, the citi-county, to whom you candidacy, are entitled what your platform is. Upon governmental policy do claim to the votes of ton county? I call now to set forth in public platform upon which you ask the Banner to publish this week, and if you will in this request, next week will ask the Banner and the to publish this letter or the correspondence.

physical disability prevents meet you at appointments ar-by the campaign committee of cratic party, and in the event enforced absence, I shall try some one in my stead. Yours
F. A. GULLEDGE.

Document No. 4.
Clanton, Ala., Aug. 27, 1906.
A. Gulledge, Verbena, Ala.:
Your open letter, addressed to and published in the Banner, has my attention. While as a reply letter accepting your challenge, palpably impertinent, yet there certain observations in it to which direct attention.
, you say stress on the fact there is no ring backing your idacy to say who should or should run as candidates in the primary.
do not recall that I have heard ecific charge made that a "ring" backing your candidacy, but the
is that, after careful considerait seems that your candidacy is not any backing of any kind or description, except it be your secretary, William M. Adams, Esq., of Clanton, and Martin Sorrell, of Thorsby.

Second, you say that you are unhampered by the "localized" collar of any man, or set of men. Now, Mr. Gulledge, just as a matter of information, tell us what kind of "collar" you wore when you were supporting the gold standard candidate for Congress and habnobbing with the Republican candidate, W. F. Aldrich, against the regular Democratic candidate. This is the time, you will remember, when your services to the Republican party are alleged to have been rewarded by giving you the appointment of postmaster at Verbena. It was by resorting to such tactics as this that you were able to defeat a worthy young woman who was an applicant for the place. Tell us about that "collar," Mr. Gulledge!

Third, you state that your challenge was issued conditioned upon your nomination. Then common sense, to say nothing of propriety, would have dictated that you wait until you had been nominated instead of making the challenge six weeks prior to your nomination. It smacks mightily of the "ring." Why did you direct the call of the mass meeting, and then as soon as Hawthorne (poor Hawthorne!) had been driven from the field have your crowd recede from that position? It savors strongly of the "ring." The fact is, Mr. Gulledge, you have formed the most consummate "ring" in the history of the politics of this county, and you are the bell-wether of the gang.

Fourth, you say that your campaign committee will be the "people." If I mistake not, you base your claims to the suffrages of the people of this county largely upon the fact that you are a man of "practical" ideas, and schooled in the "practical utility" of things. This being true, you ought to know, if you are sincere when you say the people constitute your campaign committee, that it would be impracticable to arrange the joint discussions unless your representatives were narrowed down to a smaller number to confer with my committee; and to say that the people of this county are backing you in your political ambitions is the most absurdly foolish assertion I have heard of even you making during the campaign.

Fifth, you boast that your party is "of the people, and springs from principle." If this be true, you must feel mightily out of place, for the only time in the last forty years that the Democratic party ever even approached principle was, when, under the leadership of Bryan, it endeavored to make a fight against trusts and corporate greed, and then, I am informed, you bolted the party and assisted in Bryan's defeat by supporting Palmer and Buckner. Your assertions are easily made, but they wither in the light of your political history.

Sixth, you say you expect to receive a good vote at the hands of the Populists. This is an extravagant assertion for you to make. In view of the fact that you can't control the strength of your own party. But then, no doubt, you are old enough to understand the difference between "expectations" and "realizations." The Populists of Chilton county have never yet learned to lick the hand that smites them: and, pray, what special faction of your party would you advise them to join? I suppose you would like for them to join Gulledge.

Seventh, you call upon me to set forth in public print the platform upon which I stand. Democratic candidates have a kind of mania for "platforms"; the result is that each one has a "platform" of his own, and you seem to be visibly affected by the craze. I stand upon the broad platform of the party to which I adhere—the platform of that splendid party which, for forty long years, with one or two lamentable exceptions, has shaped the destiny of this great country. When it comes to questions of legislation, of course, I have ideas of my own, but when it comes to matters affecting Chilton county, you may rest assured that I will be governed entirely by the will of the majority of the people. If you were one-tenth as smart as you think you are, you would not have to make this demand. If you will refresh your recollection, you will recall that I gave you my platform when we met at New Cedron, in Beat 6, and again in Beat 8, at Pilgrim's Rest, where, in the presence of a thousand people, I made you come out from behind your treacherous memory and repeat a plank in your "platform" which you had inadvertently (?) omitted. It was the plank in which you pledge the people that, if you are elected to the legislature, you will pass a law making it a crime for one candidate to utter, or give circulation to, any remarks derogatory of his opponent, unless made in the presence of that opponent. It was at this same place, you will remember, that I told the people of the earnestness with which you repeated this plank, and that you said that, as you wrote this plank, "each stroke of the pen was mingled with your heart's blood," and it was here that I branded you with inconsistency in not living up to that plank, and I told the people that at the time you were reading the plank at New Cedron you had, with the deliberate intent to assassinate my character, placed a foul libel against me in cold print and put it in a thousand homes in Chilton county.

I again make the charge that you do not stand upon your own platform; I charge you, sir, with taking a position and receding from it, or attempting to do so. And you are the most phenomenal political acrobat in the history of this county. You launched your campaign as the "farmer" candidate, and realizing that the people of this county would not be duped by any such rot, you begun to pose as the "practical business man," and now the Banner commends you to the people of this county as the "gentleman of leisure." You have in your platform a plank favoring the settling of questions of local legislation—"such as stock law"—by a vote of the people to be affected thereby. Didn't you know when you wrote your platform that this question had been settled by the fundamental law of Alabama. If you are ignorant of our fundamental laws you would be the less efficient legislator. If you knew the question was settled, then your motive in inserting this plank in your platform must have been sinister. I charge you, sir, with inserting this plank in your platform for the purpose of trying to cover your connection with that infamous piece of legislation which thrust stock law upon the people of Beat 5 against the will of an overwhelming majority. You may have your friends sign a statement saying that you did not visit the legislature during that time, but I made you admit at New Cedron, in the presence of six hundred people, that you contributed twenty-five dollars to have the law passed.

You refer contemptuously to the Populist and Republican "combine." You may look with scorn upon them if you see fit, but, sir, they are the very backbone of this county. They are the brave men who, for twenty long years, have battled against such infamous practices as I have just referred to. They are men who stand for liberty and justice; men whose heart beats are responsive to every noble sentiment. The Roncesvalles Pass, where fell before the opposing lance the harnessed chivalry of Spain looked not upon a better or a braver band! You may refer to them with scorn if you will, but I will deem it the proudest moment of my life if I should be elected to represent them in the legislative halls of Alabama.

You say that you will meet me in joint discussion unless physical disability prevents, in which event you will have some one in your stead. I demand that you live up to your challenge; I demand that you meet me on every stump in Chilton county. I shall expect you to fill your engagements and to do your own speaking so far as the joint discussions are concerned. I am going to do my own speaking in this campaign, and if I am elected to the legislature I will represent the people in person and not by proxy. You complain of feeble health, but you are continually scouting around over this county and "reading my platform" wherever you are able to "corner" two or three fellow citizens. The same day that your letter was written and mailed here at Clanton you were in the western part of the county boasting that you were bound to be elected because there was no one running against you. Now, if I am so insignificant as this, why is it, sir, that since I have accepted your challenge, and invite you to come into the open and get the issues squarely before the people, you become suddenly sick, complain that the disease from which you suffer won't permit you to stand and you talk of getting some one to meet me in your stead? The fact is Mr. Gulledge, I am inclined to think when it comes to politics, you are a great big bluff. You remind me of the story I have heard told of the wealthy merchant and the humble well digger. The merchant, who had grown rich off the people by selling them goods at an exorbitant price and by lending money at a usurious interest, had an unwritten law (characteristic of the czar) that if any of his customers fell behind with their accounts he would give them a flogging. The poor well digger was one of the unfortunates who couldn't pay his account; the merchant took him back to his office, and there, surrounded by his son and son-in-law, he told the well digger of the inevitable—that he must take a flogging—and as he reached for his raw-hide, the well digger, with a look of despair on his face remarked, as he drew from his bosom something that resembled dynamite "Well, I guess we can all go to hell together." "For God's sake, don't," exclaimed the merchant, and in terror the Shylocks took to their heels, leaving the well digger in full control of the situation, and who ever afterwards laughed about the fact of routing the whole gang with a "raw potato." There is no doubt but what you started into this campaign with the "flogging" idea, but you have evidently scented dynamite somewhere. I think it possible to take a few "raw" facts of your history and run you out of the campaign.

I again demand that you meet me in joint discussion on every stump in this county, and then "Lay on, McDuff, and damned be he who first cries hold, enough." Respectfully,

J. OSMOND MIDDLETON.

The Banner has agreed to print these articles. Look for them.

A LOT IN LIFE.

Country boys may have their acres,
We don't care a jot;
Just for simple boiled down pleasure
Take the vacant lot.

It has space to lasso cattle
On the rolling plain,
Space enough to be a pirate
On the Spanish Main.

Room enough to scalp an Injun
In the forest gloom,
Room enough to lick an army
To a sudden doom.

Howsoever life is builded
Close in every spot,
Hope the years will leave for playing
Just a vacant lot.

—Brooklyn Life.

FLASHES OF FUN.

Lawson—"So old Moneybags married his stenographer?" Dawson—"Yes—and now he keeps right on dictating to her, just the same."—Somerville Journal.

Bill—"He used to be a law-breaker, but he's changed now." Jill—"Keeps within the law, now, does he?" "Oh, yes; keeps within the jail, too."—Yonkers Statesman.

The Bride—"My husband loves me better than he loves his life." Her Friend—"Did he tell you so?" The Bride—"N-no, but he eats the things I cook."—Chicago Daily News.

"Though I'm no philanthropist,"
The swindler said, "it's true
I'm always on the lookout for
The good things I can do."
—Philadelphia Ledger.

"How many times did you vote in the last election, Uncle Jim?" "Well, suh, I didn't kep no count, but atter I'd been dar six hours de votin' tickets run out!"—Atlanta Constitution.

"There, Josiah!" said Mrs. Fodderschucks, on a visit to the city. "There's a sign that says 'Dermatologist.' Now, when our parrot dies we'll know where to send her to git her stuffed."—Cleveland Leader.

"Bliggins says he values his opinions because they are the children of his brain." "Well, in that case, he should realize the impropriety of trying to get everybody he meets to adopt them."—Washington Star.

The Friend—"There'll be something in the case for you, I suppose?" The Lawyer—"This isn't exactly professional, but I'm free to observe that there'll be nothing in it for anybody else."—Cleveland Plain-Dealer.

Mistress—"I am sorry to trouble you, Bridget, but my husband wants his breakfast to-morrow at 5.30." Cook—"Oh, it won't be no throuble at all, mum, if he don't knock nothin' over whoile cookin' it an' wake me up."—Judge.

A thoughtful hostess gave a children's party, and decided it would be healthier to serve only mineral waters. One little girl tasted of her carbonic and laid the glass down. "What's the matter, dear? Don't you like charged water?" "No, ma'am. Please may I have some water that you've paid for?"—Life.

Of all sad words that come to hand,
The saddest are these, "Dear sir, you're canned."
—Chapparal.

"It is very seldom that they serve actors with five different kinds of vegetables," whispered the short comedian in the quick lunch room. "Oh, I don't know," sighed the lanky tragedian. "One time I was served with twenty-five different kinds of vegetables." "You don't say? In what hotel?" "No hotel. The audience supplied them."—Chicago Daily News.

"Now," said the doctor, "you'll have to accustom yourself to one cigar after meals." "O! doctor," said the patient; "that's pretty hard ——" "Tut, tut! After a time you'll find it easy to give up even the cigars after meals." "But I'm sure I'll be giving up the meals after the cigars. I've never smoked, you know."—Philadelphia Press.

Moscow.—Twelve armed men held up the Ivanovo passenger train about fifty miles from here and robbed a railway cashier of $2,500 and escaped. Subsequently two of the robbers were arrested.

$5,000 DAMAGES ASKED.

Mr. E. B. Fletcher, through his attorney, J. Osmond Middleton, has filed in the Circuit Court of Chilton county a suit against I. N. Langston, of Jemison. In the complaint it is alleged that that Mr. Langston has alienated the affection of Fletcher's wife, for which Fletcher seeks to recover five thousand dollars damages. Owing to the nature of the evidence and the vigorous manner in which Mr. Middleton prosecutes all of his cases, this suit promises to be quite interesting and sensational.

PROGRAM OF THE DISTRICT SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION

Of the First District of Chilton County, to Be Held at the Jemison Baptist Church on the Fourth Sunday in September, 1906.

9:30 a. m. Devotional exercises, conducted by W. H. Conway.

9:45 a. m. Welcome address, J. A. Caddell.

9:50 a. m. Response, John Bledsoe.

9:55 a. m. Music.

10 a. m. "The Growth of the Sunday School Work," J. H. Anderson and W. H. Conway.

10:30 a. m. Music.

10:40 a. m. "The Sunday School as a Character Builder."

11 a. m. "The Influence of the Sunday School for Good," Judge L. H. Reynolds and others.

11:30 a. m. "Reasons Why Adults Do Not Attend Sunday School," Rev. W. J. Parrish and E. G. Cofer.

2 p. m. Song and prayer; song.

2:10 p. m. "The Ideal Sunday School Teacher." Papers by Miss Nelia Johnson, Miss Delphia Conway and Miss Pearl Meroney.

2:40 p. m. "Problems in My School," J. W. F. Garner, G. W. Gothard, J. A Skaggs and others.

3:10 p. m. Music.

3:20 p. m. "Relation of the Sunday School to the Church," C. L. Glasscock, J. P. Gentry and others.

3:50 p. m. Dismission.

tf COMMITTEE.

The State of Alabama, Chilton County.
Probate Court, August 22, 1906.

On this, the 22d day of August, 1906 came J. M. Nix, guardian of said minor, and filed his petition in writing and under oath, praying for an order and proceeding to sell certain lands described in said petition, property of the said minor, for reinvestment. It is ordered that said petition be set down for hearing on the 15th day of September, 1906, and that notice of said petition, together with the said day for hearing the same, be given by publication for three successive weeks in The Union, a newspaper published in this county, calling upon all persons interested to appear and contest the same, if they think proper. It is further ordered that said minor also have notice of this proceeding and of the day set for hearing the, same, by citation, to be personally served on her ten days before said day appointed for said hearing. It is further ordered that A. C. Smith, who is, in the opinion of the court, a suitable and competent person therefor, and who is not of kin or of counsel to the petitioner, be and he is hereby appointed guardian ad litem to represent and protect the interests of said minor in the matter of said proceeding, and that he have notice of his said appointment.

L. H. REYNOLDS,
8-30-06-3wks Judge of Probate.

Notice No. 20795.

NOTICE FOR PUBLICATION.

Department of the Interior,
Land Office at Montgomery, Ala.,
August 28, 1906.

Notice is hereby given that William F. Armstrong, of Clear Creek, Ala., has filed notice of his intention to make final five years proof in support of his claim, viz., homestead entry No. 33166, made September 6, 1899, for the southeast quarter of the southwest quarter, section 22, township 24 north, range 13 east, and that said proof will be made before clerk of Circuit Court at Clanton, Ala., on November 1, 1906.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of the land, viz.: Joseph M. Broadhead, W. Rufus Holditch, William M. Aldritch, Lee Busby, all of Calera, Ala.

ROBERT D. JOHNSTON,
3-30-06 tf Register.

MONEY TO LOAN

On real estate. Call or write me at my abiding place with Mr. G. O. Foshee, one mile northeast of Clanton, R. F. D. No. 1. Come during banking hours, as I keep my money in the bank.

tf JAMES GLASS.

The boatswain's pipe, which has been displaced in the British navy by bugle calls, is to be restored to favor.

Professional Cards.

William M. Adams,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW
OFFICE; Room 1, Court House.
"Practices in all Courts
Long time loans negotiated on improved Farm Lands.
CLANTON, - - - ALA.

J. EARLE GOWAN,
DENTIST.
Office in Kicker Building
CLANTON, ALABAMA.

A. C. Smith,
Attorney-at-Law
Practice in All Courts
Office 6th St. opp. Court House
CLANTON, :-: ALABAMA.

N. S. JOHNSON, M. D.
PHYSICIAN & SURGEON
Office at Residence
CLANTON, ALABAMA.

L. V. STABLER, M. D
Physician & Surgeon
Office Over Horn's Drug Store
Thorsby, - - Alabama

J. Osmond Middleton,
Attorney-at-Law
Practice in all Courts.
Office 6th St. Court House
CLANTON, -:- ALABAMA

DR. E. G. HYMAN
DENTIST
Office in Tipton Mullins' Building
CLANTON

H. C. Junkerman
DENTIST
OFFICE: Franzen Building
Thorsby, Alabama.

G. H. GERALD,
NOTARY PUBLIC
Office at Thorsby Inn.
Deeds, Mortgages, Affidavits and other papers carefully made out.

I. S. Gerald, Notary Public
AT THORSBY SAVINGS BANK.

FREE
to Readers of
THE UNION

To everyone who sends us $1.00 for a year's subscription to THE UNION, new subscriber or renewal, we will give as a premium absolutely FREE,

A Year's Subscription
to
The Southern Ruralist

We have examined the Southern Ruralist and consider it to be the best and most practical farm paper published in the South, and it just suits this locality. Drop by The Union Office when you are in town and see a copy of the Ruralist. It will mean dollars in your pocket to read this paper with The Union for a year. tf.

60 YEARS' EXPERIENCE
PATENTS
TRADE MARKS
DESIGNS
COPYRIGHTS &c.
Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. HANDBOOK on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents. Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the Scientific American.
A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.
MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York
Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

LAND FOR SALE.

Eighty acres land in Beat 10, close to Cooper's. For sale cheap. Call on or address L. H. GENTRY,
Mt. Creek, Ala.
tf R. F. D. No. 2.

PROGRAM

For Meeting of Second District ... ton County Association, to ... at Macedonia on the Fourth ... in August, 1906.

9 a. m. Devotional exercis... H. Armstrong.

9:30. "Explain the Present ... of Pastors in the Service of C... —John Martin, Jackson Palmer.

10. "The Duty of Churches ... Pastor and Sunday School"—R... J. T. Williams.

11. "Can a Preacher Under ... Existing Circumstances Be a ... Pastor?"—W. H. Shaw, G. W. G...

1 p. m. "How Is the Best ... a Christian to Show His Love ... J. Fleming, J. S. Wright.

1:45. "What Relation Ought ... ist Between the Pastor and C... —James Franklin, Clint Veasey.

2:30. "When Is the Best ... Call a Pastor, and Does Not ... nual Call of a Pastor Cause C... Confusion?"—P. G. Manes, ... Crumpton.

Get Church Members to Attend ... and Sunday School"—T. U. C...

The speeches will be limited ... with singing by the choir ... leaders as may be present. ... delegates from every church ... Second district; also invite ... pondence from First district ... associations in reach. Signed:

Pastor and committee.
J. H. THOMAS,
J. W. ARMSTR...
tf M. C. CRUMP...

FOR SHERIFF.

I hereby announce myself ... date for sheriff of Chilton ... ject to the action of the ... November election, 1906.

ROLLEFFE ...
adv (tf)

FARM AND GARDEN

THE ORCHARD FROM START TO FINISH.

The following paragraphs represent the best thoughts of many writers on this subject, thus forming a consensus of opinion regarding the establishment of a successful orchard:

There are more failures in tree planting without a successful man at the back of it.

You cannot make a thoroughbred out of a scrub, either in animals, plants or trees.

A tree should have plenty of life and vigor at the start, in order to make a fair growth the first season.

A good body and a poor head answer about the same purpose on a tree as on a man.

There are more failures in tree planting from failure of the planter than from any other cause.

My advice to a man contemplating the planting of an orchard is not to begin unless he is confident that he will do his part for the next ten years.

Don't select a spot that is good for nothing else, but arrange to have something for your trees to live on after they are planted.

The trees should be young and thrifty, preferably not over two years old.

The transplanting should be done in a careful manner, and the soil well packed around the roots without injuring them.

A mulch around each tree will help it the first season. A few forkfuls of old strawy manure will answer.

After setting, each shoot should be cut back to two buds, and then annually trimmed, cultivated, fertilized, and protected from insects.

The prime essentials to successful tree planting are common sense, industry, perseverance and faith.

Get your trees direct from some reliable nursery. You will thus save half the traveling tree agent's price, and will stand a far better chance of getting what you order.

A mistake in varieties will be a serious one, because you will be a long time in finding it out, and then cannot remedy it.

Ascertain what varieties are most successful in your locality, and take the advice of those having experience under your conditions. At the same time try some new ones which have not yet been tested there.

Keep grass and weeds cleared away in fall so there will be no shelter for mice in winter.

The greatest objection to setting apple trees along fences and walls, and around your fields, is the great liability of their being destroyed by mice which are thus harbored and work under the snow banks in winter.

A mixture of soot, lime, and sulphur, made into paste and rubbed on the tree will act as a preventive of damage by mice, rabbits and borers.

An emulsion of kerosene oil will at least check all kinds of bark, louse and scale, and is safer to apply before the buds start.

An "ounce of prevention" is the best remedy for borers. The way to get them out is never to let them get in. Dig all loose earth and sod away from the base of the tree in early spring, and then paint the trunk with something. Cement and skimmed milk, lime whitewash, whale oil soap, all are good.

To "him that overcometh" shall go the profits naturally belonging to him who neglects and fails.—I. F. T., in Green's Fruit Grower.

THE THINNING OUT PROCESS.

Raising roosters doesn't pay. The pullets are what we are after—or should be—and we should bend our efforts to raise as many, and as fine pullets as we possibly can. This idea is timely now, for, in most all flocks there are at this time about fifty per cent of the young cockerels flying and scrapping about, and eating their heads off. Now, a pullet won't do this, for she will pay it all back, with a goodly profit as soon as she reaches the laying age. But, the roosters, eat and grow, and grow lanky and muscular and stringy, and when they arrive at eight months of age they represent very little, if indeed, any more at all, than they did at eight weeks in the way of profit. Besides, some die before maturity, and are thereby a total loss, although they passed the frying size in safety. The proper thing to do now, is to apply the thinning out process, and get rid of all the roosters, young and old, but a very few of the finest. They will bring quite as much now as later, and by disposing of them now, a world of work and worry goes with them, while a season of peace and thrift and growth for the pullets and hens is inaugurated. Let the early hatched and the late ones alike, be disposed of, and push the pullets to the front. It is a move that one never regrets.—H. B. Greer.

IMPROVEMENT OF POOR PLACES.

It is characteristic of nearly every farm to contain certain places not relatively as fertile as other parts of the farm. In the meadows will be found, more or less, patches of grass that are very thin and short. The sickly growth is usually to be accounted for only by the poor quality of the soil. In the wheat and pasture field, however, similar patches may occur, and even the corn fields are not exempt from them. Occasionally those are caused by some temporary neglect or trouble. Insects may have been to blame for them, and also lack of proper cultivation. Birds, too, will sometimes pick up the seeds before they have changed into a plant. Such defects, coming unexpectedly, cannot always be prevented. But when the cause is permanent in the soil or comes through lack of cultivation, the entire fault then lies with the method of farming, and is capable of being remedied. Frequently in a good, loamy, rich soil there is a sandy patch that will not produce a good crop of grain. Truth to tell there may be a place a dozen feet in diameter destitute of any fertilizing elements, while all around it the soil is rich in such ingredients. This is due to the fact that the washing and running of water are quite likely to take all of the plant food out of a sandy patch. Accordingly, it is well in autumn to spread such a place over with muck or manure and mix the whole up thoroughly, and when spring arrives treat it in the same manner again. Muck and barnyard manure, thus applied, thicken and enrich the soil, and lay the foundation for commercial fertilizers if their use is desired afterwards. A little attention like this will bring barren places up to the standard of the rest of the field, and their cultivation no longer be in vain. Fred. O. Sibley., in Agricultural Epitomist.

RELIEVING CHOCKED COWS.

During the fall of the year, if the apple crop is abundant, more or less cows, by feeding in orchards and along fences where windfalls are found, are pretty sure to get chocked. Sometimes they suffer no very serious effects therefrom, but as a rule the sooner they get help the better. Of what should the treatment consist? That depends on circumstances. In case the unfortunate is not too badly chocked, it may be possible to afford her relief by pouring a little oil or melted lard in the throat. The quickest way, however, is to place a block of wood on one side of the throat, where the apple is, and, holding it firmly, strike on the other side with a wooden mallet on the apple. It is thus possible to crush the obstruction without seriously hurting the cow. This method failing, take, as a last resort—that is if the animal appears in danger of expiring—a sharp knife and deliberately cut down onto the apple through the skin and gullet; whereupon, remove it through the opening. Or, if it is too firmly lodged to admit of this, or even be pushed down, cut it in pieces and so take it out through the aperture. The wound may then be easily closed by drawing the skin over the cut and tying it in two or three places. This is best done by passing a waxed thread through the edges with a curved needle, such as is used by surgeons. Fred O. Sibley.

THE USE OF LIME.

No general rule can be laid down for the use of lime; for in one soil it may act in one way, while in another, even on the same farm, it may act in a different manner. The reaction of lime on the various constituents of the ground are very many and very different and one reason why chemistry has not been more effectually brought to bear in farming is that people lose sight of the fact that slight changes in circumstances may wholly change the results of any given mode of treating the soil. As an instance of the effect of lime on some lands, a friend of mine in Salem county, N. J., put 1,000 bushels on a bog meadow. It produced magnificently for many years. The same amount on a common upland would have ruined it. Lime cannot properly be called a manure, inasmuch as plants contain comparatively little of this mineral. The beneficial effects of lime results from its chemical and mechanical action upon the soil. In soils rich in organic matter are found various acids which have a strong affinity for ammonia and generally exist in combination therewith; by adding lime, a stronger alkali, the ammonia is expelled and is thus made available to plants. In other cases, as for instance in land recently drained, the acids may exert a positively injurious action upon plants and in these cases the lime, by simply neutralizing the acids, benefits the soil.—Ella M. Hess, of Merrick, L. I., in The Epitomist.

THE NECESSITY OF WATER.

Milk is eighty-seven per cent. water when there has been no assistance from the pump. By this we can readily see how necessary it is to have plenty of good pure water for the cows. When there is a lack of this necessity, how can we expect the cows to give a large quantity of milk when there is a lack of the material from which they make eighty-seven per cent. of the milk with? The old adage that "you cannot get blood from a stone" applies equally well to the cows, and the dairyman should always bear it in mind. —Witness

The Supreme Court in Berlin has decided that an editor can be sent to jail for publishing an article speaking disrespectfully of the ancestors of a king.

NEW YORK AS SEEN BY A DIXIE GIRL.

One of "Seventeen Most Popular" of the South Gives Her Impressions—Hurry in Work and Play—Even the Rocky Island is Clamped Down With Steel to Keep It From Running Away to Sea—Says Women Look Hard—Admires Kitchen in Great Hotel, But Yearns For a Little Corn Pone or Beaten Biscuit.

By KATHERINE ROBERTSON.

How New York hurries; hurries in work, hurries in play! There is something electric about the very air which makes one move the faster! When I get back to Chattanooga I shall find myself running across the streets and hurrying out of the cars as though all the world depended on my getting from one block to another. I know that I shall. The thing which has impressed us girls who have come up from the South to spend two weeks here is the fact that so many persons in New York do not seem to have anything else to do but to hurry just as fast as ever they can—doing nothing. How is it that you all find so much time to play while pretending that you are so very, very busy?

One of the first impressions which this great city made upon me with its noise, its confusion, its scurrying backward and forward, its din of bells and whistles and its roar of wheels, was that in spite of all their appearance of being so occupied many had nothing to do but to play. But then New York never really goes to bed. People are toiling when others play and playing when others work. Somebody always has a holiday and many are at their tasks when their neighbors are up in the roof gardens.

All Classes Have Play Time.

Of course, I know that somebody really does work, but when? At midday, in the afternoon, in the evening, at any hour of the day or night you go to places of amusement, you sit in the restaurants—at luncheon, breakfast, tea, dinner, supper. It certainly does seem to me that there are no three meals a day here, for there are so many persons who have nothing else to do but to eat at their leisure at all hours and to look out upon the streets, where thousands come and go, just as though they were intended to run up and down that way forever and ever.

Do you know that there is something fascinating about this city of yours? Of course you must know it, or you would not stay here and keep settling here year after year. I wonder how it is possible for so many to find a place to live on this little, rocky island, all clamped down with steel and weighted down with big masses of stone as though you were afraid that the very ground would hurry away from under your feet and go galloping out to sea, playing to be hard at work.

But you don't labor in this town as they do down South—as far as length of time is concerned, at least. In New York the people squeeze all their work into a few hours, and then away their go in their cars and automobiles, hastening to the country, hurrying to the theatres and running toward the beaches. All classes have time to play, for in the parks I see laborers and their families taking life as easy as a New York man can and having such a good time. It isn't any wonder that the first thing that a stranger asks of New York is, "When do you work?"

New York Men Chivalrous.

Do you know that before I came here I heard much about the coldness and exclusiveness of New York people, and I was not prepared to like them at all. Well, they do have that constrained air about them, but it is all an affectation. They don't mean it. At heart they are kindly, polite and attentive.

And the men! Oh, I do like the New York men. They are the very soul of chivalry; they are courteous; they never presume; they take the greatest pleasure in doing any service. They are always so respectful and attentive, yet when there is any fun and any gayety they enter into it all with such spirit. They stop at nothing. They have such an air of knowing all about life; their manners are perfect; they are so bright and up to date, and their conversation is always interesting and entertaining. You hear of the chivalry of the Southern people, but those in New York know better how to be chivalrous. Here in New York a girl would soon forget how to do her own "toting."

Now, about the women? I'm afraid that I ought not to write this, but I must say that those whom I have seen impress me as very artificial. Compared to the women whom I have seen in the South, they do not seem to be sincere. But how they do dress! What style and carriage they have! How well they wear their clothes, and what an air of distinction! A New York woman would be known anywhere.

Hard Look About the Mouth.

The expression of the faces of New York women, although I cannot exactly describe it, is something which one is not likely to forget. Well—I may as well say it—they have a hard look around the mouth and under the eyes, and I have not seen many of them who looked really happy. I think that one coming from the West or South might learn in two or three months to dress like the women of New York, and probably in a year or so she would get that same expression. It is something that one seems to feel, but it is hard to define or describe. I don't know that I care for it, and would not care to have my friends look that way.

It is very interesting to watch thousands of faces which you have never seen before and will never see again. It is different from some of the little towns in the South that I know, where you know everybody and everybody knows you, and loves you. Is it not a wonderful study in human nature? I rather like it.

How you New Yorkers have reduced living to a science! You certainly do know how to live. The city is so spick and span and smart. You can see it in the hotels, little and big, where there is always such system and such a neat and expeditious way of doing things. Why, the housekeeping of these great inns of yours is just marvellous. They took us through the Waldorf-Astoria the other night from cellar to roof garden. The kitchen was certainly a delight. Everything was shining and bright. I saw them making little automobiles out of almond paste and ice cream and nesselrode pudding, but they didn't have any corn pone or any beaten biscuit in the whole house.

No Green Anywhere.

How big and clean and shiny the whole city is with its tall skyscrapers without a speck on them, just as though they were dusted every morning, and the great apartment houses which look as if they were washed all over every night!

But how close together you all live! Down South we like to have large lawns and here you haven't anything like that, not even the Vanderbilts. Even Mr. Morgan has only a tree or two.

You scarcely have anything green around the houses to give your eyes a rest. We girls like to get out in the yard under the trees, where we can have tea and talk.

New York is a wonderful place, and sometimes I feel that if I had a great deal of money I would like to live here for a while, and then again I am not so very sure of it. All the same, I must say that it certainly is a charming locality.—New York Herald.

IN OLD WAR DAYS.

How the Great Struggle Made Business For the Bucksport Stage.

If one wants to hear marvellous tales concerning stage driving in old times he should go to Bucksport and secure talks with some of the old chaps who can remember back to the days of the Civil War. Then, as now, Bucksport was "eighteen miles from everywhere"—from Bangor, Belfast, Castine, Ellsworth and several other smaller places. Stages left the old Robinson House in processions every day.

Some of those old drivers were remarkable men, skilled in handling the "ribbons," very popular with their patrons and heroic in their labors to be on time under every condition of weather. The names of these men would fill considerable space in a newspaper. Most of them are dead now, but they are not forgotten.

There is another aspect of stage driving during the Civil War times, which no one has recorded as yet—the great traffic which was carried on by hackmen and stages in carrying persons who were anxious to get away to New Brunswick as soon and as quietly as possible. The demand for soldiers was urgent, because the needs of the nation were great. Many young men who were physically able to serve in the ranks did not have a liking for the job, and sooner than argue the case, they sought rest and seclusion under her Majesty's flag, even as many vessels owners did for their property, which was exposed to the ravages of Confederate privateers.

Not all of these young men who sought New Brunswick for safety were residents of Maine by any means. Many came to Bucksport by the Boston boat, and went inland on stage or on foot or by private conveyance, as their finances dictated. If the stories of those refugees could be told, much of interest would be revealed.

Every stage driver knew the "skedaddlers," as they were called, and all paid heavy tribute to powers that controlled the routes. From 1862 to 1864 thousands of men from Maine and other New England States took advantage of the facilities offered by remote stage lines and effected their escape, though a majority of them returned and "squared" themselves with the Government before the close of the war.

Incidentally, it may be well to say here that the famous Bar Harbor and Bangor line was claimed to be the swiftest and most elegant service by horse-power in the country.—Bangor (Me.) News.

Fusing Rubies.

Little rubies, the price of which is considerably below that of large ones of the same quality, are finely powdered, and then fused together in the electric furnace. The mass is quickly cooled by some trick that is not made public, resulting in a gem of good size, and retaining the desired lustre and tint. Neither the sapphire nor the emerald can be subjected to this treatment.

Ben M. Jacobs & Bro
Furniture and Rugs.
—SOLE AGENTS—
Globe-Wernicke Elastic Book Cases
Filing Cabinets.
Catalogue for the asking.
BIRMINGHAM, AL

Farmers' Mutual Insurance Associat
OF ALABAMA.
CHARTERED BY SPECIAL ACT OF THE LEGISLATURE
By the People and for the People.
Chilton County Branch
Organized February 3, 1900.
W. M. WILSON, President. WALLACE C. EDLER, Sec'y.-Treas.
INSURES Farmers' dwellings, outbuildings and co and live stock against loss by fire, wind and ligh The cheapest, safest and most sensible method of ance known to man
Average Yearly Cost for Five and a half Years 43-100 of 1 per c particulars furnished upon application to WALLACE C. EDLER, Clanton,

A GREAT COMBINATION OFFER
We Will Furnish the "TWICE-A-WEEK" Issue of the St. Louis Globe-Democ
—With—
THE UNION
—For—
$1.50 Both Papers, one year, only
The St. Louis Globe Democrat should not be classed with the many weekly papers. It is a high-grade Semi-Weekly, eight or more pages, Tuesday and Friday. It is beyond all comparison the biggest, best and National News and Home Journal published in the United States. It is Republican in Politics but is above all
A Great Modern Newspaper.
It is not made up indiscriminately from the Daily issue. It is edited with special reference to the needs of the Farmer, the Merchant professional man who desires to keep thoroughly posted without spe time to read a large Daily Paper. It also contains a great variety of wel reading matter, making it invaluable to every member of the family.
This Liberal Clubbing Offer
is open to all old or new subscribers, but may be withdrawn at any time must receive the cash with order. Address
THE UNION,
Clanton, Ala

PAUL CALAME,
205 21st Street
Birmingham, Ala.
Practical Watch and Optician
Eyes Correct Fitted
Mail orders promptly

SUBSCRIBE FOR THIS PAPER

DO YOU WAN
Letterheads, Noteheads, Billheads, Envelopes,
OR ANYTHING ELSE PRINTED?
Then Call at
THE UNION OFFI
and See Fine Work at Low Prices
500 Noteheads 500 Envelopes All For $2.00
Good Work on Good Material, done on Good M
Don't forget! THE UNION, Clanton, Alabama

Pure Water Prevents Fevers.
DRILLED WELLS FURNISH PURE W
We guarantee water or no charge ma
Estimates given, Address
I. E. SARBER CO.
Thorsby,

obs & Bro
and Rugs.
AGENTS—
tic Book Cases
Cabinets.
INGHAM, AL
surance Associa
ABAMA.
ACT OF THE LEGISLATURE
d for the People.
unty Branch
bruary 3, 1900.
WALLACE C. EDLER,
Sec'y.-Treas.
gs, outbuildings and cont
by fire, wind and light
most sensible method of i 43-100 of 1 per ce
n application to
C. EDLER, Clanton,
BINATION OFFER
"WICE-A-WEEK" Issue
the——
Globe-Democr
ith—— UNION or——
one year, only $1
uld not be classed with the many
-Weekly, eight or more pages mparison the biggest, best and c lished in the United States. It is
ern Newspaper.
from the Daily issue. It is ds of the Farmer, the Merchant thoroughly posted without sport
o contains a great variety of well
every member of the family.
Clubbing Offer
at may be withdrawn at any time, rese
THE UNION,
Clanton, Ala
Practical Watchm
and Optician
Eyes Correct
Fitted
Mail orders promptly
IBE FOR PAPER
U WAN
, Noteheads,
Envelopes,
ELSE PRINTED?
Call at
ON OFFIC
ork at Low Prices.
ll For $2.00
al, done on Good M
ON, Clanton, Alabama
revents Fevers.
URNISH PURE WA
or no charge made.
ddress
RBER CO.

Life Is Opportunity'---Wisdom Is Always in Plainest Garb

By Bishop J. L. Spalding.

HOW shall I live? How shall I make the most of my life and put it to the best use?

How shall I become a man and do a man's work? This, and not politics, or trade, or war, or pleasure, is the question. The primary consideration is not how one shall get a living, but how he shall live, for if he shall live rightly, whatever is needful he shall easily find.

Life is opportunity, and therefore its whole circumstances may be made to the purpose of those who are bent on self-government, on making themselves capable of doing thorough work.

Opportunity is a word which, like so many others that are excellent, we have from the Romans. It means near port, close to haven. It is a favorable season, time, or place for learning or saying or doing a thing. It is an invitation to seek safety and refreshment, an appeal to make escape from what is low and vulgar and to take refuge in high thoughts and worthy deeds, from which flows increase of strength and joy. It is omnipresent.

What we call evils, as poverty, neglect and suffering, are, if we are wise, opportunities for good. Death itself teaches life's value not less than its vanity. It is the background against which its worth and beauty stand forth in clear light. Its dark form follows us like our shadows, to bid us win the prize while there is time; to teach that if we live in what is permanent, the destroyer cannot blight what we know and love; to urge us with a power that belongs to nothing else, to lay the stress of all our hoping and doing on the things that do not pass away.

"Poverty," says Ouida, "is the north wind that lashes men into Vikings." Darkness is young ambition's ladder." What is more pleasant than to read of the strong-hearted youths, who, in the midst of want and hardships of many kinds, have clung to books, feeding, like bees to flowers? By the light of fires, in dim-lit garrets, in the fields following the plow, in early dawns when others are asleep, they ply their blessed task, seeking nourishment for mind, a thirst for truth, yearning for full sight of the high world of which they have caught faint glimpses; happier now,—lacking everything save faith in a great purpose—than in the after years when success showered on them fame and gold.

Life is good, and opportunities of becoming and doing good are always at hand. Our house, our table, our tools, our books, our city, our country, our language, our profession—the people who love us and those who hate, they who help and they who oppose, what is all this but opportunity?

Wherever we be there is opportunity of turning to gold the dust of daily doings. If snow and storm keep me at home is not here an invitation to go to the immortal silent ones who never speak unless they are addressed? If loss or pain or wrong befall me, shall they not show me the soul of good that is in evil things?

Good fortune may serve to persuade us that the essential good is a noble mind and a conscience without flaw. Success will make plain the things in which we fail; failure shall spur us on to braver hope and striving. If a crowded city is my dwelling place, the superficial life of noise and haste shall show me how blessed a thing it is to live within the company of true thoughts and high resolves.

Whatever can help me to think and love, whatever can give me strength and patience, whatever can make me humble and serviceable, though it be as slight as air, is opportunity, whose whim it is to hide in unconsidered things, in chance acquaintance and casual speech, in the falling of an apple, in rank weeds, or the accidental explosion of a chemist's mortar.

Since life is great, nay, of inestimable value, no opportunity by which it may be improved can be small.

Talks To Wives.

By Mary Stewart Cutting.

THERE are two stock answers given by wives when they are asked the crucial question. What would you do if your husband seemed inclined to fall in love with another woman?

One answer is, "I wouldn't do anything; I'd let him go!" and the other, "I'd flirt with some one myself." Further than this the imagination does not seem to go.

The first answer, translated, means: "If my husband could go so far from my ideal of him he wouldn't be my husband any more. I should feel only indifference and contempt for him."

The other answer is of a different calibre: "If he sees that he is in danger of losing me he may regain his interest in me. What another man admires I may admire too, and find that he loves me best, after all. At any rate, he shall find that he cannot neglect me with impunity."

Both answers are, of course, superficial and based on the feeling of the moment—the feeling of "getting even." But the woman who is in danger of losing her husband's affections will have many moments not to be evolved into theories so clear-cut and self-sufficient. If a woman does know that her affection is killed for a man when she finds him beginning to be attracted elsewhere, then, indeed, the situation is simplified. If he no longer loves, everything is ended—the worst hurt is over. But in real life the woman who thinks the most proudly is the one who finds it most impossible to live up to the ultimatus of indifference. To see the one she loves daily, in all the intimate domestic happenings, to have everything speak of those cords of marriage by which they are bound together, to know that there are still times when he is tender and she's dear—oh, that is not to wish him to go! He must love and love her best, or she will die.—Harper's Bazar.

"Undisciplined" Chicago.

By H. G. Wells

"UNDISCIPLINED"—that is the word for Chicago. It is the word for all the progress of the Victorian time, a scrambling, ill-mannered, undignified, unintelligent development of material resources. Packingtown, for example, is a place that feeds the world with meat, that concentrates the produce of a splendid countryside at a position of imperial advantage, and its owners have no more sense, no better moral quality, than make it stink in the nostrils of any one who comes within two miles of it; make it a centre of distribution for disease and decay, an aroma of shabby evasions, and extra profits, a sense of brutal economic conflict and squalid business, offensive to every sense. I wish I could catch the soul of Herbert Spencer and tether it in Chicago for a while to gather fresh evidence upon the superiority of unfettered individualistic enterprises to things managed by the state.

Want of discipline! Chicago is one hoarse cry for discipline. The reek and scandal of the stock yard are really only a gigantic form of that same quality in American life that, in a minor aspect, makes the sidewalk filthy. The key to the peculiar nasty ugliness of those Schoellkopf works that defile the Niagara gorge is the same quality. The detestableness of the elevated railroads of Chicago and Boston and New York has this in common. All that is ugly in America, in Lancashire, in South and East London, in the Pass de Calais is due to this, to the shoving unintelligent proceedings of underbred and morally obtuse men. Each man is for himself, each enterprise; there is no order, no provision, no common and universal plan. Modern economic organization is still as yet only thinking of emerging from its first chaotic stage, the stage of lawless enterprise and insanitary aggregation, the stage of prosperity's camp. That is the key to it all.—Harper's Weekly.

The Negro and the South.

By Harry Stillwell Edwards.

THERE is no threat to the South in the negro's presence there. For at last the only negro who threatens our civilization is the criminal negro; and the only white man who threatens the negro is the white criminal; and our whole system is a failure if this question may not be left where Georgia has placed it, in the keeping of the courts, the church and the schoolhouse. It is safe to leave it there. And while he gropes his way toward the light, it is wise and charitable to give him aid, comfort and the benefit of a broad Christian tolerance. The situation is one that appeals to the common sense of the Southern people; and this term may be enlarged to embrace the law-abiding, property holding and intelligent men of African descent. I believe these men, recognized as factors in our industrial development, will become sincere lovers of their native land and defenders of their homes side by side with their white neighbors. It needs only tolerance, forbearance, encouragement and the recognition of individual merit to accomplish this.—The Century.

To celebrate three weddings, more than 3,000 persons recently assembled in a village in Brittany, and for three days kept up a feast, during which they consumed seventy-five barrels of wine and cider, fifteen oxen, ten cows, thirty calves, and 1,000 fowls and rabbits.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE.

MRS. MARTHA OLIVA SAGE,
Widow of the financier whose will leaves her probably the richest woman in the world.

RICHEST OF WIDOWS.

Mrs. Russell Sage, although she has devoted many years of her life to charity and philanthropy, is by no means one of those who give without taking into account every practical question concerned. Her years of association with her husband and the insight which she has obtained into business matters make her pre-eminently fitted to undertake the great task imposed upon her by the will of her husband. She believed that some day his wealth would be the means of doing untold good and she has prepared herself to disburse it to produce the best results.

Mr. Sage taught her to see everything from its practical side, rather than merely from its sentimental aspect, and in her charities, which have been numerous, she has been actuated by that same spirit. She was of much assistance to Miss Helen Gould in the organization and management of her beneficiaries designed to honor the name of her father, the late Jay Gould.

Mrs. Sage has well developed powers of administration, and that the care of the great fortune will be conducted with ability is the opinion of those who know her best.

Mrs. Sage is the second wife of Russell Sage. Her home was Syracuse, N. Y., where she was born, in 1828. Her early education was received in the schools of her native city, and she then attended the Troy Female Seminary, since aided by her husband, and now called the Emma Willard School. She was graduated from the institution in 1847, and has always been one of the most enthusiastic of the alumnae.

She met Mr. Sage in Troy, and was a friend of his first wife. Their marriage took place in 1869. Soon after that he moved to New York to try his fortune in Wall Street.

Mrs. Sage sympathized with her husband in his endeavors to build up what he considered a source of power and often influenced him to aid worthy objects. As age crept upon him she was unremitting in her care of him. He often said, "The loving care of a tender wife such as mine is the greatest gift which a man can have."

She believed in him and felt that often he was misunderstood. The epitaph for his monument, "I have done the best that I could by the light of the day," was her suggestion. In recent years she devoted her life to the care of him, and in the last two or three years she perceptibly aged under the strain.

Dean of Labor Leaders.

Samuel Gompers

SPRING TURNS GRIDDLE CAKE.

The housewife seldom experiences any trouble in turning her griddle or batter cakes, but to make the operation easier a Pennsylvania man has invented the novel cake turner shown in the illustration. Turning the handle to turn the cakes is not necessary with the device. All that is required is to press a spring after the cake has been put on the lifter and the turning is done automatically. The cake turner is made in two parts—the handle section and the lifter section. The latter comprises the cake turner and the rod connecting it to the handle. At the end of the rod is a beveled pinion which lifts into a sector pivoted to the side of the handle, the sector being made into one piece with a finger piece. Attached to the sector is a coiled spring, which keeps the turner in its normal position. After placing a batter cake on the turner the finger piece is pressed, the latter moving the sector, which in turn engages with the bevel gear on the end of the rod. The sector being of a predetermined size, a half-revolution is imparted to the turner. Releasing the finger piece returns the turner to its normal position.

ELECTRICAL HEATER.

The use of electricity for cooking purposes was established long ago, but to utilize it also in portable heaters for temporary use, as warming beds in place of the ordinary hot-water bag, is the idea of a San Francisco man. It has been the aim of the inventor also to simplify the construction without detracting from its efficiency. The receptacle is a hollow casing, covered with asbestos, the casing being made of perforated sheet metal. Within the casing is the electrical apparatus for conducting the heat, the source of supply being regulated by a key. The current can readily be supplied by attaching to a near-by incandescent lamp socket, the wire carrying the current being made of sufficient length for ordinary purposes. It is obvious that the heat can pass out freely from the open end of the casing and also through the perforations in the side.

"London," says the Queen, "formerly splenetic and morose, has totally changed its charactar. Everything is looked at lightly, airily, and we make fun even of such tragedies as our climate and the County Council."

News and Notes for Women

WOMAN DENOUNCES THE PETTICOAT.

"We are never going to be free so long as we wear petticoats. Woman will never have perfect freedom in dress until she wears something like the gymnasium costume. I am not advocating that for the present day, but perhaps in a century we will grow up to it."

These and similar sentiments were expressed by Miss Abby Shaw Mayhew, assistant professor of physical training at the University of Wisconsin, in a lecture to the women students.

"Dress all goes by fad," said Miss Mayhew. "Some of the fads are correct hygienically, others are positively suicidal. There are four places where we are apt to bind ourselves—at the neck, the waist, the knee and the foot.

"The fad for wearing open necks in our dresses is a sensible one. We never can be well or normal or have a clear brain if we impede the circulation and impair the nervous system by pressure on the neck from tight collars. A great deal of the head, throat and eye trouble now prevalent can be traced directly to bad dressing of the neck. There is much goiter development consequent. Furs should never be worn on the neck if they are warm enough to make the neck perspire.

"It is suicidal for women to wear half sleeves and 'Peek-a-boo' waists so early in the season, as they did here at the university this spring, because of the inequality of temperature of the different parts of the body, and the consequent difficulty in maintaining proper circulation. Still, we are growing more sensible there; we do not wear such stiff corsets as we did. Waist and skirt should be hooked or buttoned together, not pinned. I never use pins.

Ill-adjusted stockings, I believe, cause more suffering than tight shoes. In hot weather, never cover the knee, and do not wear long supporters; they drag on the abdomen. Wear round garters just below the knee, not tight enough to leave a mark, and roll the stocking top over it."

THE LATE VICEREINE.

While every American girl is conceded to be a queen in her own right, few have reached as exalted a station as the "American Queen of India." But the high rank to which she was suddenly elevated by her husband's appointment as Viceroy of India does not seem to have turned Lady Curzon's head.

As the Vicereine of India she shared the responsibilities resting upon Lord Curzon as the personal representative of the ruler of India with the dignity and grace befitting the position. Possessing unusual tact and adaptability, the daughter of a self-made American wore the purple as though born to it.

Unlike the usual marriage of the American heiress of newly rich connections to the foreigner of established position, this one, the daughter of Levi Leiter, is the promising young member of the English Parliament, who was descended from the old and distinguished family that traced its ancestry back to the days of William the Conqueror, it is said to have been a love match. That it was a union of conjugal minds, with similar aspirations, and that it was a happy one, there seems little doubt.—Baltimore American.

CAN YOU CHAT?

Can you chat?

Of course, you think you can, but can you? The more you think of it the more you think you could if you would.

Not all of us even know what it is. Of a truth, it is not mere talking. Neither does it approach the art of conversation. Conversation, if there be people capable of it, makes fascinating and stately entertainment.

Chatting is different.

Above all, it gets away from speaking on any special subject, or hobby. Not that it may not dwell upon one topic, though should it do so it must sparkle from many different viewpoints. Above all, it must not be monologuish. The woman who talks continuously of her ailments, or servants, or the man who never rests his hobby, can neither of them chat. In real chat there's the element of the unexpected, the sport of chasing vagrant ideas that are based on every day topics in which the company joins generally. It's a charming, informal accomplishment, as endearing as mediocre formality is chilling.

"CALLED" BY SLANDERED ONE.

Wives who are slandered to their husbands should make a note of the ingenious proceedings of Mrs. Sumner, of Evanston, Ill.

Wearying of the necessity of continually denying what the gossips told her husband, Mrs. Sumner had Mr. Sumner arrested on a charge of disorderly conduct and then had the gossips subpoenaed as witnesses to repeat on oath, if they dared, the gossip they had circulated.

This scheme, a new one, of compelling talebearers to "put up or shut up" was devised with the legal assistance of Joseph McCallum, Justice of the Peace.

Sumner, a plumber became a voluntary defendant. Then he summoned George Lang and William Rubo to make good their gossip. They denied under oath that they know anything derogatory to Mrs. Sumner's character. The wife then dismissed the case against the happy husband and left the court vindicated.

TOO YOUNG TO MARRY.

The girl who marries when she is but seventeen or eighteen has not had time to know thoroughly all that is included in a good education. Is it any wonder that when she enters on her new life, with its thousand and one fresh pleasures, duties and distractions, she should cease to take much interest in the work of her school days? Unless she is a really intellectual woman, she, as a rule, drops out of all literary and artistic pursuits of her girlhood and becomes absorbed in domesticity, or in a round of amusements to the great detriment of her mental vigor, says Woman's Life. Girls who marry very young, for this reason, run a great risk of becoming very uninteresting in middle age, more especially if the income on which they marry is a narrow one, entailing a home life limited by lack of means and leisure to travel, to read and to cultivate their minds, and necessitating close attention to the supervision of the household.

BLUING FOR WHITE HAIR.

Many people take it as a joke, but it is a fact that when the hairdressers shampoo white hair they put bluing in the rinsing water and blue the hair just as they would blue sheets and pillow cases.

The bluing has the same effect on the hair as on any white material, giving it a fresh, pure-white appearance.

Hair that isn't blued often becomes a stale, yellowish, unattractive shade.

TEACHER OF GOLF.

There is one woman in England who has a unique occupation. She is a professional teacher of golf, giving lessons at the woman's golf club at Mitcham. Mrs. Gorden Robertson has been instructing for more than a year, and thinks she can teach members of her sex better than a mere male instructor can. She has a better appreciation of their difficulties.

NEWEST IN NOTE PAPER.

Much note paper nowadays has the monogram stamped in the upper left-hand corner, instead of the middle of the top of the page. This leaves room for address and date to be in the opposite right-hand corner. The engraved address remains in the middle, where it is used instead of monogram.

FASHION NOTES.

Shoes and stockings to match each other and match also the dress are a pretty fashion for the house.

All through the fall coat sleeves will be short, but those that are to be worn later will be long. Generally speaking the new sleeves are long.

There has not yet been devised for the little man a style of suit quite so becoming as the jaunty little Russian, whether of white linen or dark wool.

The undressed kid shoes are exceedingly comfortable and very satisfactory except in black.

The fashionable flare accomplished by the circular cut of most of the coats for children gives a pert air of style that is very bewitching.

A girl who is half apt with her needle can embroider her own white shoes and give them individuality. Some girls are using their monogram for design. As a fad monograms on one's waist and shoes are not bad at all.

Empire styles will be conspicuous this fall, and some young ladies are already planning how they can transform their present princess frocks of sheer materials with ease into real Empire frocks.

The latest belt idea for linen gowns is one made of Scotch plaid, the colors so skilfully crossed and combined that there is no tendency to make the waist look large. Soft wide silk is used to make them of, although a few are of patent leather. Blue and green effects are best liked.

An occasional woman wears plaid stockings to match, with patent leather pumps.

The slender girl looks very well in the gown whose skirt is gathered at the belt and finished at the bottom with a wide full flounce.

Attractive are the berthas, collarettes, cuffs, and sleeveless coatees of Madeira hand embroidery. The designs are mainly on the eyelet order, perfectly executed, and the material is exceedingly fine.

An entertainer and humorist recently had just made his bow and was about to begin when a cat walked in and sit down on the stage. With quick wit he said, severely: "You get out; this is a monologue, not a catalogue," which was voted the best hit of his entertainment.

THE UNION

Published every Thursday at Clanton, Chilton county, Alabama.

Wallace C. Edler, Ed. and Pub.

Subscription price, in advance, per year, $1.

For advertising rates, call at the office, Seventh street, between First and Second avenues.

Entered April 16, 1903, at Clanton, Ala., as second class matter, under act of congress of March 3, 1879.

NOTICE TO CORRESPONDENTS.

All communications to the Union must be signed by the writer's real name as well as that name which they wish to put in the paper. Letters must reach the editor Tuesday morning to get in the same week. While we will publish any and all communications complying with these requirements that do not contain any improper language, we are not responsible for the opinions expressed. tf.

CLANTON, ALA., Aug 3 , 1906.

Union Clubbing List

THE UNION And Yellow Jacket	$1.05
THE UNION And Southern Ruralist	1.00
THE UNION And Union Educator	1.05
THE UNION And Home and Farm	1.00
THE UNION And Weekly Age-Herald	1.25
THE UNION and Weekly Atlanta Constitution	1.25
THE UNION and Twice-a-Week Globe Democrat	1.25
THE UNION and Tri-W'kly Atlanta Constitution	1.50
THE UNION And Tom Watson's Magazine	1.55
THE UNION and Tri-Weekly N. Y. World	1.50
THE UNION And Rural South	1.50
THE UNION And Weekly Advertiser and Map of Alabama, U. S. and world	1.50

If there are any other papers you want call at THE UNION office, and we will get them for you at the lowest rates. tf

NOMINEES OF THE People's Primary

Held August 6, 1906, under the direction of the Republican and Populist Executive Committees of Chilton County, Ala.

FOR REPRESENTATIVE.
J. Osmond Middleton.

FOR SHERIFF.
Felix J. Fitts.

FOR COMMISSIONER.
First District—W. H. Conway.
Second District—S. E. Waldrup.
tf

THE BANNER LOAFER.

The Loafer on the corner in the Banner last week has something to say about the Birmingham Union. We don't know of any paper of that name published in Birmingham, but suppose "The Loafer" means the American Newspaper Union, of Birmingham, which prints in whole or in part about 100 newspapers in Alabama; this number includes pages 2, 5 6 and 7 of the Banner, but as our readers know, the other pages of that sheet are filled with patent medicine electros. It is really amusing to read this Banner loafer's screed about correct printing, when right in the column in which he criticizes the Birmingham Union he makes such errors as these: "J. M. Murse" for J. M. Murse; "was bought by J. C Jones at 10.10c per pound", "account" for account we presume. The editor of this paper has never set type, but judging from the specimen that runs the Banner who says he is a practical printer, it don't take much "gray matter" to make a printer. Our experience in the last three or four years has led us to the opinion that the "practical printers" have their full percentage of d—d fools.

LAST SATURDAY'S RALLY.

The people turned out in great force last Saturday, the court house being nearly filled. The Hon. John T. Blakemore, of Birmingham, was the speaker of the day, and he sure did make a good speech. We haven't heard a Democrat try to criticize it yet, not even the Advertiser's correspondent. Next week we hope to give you the substance of Mr. Blakemore's speech; it should be heard by every man in this county.

THE DEMOCRATIC PRIMARY.

Figures are not at hand yet, but it seems that the Democrats polled 15 to 20 per cent less votes than two years ago in this county, notwithstanding that the polls were open to "Tom Dick and Harry," for the lists of the registered voters and of those that have paid poll tax were conspicuous by their absence form the polling places on Monday. There were votes cast in Clanton on Monday last that will be challenged in November.

TO THE COTTON GROWERS OF THE SOUTH.

Bear speculators are hammering down the price.

Spinners will, therefore, buy sparingly. If you want a profit on this crop you MUST market sparingly; every bale you rush on the market is the strongest possible bear argument.

Market your cotton only so rapidly as the spinners demand it, or you will pay dearly for your hurry.—The Cotton Journal, August 23, 1906.

VERBENA.

Mr. Editor:

Here I come again. I know so much and am getting so wise that I just can't hold in an longer. When a fellow gets as wise as I am I think he ought to have some office. I've been mighty wise for the past two years and I've known it; but the trouble was that the people havn't found it out or they would sure give me an office. I feel sure that they will find it out by the next time they've offices to give away. I went to Clanton the other day and slipped in the court house while Judge Reynolds was away (up on Pike's Peak or bathing in Salt Lake) and sat down in that big chair, propped my feet up and leaned back and smiled to myself as I thought how soothing it would be to occupy that chair (even if I did have to wait a long time) and then I thought about those darned Republicans, for if they stay in power times will be so good that there won't be any mortgages to record, and that cuts a hole in the judge's fees, and I'm after the money you know. Then I thought of the legislature; if there isn't much money in it there is an awful lot of honor, but then it seemed to me that I'd better wait until I got all the money I wanted, or enough to try and make the people believe I had all I wanted, so I'd stand a better show, you know. Then it occurred to me (while I was still in that big chair) how funny it would be for me to occupy so important a position as that and be "beneath Neighbor Gulledge's notice," for that's what he got a fellow to inform the public to that effect through his paper, and no doubt this same Criton emigrated from his native soil (old England) for the benefit of his country. Yes, this same Criton run for office right here in Chilton county before he was naturalized even. Yes, he wanted to represent the people in the legislature SO BAD, and still retain his claim on John Bull. We must be getting pretty low or else Neighbor Gulledge would have got an American-born citizen to have said all this. I tell you, if Neighbor Gulledge will go out to Enterprise to another Cotton Association meeting he may do those Pops and Reps out there a job for he filled some of those people so full of his bombastic gas that a whole pen full of them went into Kincheon on August 6 and insisted that they wanted to vote for Gulledge in a people's primary. Did you ever. Though it was reported here a few years ago that Bro. Gulledge followed Congressman Aldrich to Calera to a Republican convention, but you know that was when he was figuring for the Verbena postoffice. Mr. Editor, you know that Bro. Gulledge says he thinks politics in Chilton ought to be conducted on a higher plane than it has been heretofore, but I do think that the people ought to know what sort of a man they are asked to vote for, and I therefore desire to ask Bro. Gulledge a few questions, and if they are lies, Bro. Gulledge and his friends will have ample time to establish the facts before election, for I don't want to rob Bro. Gulledge of any honor that is due him (heaven knows he needs all the honor that is justly due him in this world, and in the world to come). Neighbor Gulledge says he is for the whole people. How are you for them, neighbor—like you have been for the last thirty years? Or do you propose to change your tactics? Isn't it a fact that you paid money to help get a stock law here a few years ago? Didn't you say openly that you did pay your money for it, and that the people had to abide by it? Didn't you throw your gates open and tell the people that they had better keep their stock off of your grass? Wasn't it only when you saw there would be shotguns brought into play that you gave up stock law? Didn't you (or your pals) have an old man (70 years of age) arrested and tried to have him punished by the law because he would not submit to your stock law?

Now, I was a little grieved last week when I saw that epistle in the Banner from Spiegners, signed by my old friends, the Messrs. Connell, knowing how they have opposed some of Bro. Gulledge's methods, and how they denounced the way he acted in regard to the stock and they refused to submit to it. Now, it may be that they don't understand the meaning of "purity" or they would have been a little charitable and left out that word. If they wrote the rest. Now, gentlemen, tell the truth, isn't that a little more than you ever said for Neighbor Gulledge during the twenty-five years you knew him in Chilton county? Have your old neighbors and friends in Clanton committed some unpardonable sin that you desire to see them punished by a man like Gulledge? Now readers, we judge the future by the past, and Bro. Gulledge and his friend keep saying "he is for the people and wants to do something for them, as he has got all the money he wants." If any one will show where Bro. Gulledge has ever done anything for the people, unless there was a big thing in it for him, show us and I won't say any more. Show us some industry he has promoted, unless he could lead the procession. Show us something he has done for suffering humanity, with all his money. Show us and we'll shut up, but if you can't, why then?

VERBENA KID.

CEDAR GROVE.

Editor Union:

A few dots from this neighborhood We're glad to say that Mrs. A. F. Mims has improved in health the last few days. Fodder pulling is about over and cotton picking is just beginning. J. P. Barrett spent part of last week in Bessemer at the State Union. A. H. Collins and family visited J. A. Logan's family last Sunday. The all-day singing here Sunday was well attended; they used the old books and organized a singing convention to be known as the Chilton County Singing Convention, N. A. Dobbs, president; Wiley Foshee, vice-president, and Willie Mims, secretary. The first session of the convention will be held at Highlands school house on the fourth Sunday and Saturday before in September. Protracted meeting is going on here now and we all hope that much good may result. Some of us will go to the county union at Mount Pleasant this week. Success to The Union and its many readers.

"ONE ALONE."

JEMISON, ALA.

Dear Editor:

Please allow me space in your valuable paper for a few words in regard to the meeting held at the court house by the R. F. D. carriers. I was indeed sorry I could not be there. I thought I could go on my route that day and go down that night, but was very much disappointed. I guess the carriers thought that we did not believe in organization, or did not appreciate Mr. Caddell as district organizer, by not being present at the meeting, as nearly all the carriers in the county were there except three Jemison carriers, but nevertheless we believe in organization, whole soul and body. We belong to the state organization and will belong to the county organization as soon as possible, and as far as Mr. Caddell being district organizer, they could not have appointed a man that was any more capable than Mr. Caddell, and for my part I think he will stir up great interest among the carriers, and we will have an interesting meeting on Labor Day. I feel sure he will use every effort while he is gone to organize the carriers and build up the R. F. D. service. Now let every carrier meet Mr. Caddell in Clanton on Labor Day and have as interesting meeting as possible. I would like very much to have our patrons there or as many as will come to hear what great work the carriers are doing for the people in the country. We are not trying to get our salaries raised, but putting forth every effort to buildup the public roads, and get them in a better shape, not only for the benefit of the carriers, but the people throughout the county. I can't see why the people are so careless about their roads, when they see that they need good public roads throughout the country. It seems to me if some of our people were up North, where they have the macadamized roads, they could realize the importance of having good public roads. It does not only bring the people of the country to a higher standpoint, but brings them in line with the merchant; they can save a great deal in marketing their produce, and also get a better price for it. The Agricultural Department at Washington estimates that the farmers of America lose a million and a half dollars every time the sun goes down on account of bad roads. They do not realize how much they are losing and how far behind they are. I have some roads on my route that are very much like the old man told a gentleman that was going from this county to a little town in Jackson county where they had over three hundred miles of macadamized roads. The gentleman asked the old man how far it was to the town of Philadelphia. Well, stranger, I guess it is about twenty miles. He also asked him how were the roads. The old man replied in this way: "If you were going to hell and had to travel over that road you would be glad when you got there!" Now let every carrier be at Clanton next Monday, and try to do all the good we can to improve the routes and be a great help to our patrons, which they will appreciate in the near future. I would be glad to see a letter from the carriers in the paper every week.

W. D. G.

WEST CHILTON.

Health here is not very good. Mrs T. J. Little john is on the sick list, but we all hope she will soon recover. Walter Abbott and wife, from near Jemison, visited J. A. Langston's the past week; Mr. Abbott seems to like West Chilton very well. W. R. K Stanford, president of the Steel Range Company, of Sheffield, was at W. A Green's the past week. People all about through fodder-pulling and getting ready to pick cotton. Our F. E and C. U. of A. local is moving along nicely. "Let the good work go on." Best wishes to The Union and its readers.

LITTLE J.

Clanton, Ala., Route 4, Aug. 28, 1906.
Please allow me a little space in your paper. Last Sunday we had an all-day singing in the Christian Harmony notebook, at Cedar Grove church, conducted by Mr. Langston and others. The class was large, well organized, and made some excellent music.

In the afternoon a motion was made and carried to organize a Chilton County Singing Convention for the Sacred Harp and Christian Harmony combined. Clerks pro tem were appointed and received thirty-two names for membership. Rev. N. A. Dobbs was elected president; Mr. Wiley Foshee, vice-president, and W. J. Mims secretary.

The next meeting will be at High Land, four and one-half miles southwest of Clanton. Will be held on Saturday and Sunday, September 22 and 23, 1906. We invite everybody to come and take a part with us. Yours very truly,

W. J. MIMS.

JEMISON.

Jemison, Ala., Aug. 27, 1906.
Editor Union, Clanton, Ala.:

I will drop you a few lines from this place.

Jemison is on a boom.

Langston Bros. have just finished their new brick store.

R. B. McNeill & Co. have built an addition to their store.

The lumber is on the ground to build the new Baptist church, all of which shows there is prosperity in Chilton county.

The Baptists have just closed a protracted meeting at this place, which was conducted by the pastor, Rev. Beal, who was assisted by Rev. Hubbard from Troy. Eleven joined the church.

The Ladies' Aid Society met at the church Monday afternoon and decided to give an ice cream supper next Saturday evening. Mr. Editor, you are invited with the rest.

Miss Quinn Henry, our ever obliging postmistress, is at the old stand again after several weeks at Talladega and other springs.

Misses Beatrice Crysell and Minnie Wells are visiting Saginaw this week.

Rev. J. A. Beal preached his farewell sermon at the Baptist church last Sunday. He will soon leave to enter the seminary at Louisville, Ky. He has done a great work at this place and all his friends and members wish him success in his new undertaking.

W. T. Hand, who has been home for several days, left Monday for Birmingham.

Tom Low is calling on home folks here this week.

J. W. F. Garner is on the sick list.

J. N. Langston fell off of a wagon load of fodder last week and broke two ribs and was otherwise shaken up, but is now improving.

Mrs. W. A. Reynolds, who has been to Plantersville on a visit, is home again.

A. J. Ware is spending a few days with W. A. Reynolds.

Miss Bonnie Jenkins, after a long visit in Montgomery, is home again.

Ewell Shaw, who has been playing ball with the Gulfport ball team, is home again.

Jemison chapter, No. 44, Order Eastern Star, will give a picnic at Mountain Creek next Friday.

Miss Anna Lowery is taking lessons horseback riding. She made her first run Monday.

Prof. Rosco, who will teach our school this winter, was a pleasant visitor this week.

If this misses the waste basket I will let you hear from me again. With best wishes for The Union.

"BILL DOOLEY."

THORSBY.

Miss Sarah Yeager returned to her home in East Lake Wednesday of last week.

Miss Daisy Lucas left for Pennsylvania Thursday for an extended visit with relatives.

Mrs. J. J. Stanely and daughter, Pauline, visited in Clanton Tuesday.

Mesdames Skaggs and Langford, of Jemison, visited with Mrs. Raspberry Thursday.

George Freeman was in Birmingham Thursday.

Rev. J. W. O'Hara returned to his home in Montgomery after assisting in the protracted meeting here.

M. J. Barrett was a county seat visitor Tuesday.

Miss Clem Hawthorne left Friday morning for a month's visit with friends and relatives in Montgomery.

Rev. Hartelius has moved his family into the Franzen house.

Mrs. W. F. Moss, of Fitzpatrick, Ala., is visiting here with relatives, Mr. and Mrs. P. C. Smith.

Miss Ada Blalack left for her home in Maplesville Wednesday after a few weeks' visit here with relatives.

Miss Anna Roscoe, who far the past two years has been at St. Vincent's hospital in Birmingham, came home Wednesday morning to care for her sister Ada, who is ill at her brother's home at Collins Chapel.

ANON.

FOR SHERIFF.

I hereby announce myself a candidate for sheriff of Chilton county, subject to the action of the people at the November election, 1906.

ROLLEFFE BATES.

adv (tf)

Each ring around Saturn is about 240 miles bread.

WATSON'S MAGAZINE.

The leading exponent of Jeffersonian Democracy, edited by Hon. Thos. E. Watson, of Georgia, theFather of Rural Free Delivery; author of "The Story of France," "Life of Napoleon," "Life and Times of Thomas Jefferson," "Bethany" and other books. Mr. Watson was the People's party nominee for Vice-President in 1896, and for President in 1904. He is today heading a middle-class reform movement which is bound to sweep the country in a short time.

Watson's Magazine is not a Socialist publication. It does not stand for collective ownership of all the means of production. Mr. Watson believes in public or government ownership of railroads, telegraphs and telephones; in municipal ownership of street railways, gas electric lights, water works, etc.; and he believes in private ownership of all industries not natural monopolies.

The middle class—the home owners, farmers, small business men and property owners—won Jefferson's victory in 1800; won Jackson's victory over Nick Biddle's money power in 1832; won Lincoln's victory in 1860. But each time after the flush of victory had died away they became careless of their rights and went to sleep. They have slept a good portion of the time since 1865, but—

Watson's Magazine is waking them up. Another great victory is in the air. Keep in touch with the movement.

Fifteen cents a copy at news stands; $1.50 a year by mail. Sample copy for four 2-cent stamps and four names of reading friends. Address,

TOM WATSON'S MAGAZINE,
121 West Forty-second Street,
New York City.

SPECIAL CLUBBING RATE.

WATSON'S MAGAZINE AND THE UNION A YEAR FOR ONLY $1.75. WHY NOT SAVE THE 75 CENTS? LEAVE ORDERS AT THIS OFFICE.
tf

HIGH SCHOOL OPENING.

The Clanton High School will open on Monday, September 3, 1906. The faculty is composed of Profs. L. J. Thompson and J. W. Moore, Mrs. Leila Mullins and Miss Ola Jones. Good board can be had at very reasonable rates for non-resident pupils.

A. C. SMITH,
tf Secretary School Board.

FOR SALE.

Mare mule, 8 years old; fine animal, and will work anywhere you put her. Price, $150. I live three miles west of Jemison, on R. F. D. No. 1.

tf E. M. RAY.

NOTICE.

The Board of County Commissioners of Chilton county, Alabama will meet at the county poor farm (about two miles northeast of Lomax) on Tuesday, September 4, 1906, at 10 a. m., for the purpose of receiving bids and awarding the contract for keeping the county poor for the ensuing year. The board reserves the right to reject any and all bids.

L. H. REYNOLDS,
8-23-06-2t Judge of Probate.

JACKSON'S CHAPEL SCHOOL HOUSE.

Lomax Local, F. E. & C. U. of A., will be addressed by Rev. M. F. Lett on the second Saturday afternoon in September (8th). Mr. Lett will preach at the chapel that night and the next day (Sunday). tf

THE NEW YORK WORLD

Thrice-a-Week Edition.

Read Wherever the English Language is Spoken.

The Thrice-a-Week World hopes to be in 1906 a better paper than it has ever been before, and it has made its arrangements accordingly. Its news service covers the entire globe, and it reports everything fully, promptly and accurately. It is the only paper, not a daily, which is as good as a daily, and which will keep you as completely informed of what is happening throughout the world.

The Thrice-a-Week World is fair in its political reports. You can get the truth from its columns, whether you are Republican or Democrat, and that is what you want.

A special feature of the Thrice-a-Week World has always been its serial fiction. It publishes novels by the best authors in the world, novels which in book form sell for $1 50 each, and its high standard in this respect will be maintained in the future as in the past.

The THRICE-A-WEEK WORLD'S regular subscription price is only $1.00 per year, and this pays for 156 papers. We offer this unequaled newspaper and THE UNION together for one year for $1.50.

The regular subscription price of the two papers is $2.00. tf

NOTICE.

Blank Deeds, Mortgages, and all official forms for Justices of the Peace, etc., for sale at The Union Office. Only best approved forms are used. Come in and give us your order. tf.

REGISTRATION NO

Beat No. 4, at Clanton, on 28, 29, 30, 31 and Sept. 1, for the purpose of considering each elector whose name is proposed to strike from the list and determine same.

Beat No. 4, at Clanton, on 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 1906, for the of registering voters.

Beat No. 4, at Clanton, and Saturday before the November, 1906.

R. H. GA
B. L. JO
P. M. MC
Board of Registrars Chilton
tf

PROGRAM

Chilton County Teachers' ... Be Held at Pleasant Gro... on September 7 and 8, 1...

Friday.

10 a. m. Devotional exer... P. G. Maness.

10:30. Welcome addres... A. Haggard.

10:45. Response—Prof ... ris.

11. Enrolling teachers.

11:15. "Psychology of ... Room"—Prof. R. A. Ra... lestia Dunlap.

Recess for dinner.

1:30 p. m. "The Need... County, Educationally"—Pro... Spear, Mrs. A. G. Dunlap.

2:30. "Unconscious Trai... P. G. Maness.

3:30. "How to Secure ... During Recitation"—Prof. ... gard, Mrs. Etta Apperson.

Saturday.

9 a. m. Devotional exer...

9:30. "Methods and ... Teaching Agriculture"—Pro... Thompson.

10:15. "Manual Train... Robert Jones.

11. Educational add... Craig.

This institute will be ... western part of the county ... on the M. & O. R. R. We ... all the teachers of the co... this one, especially those ... not yet attended the co... this year. This will be the ... tute in this scholastic ye... law requires teachers to ... one during each year. Do ... last opportunity slip.

J. W. MO...
J. N. DEN...
tf C...

NOTICE.

Road overseers in Beat ... tend to their duty or ... quences.

J. W. KI...
J. M. GR...
T. N. HO...
tf A...

COMMISSIONER'S ...

Under and by virtue of ... and decree rendered by the ... Probate Court of Chilton ... the 14th day of August, 1... the undersigned was ap... missioner to sell the be... scribed real estate, for the ... an equitable division the... therefore, in pursuance of ... cordance with said order ... I will proceed to sell to ... bidder, for cash, in front ... house door in Clanton, Al...

MONDAY, SEPTEMBER ...

the following described real ... wit: Beginning at the N... ner of the Episcopal ch... the south side of Second ... running thence west alo... ond avenue 120 feet to ... corner of the Chilton W... Manufacturing Company's ... south along the east line ... 210 feet to the Chilton W... Manufacturing Company's ... thence east along the ... said property 120 feet; ... 210 feet to point of begin... west of the Louisville ... railroad, in the town of C... ton county, Alabama.

N. A. L...
Co...
8-16-06-3wks

FOR SALE

A saw mill outfit ... ing of engine, boil... mill, Challoner sh... three Challoner sh... ses, one small p... matcher. All in ... condition. Will sell ... terms, or exchange ... property, except ... outfit.

C. E. Wheelock, ...
Fitzp...

JOHN W. HA...
Jemison, ...

Photographer. ... all grades of ... Frames made ... Work done at ... home by appoint...

...D COUNTY OFFICIALS

...Circuit Court.
...Term—Third Monday in May.
...Term—Fourth Monday in No...

...—S. L. Brewer, Tuskegee.
...—W. B. Bowling, Dadeville.
...—Sam W. Collins.

...Chancery Court.
...Term—Second Monday in ...
...Term—Second Monday in Sep...
...cellor—Hon. W. W. Whitesides.
...ister—Mrs. S. A. Stewart, Clan...

...County Court.
...Monday in each month.

...Commissioners' Court.
...ond Monday February, first Mon... April, first Monday June, second ...day July, second Monday August, ... Monday November.

...COUNTY OFFICERS.
...ge of Probate—L. H. Reynolds.
...asurer—W. T. Callen.
...rk—J. M. Morgan.
...itor—W. M. Adams.
...Assessor—L. B. Pounds.
...Collector—T. J. Hubbard.

...County Commissioners.
...st District—W. H. Conway.
...ond District—Alex Glasscock.
...rd District—R. P. Kendrick.
...rth District—Moses Robinson.

...Supt. of Education.
...J. W. Moore, Clanton.

...County Surveyor.
...P. R. Dahl, Calera.

...State Senator.
...W. R. Oliver, Calera.

...COUNTY CHURCHES.

...MISSIONARY BAPTIST.
...THANY—Rev. J. L. Seeley, pas... First Sunday and Saturday be... D. L. Hand, clerk.

...TH-SALEM—Rev. M. J. Parrish, ... E. B. Popwell, clerk.

...NE CREEK—Rev. J. L. Busbey, ... First Sunday and Saturday ... W. E. Thomas, clerk.

...LLINS CHAPEL—Rev. J. H. ...as, pastor. Third Sunday and ...day before. J. D. Collins, clerk.

...RS HILL—Rev. J. H. Thomas, ... First Sunday and Saturday ... G. W. Scott, clerk.

...CEDONIA—Rev. J. H. Thomas, ... Fourth Sunday and Saturday ...e at 3:30 p. m. H. H. Armstrong.

...EASANT GROVE—Rev. J. H. ...as, pastor. Fourth Sunday and ...day before at 11 a. m. D. H. ...ns, clerk.

...OVIDENCE—Rev. W. W. Robin... pastor. Second Sunday and Sat... before. Riley Robinson, clerk.

...HOBOTH (Bibb Co.)—Rev. J. H. ...as, pastor. Second Sunday and ...day before. D. C. Smitherman.

...PRIMITIVE BAPTIST.
...THEL—Elder J. P. Nobles, pas... Second Sunday and Saturday be... J. T. Abernathy, clerk.

...METHODIST EPISCOPAL.
...CKY MOUNT—Rev. A. T. Van... pastor. Second Sunday. Sing... every second and fourth Sunday ...noon. Prayer meeting every Wed... ...y night. Ladies' prayer meeting ... Saturday afternoon.

...FRATERNAL SOCIETIES.

...Masonic.
...nton R. A. Chapter, No. 116—... Saturday, Clanton.

...ande Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No... Fourth Saturday, Cooper.

...nton Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No... First Saturday, Clanton.

...tury Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No... First Saturday, Billingsley.

...eman Lodge, A. F. and A. M., ...34—Saturday on or before ful... Marbury.

...ison Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No... Saturday on or before full moon.

...nton Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No... Tuesday on or before full moon.

...I. O. O. F.
...ison Lodge—First and third Sa...

...nton Lodge, No. 394—Second an... Saturdays.

...Woodmen of the World.
...ck Jack Camp, No. 190—First an... Mondays.

...I. O. R. M.
...ermo Tribe, No. 96—First an... Mondays sleep. Visiting chie... ...ally invited. H. B. Langston, ... J. H. Patton, Sachem.

...ecola Tribe No. 73—2nd and 4... ...day sleeps. Visiting chiefs co... ...y invited. J. M. Grant, Sachem ... Parrish, C. of R.

REGISTRATION

Beat No. 4, at Clanton, [illegible] 28, 29, 30, 31 and Sept. 1, for the purpose of considering each elector whose name is posed to strike from the list and determine same.

Beat No. 4, at Clanton, on 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 1906, for the of registering voters.

Beat No. 4, at Clanton, and Saturday before the November, 1906.

R. H. GA[illegible]
B. L. JON[illegible]
P. M. MC[illegible]
Board of Registrars Chilton C[illegible]
tf

PROGRAM

Chilton County Teachers' [illegible] Be Held at Pleasant Grove, on September 7 and 8, 190[illegible]

Friday.

10 a. m. Devotional exer[illegible] P. G. Maness.

10:30. Welcome addres[illegible] A. Haggard.

10:45. Response—Prof. H[illegible] ris.

11. Enrolling teachers.

11:15. "Psychology of t[illegible] Room"—Prof. R. A. Rasco, lestia Dunlap.

Recess for dinner.

1:30 p. m. "The Needs County, Educationally"—Prof Spear, Mrs. A. G. Dunlap.

2:30. "Unconscious Train P. G. Maness.

3:30. "How to Secure During Recitation"—Prof. W gard, Mrs. Etta Apperson.

Saturday.

9 a. m. Devotional exerci[illegible]

9:30. "Methods and Teaching Agriculture"—Prof Thompson.

10:15. "Manual Train Robert Jones.

11. Educational addres Craig.

This institute will be h western part of the county, on the M. & O. R. R. We all the teachers of the cou this one, especially those not yet attended the county this year. This will be the tute in this scholastic year, law requires teachers to att one during each year. Do last opportunity slip.

J. W. MOO
J. N. DEN
tf C[illegible]

NOTICE.

Road overseers in Beat [illegible] tend to their duty or take quences.

J. W. KIC
J. M. GRA
T. N. HOW
tf Appo[illegible]

COMMISSIONER'S S[illegible]

Under and by virtue of and decree rendered by the Probate Court of Chilton the 14th day of August, 190 the undersigned was appo missioner to sell the bel scribed real estate, for the an equitable division there therefore, in pursuance of cordance with said order I will proceed to sell to t bidder, for cash, in front of house door in Clanton, Ala MONDAY, SEPTEMBER [illegible] the following described real wit: Beginning at the nor ner of the Episcopal chur the south side of Second a running thence west along ond avenue 120 feet to the corner of the Chilton Ware Manufacturing Company's south along the east line 210 feet to the Chilton Ware Manufacturing Company's thence east along the nor said property 120 feet; the 210 feet to point of beginn west of the Louisville and railroad, in the town of Cl ton county, Alabama.

N. A. KO
8-16-06-3wks Comm[illegible]

FOR SALE!

A saw mill outfit ing of engine, boil mill, Challoner shi three Challoner shi ses, one small pla matcher. All in f condition. Will sell terms, or exchange property, except outfit.

C. E. Wheelock, Fixtu[illegible]

JOHN W. HAR[illegible]
Jemison, Al[illegible]

Photographer. P all grades of Frames made to Work done at y home by appoint[illegible]

CHILTON COUNTY OFFICIALS

Circuit Court.

Term—Third Monday in May.
Term—Fourth Monday in No[illegible]

—S. L. Brewer, Tuskegee.
—W. B. Bowling, Dadeville.
—Sam W. Collins.

Chancery Court.

Term—Second Monday in Term—Second Monday in Sep[illegible]

—Hon. W. W. Whitesides.
—Mrs. S. A. Stewart, Clan[illegible]

County Court.

Monday in each month.

Commissioners' Court.

Monday February, first Mon April, first Monday June, second July, second Monday August, Monday November.

COUNTY OFFICERS.

of Probate—L. H. Reynolds.
—W. T. Callen.
—J. M. Morgan.
—W. M. Adams.
Assessor—L. B. Pounds.
Collector—T. J. Hubbard.

County Commissioners.

District—W. H. Conway.
District—Alex Glasscock.
District—R. P. Kendrick.
District—Moses Robinson.

Supt. of Education.

J. W. Moore, Clanton.

County Surveyor.

R. Dahl, Calera.

State Senator.

W. R. Oliver, Calera.

COUNTY CHURCHES.

MISSIONARY BAPTIST.

THANY—Rev. J. L. Seeley, pas First Sunday and Saturday be D. L. Hand, clerk.

TH-SALEM—Rev. M. J. Parrish, E. B. Popwell, clerk.

NE CREEK—Rev. J. L. Busbey, First Sunday and Saturday W. E. Thomas, clerk.

LLINS CHAPEL—Rev. J. H. pastor. Third Sunday and day before. J. D. Collins, clerk.

ARS HILL—Rev. J. H. Thomas, First Sunday and Saturday G. W. Scott, clerk.

ACEDONIA—Rev. J. H. Thomas, Fourth Sunday and Saturday at 3:30 p. m. H. H. Armstrong, t.

EASANT GROVE—Rev. J. H. pastor. Fourth Sunday and day before at 11 a. m. D. H. ns, clerk.

OVIDENCE—Rev. W. W. Robin pastor. Second Sunday and Sat before. Riley Robinson, clerk.

HOBOTH (Bibb Co.)—Rev. J. H. pastor. Second Sunday and day before. D. C. Smitherman, t.

PRIMITIVE BAPTIST.

THEL—Elder J. P. Nobles, pas Second Sunday and Saturday be J. T. Abernathy, clerk.

METHODIST EPISCOPAL.

CKY MOUNT—Rev. A. T. Van pastor. Second Sunday. Sing every second and fourth Sunday noon. Prayer meeting every Wed night. Ladies' prayer meeting Saturday afternoon.

FRATERNAL SOCIETIES.

Masonic.

R. A. Chapter, No. 116—
Saturday, Clanton.

Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No.
Fourth Saturday, Cooper.

Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No.
First Saturday, Clanton.

Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No.
First Saturday, Billingsley.

Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No.
—Saturday on or before full
Marbury.

Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No.
Saturday on or before full moon.

Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No.
Tuesday on or before full moon.

I. O. O. F.

Lodge—First and third Sat

Lodge, No. 394—Second and Saturdays.

Woodmen of the World.

Jack Camp, No. 190—First and Mondays.

I. O. R. M.

Tribe, No. 90—First and Mondays sleep. Visiting chiefs,
invited. E. B. Langston, C.
J. H. Patton, Sachem.

Tribe No. 75—2nd and 4th
sleeps. Visiting chiefs cor
invited. J. M. Grant, Sachem;
Parrish, C. of R.

F. E. & C. U. OF A.

Chilton Co. Division Officers.

J. H. Thomas, President, Jemison, Rte. 1.
J. W. Hayes, Vice Pres., Thorsby, Rte 1.
J. N. Dennis, Sec-Treas., Clanton, Rte 6.
G. W. Thomas, Chaplain, Clanton, Rte 2.
J. W. Sorrell, Bus. Agent, Jemison, Rte 4.
C. N. Eiland, Lecturer, Clanton, Rte 4.
N. A. Dobbs, Asst. Lect., Clanton, Rte 3.
W. J. Bean, Conductor, Clanton, Rte 4.
W. F. Culpepper, Doorkeeper, Clanton, Rte 3.
W. A. Barnett, Ex. Committee, Jemison, Rte 2.
E. H. Mims, Ex. Committee, Clanton, Rte 1.
J. Wiley Foshee, Ex. Committee, Clanton, Rte 4.

Notice No. 20906.

NOTICE FOR PUBLICATION.

Department of the Interior, Land Office at Montgomery, Ala., July 9, 1906.

Notice is hereby given that the following-named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim, and that said proof will be made before Clerk of Circuit Court, at Clanton, Ala., on Sept. 1, 1906, viz.: George W. Pate, Homestead entry No. 34394, for the E 1-2 of Ne 1-4, E 1-2 of Se 1-4 of Section 2, Tp. 23, in R 15 E.

He names the folowing witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of said land, viz.:

Rollfee F. Bates, of Clanton, Ala.; John Davis, of Clanton, Ala.; William L. Littleton, of Shelby, Ala.; and William M. Willis, of Shelby, Ala.

ROBERT D. JOHNSTON,
Register.

NOTICE TO LAND-OWNERS.

I wish to say that I am preparing maps or plats of each land-owner's property, giving a written description of the land, as it should be described in assessments. I am preparing these plats for the purpose of getting all errors corrected, and at the same time furnish every party an easy and correct way to keep their property correct and avoid future mistakes and annoyance, as well as (sometimes) considerable expense. These plats are made of excellent bond paper and will last a lifetime, and only cost 25 cents each, except where plats are very large, when they will cost 50 cents. Every one that has seen the plats I am making pronounce them splendid and worth many times their cost and well calculated to save their cost many times over. Any one wishing a plat can obtain it by coming to my office in Clanton with their deeds, so as to insure an accurate description.

L. B. POUNDS,
tf Tax Assessor.

COME TO PREACHING.

The Rev. A. C. Swindall will preach at Mount Pleasant school house on the afternoon of the first Sunday in September. Everybody is invited to come. tf

F. E. & C. U. O A.

A resolution was adopted at the last county meting of the Farmers' Union requiring the county lecturer to visit each local in the county at least once every year. Locals who want me to lecture to them will please write me, giving their location, so as to enable me to make a tour of the county in July and August. Address

C. N. EILAND,
tf Route 4, Clanton, Ala.

STRAYED OR STOLEN.

From near my residence on June 25, one iron gray mare colt, one year old; one iron gray horse colt, with star on face, and scar on left hind leg above hock, one and a half years old. Any information leading to their recovery will be liberally rewarded.

C. C. MARTIN,
tf Calera, Ala., Rte 1.

SPECIAL OFFER! !

The Union, Weekly Montgomery Advertiser, and a great white and black map of Alabama, United States and world, three in one, with a picture of every president from Washington to Roosevelt, all for $1.50.

NOTICE.

Jemison, Ala., August 7th, 1906.

Lost—One light clay bank mare, branded on the left shoulder with a heart; the last time heard from she was at Ashby; she weighs about 700 pounds. I will reware any one liberally for information as to where she is, or if returned to me, I will pay well for the trouble.

T. S. DAVENPORT,
tf Jemison, Ala.

CLANTON COTTON MARKET.

Total receipts to Aug. 29, 1906....6573
Price same date 8 7-8
Receipts same time in 1905.....8065
Price same date 10 1-8

LOCAL AND PERSONAL.

T. J. Baxley was in Clanton Thursday.

J. Rus Baker was in town Thursday.

Rev. R. M. Honeycutt was in Clanton Thursday.

Frank Price and son, Lonnie, were in town Friday.

G. G. Riggins and J. H. Eiland were in Clanton Friday.

R. F. Sasnett was in town Friday.

I. J. Dennis, of Mt. Creek, was in Clanton Friday.

A. H. Collins and J. R. Collins were in town Friday. A. H. had his buggy badly smashed by Armstrong's runaway mule team.

'Squire J. S. Dennis was in Clanton Friday.

A gentleman from Beat 5, who was in town Friday, said maybe Gulledge could get up a slow trot, but that he couldn't run for a cent.

G. W. Langston was a pleasant visitor Saturday.

Mrs. Sam W. Collins, accompanied by little Miss Eileen Villadsen, of Thorsby, were Clanton visitors Saturday.

Joseph Burnett, a prominent farmer of Collins Chapel, brought The Union a fine watermelon Saturday. Thank you, Joe; call again.

D. L. Hand and C. C. Buckhalter were in Clanton Saturday.

J. R. Short was a welcome caller Saturday.

G. D. Melton, of Coosa county, was in Clanton Saturday, he having brought his mother over on a visit to her son, G. W. Melton, who lives near Clanton.

Anderson Baker, Sr., that sterling old Republican of Verbena, was at the rally Saturday, and said "I'm glad to I came."

M. C. Williams and son, Fed, were in Clanton Monday.

J. L. Dupree and family returned Saturday from their visit to Winston county, and Mr. Dupree looks like he has thoroughly recovered from his illness.

Assessor L. B. Pounds and wife have a new boy at their home. Mother and child doing well and are the care of Dr. L. V. Stabler, of Thorsby.

J. A. Skeggs, of Jemison, was in Clanton Tuesday.

E. G. Rollins is convalescing rapidly from his recent attack of fever, to the great pleasure of his many friends.

MARRIAGE LICENSES.

Knat Smith and Mrs. Birdie Edwards; T. E. McNeal and Miss L. M. Colley.

OBITUARY.

Died at his residence near Randolph on the night of August 21, Mr. Lewis Waldrup, an aged and highly respected citizen of that community. His death came very sudden. Mr. Waldrup was a plain, honest, outspoken man; a man of conviction, a friend to the truth. He was for a long time an official member of the Baptist church, but for the past sixteen years he had affiliated with the church of the "Living God." He leaves a large family of children and grandchildren to mourn his departure. His funeral was conducted by Evngelist J. H. Henika, of Atlanta, who was conducting a series of meetings nearby at the time of his death. The funeral was attended by a large concourse of people. B. B.

INTERESTING MEETING.

On Aug. 21, Rev. J. H. Henika, of Atlanta, commenced a series of meetings at the Waldrup school house, which continued until the 24th, inclusive, holding as many as three services in one day. He was given good attention; the attendance was fairly good. He is quite a logical speaker, with fine reasoning powers, lucid and highly interesting.

Among the subjects used was that of salvation, showing that the common salvation implied justification and a resurrection to life, while the greater salvation implied the same with sanctification and immortality added. Another was the divine plan of the ages illustrated by an "instrument of ten strings," showing that the various denominations touched one or more of these strings, but in order to have perfect music or harmony in the great plan we must touch all the strings, which includes election, free grace, Abrahamic and law covenants, second death, etc.

Another was the typical significance of the sacrificial features of the tabernacle of ancient Israel. Another was "Thy Kingdom Come." Last was on the six days of creation, which was a heavy blow against "higher criticism," and was grand and full of timely instruction. During the meeting he administered the ordinance of baptism by immersion to one young lady, after she professed to be justified and consecrated to death; also giving a clear talk on baptism.

Mr. Henika is a fine scholar, and holds an honorable position in Atlanta. He is laboring under the auspices of the Watch Tower Biblical Tract Society. A.

TAX NOTICE

Assessor's and Collector's First Round.

We will attend at the following times and places for the purpose of collecting the State and County Taxes of Chilton County for the year 1906 and assessing the taxes for the year 1907:

	1906.
Kincheon, Beat 6	Oct. 1
Pletcher, Beat 8	Oct. 2
Stanton, Beat 8	Oct. 3
Shoults, Beat 7	Oct. 4
Maplesville, Beat 7	Oct. 5
Benson, Beat 3	Oct. 6
Macedonia, Beat 3	Oct. 8
Providence, Beat 2	Oct. 9
Jemison, Beat 2	Oct. 10
Mineral Springs, Beat 1	Oct. 11
Flint Hill, Beat 11	Oct. 12
Cane Creek, Beat 4, until 12 m	Oct. 13
Thorsby, Beat 9	Oct. 15
Clanton, Beat 4	Oct. 16
Cooper, Beat 10	Oct. 17
Vervena, Beat 5	Oct. 18

L. B. POUNDS,
Tax Assessor.
T. J. HUBBARD.
tf Tax Collector.

IN MEMORIAM.

On Wednesday, August 22, 1906, at 4 p. m., the angels of the Lord visited the home of Mr. M. C. Williams. After some four weeks' illness Sister Mattie Williams, wife of M. C. Williams, went to the great beyond. She was in the thirty-second year of her age when God called her home, where she will awake to suffer no more. She was a devoted Christian and a power for her Master's cause, having been a member of the church for eighteen years. We should bear in mind that God is the giver of all good and perfect gifts; "the Lord giveth and the Lord taketh away." She leaves to mourn her loss a dear companion and eight little fond children, ranging in age from three weeks to thirteen years. May God help the dear father and his dear aged mother to have health and strength to raise these little ones. The funeral took place Thursday at 2 p. m. at Chestnut Creek cemetery, near Cooper, Rev. I. Bice preaching a grand sermon, saying that though we all die, yet the dead will rise on the last day. Our earnest prayers and deepest sympathies are with the bereaved family.

J. A. BOOCKHOLDT.

FOR SALE.

30 young cockerels. Silver Spangled Hamburgs, Golden Laced Wyandotts, Buff, Brown and White Leghorns. Prices 50c to $1.50. All birds pure bred and of good quality.

J. B. Downs,
tf Clanton, Ala.

GINNING SFASON 1906-7 We have engaged Joe and Walter Maddox to run and operate our gins for the coming season. We have the best machinery and with these men to operate it, we can guarantee entire satisfaction to those who patronize us. Bring us your cotton.

Respectfully
Chilton Warehouse & M,f,g. Company. tf.

FOR SALE

At all times, high grade hogs and pigs, Berkshire and Poland China, crossed.

M. J. BARRETT,
tf Thorsby, Ala.

FOR SALE!

300 acres land, 150 acres in cultivation. All in Sec. 6 T., 20, R., 14, 9 miles S. W. of Clanton. Good dwelling house and out buildings and 3 good tenant houses. Good and lasting well of water. This good farming land will be sold at a bargain. Call and see,

J. H. CARTER,
tf Clanton, R. F. D. No.

BUSINESS PROPOSITION

The best whiskey in the country is here. If you don't believe it, try me.

J. M. COLLINS,
Palace Saloon, Calera, Ala.
tf.

E. G. Rollins & Co.

—DEALERS IN—

General Merchandise, Clothing, Shoes and Fancy Groceries.

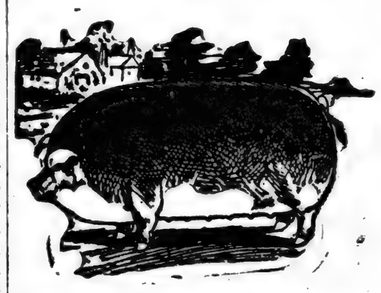
CLANTON, :-: ALABAMA.

WOODLAWN FARM.

Barred Plymouth Rocks

PURE BRED

Setting of 15 fresh eggs for 50c. Packing for shipping 10c extra.



PURE BRED

Duroc Jersey Hogs.

Write us for prices before you buy. Address,

W. Y. NIX,
Maplesville, Alabama.

We Have the Goods

You Have the Money

Let Us Exchange.

Having bought out the stocks of J. W. Smith and J. E. Littlejohn, we are selling them out at prices that will astonish you.

Shoes

Of all kinds to be sold regardless of cost.

New line of General Merchandise also at remarkably low figures. Highest prices paid for Eggs, Chickens and all Country Produce. Come and let us get acquainted.

Cooper Brothers,

At the New Store Next to J. W. Smith's Old Stand

Clanton, Alabama.

A. A. JACKSON

Lomax, Alabama.

General merchandise, corn, hay, shorts, shoes, men's hats, Ladies hats. Best quality and lowest prices in all goods.

Highest Market Price Paid for Chickens and Egg

Cor. 2nd Ave and 7th St. THE BIG STORE, Cor. 2nd Ave and 7th St.

—Is at The Head of The Procession.—

Dry Goods, Clothing, Hats, Shoes, FURNITURE,

COFFINS AND BURIAL NECESSITIES.

W. I. MULLINS,

Clanton, Alabama

Krupp Never So Busy on Artillery.

A representative of the Krupp works at Essen, Prussia, informed the press that the concern is manufacturing 2700 pieces of artillery for eight governments. The works never had such large orders for artillery.

Drago Doctrine Referred.

The Pan-American Congress at Rio Janeiro, Brazil, voted to send the Drago Doctrine as a question before The Hague tribunal.

Big Corn Crop in Tennessee.

The State Agricultural Bureau estimates the Tennessee corn crop this year at 100,000,000 bushels against 75,000,000 bushels last year. The average condition this year is reported as eleven points above the average of the past two years and the acreage is greater than in a previous year.

Boston Wool Market.

Steady improvement in the tone of the Boston wool market is reported

REGISTRATION

Beat No. 4, at Clanton, ... 28, 29, 30, 31 and Sept. 1, ... the purpose of considering ... each elector whose name is ... posed to strike from the ... list and determine same.

Beat No. 4, at Clanton, ... 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 1906, for ... of registering voters.

Beat No. 4, at Clanton, ... and Saturday before the ... November, 1906.

R. H. GA...
B. L. JON...
P. M. MOO...
Board of Registrars Chilton C...

tf

PROGRAM

Chilton County Teachers' ... Be Held at Pleasant Grove, ... on September 7 and 8, 190...

Friday.

10 a. m. Devotional exer... P. G. Maness.

10:30. Welcome addres... A. Haggard.

10:45. Response—Prof. H... ris.

11. Enrolling teachers.

11:15. "Psychology of t... Room"—Prof. R. A. Rasco, ... lestia Dunlap.

Recess for dinner.

1:30 p. m. "The Needs ... County, Educationally"—Pro... Spear, Mrs. A. G. Dunlap.

2:30. "Unconscious Traini... P. G. Maness.

3:30. "How to Secure ... During Recitation"—Prof. W... gard, Mrs. Etta Apperson.

Saturday.

9 a. m. Devotional exerci...

9:30. "Methods and ... Teaching Agriculture"—Pro... Thompson.

10:15. "Manual Train... Robert Jones.

11. Educational addres... Craig.

This institute will be h... western part of the county, ... on the M. & O. R. R. We ... all the teachers of the co... this one, especially those ... not yet attended the county ... this year. This will be the ... tute in this scholastic year. ... law requires teachers to att... one during each year. Do ... last opportunity slip.

J. W. MOO...
J. N. DEN...
tf C...

NOTICE.

Road overseers in Beat ... tend to their duty or take ... quences.

J. W. KIC...
J. M. GRA...
T. N. HOW...
tf Appo...

COMMISSIONER'S S...

Under and by virtue of ... and decree rendered by the ... Probate Court of Chilton ... the 14th day of August, 190... the undersigned was appo... missioner to sell the her... scribed real estate, for the ... an equitable division ther... therefore, in pursuance of ... cordance with said order ... I will proceed to sell to t... bidder, for cash, in front of ... house door in Clanton, Ala... MONDAY, SEPTEMBER ...

the following described real ... wit: Beginning at the ... ner of the Episcopal chur... the south side of Second ... running thence west along ... ond avenue 120 feet to the ... corner of the Chilton Ware... Manufacturing Company's ... south along the east line ... 210 feet to the Chilton Ware... Manufacturing Company's ... thence east along the so... said property 120 feet; th... 210 feet to point of beginn... west of the Louisville and ... railroad, in the town of C... ton county, Alabama.

N. A. K...
8-16-06-3wks Co...

FOR SALE!

A saw mill outfit ... ing of engine, boile... mill, Challoner shi... three Challoner shin... ses, one small pla... matcher. All in f... condition. Will sell ... terms, or exchange ... property, except ... outfit.

C. E. Wheelock, ...
Fixto...

JOHN W. HAR...

Jemison, Al...

Photographer. ... all grades of ... Frames made to ... Work done at ... home by appoint...

COUNTY AND COUNTY OFFICIALS

Circuit Court.

... Term—Third Monday in May. ... Term—Fourth Monday in N...

...—S. L. Brewer, Tuskegee. ...—W. B. Bowling, Dadeville. ...—Sam W. Collins.

Chancery Court.

... Term—Second Monday in ... Term—Second Monday in Sep...

...ellor—Hon. W. W. Whitesides. ...—Mrs. S. A. Stewart, Clan...

County Court.

... Monday in each month.

Commissioners' Court.

... Monday February, first Mon... April, first Monday June, second ... July, second Monday August, ... Monday November.

COUNTY OFFICERS.

... of Probate—L. H. Reynolds. ...—W. T. Callen. ...—J. M. Morgan. ...—W. M. Adams. ... Assessor—L. B. Pounds. ... Collector—T. J. Hubbard.

County Commissioners.

... District—W. H. Conway. ... District—Alex Glasscock. ... District—R. P. Kendrick. ... District—Moses Robinson.

Supt. of Education.

... J. W. Moore, Clanton.

County Surveyor.

... R. Dahl, Calera.

State Senator.

... W. R. Oliver, Calera.

COUNTY CHURCHES.

MISSIONARY BAPTIST.

...THANY—Rev. J. L. ...eeley, pas... First Sunday and Saturday be... D. L. Hand, clerk.

...TH-SALEM—Rev. M. J. Parrish, ... E. B. Popwell, clerk.

...NE CREEK—Rev. J. L. Busbey, ... First Sunday and Saturday ... W. E. Thomas, clerk.

...LLINS CHAPEL—Rev. J. H. ..., pastor. Third Sunday and ...day before. J. D. Collins, clerk.

...ARS HILL—Rev. J. H. Thomas, ... First Sunday and Saturday ... G. W. Scott, clerk.

...ACEDONIA—Rev. J. H. Thomas, ... Fourth Sunday and Saturday ...e at 3:30 p. m. H. H. Armstrong, ...

...EASANT GROVE—Rev. J. H. ..., pastor. Fourth Sunday and ...day before at 11 a. m. D. H. ..., clerk.

...OVIDENCE—Rev. W. W. Robin... pastor. Second Sunday and Sat... before. Riley Robinson, clerk.

...HOBOTH (Bibb Co.)—Rev. J. H. ..., pastor. Second Sunday and ...day before. D. C. Smitherman, ...

PRIMITIVE BAPTIST.

...THEL—Elder J. P. Nobles, pas... Second Sunday and Saturday be... J. T. Abernathy, clerk.

METHODIST EPISCOPAL.

...OCKY MOUNT—Rev. A. T. Van... ..., pastor. Second Sunday. Sing... every second and fourth Sunday ...noon. Prayer meeting every Wed... ...day night. Ladies' prayer meeting ...y Saturday afternoon.

FRATERNAL SOCIETIES.

Masonic.

... R. A. Chapter, No. 116—... ... Saturday, Clanton.

... Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No. ...—Fourth Saturday, Cooper.

... Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No. ...—First Saturday, Clanton.

...ury Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No. ...—First Saturday, Billingsley.

...man Lodge, A. F. and A. M., ...—Saturday on or before full ..., Marbury.

...son Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No. ...—Saturday on or before full moon, ...

...ton Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No. ...—Tuesday on or before full moon, ...

I. O. O. F.

...son Lodge—First and third Sat... ...

...ton Lodge, No. 394—Second and ... Saturdays.

Woodmen of the World.

...ck Jack Camp, No. 190—First and ... Mondays.

I. O. R. M.

...werse Tribe, No. 96—First and ... Mondays sleep. Visiting chiefs ...ally invited. E. B. Langston, C. ...; J. H. Patton, Sachem.

...werse Tribe No. 78—2nd and 4th ...rday sleeps. Visiting chiefs cor... ...y invited. J. M. Grant, Sachem; ... Parrish, C. of R.

F. E. & C. U. OF A.

Chilton Co. Division Officers.

J. H. Thomas, President, Jemison, Rte. 1.
J. W. Hayes, Vice Pres., Thorsby, Rte 1.
J. N. Dennis, Sec-Treas., Clanton, Rte 6.
G. W. Thomas, Chaplain, Clanton, Rte 2.
J. W. Sorrell, Bus. Agent, Jemison, Rte 4.
C. N. Efland, Lecturer, Clanton, Rte 4.
N. A. Dobbs, Asst. Lect., Clanton, Rte 3.
W. J. Bean, Conductor, Clanton, Rte 4.
W. F. Culpepper, Doorkeeper, Clanton, ...e 3.
W. A. Barnett, Ex. Committee, Jemison, Rte 2.
E. H. Mims, Ex. Committee, Clanton, Rte 1.
J. Wiley Foshee, Ex. Committee, Clanton, Rte 4.

Notice No. 20906.

NOTICE FOR PUBLICATION.

Department of the Interior, Land Office at Montgomery, Ala., July 9, 1906.

Notice is hereby given that the following-named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim, and that said proof will be made before Clerk of Circuit Court, at Clanton, Ala., on Sept. 1, 1906, viz.: George W. Pate, Homestead entry No. 34394, for the E 1-2 of Ne 1-4, E 1-2 of Se 1-4 of Section 2, Tp. 23, in R 15 E.

He names the folowing witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of said land, viz.:

Rolifee F. Bates, of Clanton, Ala.; John Davis, of Clanton, Ala.; William L. Littleton, of Shelby, Ala.; and William M. Willis, of Shelby, Ala.

ROBERT D. JOHNSTON,
Register.

NOTICE TO LAND-OWNERS.

I wish to say that I am preparing maps or plats of each land-owner's property, giving a written description of the land, as it should be described in assessments. I am preparing these plats for the purpose of getting all errors corrected, and at the same time furnish every party an easy and correct way to keep their property correct and avoid future mistakes and annoyance, as well as (sometimes) considerable expense. These plats are made of excellent bond paper and will last a lifetime, and only cost 25 cents each, except where plats are very large, when they will cost 50 cents. Every one that has seen the plats I am making pronounce them splendid and worth many times their cost and well calculated to save their cost many times over. Any one wishing a plat can obtain it by coming to my office in Clanton with their deeds, so as to insure an accurate description.

L. B. POUNDS,
tf Tax Assessor.

COME TO PREACHING.

The Rev. A. C. Swindall will preach at Mount Pleasant school house on the afternoon of the first Sunday in September. Everybody is invited to come. tf

F. E. & C. U. O A.

A resolution was adopted at the last county meting of the Farmers' Union requiring the county lecturer to visit each local in the county at least once every year. Locals who want me to lecture to them will please write me, giving their location, so as to enable me to make a tour of the county in July and August. Address

C. N. EILAND,
tf Route 4, Clanton, Ala.

STRAYED OR STOLEN.

From near my residence on June 25, one iron gray mare colt, one year old; one iron gray horse colt, with star on face, and scar on left hind leg above hock, one and a half years old. Any information leading to their recovery will be liberally rewarded.

C. C. MARTIN,
tf Calera, Ala., Rte 1.

SPECIAL OFFER! !

The Union, Weekly Montgomery Advertiser, and a great white and black map of Alabama, United States and world, three in one, with a picture of every president from Washington to Roosevelt, all for $1.50.

NOTICE.

Jemison, Ala., August 7th, 1906.

Lost—One light clay bank mare, branded on the left shoulder with a heart; the last time heard from she was at Ashby; she weighs about 700 pounds. I will reware any one liberally for information as to where she is, or if returned to me, I will pay well for the trouble.

T. S. DAVENPORT,
tf Jemison, Ala.

CLANTON COTTON MARKET.

Total receipts to Aug. 29, 1906.....6573
Price same date 8 7-8
Receipts same time in 1905.....8065
Price same date 10.60

LOCAL AND PERSONAL.

T. J. Baxley was in Clanton Thursday.

J. Rus Baker was in town Thursday.

...ev. R. M. Honeycutt was in Clanton Thursday.

Frank Price and son, Lonnie, were in town F...

G. G. Riggins and J. H. Efland were in Clanton Friday.

R. F. Sasnett was in town Friday.

I. J. Dennis, of Mt. Creek, was in Clanton Friday.

A. H. Collins and J. R. Collins were in town Friday. A. H. had his buggy badly smashed by Armstrong's runaway mule team.

'Squire J. S. Dennis was in Clanton Friday.

A gentleman from Beat 5, who was in town Friday, said maybe Gulledge could get up a slow trot, but that he couldn't run for a cent.

G. W. Langston was a pleasant visitor Saturday.

Mrs. Sam W. Collins, accompanied by little Miss Eileen Villadsen, of Thorsby, were Clanton visitors Saturday.

Joseph Burnett, a prominent farmer of Collins Chapel, brought The Union a fine watermelon Saturday. Thank you, Joe; call again.

D. L. Hand and C. C. Buckhalter were in Clanton Saturday.

J. R. Short was a welcome caller Saturday.

G. D. Melton, of Coosa county, was in Clanton Saturday, he having brought his mother over on a visit to her son, G. ... Melton, who lives near Clanton.

Anderson Baker, Sr., that sterling old Republican of Verbena, was at the rally Saturday, and said "I'm glad to I came."

M. C. Williams and son, Fed, were in Clanton Monday.

J. L. Dupree and family returned Saturday from their visit to Winston county, and Mr. Dupree looks like he has thoroughly recovered from his illness.

Assessor L. B. Pounds and wife have a new boy at their home. Mother and child doing well and are the care of Dr. L. V. Stabler, of Thorsby.

J. A. Skeggs, of Jemison, was in Clanton Tuesday.

E. G. Rollins is convalescing rapidly from his recent attack of fever, to the great pleasure of his many friends.

MARRIAGE LICENSES.

Knat Smith and Mrs. Birdie Edwards; T. E. McNeal and Miss L. M. Colley.

OBITUARY.

Died at his residence near Randolph on the night of August 21, Mr. Lewis Waldrup, an aged and highly respected citizen of that community. His death came very sudden. Mr. Waldrup was a plain, honest, outspoken man; a man of conviction, a friend to the truth. He was for a long time an official member of the Baptist church, but for the past sixteen years he had affiliated with the church of the "Living God." He leaves a large family of children and grandchildren to mourn his departure. His funeral was conducted by Evngelist J. H. Henika, of Atlanta, who was conducting a series of meetings nearby at the time of his death. The funeral was attended by a large concourse of people. B. B.

INTERESTING MEETING.

On Aug. 21, Rev. J. H. Henika, of Atlanta, commenced a series of meetings at the Waldrup school house, which continued until the 24th, inclusive, holding as many as three services in one day. He was given good attention; the attendance was fairly good. He is quite a logical speaker, with fine reasoning powers, lucid and highly interesting.

Among the subjects used was that of salvation, showing that the common salvation implied justification and a resurrection to life, while the greater salvation implied the same with sanctification and immortality added. Another was the divine plan of the ages illustrated by an "instrument of ten strings," showing that the various denominations touched one or more of these strings, but in order to have perfect music or harmony in the great plan we must touch all the strings, which includes election, free grace, Abrahamic and law covenants, second death, etc.

Another was the typical significance of the sacrificial features of the tabernacle of ancient Israel. Another was "Thy Kingdom Come." Last was on the six days of creation, which was a heavy blow against "higher criticism," and was grand and full of timely instruction. During the meeting he administered the ordinance of baptism by immersion to one young lady, after she professed to be justified and consecrated to death; also giving a clear talk on baptism.

Mr. Henika is a fine scholar, and holds an honorable position in Atlanta. He is laboring under the auspices of the Watch Tower Biblical Tract Society. A.

TAX NOTICE

Assessor's and Collector's First Round.

We will attend at the following times and places for the purpose of collecting the State and County Taxes of Chilton County for the year 1906 and assessing the taxes for the year 1907:

	1906.
Kincheon, Beat 6	Oct. 1
Pletcher, Beat 8	Oct. 2
Stanton, Beat 8	Oct. 3
Shoults, Beat 7	Oct. 4
Maplesville, Beat 7	Oct. 5
Benson, Beat 3	Oct. 6
Macedonia, Beat 3	Oct. 8
Providence, Beat 2	Oct. 9
Jemison, Beat 2	Oct. 10
Mineral Springs, Beat 1	Oct. 11
Flint Hill, Beat 11	Oct. 12
Cane Creek, Beat 4, until 12 m	Oct. 13
Thorsby, Beat 9	Oct. 15
Clanton, Beat 4	Oct. 16
Cooper, Beat 10	Oct. 17
Vervena, Beat 5	Oct. 18

L. B. POUNDS,
Tax Assessor.
T. J. HUBBARD,
tf Tax Collector.

IN MEMORIAM.

On Wednesday, August 22, 1906, at 4 p. m., the angels of the Lord visited the home of Mr. M. C. Williams. After some four weeks' illness Sister Mattie Williams, wife of M. C. Williams, went to the great beyond. She was in the thirty-second year of her age when God called her home, where she will awake to suffer no more. She was a devoted Christian and a power for her Master's cause, having been a member of the church for eighteen years. We should bear in mind that God is the giver of all good and perfect gifts; "the Lord giveth and the Lord taketh away." She leaves to mourn her loss a dear companion and eight little fond children, ranging in age from three weeks to thirteen years. May God help the dear father and his dear aged mother to have health and strength to raise these little ones. The funeral took place Thursday at 2 p. m. at Chestnut Creek cemetery, near Cooper, Rev. I. Bice preaching a grand sermon, saying that though we all die, yet the dead will rise on the last day. Our earnest prayers and deepest sympathies are with the bereaved family.

J. A. BOOCKHOLDT.

FOR SALE.

30 young cockerels. Silver Spangled Hamburgs, Golden Laced Wyandotts, Buff, Brown and White Leghorns. Prices 50c to $1.50. All birds pure bred and of good quality.

J. B. Downs,
tf Clanton, Ala.

GINNING SFASON 1906-7
We have engaged Joe and Walter Maddox to run and operate our gins for the coming season. We have the best machinery and with these men to operate it, we can guarantee entire satisfaction to those who patronize us. Bring us your cotton.
Respectfully
Chilton Warehouse & M,f,g. Company, tf.

FOR SALE

At all times, high grade hogs and pigs, Berkshire and Poland China, crossed.

M. J. BARRETT,
tf Thorsby, Ala.

FOR SALE!

300 acres land, 150 acres in cultivation. All in Sec. 6 T., 20, R., 14, 9 miles S. W. of Clanton. Good dwelling house and out buildings and 3 good tenant houses. Good and lasting well of water. This good farming land will be sold at a bargain. Call and see,

J. H. CARTER,
tf Clanton, R. F. D. No.

BUSINESS PROPOSITION

The best whiskey in the country is here. If you don't believe it, try me.

J. M. COLLINS,
Palace Saloon, Calera, Ala.
tf.

E. G. Rollins & Co.

—DEALERS IN—

General Merchandise, Clothing, Shoes and Fancy Groceries.

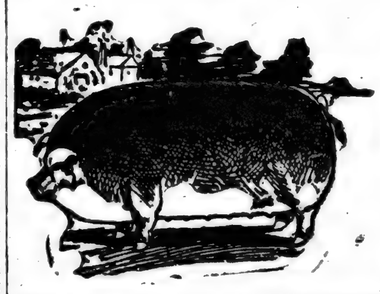
CLANTON, :-: ALABAMA.

WOODLAWN FARM.

Barred Plymouth Rocks

PURE BRED

Setting of 15 fresh eggs for 50c. Packing for shipping 10c extra.



PURE BRED

Duroc Jersey Hogs.

Write us for prices before you buy. Address,

W. Y. NIX,
Maplesville, Alabama.

We Have the Goods
You Have the Money
Let Us Exchange.

Having bought out the stocks of J. W. Smith and J. E. Littlejohn, we are selling them out at prices that will astonish you.

Shoes

Of all kinds to be sold regardless of cost.

New line of General Merchandise also at remarkably low figures. Highest prices paid for Eggs, Chickens and all Country Produce. Come and let us get acquainted.

Cooper Brothers,
At the New Store Next to J. W. Smith's Old Stand
Clanton, Alabama.

A. A. JACKSON

Lomax, Alabama.

General merchandise, corn, hay, shorts, shoes, men's hats, Ladies hats. Best quality and lowest prices in all goods.

Highest Market Price Paid for Chickens and Egg

Cor. 2nd Ave and 7th St. THE BIG STORE, Cor. 2nd Ave and 7th St.

—Is at The Head of The Procession.—

Dry Goods, Clothing, Hats, Shoes, FURNITURE,

COFFINS AND BURIAL NECESSITIES.

W. I. MULLINS,
Clanton, Alabama

Krupp Never So Busy on Artillery.

A representative of the Krupp works at Essen, Prussia, informed the press that the concern is manufacturing 2700 pieces of artillery for eight governments. The works never had such large orders for artillery.

Drago Doctrine Referred.

The Pan-American Congress at Rio Janeiro, Brazil, voted to send the Drago Doctrine as a question before The Hague tribunal.

Big Corn Crop in Tennessee.

The State Agricultural Bureau estimates the Tennessee corn crop this year at 100,000,000 bushels against 75,000,000 bushels last year. The average condition this year is reported as eleven points above the average of the past two years and the acreage is greater than in a previous year.

Boston Wool Market.

Steady improvement in the tone of the Boston wool market is reported

THE LITTLE GUEST-ROOM IN MY HEART.

The little guest-room in my heart
I kept for thy tenancy,
And though thy presence stays apart
It is not wholly bare of thee;

For all the dreams there take thy shape,
And from each humble thing it holds
Some fragrant thought of thee escapes,
Like lavender from linen-folds.

No picture hangs upon the walls
That any other eye could trace,
But ever where the sunlight falls
I see the glory of thy face.

No other tenant may it take—
Nay, rather loneliness for choice!
I would not have another wake
The echo's dreaming of thy voice.

—Margaret Root Garvin in Lippincott's.

THE SPIRIT OF THE LAGOON.

By JULIA M. KNIGHT.

It was a wonderful night, white, magical, transfigured as the creation of some poet's fancy; such a night as could only come to this siren of the sea, fair Venice, under the throbbing light, the languorous warmth of a midsummer moon. For hours they had been drifting about, through glimmer and gloom, stars above and stars below, in the graceful white curtained gondola, that rocked on the silver dimpling tide like some seabird airly poised for flight.

At last they could not speak for looking, but sat hand clasped in hand, drinking it all in; the splendor of sea and sky, the fair foreign scene that rose mirage like before their vision. Stately dome, airy minaret and palace tower, etched against the soft summer skies, moon flooded piazzas, arched bridges, and dar'ling water ways, shimmering tracts of light across by the ghostly shapes of passing gondolas on their noiseless flight.

To the girl, a mere slip of a thing in diaphanous white, of a delicate flower-like loveliness, it presented all the charm of novelty; to the man, a revisiting of former scenes under the spell of her girlish presence, the wonders of the old world, the illusions of his youth, seen once again through the light of her happy eyes; and in all Europe what sort so fitting as Venice for a pair of married lovers under the first glamor of the honeymoon?

Suddenly, without warning, through the stillness of the summer night, a waft of music was borne to them, a gush of melody, so wild, sweet and strange, that it thrilled their hearts with its swift appeal; it was the last touch to the picture.

Whose did it spring? Where lurked the unknown singer who could work such spells? Not a glimmer of light or any token of a human presence in the palace walls that rose sheer before them from the rippling tide, the fragrant solitude of the old garden, half-glimpsed through its broken water gate.

It was not the ringing refrain of the gondolier's song echoing across the lagoons at intervals, or the richer harmonies of some passing music boat, softened by distance. There was something fitful, fairylike, unreal in the mysterious music, which seemed to surround them like the silver atmosphere of the night; now soaring upward on the path of the moonbeams from the darkness of the deserted palace, now wailing forth from the blossomy tangle of the shadowy garden, like the sorrowful plaint of an ecstatic nightingale. Then as they held their breath to listen, a single voice rose in a bold, beautiful melody, almost human and articulate in its passionate meaning; then a duo, tender, melting, caressing, with love for its theme; and ere the exquisite cadences had faded away, a burst of mocking laughter, strange, eerie, indescribable in effect, rang forth and startled all the echoes of the lonely palace.

Beppo, leaning on his oar in careless ease, a picturesque figure in the moonlight, with his lithe grace and rich Italian beauty, shuddered and crossed himself as before the powers of darkness; the girl crept nearer to her companion, as if for protection, her face touched with a sudden pallor; while the man, a musician in his way, and a connoisseur of the highest in art, drew a deep breath of infinite satisfaction.

"Oh, Harold!" cried the girl in low, hushed tones. "What is it? A bird, a human voice, an angel, a demon?"

"A violin," was the ready response. "Frightened, Lotta? You dear, foolish, unreasoning imaginative child"; and he patted her cheek teasingly, caressingly.

"But where, how? I believe it is witchcraft," and there was a traitorous tremble in her soft voice.

"So be it then," with laughing good nature. "Italy is the land of romance and unreality, and by good chance we have stumbled upon one of its mysteries. Still, I'll give a good round sum to meet this famous fiddler, who plays o' nights when the moon is high, and exercises the skill of the Necromancer over poor superstitious mortals."

"Oh, you may laugh, Harold," she pouted. "It's a man's privilege, a sign of his superiority, I suppose. But there is something creepy and uncanny about the whole thing, say what you will. Ask Beppo what he thinks."

"Beppo, indeed," and he laughed. "An Italian—one knows what to expect there."

The music ceased with that last wild trill of laughter and only the low, murmuring sound of the tide, lapping the marble steps of the deserted palace, broke the charmed silence of the hour. It was midnight as they floated back to the hotel in the flooding moonlight, and while the girl leaned dreamily back in her cushions, the man chattted with Beppo in his own tongue and won a frank confession of his beliefs, fears and convictions regarding the matter in hand.

"Signor, the spot is haunted"; he said unrestrained. "All Venice knows it. It is half a century since any one lived there; they tell strang tales of the Palazzo Clementi, at night—" and he shuddered at the recollection. "Some foolish fellows went prowling about the place many years ago, but they only tried it once;" he glanced hastily at his listener: then reassured by his gravity, continued his confidences with growing vehemence.

It seemed an old romance clung to the lonely palace, once the scene of pomp and splendor, of many a gorgeous fete in the palmy days of the pleasure loving Venetians. Bianca Clementi, the daughter of the house, sought throughout Italy by wealthy nobles, for her rare beauty and ancient name, by some freak of fancy bestowed her love on one so far beneath her that for a time it passed unnoted.

The beauty of Venice and a simple gondolier, such was Fate. They met at night by stealth, in the old garden, on the lagoon, as they could; but when the discovery came, as come it must, the hapless lover was slain by one of her kinsmen, and the girl saw the dread deed from her balcony overhanging the rose garden.

From that hour evil befell the great house of Clementi; the girl died of a broken heart. In a few years the beautiful palace was deserted and left to its ruin, but at night, it was said, strange music sounded through the lofty halls and corridors, phantom shapes flitted about the old garden, a ghostly gondola slipped to the water gate, and the lovers met as of old in these shadowy solitudes, where they plighted their troth so many years ago.

"I tell the tale as it was told to me, Signor; make of it what you will." Thus Beppo, at the conclusion, light-hearted, careless child of nature that he was, but superstitious to the last drop of his hot Italian blood.

When Harold Whiting carelessly recounted the tale to his girl bride that night, as they sat on the balcony overhanging the water, it was with a mingled sense of vexation and amusement that he saw how readily she accepted the gondolier's version of the miraculous music, how she responded to the appeal of the old time romance.

But when, as time went on, and the nocturnal concert was repeated again and again without visible cause, when he noted how firm a hold it had taken on her young imagination, how it fostered her sense of the supernatural, he was filled with serious concern. In vain he reasoned, protested, pleaded with the girl. Beppo's idle imaginings and vein of superstition, the strange haunting music, surpassed his soundest judgment, his gentlest authority; until at last, wearied by her obstinate adherence to an idea, which threatened to rob her of health, peace of mind and enjoyment, he resorted to stronger measures, and scolded her as one would a child who had committed some misdemeanor.

"Lotta, for shame! I believe you capable of better sense, or I had never brought you to this land of sentiment and superstition. It is one thing for poor untaught Beppo to credit fables fit for a child's intelligence, but for you, an American girl, born and bred in a free country, to lend yourself for one instant to such a piece of arrant nonsense—"

But here the lecture came to an ignominious end, with the fair penitent in tears, but still unconvinced; and for the first time he realized the folly of reasoning with a woman, and that the sweetest, most pliable of the gentler sex are more than a match for the strongest man.

The only visible result of this first cloud on the honeymoon was a fixed resolution on his part to force the matter to come to some reasonable conclusion before many weeks had passed, or to leave the scene of enchantment forever.

But they were both under the spell of this city of the sea, like many another bridal pair, who have idled away their first happy months in its golden, translucent atmosphere. City of dreams and visions, of rose dappled dawns and sunset pomp, of palace walls reflected in the blue tide, of blossoming gardens hidden from sight like fair cloistered nuns, of bright winged boats on the shining lagoons, of picturesque, gay-hearted people, and days of careless content.

So they lingered on, and each night by mutual unspoken consent, when the moon lent its mystery to the sleeping scene, the prow of their light gondola turned instinctively toward the lonely music haunted spot, where enchantment lurked in the shadows, and tangled roses mingled their fragrance with the salt sea breeze.

And when the wondrous music sobbed, and sighed, and swelled through the stillness of the voluptuous southern night, weaving a web of witchery about them, for the time reason was silenced in breathless delight, and Whiting felt his sturdy Anglo-Saxon sense waver under the charm of the hour, the solution of the strange problem immeasurably removed from his reach.

If such music, which scaled the heights, and sounded the depths of human joy and woe, played on the heartstrings as the wild wind played on aeolian harp, made one laugh and weep as a very child—if such music sprang from living hands, then would he hail the unseen player as the wonder of the age, a magician by divine right.

But for Lotta he had long ago leaped from the gondola and forced an entrance to the moon-flecked old garden, with its tangled paths and riotous roses, clambered over the balcony to the darkened palace, and called to the hidden musician to come forth.

But when at this laughing suggestion she had clung to him in unfeigned terror, and even Beppo had clasped his hands in mute appeal, he was forced to abandon the scheme, and leave to chance the revealment of a mystery, which teased his fancy, baffled his intelligence, haunted and led him on through a tortuous maze that had no end.

One day, while lounging in an outdoor cafe, he recounted the adventure to a chance acquaintance, a painter of some renown, who had summered so many years in Venice in the pursuit of his craft that every crooked canal and hidden history were known to him.

He listened to the recital with praiseworthy gravity, pondered a moment, then said earnestly:

"There is but one musician, to my knowledge, who could answer to that description. The great Paganini! You have heard of him? If he is here in hiding, the mystery is soon cleared. The Palazzo Clementi, you say; the haunted house?" and he laughed. "It would be like that strange being to select just such a lonely abode for his summer retirement, to come forth at the witching hour of night and practise his black art on the sensibilities and superstitions of these foolish Venetians, who, with all their charm, are but children in reason. No wonder the little girl was frightened. I can see it all. They call him the mad violinist—'genius is to madness close allied,' you know—they believe him to be in league with the evil one, and his eccentricities, his startling music, which defies alike analysis or imitation, fosters the strange delusion. He is the despair of all living violinists, the terror of the superstitious, the wonder of the time, the problem of all time, the most fantastic, God-gifted being I have ever encountered."

"You have heard him, then?" eagerly.

"But once, yet the recollection will last me for a lifetime. I would cross half a continent to hear him again, to experience once more the sensations I then felt under the compelling power of that violin; which is a violin, a woman's voice, a bird in the forest, a bubbling fount of melody, a chorus of demons—what he wills. Hush!" and rising, he followed with his eyes a tall, slight figure passing through the crowd to a waiting gondola. Whiting caught one glimpse of a striking Italian face of unusual pallor, heightened by long, black, elf locks, and a pair of flashing eyes; the careless loungers made way respectfully, as for some distinguished personage.

"Who is it?" he cried, in some excitement.

"That man, amico mio," said the painter, in low, impressive tones, "is none other than Nicolo Paganini, of whom we have been speaking, and the mystery of the lagoon is cleared. With your permission, I'll come to the concert tonight; twelve sharp, when the moon rises."—American Cultivator.

QUAINT AND CURIOUS.

Vegetarians claim that hair grows less luxuriantly on the heads of meat eaters.

Some of the largest ocean steamers can be converted into armed cruisers in 30 hours.

Beethoven became deaf, and long before his death could not even hear the drums in the orchestra.

All authorities agree in stating that the ancient inhabitants of Ireland must have been very familiar with gold and well accustomed to its use.

When the late Queen Victoria ascended the throne more than 41 percent of the people of Great Britain and Ireland could not write their names.

The new field gun of the French army has a trail ending in a spade fixed in the ground, which absorbs the recoil. The limbers are arranged in line with the guns during action, and an arrangement of shields furnishes pretty good protection for the gunners.

Matthew Sawyer, age 97 years, who died the other day in Atchison county, Kansas, had helped to make the inauguration suit worn by President Andrew Jackson. He hauled corn to Atchison in the early days, receiving 10 cents a bushel, and it took an entire load to purchase a pair of boots.

Locusts are devastating South Algeria. The swarms are so great as almost to defy imagination. It is not easy to conceive of an almost solid phalanx of insects 125 miles long by six miles wide. Unfortunately, the devastation which such myriads of voracious insects must create in vegetation is not so difficult to appreciate. Wherever the host has passed nothing green remains. Even the houses are becoming uninhabitable. The Oran province seems doomed for this year.

THE PULPIT.

A SCHOLARLY SUNDAY SERMON BY DR. W. S. LEWIS.

Subject: The Secret of the Lord.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—President W. S. Lewis, D. D., of Morningside College, Sioux City, Ia., is the vacation preacher in the Hanson Place M. E. Church. He began his services there Sunday morning and had a good audience. He is an excellent preacher. His subject was "The Fear of the Lord." The text was from Psalm xxv.:14: "The secret of the Lord is with them that fear Him, and He will show them His covenants." Dr. Lewis said:

Words, like men, are affected by the atmosphere in which they live. A word spoken 3000 years ago, but to another people, and in another clime, may fail to represent its highest and best meaning to those born in another age and under other skies. Many years have flown since this word was spoken, and at least one of these in the text needs a word of explanation—fear. The good Book says: "The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom," but reference is made in the New Testament to the fact that perfect love casteth out fear. Thanks to the cross, the broken tomb, the descent of fire which spoke on cloven tongue, for a changed atmosphere, in which our text may read: "The secret of the Lord is with them that love Him."

The problem of knowledge is not that, but how, it is. A few small philosophers have doubted the fact that they knew, but that is carrying doubt to the point of insanity. We know, and we know we know; the how that we know is the problem. That an idea may be passed from one mind to another, may even by crystallized into a word and remain pent up there from century to century, to break forth into another mind, to be reflected on, and on, through the ages. How this is, is more than we know. How that the mind may get a voice from the rocks so that the mountains shall speak and make themselves understood, and from the sky and from the sea. We know they speak, but how? That is the question. Do you think that God, who has expressed His love in flower, in brook, in sky, should have exhausted all His resources to make Himself known as He speaks from nature? God speaks to the heart, the inner world is His realm. This is His throne, and He leaves His secrets there to become the seed of thought, of inspiration and of action. The great problem of hearing His word and then to translate it through the tongue, the finger tips and footprints, so that it shall become the living word to other folks, is the problem of the hour.

To whom will God speak? We raise this question to answer it by asking you to whom do you commit the secrets of your heart? Do you tell those who revile you, who have no faith in you, who speak ill of you? Do you tell these the secrets of your heart? It's a great thing to be a friend, to know how to awaken the spirit of friendship in others. To whom do you commit your secrets? The first quality of friendship is the capacity for faith. You cannot trust those in whom you do not believe. You cannot inspire in them the first note of friendship. The captious critic has no friends. The teacher who asks his pupil the hardest questions and criticises him because he fails to answer; the preacher who begins his service and ends it with a spirit of criticism, will not awaken in the heart the deepest, the best inspirations. We must begin by saying: "I believe in you." We must have the capacity for seeing the best and the truest in people. We are commanded in the good Book that we should love one another, and I trust we do, but I am thankful that that does not include that command that we must like everybody, for there are some folks whom it is hard to like, and of these are the thin-voiced, pinched-faced, hollow-eyed critic. The first quality, then, is that of inspiring people with the idea that we believe in them, and if we have faith in others, they will have faith in us, for faith in the heart begets faith in one another. It is so with God. If we would know Him and awaken within Him the power even of committing to us His secrets, we must believe, for with the heart the man believeth unto righteousness—that righteousness which brings the image of God into the face of clay. And then, too, we must tell our friends that we believe in them. I love flowers much, but pray you do not reserve them all for the funeral. Tell your friends you believe them; tell them that you love them. Speak with your lips, speak with your eye, speak with your finger tips. Tell them you love them. And God, too, is touched by the same testimony. "With the mouth confession is made unto salvation." Another quality absolutely essential to friendship, absolutely essential to true friendship with man and with God—and that is downright, sincere heart honesty. I heard a man say the other day: "My religion is to pay my debts." He answered the question of how much he is worth by a round $50,000, and I said: "Of course, you pay your debts. There is one a little less great than the Almighty who would be after you if you did not, for Uncle Sam sees to that." You will pay your debts, but that is not the measure of honesty in the sense in which I speak it now. It is that sort of spiritual honesty that would blush deeply to think a falsehood or to harbor in the heart one moment a shadowy thought. It is the kind of honesty that is born of a pure heart—a heart touched by the sunlight of His infinite love, a heart that is made clean by the power of His spirit. Such sincerity as this, such downright honesty of purpose, is loved of men and God alike. It is the basis of true friendship with man and with God.

I read a new text the other day. It was as old as the voice of David, but it came with a new voice, thus: "The Lord made known His ways unto Moses, and His acts unto the children of Israel." This is the distinction between Moses and the children of Israel. Moses understood the act of God, but some way he had the soul-reach which recognized the finger of God uniting act to act to tell the sweet story of His love. I remember once, when the children of Israel were hungry, and Moses cried to God. In the morning, on the sand of the desert, everywhere, were little round, white loaves, and the Israelite, standing in the door of his tent, said: "What is it?" "Manna." He ate the gift of God and his hunger was satisfied, and said in his heart: "This is the act of God." But Moses, looking on hungry Israel, satisfying its appetite, and looking up to the blue, said: "This is the way of God." Again, the Israelites cried for food, and God at the word of Moses sent quails, and covered the camp, and the Israelites ate, and were satisfied, satisfied with the act of God, but the spirit of Moses would not rest until he saw through the act to the heart-beat of God, and he saw in quails, in rain, in fire, everywhere, when God spoke, he saw His way. And once, when he climbed the mountain and stood in the presence of Jehovah for forty days, so catching the heart-beat of the Infinite that his face shone with peculiar glory, and he must needs cover it with a veil ere the children of Israel would look upon him. Would you know the difference between Moses and the children of Israel? Their bones were buried in the wilderness, while he, long after, climbed Nebo's height, and, as the old tradition says, God kissed his spirit from his body and buried the clay with His own hand, and gathered the soul to His bosom. We have heard from him once since, when on the Mountain of Transfiguration with Elijah he talked with the man of sorrows concerning the death which He should accomplish at Jerusalem. Moses lives because he learned the ways of God. And would you know the secret of this in everyday life? Some of you have said: "I am poor; I was born poor, and I have held my own." I saw a poor woman the other day. I was directed through a gate into a pasture, down over a hill, through another gate into a green plot of meadow, and there was a little lonely house. The chairs were poor, the stool was broken—poverty everywhere, save only in the face of the woman. Every joint save one was stiff with incurable disease, and with the right hand she toiled busily on for the little ones taht gathered about her feet. I thought that I would bring her a word of consolation, but it was I that was consoled, for in the silence and sorrow of poverty God had talked to her, and her face shone with His beauty, and her eye was bright with His glory. Her words were like ointment poured forth. She lived in the heart of the beatitudes. And once I saw a rich man whose money came easy, and one day he heard the voice of God, and like a brook from the mountain he poured forth his dollars to sweeten and bless society, as the brook makes beautiful the meadows through which it runs on its way to the ocean. He had learned the way of God in riches. And this is what I would say whether the gift be poverty or riches, sickness or health, prosperity or adversity, cloud or shine—they are but the acts of God, and out of these acts He allows us to weave the story of His love, and to learn the beautiful lesson of His ways to the children of men.

Could I tell it all in one word, it is this: Can you remember the days when the smoke of the awful war between the North and the South was beginning to drift toward the ocean? Can you remember the last days of the war? One incident lingers in my memory. It was up in the Adirondack Mountains. A boy had gone from the home early in the sixties—gone to the war. Day after day a mother had prayed — prayed with such importunity, prayed with such faith, that the boy might come home—but the winter of '65, in March, the snow had fallen so deep that it covered the fence, and then a thaw, and then a frost, and the crust was so thick that a beast could walk over it without breaking through. In the early days of March a friend walked fourteen miles over the mountains. He came to the home, and brought a paper, and said: "A battle has been fought, a battle down on the ocean at Fort Fisher, and a stronghold has been taken." And then his voice grew hoarse. He said the battle had cost us much, and then a tear came into his eye, and then he read a long list of the slain, and when his voice spake one word it read: "Charles L——, killed in the fort, buried in the trenches. And the woman did not cry out, but went up stairs and stayed there all the rest of that day and that night, and until the afternoon of the next day. We thought she might never come down, for we had learned of Moses in the presence of God. But in the afternoon she came down, and her face shown like the face of an angel. In the secret of a great sob you may learn the secret of God. The secret of the Lord is with them that fear Him, and He will show them His covenants.

The Chief Duty.

There are times when it is a duty to make money; but the man does not live whose chief duty it is to make money, nor whose chief attention can safely be given to money-making. If one gives money-making first place, both his work and his judgment are undermined and unreliable. If he lets the opportunity to make money be the usual determining factor in his decisions, he is building character on about as stable a foundation as that man who heard Christ's words and did them not. In at least nine cases out of ten there is a better reason for or against any given course of action than a money-making reason. Those who will not believe this soon come to be recognized by their fellows as branded by the dollar mark. And such a mark is the sign of a slavery which robs life of all its real richness.

Make a Friend of Christ.

As we must spend time in cultivating our earthly friendships if we are to have their blessings, so we must spend time in cultivating the companionship of Christ.

Be Kind.

God has put in our power the happiness of those about us, and that is largely to be secured by our being kind.—Henry Drummond.

THE SUNDAY S...

INTERNATIONAL LE... MENTS FOR SEPT...

Subject: Bartimaeus and ... Luke xviii., 35, to l... —Golden Text, Luk... Memory Verses, 42, 43.

I. Bartimaeus cries ... mercy (vs. 35-39). "... nigh." When Jesus and ... ples were entering Jeric... the blind man and Barti... healed. Mark says it wa... were leaving the city. ... man." Matthew says ...

36. "The multitude ... tion to the crowds that ... followed Jesus, the ... pie on their way to attend ... over at Jerusalem ... Nazareth." So called ... reth was His home until ... His active ministry.

38. "He cried." He ... by heard of the fame ... how He could heal the ... the chance of a lifetime ... time to lose; in a moment ... have passed. "Son of David" ... the Jews this expression was ... to the Messiah. "Have ... me." The case of this blind ... illustrates well the condition ... ner and his efforts in com...

39. "Rebuked him." ... a soul begins to cry after ... light and salvation the world ... devil join together to drown ... and force it to be silent. ... more." He was in earnest ... position only caused him to ...

II. Jesus restores ... sight (vs. 40-43).

40. "Jesus stood." ... mercy will always cause the ... to stop. He takes not any ... this is the first thing to be ... to. "To be brought." He ... healed his eyes at a distance ... is an important case and ... to show His power before ... company. "When he ... Mark tells us that in his ... reach Christ he cast away ... ment. 41. "What will ... Christ knew what he desired ... must know it from him: ... plan is to ask if we would ... "Lord." The Revised ... Mark renders this Rabboni, ... ter. This was the highest ... reverence.

42. "Thy faith hath ... His faith was the medium ... which the blessings of ... brought to him. It was not ... neasness, or his prayers, but ... in Christ that was connected ... yet earnestness and prayer ... important. 43. "And im... It was not necessary to w... time for a gradual healing ... stantly he saw. "Follow ... As a disciple.

III. Zacchaeus overcomes ... ties (vs. 1-4).

1. "Passed through." ... ing through." R. V. ... evidently lived in the city ... of the approach of Christ ... apostles must have preceded ... "Zacchaeus." He was a ... (v. 9), but because he had ... in a business so infamous ... of the Jews he was consi... mere heathen (v. 7). ... the publicans." At Jeric... cated one of the principal ... houses. The trade in ... extensive and Zacchaeus was ... ly superintendent of the ... ors who had the oversight ... ome derived from that ... a publican he was a relief... "Rich." And like many ... had not always come honestly ... money.

3. "Sought to see Je... this time Zacchaeus must ... conviction of sin. He was ... fied with his riches and ... est, wicked life. "Little ... And could not see over the ... the multitude. 4. "Ran ... Laying aside his dignity as ... lican.

IV. Jesus abides with ... (vs. 5-7). "5. "Jesus ... The truly divine part was ... fashioned his heart and ... its longing. "Zacchaeus, ... called him by name. ... had probably never met ... flesh before. "Come down," ... whom Christ calls must ... must humble themselves ... abide." Christ invited ... doubting a welcome. He ... remained we do not know ... made haste," etc. He ... pected to have the honor ... noticed, much less to be ... Royal Guest.

7. "When they saw ... crowd of Jews murmured ... quired courage to stand ... dices of the nation, but ... had courage to do the ... guest." Thus recognizing ... as an equal, socially.

V. Salvation comes ... (vs. 8-10).

8. "The half of my ... Some consider this to ... had already done this, ... more probable that he ... minues to use his prop... and humanity. "If—by ... sation." The "if" does ... doubt; he had taken ... fully. "Fourfold." The ... the Roman laws req... gatherers to make ... proved they had defra... ple. 9. "Salvation ... chaeus was saved—de... his past sins and made ... ure." 10. "Is come to ... Zacchaeus was so desir... the Saviour. Jesus was ... to see and save him.

Boy "Burglar" Kills ...

At Philadelphia, ... with a loaded revolver ... ciano, eight years ... killed his baby brother, ... aged three. Claude ... self through the hand ... procured the pistol ... drawer, a ... running ... cupied by his brother ... Victor, shot at them. ... was a burglar. He ... pistol and it was ... the ball striking him ...

Winter... CHILL... CURE... AND ALL... Has been a standard ... Pleasant to take; leaves ... for children. Guaranteed ... and $1 bottles. Sent exp... sale at the ... ARTHUR PETER & CO...

Positions GUARANTEED BY A $1000 BANK DEPOSIT
R. R. Fare Paid. Notes Taken
500 FREE COURSES
Board at Cost. Write Quick
VIRGINIA BUSINESS COLLEGE, Macon, Ga.

...HAND AND BOOKKEEPING ... Penmanship, Shorthand, Typewriting, ... Railroad basis. Lone Wire connected to ... College to position. Positions guaran... Free catalogue. The American Telegraph ... and College, Millersburg, Ky., Box 107.

Smithdeal's
A first business college in Va. to own its building. No vacations. Ladies and Gentlemen. Shorthand, Penmanship, Typewriting, Telegraphy. Three fine targets by mail also. The leading business college south of the Potomac. Handsome Catalogue. Address SMITHDEAL, President, Richmond, Va.

Might Be There.

...partment store salesman had ...enty-nine rolls of dress goods ... shelf and was a trifle im...

..." he said, politely, "isn't ...thing here which suits you?" ...replied the fair shopper, "I ...won't select the goods now. ...I'm just looking for a friend." ...'s another roll on the top ...ld the salesman. "I'll take ...If you think your friend is ...be in it."—Puck.

...tus Dance; Nervous Diseases per... ...ured by Dr. Kline's Great Nerve ... 2 trial bottle and treatise free. ...Kline, Ld., 931 Arch St., Phila., Pa.

...estimated that £80,000,000 ... British treasure lies sunk ... route from England to India.

...low's Soothing Syrup for Children ...ftens the gums, reduces inflamma... ...pain, cures wind colic, 25c a bottle

Figuring Profits.

...ern writer has added another ...the list of those recently ...on the subject of how to fig... ...in the retail business, and ...ctical method of figuring he ...the following methods:

...t the cost from the selling ...difference, of course, being ... Divide the latter (decimal... ...selling price, and the result ...he true profit, thus: Cost $5, ...rice $8, profit $3, and $8 is ...in $3.375 times, showing the ...this instance to be 37 1-2 per...

...will be found a table that may ...l to the man in a hurry: ...e a profit of 16 2-3 percent, ...rcent to cost. ...e a profit of 20 percent, add ...t to cost. ...e a profit of 25 percent, add ...rcent to cost. ...e a profit of 33 1-3 percent, ...rcent to cost. ...e a profit of 50 percent, add ...nt to cost.—Confectioner &

...are now about 3,000 motor ... over 1,850 motor cycles in

...gnorance is bliss, who is he ...be mean enough to put her

...nch eat twice as much bread ...itish.

...OD NIGHT'S SLEEP.

...ine So Beneficial to Brain and Nerves.

...awake nights makes it hard ...awake and do things in day ...o take "tonics and stimu... ...nder such circumstances is ...ng the house on fire to see ...n put it out. ...ght kind of food promotes ...s sleep at night and a wide-...ividual during the day. ...changed from her old way ...to Grape-Nuts and says: ...bout three years I had been ...sufferer from indigestion. ...ing several kinds of medi... ...doctor would ask me to drop ...es, then meat, and so on, ...ew days that craving, gnaw... ...ng would start up and I ...mit everything I ate and

I started on Grape-Nuts, ...stopped, and the bloating ...hich was so distressing dis... ...entirely. ...other was very much both... ...diarrhea before commenc... Grape-Nuts, because her ...was so weak she could not ...r food. Since using Grape-...is well, and says she don't ...could live without it. ...a great brain restorer and ...ilder, for I can sleep as ...d undisturbed after a sup... ...Grape-Nuts as in the old days ...ould not realize what they ...a "bad stomach." There ...eine so beneficial to nerves ...as a good night's sleep, ...ou can enjoy after eating ...a."

...ven by Postum Co., Battle ...eek. ...'s a reason."

THE SUNDAY SC

INTERNATIONAL L
MENTS FOR SEPT

Subject: Bartimaeus and Luke xviii., 35, to L
—Golden Text, Luke
Memory Verses, 42, 43.

I. Bartimaeus cries mercy (vs. 35-39). 35.
sign." When Jesus and ples were entering Jericho the blind men and Bartima healed. Mark says it wh were leaving the city. "Ce met." Matthew says there 36. "The multitude."
tion to the crowds that followed Jesus, there were pie on their way to attend
over at Jerusalem. 37.
Nazareth." So called bec reth was His home until
His active ministry.

38. "He cried." He had by heard of the fame of J
how He could heal the blin the chance of a lifetime; the time to lose; in a moment have passed. "Son of David the Jews this expression was to the Messiah. "Have me." The case of this blind illustrates well the condition ner and his efforts in coming 39. "Rebuked him."
a soul begins to cry after light and salvation the world devil join together to drown and force it to be silent.
more." He was in earnest.
opposition only caused it to in
II. Jesus restores Bart
ed (vs. 40-43).

40. "Jesus stood." The mercy will always cause the to stop. He takes not anot this is the first thing to be to. "To be brought." He healed his eyes at a distance, is an important case and He
to show His power before th company. "When he has Mark tells us that in his touch Christ he cast away
mant. 41. "What wilt Christ knew what he desired must know it from him; th plan is to ask if we would
"Lord." The Revised Ve
Mark renders this Rabboni—
ing. This was the highest reverence.

42. "Thy faith hath save
His faith was the mediu which the blessings of G brought to him. It was not meekness, or his prayers, but in Christ that was commend not earnestness and prayers important. 43. "And imme it was not necessary to wa time for a gradual healing stantly he saw." "Followe
As a disciple.

III. Zacchaeus overcome ties (vs. 1-4).

1. "Passed through." "
ing through."—R. V.
evidently lived in the city.
of the approach of Christ apostles must have preceded
"Zacchaeus." He was a Je
(v. 9), but because he had in a business so infamous in of the Jews he was conside more heathen (v. 7). "Chi the publicans." At Jericho ed one of the principal houses. The trade in ba extensive and Zacchaeus wa ly superintendent of the t ors who had the oversight rule derived from that ar a publican he was a religious outcast." And like many had not always come hones money.

2. "Sought to see Je this time Zacchaeus must conviction of sin. He was fied with his riches and h
est, wicked life. "Little o
And could not see over the the multitude. 4. "Ran laying aside his dignity as Jesus.

IV. Jesus abides with (vs. 5-7). 5. "Jesus—
The truly divine part was fathomed his heart and his longing. "Zacchaeus called him by name, alt and probably never met h desh before. "Come down whom Christ calls must co
ness, humble themselve ance." Christ invited H doubting a welcome. How remained we do not know made haste," etc. He h proved to have the honor neglected, much less to en
Royal Guest.

6. "When they saw crowd of Jews murmure quired courage to most dices of the nation, but Je had courage to do the righ guest." Thus recognizing as an equal, socially.

V. Salvation comes to
(vs. 8-10).

8. "The half of my
Some consider this to m had already done this, b more probable that he w mises to use his proper and humanity. "If—by sarcasm." The "if" does doubt; he had taken m fully. "Fourfold." The the Roman laws requ gatherers to make when proved they had defraud
ple. 9. "Salvation c chaeus was saved—deliv his past sins and made "
ure." 10. "Is come to s Zacchaeus was so desir the Saviour, Jesus was n
to see and save him.

Boy "Burglar" Kills B

At Philadelphia, Pa., with a loaded revolver Luciano, eight years old killed his baby brother aged three. Claude shot himself through the head procured the pistol from drawer, a "running t cupied by his brothers Victor, shot at them, was a burglar. He shot pistol and it was the ball striking him in

Wintersmith's CHILL TONIC

CURES CHILLS
AND ALL MALARIAL FEVERS.

Has been a standard household remedy for over 40 years. Pleasant to take; leaves no bad effects like quinine; harmless for children. Guaranteed by all druggists. Put up in 50c and $1 bottles. Sent express paid on receipt of price, if not on sale at the home drug store. Address

ARTHUR PETER & CO., General Agents, Louisville, Ky.

...sitions GUARANTEED BY A
...000 BANK DEPOSIT
R. R. Fare Paid. Notes Taken
500 FREE COURSES
Board at Cost. Write Quick
...ISIANA BUSINESS COLLEGE, Macon, Ga.

...SHORTHAND AND BOOKKEEPING
...Penmanship, Shorthand, Typewriting,
...Telegraphy. Private Line Wires connected to
...Offices throughout the South. Positions guaran...teed. Catalogue free. Address The American Telegraph
...and Business College, Atlanta, Ga., Macon, Ga.,
...New Orleans, Montgomery, Ala., Meridian, Miss.

Smithdeal's

...business college in Va. to own its build...ing. No vacations. Ladies and Gentlemen.
...Shorthand, Penmanship, Typewriting, Tele-
...graphy. Three first taught by mail also.
...Best business college south of the Potomac
...Prospectus Address,
...D. SMITHDEAL, President, Richmond, Va.

Might Be There.

...department store salesman had
...enty-nine rolls of dress goods
...shelf and was a trifle im-
...he said, politely, "isn't
...thing here which suits you?"
...replied the fair shopper, "I ...won't select the goods now.
...I'm just looking for a friend."
...another roll on the top
...said the salesman. "I'll take
...if you think your friend is
...be in it."—Puck.

...Dance, Nervous Diseases per-
...manently cured by Dr. Kline's Great Nerve
...Restorer. $2 trial bottle and treatise free.
...Dr. Kline, Ltd., 931 Arch St., Phila., Pa.

...estimated that £80,000,000
...of British treasure lies sunk
...route from England to India.

...Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup for Children
...teething, softens the gums, reduces inflamma-
...tion, allays pain, cures wind colic. 25c a bottle

Figuring Profits.

...modern writer has added another
...to the list of those recently
...on the subject of how to fig-
...it in the retail business, and
...practical method of figuring he
...the following methods:
...the cost from the selling
...difference, of course, being
...Divide the latter (decimal-
...selling price, and the result
...the true profit, thus: Cost $5,
...price $8, profit $3, and $8 is
...in $3.375 times, showing the
...this instance to be 37 1-2 per-

...will be found a table that may
...to the man in a hurry:
...a profit of 16 2-3 percent,
...cents to cost.
...a profit of 20 percent, add
...to cost
...a profit of 25 percent, add
...cent to cost.
...a profit of 33 1-3 percent,
...cent to cost.
...a profit of 50 percent, add
...cost to cost.—Confectioner &

...are now about 3,000 motor
...over 3,850 motor cycles in

...abstinence is bliss, who is no
...be mean enough to put her

...French eat twice as much bread

...OOD NIGHT'S SLEEP.

...Coffee So Beneficial to Brain and Nerves.

...awake nights makes it hard
...awake and do things in day
...to take "tonics and stimu-
...Under such circumstances is
...ing the house on fire to see
...can put it out.
...right kind of food promotes
...ing sleep at night and a wide-
...individual during the day.
...changed from her old way
...to Grape-Nuts and says:
...about three years I had been
...sufferer from indigestion.
...ying several kinds of medi-
...doctor would ask me to drop
...toes, then meat, and so on,
...few days that craving, gnaw-
...ing would start up and I
...vomit everything I ate and

...I started on Grape-Nuts,
...stopped, and the bloating
...which was so distressing dis-
...entirely.
...mother was very much both-
...with diarrhea before commenc-
...Grape-Nuts, because her
...was so weak she could not
...her food. Since using Grape-
...is well, and says she don't
...she could live without it.
...a great brain restorer and
...builder, for I can sleep as
...and undisturbed after a sup-
...Grape-Nuts as in the old days
...could not realize what they
...by a "bad stomach." There
...medicine so beneficial to nerves
...as a good night's sleep,
...you can enjoy after eating
...Nuts."
...given by Postum Co., Battle
...Mich.
...'s a reason."

Bears in the Adirondacks.

The newspaper stories of the killing of three black bears by some city boys in the Adirondacks calls attention anew to the bear law in force in this state. Under the provisions of the statute bears may not be killed in July, August and September, except in Essex county. When the bear protectors went to the legislature for a protective law Essex county objected. The sheep raisers were unwilling to sacrifice their sheep to the bears, and protested so strenuously that they carried their point. It is the feeling of residents in the Adirondacks that bear protection is foolish.

They profess not to be unwilling to live in a menagerie, if the rest of the people of the state are bound to give that character to the North Woods, but they do object to feeding the bears on mutton. A man who has lost fourteen sheep, killed by bears, is in no humor to indulge in sentiment, at all events not in sentiment which gives bruin immunity. The bear protective law in the Adirondacks has no substantial support there in any conviction of its usefulness or reasonableness. On the contrary it is regarded as a "fool law," and one unfortunate effect of it is to bring discredit on game laws in general. There is in the North Woods as elsewhere a growing acceptance of the game protective principle, and it is a great pity that this silly bear law should be in operation to retard the growth of right sentiment.—Forest and Stream.

George Eliot's House Sold.

Bird Grove, the house at Coventry where George Eliot lived with her father, was sold at auction a few days ago for 1600 pounds. It was at this house that the famous novelist formed her friendship with the Brays, through whom she was introduced to literature. Her father died in 1849, and the home at Bird Grove was then broken up.

BACKACHE IS KIDNEYACHE.

Get at the Cause—Cure the Kidneys.

Don't neglect backache. It warns you of trouble in the kidneys. Avert the danger by curing the kidneys with Doan's Kidney Pills. J. A. Haywood, a well known resident of Lufkin, Tex., says:

"I wrenched my back working in a sawmill, was laid up six weeks, and from that time had pain in my back whenever I stooped or lifted. The urine was badly disordered and for a long time I had attacks of gravel. After I began using Doan's Kidney Pills the gravel passed out, and my back got well. I haven't had backache or bladder trouble since."

Sold by all dealers. 50 cents a box. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

An April Drive in Labrador.

Now we are off for a cross-country journey on a round of visits that will take us nearly 200 miles before we reach home. We have some five tons of pemmican, as our first house will be fifty miles distant, and that over rough country, where we might expect to spend a night on the way at the best.

There is, of course, no road or even track, and we shall steer by compass and a rude sketch of the marshes and ponds that in company with a couple of trappers we have made of the path. Our only troubles are the belts of woods through which one cannot drive dog teams without walking ahead with an axe to clear away some of the obstructing trunks and bushes which tangle our paces inextricably. Our last journey was sixty miles to this place. We did the distance in one day.

Crossing the ice here also this trip we had one unique experience. We drove right up on to a large iceberg, and through the noble valley that traversed its centre. The sides of deep blue and green ice rose to over 200 feet in lofty pinnacles. And as the bright sun shone out and rendered transparent the clearer and the inner portions, it seemed from the valley more like being inside a fairy palace than off in the straits of Belle Isle on the back of a hoary visitor from northern Greenland.—Dr. W. F. Grenfell in the Boston Transcript.

Get Out of the Valley.

Get out of the Valley of Desolation. It's only a step to the Hills of Joy, where the stars are shining, and the morning breaks in splendor to the music of the trumpets of God, admonishes the Atlanta Constitution.

Pipe vs. Bugle.

The boatswain's pipe, which has been displaced in the British navy by bugle calls, is to be restored to favor.

Force of a Gale.

A gale blowing eighty miles an hour exerts a pressure of nearly thirty-two pounds to the square foot.

For Your Health.

If you are tired and fagged, drink a glass of milk just before you get in bed, rich milk, with its own cream on it. And also a simple tonic is a tablespoonful of olive oil three times a day, just after the meals; this nourishes the blood, gives a fresh color to the complexion and feeds the nerves, says the Portland Evening Express. Also one ounce of beef juice a day, which is a wineglassful, is better than taking drugs, and if you feel muscular pains around your lungs take cod liver oil three times a day.

Errors About the White House.

To the Editor:

I noticed somewhere recently—I would not say positively that it was in your columns—an article on the White House which contained several mis-statements.

In the first place it was stated the White House was first occupied in 1809, and that its first occupant was President Madison. The fact is, its first occupant was President Adams, who took up his residence there in 1800.

The original mansion was begun in 1792. In 1814 it was burned by the British and rebuilt in 1818.

Another of the errors in the article referred to was the statement that ready-prepared paint is used on the White House to make it beautifully white.

I noticed this especially because I have used considerable paint myself, and wondered that "canned" paint should be used on such an important building, when all painters know that pure white lead and linseed oil make the best paint.

It so happened also that I knew white lead and linseed oil — not ready-mixed paint—were used on the White House, because I had just read a booklet published by a firm of ready-mixed paint manufacturers, who also manufacture pure white lead. In that book the manufacturers admitted that for the White House nothing but "the best and purest of paint could be used," and said that their pure white lead had been selected.

Above all people those who attempt to write on historical subjects should give us facts, even if it is only a date or a statement about wood, or brick, or paint, or other building material. Yours for truth,

L.

The Perfect Lover.

Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, the famous woman's rights leader, said of an untactful motion at a woman's club:

"This motion, in its delicacy, reminds me of a Ripon man.

"The man got married, and after he had been married several years his wife said to him one night:

"'You do not speak as affectionately to me as you used to, Hal. I fear you have ceased to love me.'

"'Ceased to love you!' growled the man. 'There you go again. Ceased to love you! Why, I love you more than life itself. Now shut up and let me read the paper.'"—Philadelphia Bulletin.

Our South American Trade.

Consul Albert W. Swalm of Southampton, furnishes a summary of a British trade report on the exports of Europe and the United States to South America. It shows a percentage increase in the 1900-1904 period over 1885-1889 of 4.6 percent for Great Britain and 46.3 percent for the United States. Complete details of this trade were given in Special Agent Hutchinson's reports.

WILD WITH ITCHING HUMOR.

Eruption Broke Out in Spots All Over Body—Cured at Expense of Only $1.25—Thanks Cuticura Remedies.

"The Cuticura Remedies cured me of my skin disease, and I am very thankful to you. My trouble was eruption of the skin, which broke out in spots all over my body, and caused a continual itching, which nearly drove me wild at times. I got medicine of a doctor, but it did not cure me, and when I saw in a paper your ad., I sent to you for the Cuticura book and I studied my case in it. I then went to the drug store and bought one cake of Cuticura Soap, one box of Cuticura Ointment and one vial of Cuticura Pills. From the first application I received relief. I used the first set and two extra cakes of Cuticura Soap, and was completely cured. I had suffered for two years, and I again thank Cuticura for my cure. Claude N. Johnson, Maple Grove Farm, R. F. D. 2, Walnut, Kan., June 7, 1905."

Poor Honey Crop in Texas.

The honey crop in Uvalde county is almost a complete failure this spring, and some apiarists who have hitherto shipped 400 or 500 cases will hardly get more than 20 or 25 cases at best. The long siege of rainy weather just when the catclaw and guajilla were in bloom caused the failure. However, there will be considerable honey made from the mesquite blossoms, but this is of inferior quality. There can be no complaint on other crops. The corn crop will be immense, and people are now enjoying an abundance of roasting ears, squash, beans, potatoes, beets and other truck. A big hay crop has been harvested. Cotton looks exceedingly well. Many hundred fat cattle have been shipped, as well as fat goats, to market.—Austin (Tex.) Tribune.

Tumors Conquered Without Operations

Unqualified Success of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in Cases of Mrs. Fox and Miss Adams.

One of the greatest triumphs of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the conquering of woman's dread enemy, Tumor.

So-called "wandering pains" may come from its early stages, or the presence of danger may be made manifest by excessive monthly periods accompanied by unusual pain extending from the abdomen through the groin and thighs.

If you have mysterious pains, if there are indications of inflammation, ulceration or displacement, don't wait for time to confirm your fears and go through the horrors of a hospital operation; secure Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound at once and begin its use and write Mrs. Pinkham of Lynn, Mass., for advice.

Read these strong letters from grateful women who have been cured:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:— (First Letter.)

"In looking over your book I see that your medicine cures Tumors. I have been to a doctor and he tells me I have a tumor. I will be more than grateful if you can help me, as I do so dread an operation."—Fannie D. Fox, Bradford, Pa.

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:— (Second Letter.)

"I take the liberty to congratulate you on the success I have had with your wonderful medicine.

"Eighteen months ago my periods stopped. Shortly after I felt so badly I submitted to a thorough examination by a physician, and was told that I had a tumor and would have to undergo an operation.

"I soon after read one of your advertisements and decided to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial. After taking five bottles as directed, the tumor is entirely gone. I have again been examined by the physician and he says I have no signs of a tumor now. It has also brought my periods around once more; and I am entirely well. I shall never be without a bottle of Lydia Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in the house."—Fannie D. Fox, Bradford, Pa.

Another Case of Tumor Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"About three years ago I had intense pain in my stomach, with cramps and raging headaches. The doctor prescribed for me, but finding that I did not get any better he examined me and, to my surprise, declared I had a tumor.

"I felt sure that it meant my death warrant, and was very disheartened. I spent hundreds of dollars in doctoring, but the tumor kept growing, till the doctor said that nothing but an operation would save me. Fortunately I corresponded with my aunt in one of the New England States, who advised me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound before submitting to an operation, and I at once started taking a regular treatment, finding to my great relief that my general health began to improve, and after three months I noticed that the tumor had reduced in size. I kept on taking the Compound, and in ten months it had entirely disappeared without an operation, and using no medicine but Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and words fail to express how grateful I am for the good it has done me."—Miss Luella Adams, Colonnade Hotel, Seattle, Wash.

Such unquestionable testimony proves the value of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and should give confidence and hope to every sick woman.

Mrs. Pinkham invites all ailing women to write to her at Lynn, Mass., for advice.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound; a Woman's Remedy for Women's Ills.

SUMMER RASHES

Soothed by Baths with

Cuticura SOAP

And gentle applications of Cuticura, the great Skin Cure, and purest and sweetest of emollients. For summer rashes, irritations, itchings, chafings, sunburn, bites and stings of insects, tired, aching muscles and joints, as well as for preserving, purifying, and beautifying the skin, scalp, hair, and hands, Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment are Priceless.

Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., Sole Props., Boston.
Mailed Free, "How to Care for Skin, Scalp, & Hair."

WANTED Address of (1) persons of part Indian blood who are not Dawes with any tribe. (2) of men who served in the Federal army, or (3) the nearest kin of such soldiers or sailors, now deceased. NATHAN BICKFORD, Washington, D. C.

A Brief on Worst Crime of the Age—Vaccination as cause of great white plague and untimely death of millions. 10c. C. L. Seward, Atty-at-Law, Liberty, Ind.

AS A GENERAL TONIC FOR THE SYSTEM, TO CLEANSE IT OF MALARIA AND TO CURE CHILLS AND FEVERS USE

OXIDINE

IF YOU ARE BILIOUS TRY IT

Either the Regular or Tasteless Form Will Cure You

Every Bottle Fully Guaranteed — YOUR MONEY BACK IF YOU ARE NOT CURED

Read the following analysis made by the state chemist who analyzed three bottles of Oxidine sent to him by the Secretary of the State Pharmaceutical Association (The Texas Retail Druggists Association):

Houston Laboratories
Chemical and Biological

Analysis and Valuation of Cotton Seed and Rice Products a Specialty. Waters, Soils, Oils, Ores, Etc., Carefully Examined and Reported Upon. Reports Made on Economic Geology.

P. S. TILSON, Director, Analytical and Consulting Chemist
215 1-2 MAIN STREET

HOUSTON, TEXAS, June 27, 1906.

Mr. R. H. Walker, Secretary Texas State Pharmaceutical Association, Gonzales, Texas.

DEAR SIR: Herewith I beg to hand you certificate of analysis of the Oxidine you submitted a few days since.

I trust this will be duly received and found entirely satisfactory. I have kept you waiting for a little while, but I appreciate the responsibility which you have seen fit to place upon me; for that reason I have taken my time to be certain and accurate about my results.

If I can serve you in the future please advise me. Thanking you, I beg to remain, Yours very truly,

P. S. TILSON, Chemist.

Houston Laboratories
Chemical and Biological

Analysis and Valuation of Cotton Seed and Rice Products a Specialty. Waters, Soils, Oils, Ores, Etc., Carefully Examined and Reported Upon. Reports Made on Economic Geology.

P. S. TILSON, Director, Analytical and Consulting Chemist
215 1-2 MAIN STREET

CERTIFICATE OF ANALYSIS

Of Three Bottles of Oxidine Submitted by R. H. Walker, of Gonzales, Texas, Secretary of the State Pharmaceutical Association.

HOUSTON, TEXAS, June 27, 1906.

I find this Oxidine to contain absolutely no poisonous or injurious drugs or chemicals and not a trace of Arsenic, Codeine, Morphine, Bucine or Strychnine; nor, in fact, anything that would produce a harmful effect whatever.

Respectfully submitted,

P. S. TILSON, Chemist.

OXIDINE, THE CHILL CURE THAT CURES CHILLS

Pen Sketch of Darwin.

The recent visit of Sir George Darwin to this city recalls Haeckel's description of the English scientist's distinguished father, given after his first meeting with him:

"Darwin had a tall and venerable appearance with the broad shoulders of an Atlas that bore a world of thought. The tender and friendly eyes were overshadowded by the great roof of the prominent brows. The gentle mouth was framed in a long, silvery white beard. The noble expression of the whole face, the easy and soft voice, the slow and careful pronunciation, the natural and simple tenor of his conversation, took my heart by storm in the first hour that we talked. I seemed to have before me a venerable sage of ancient Greece, a Socrates or an Aristotle."

Darwin seemed equally pleased with his fiery pupil.

Linotype machines are being put in at the Bank of England, and in future the addresses on the dividend notices sent out will be printed, instead of written by hand.

In Germany there is one physician for every 1,700 inhabitants.

Thirty million wooden spoons are made annually in Russia.

On the Heaving Ocean.

First Passenger—What was in tha stew we had for supper?

Second Passenger—I give it up.

First Passenger—I believe I will, too. Let me at that rail, please.

Each ring around Saturn is about 240 miles broad.

CAPUDINE CURES INDIGESTION and ACIDITY HEADACHES ALSO by removing the cause. It acts immediately—you feel its effects in 10 minutes. You don't have to wait a week to know it's good. It cures 10 cents.

The Tulane University OF LOUISIANA
NEW ORLEANS.

EDWIN B. CRAIGHEAD, L. L. D., Pres.

The Tulane University of Louisiana, founded in 1885 as the University of Louisiana, is the logical head of the entire system of public educational institutions of the State.

Full courses are offered in Languages, Sciences, Engineering, Law, Medicine. Splendid department for women in Newcomb College. Tulane makes leaders in all vocations. Its facilities for instruction in engineering are unsurpassed. Unparalled opportunities for the study of Sugar and Industrial Chemistry. Many Scholarships in academic department. Expenses low. Board and accommodations in dormitories at low rates. Next session begins October 1st. Send for catalogue. Address,

R. K. BRUFF, Secretary.

Am.35, 1906.

YOU CANNOT

CURE

all inflamed, ulcerated and catarrhal conditions of the mucous membrane such as nasal catarrh, uterine catarrh caused by feminine ills, sore throat, sore mouth or inflamed eyes by simply dosing the stomach.

But you surely can cure these stubborn affections by local treatment with

Paxtine Toilet Antiseptic

which destroys the disease germs, checks discharges, stops pain, and heals the inflammation and soreness.

Paxtine represents the most successful local treatment for feminine ills ever produced. Thousands of women testify to this fact. 50 cents at druggists.

Send for Free Trial Box
THE R. PAXTON CO., Boston, Mass.

Dropsy CURED Given Quick Relief.

Removes all swelling in 8 to 20 days; effects a permanent cure in 30 to 60 days. Trial treatment given free. Nothing can be fairer. Write Dr. H. H. Green's Sons, Specialists, Box B Atlanta, Ga.

60 Bushels Winter Wheat Per Acre

That's the yield of Salzer's Red Cross Hybrid Winter Wheat. Send 2c in stamps for free sample of same, or also catalogue of Winter Wheats, Rye, Barley, Clovers, Timothy, Grasses, Bulbs, Trees, etc., for fall planting. SALZER SEED CO., Box A. C. LaCrosse, Wis.

Plantation Chill Cure is Guaranteed

To Cure, or Money Refunded by Your Merchant. No. Why Not Try It? Price, 50c., Retail.

Stylish Clothing For Young Men.

Make up your mind to have the best suit possible this season, it must be smart, the very latest weave and color. You can have all these things if you get an I. & S. Bing Suit.

Latest Ideas in Furnishings

Our line for spring wear is now complete, the styles are decided and we are showing absolutely correct styles. New Dress Goods, New Waist Goods, New Hats, New Shirts, New Neckwear.

Spring Models in Footwear

See our new line of Star Brand Oxfords for men, women and children. Our stock is complete and the prices are right. Let us show you the goods.

J. C. JONES,

Clanton, - - Alabama.

Wouldn't You Like

BETTER WHISKIES FOR LESS MONEY?

than the kind you've been getting? Then send your orders to us

THE BIG MAIL ORDER HOUSE

The house that sells nothing but the purest goods and guarantees every article it sells. If it's drugs or whiskies you want

WE CUT THE PRICE.

	Our Price.	Regular Price
Meehan's Canada Malt Whiskey	75	1 00
Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey	75	1 00
Mueller's Pure Malt Whiskey	50	75
Mason's Old Kentucky Rye	60	1 00
Dan Patch Virginia Rye	65	1 00
Private Stock Virginia Rye	75	1 00
J. Martin's Five-year-old Virginia Rye	75	1 00
Rye Malt Rye Whiskey	85	1 25
Old Style Country Club Rye Whiskey	1 00	1 50
Richmond Club Virginia Rye	1 25	2 00
Stewart's Old Virginia Rye	84	1 50
Paul Jones Four Star Rye	1 00	1 50
Murray Hill Club	1 00	1 50
Hunter's Baltimore Rye	1 00	1 50
Melton Cream Rye	1 00	1 50
J. W. Harper Rye	85	1 50
Wilcox Whiskey	1 00	1 50
W. M. Atherton bottled in bond	1 25	1 75
Mammoth Cave bottled in bond	1 50	2 00
Old Jordon bottled in bond	1 00	1 25
Green River, the whiskey without a headache	50	75
Old Shades Mountain Corn	75	1 00
Old Mountain Due Corn	65	1 00
Old Lincoln County	50	75
Old Holland Gin	75	1 00
Old Crown Gin	50	75
Old Peach or Apple Brandy	50	75
California Sherry or Port

Mellow Old Liquors and Wines by the Gallon in Jugs.

	Per Gallon		Per Gallon
Old Sand Mountain Corn	$2.00	Old Mason's Pure Rye	$2.00
Old Mountain Due	3.00	Private Stock Virginia Rye	2.50
Old Tennessee	2.00	J. Martin's 5-year-old Va. Rye	3.00
Old Holland Gin	3.00	Old Style Country Club	3.40
Old Crown Gin	2.00	Old Lincoln County	2.50
Old Peach or Apple Brandy	2.00	Richmond Club Virginia Rye	4.00
Old California Port or Sherry	1.50	R. A. Stuart's Old Va. Rye	5.00

COLLIER DRUG COMPANY,

The Big Cut Rate Drug Store

2012 FIRST AVENUE, BIRMINGHAM, ALABAMA.

Imported Jack "LIJE"

Fee $8.00, Insured

Stands for service at his owners', JOHN THAMES, 2 mile East of Rocky Mount Church, Beat 1.

COMER NOMINATED.

Grey in the Lead. Bankhead Ahead. Weakely Strong But Tyson Gains.

BOTH CLAIM THE VICTORY.

Indications Show That Comer Has Carried Most Localities of the State. His Majorities Small.

Birmingham.—Returns indicate that B. B. Comer's majority for governor of Alabama over Dr. R. M. Cunningham will be above 10,000. Upon the face of the returns Wednesday morning Cunningham seems certainly to have carried but seven counties in the state, although a number of others are so close that this number can be easily increased.

A notable feature of the returns is the small majority that Comer seems to have received in a number of counties. For instance, he is but 4 votes ahead in Calhoun county. In Russell his majority is 60, in Marengo it is 88, in Walker 75 and in Franklin it is but 25. The largest majority he received was in Marshall county, where ran 1,159 votes ahead of Cunningham. In Barbour county his majority was 1,000, while in DeKalb it was 800.

Henry B. Gray is making a fine race for lieutenant-governor, and his election seems assured, although O'Neal has developed much strength. Meador's majorities in several counties are large.

An important development has been the fact tht Congressman J. H. Bankhead is running ahead of former Governor Johnston, for alternate senator. The nomination of these two men to first and second places, respectively, seems assured. Mr. Knox is very strong in several counties, but his votes will hardly be in sufficient quantity to overcome the lead of the other two men.

The indications from Wednesday morning's returns are that Brandon has been nominated state auditor and that Henderson and Harris will be the successful associate railroad commissioners.

Dowdell and McClellan are still in the lead for associate justice of the supreme court, but it is possible that later returns will change this result.

"Reports received through the press and private sources up to this time indicate that Judge Weakley will have a majority in the state convention, and that he has carried forty-three counties.

Montgomery.—Tyson headquarters here claim thirty-one counties, which will give him a good majority. Judge Tyson said that he was quite sure of success. A number of counties are behind yet, which he says will give him a good vote.

Passes Stopped.

Birmingham.—The Hepburn rate act went into effect at 12 o'clock Monday night. At that time the new law in regard to railroad rates and the posting and filing of tariffs went into effect. It means a revolution in many respects in the railroad world.

Among other things a number of the railroads have shut off entirely all passes and complimentary transportation of every kind. Notices have been issued those holding passes that they would not be honored after midnight Monday night.

These instructions have not been received by the passenger men of all the railroads, but by a majority of the lines entering Birmingham. Several of the railroad officials have been instructed to return their pass books, with complete records of passes which have been issued, to the office of the general passenger agents of the railroads.

In regard to the freight end the interstate tariffs to all points have to be posted in each place from which they are effective, and so placed that they are convenient to the public. This law in regard to tariffs also applied to the passenger department.

Will Devote Time to Fair.

Montgomery.—It is announced that Jesse Adams, for several years chief clerk to the commissioner of agriculture, has resigned, to give his entire time to the business of the Alabama Agricultural Fair Association, of which he is the secretary. The resignation is to take effect at the first of the month. He will be succeeded by Capt. George F. Sedberry, at present one of the examiners of public accounts, whose home is at Wetumpka.

FIGHTING HAS BEGUN BY REBELS IN CUBA

Palma's Party Uneasy at Affairs in Pinar del Rio.

BANDERAS WHIPPED AT HAVANA

Rural Guards Raw and Hardly Able to Cope With the Roving Insurgents—Unrest in Government—Americans Not Molested.

Havana, Cuba.—The rural guards under command of General Acosta had an engagement with a force of insurgents under the negro veteran, General Banderas, near Hoyo Colorado, twenty miles from Havana. After some fighting the rebels shouted "With machetes!" the signal for close fighting. The guards then charged and the rebels fled.

Eleven carloads of troops were detrained at scattered points in Havana, Santa Clara and Matanzas provinces. The fear was expressed that at no point was the force of rural guards large enough to cope with a strong band of insurgents. Furthermore, it was asserted, most of the guards never had been under fire. However, a detachment in Havana province routed a part of Banderas' band, killing one insurgent. On the other hand insurgents occupied Guines, the centre of the American truck farming region, without opposition. They did not molest the Americans.

Friends of the Government said they believed the insurrection in Western Cuba was as big as it would be. They volunteered the view that the insurgents lacked courage to attack posts of importance, no matter how weak the rural guards might be. Yet unofficial reports of fighting in Pinar del Rio poured into the capital. The Government would not or could not confirm them. Neither would it affirm or deny that General Demetrio Castillo's nephew, Rafael Duany, was organizing an insurgent movement in Santiago Province. General Castillo and Senor J. G. Gomez, who were arrested in that city, were brought here and clapped into jail.

Incidents in the capital and elsewhere betrayed an emphatic spirit of unrest on the part of the administration in respect of the insurrectionary movements. Conflicting statements were made about Justice O'Farrell, who not only is Secretary of State, but of late has been Acting Secretary of the Interior. It was announced officially that he had resigned from the Cabinet in a pet because President Palma rebuked him for not knowing what was going on in the disaffected parts of the island.

O'Farrell said only three insurrectionary movements were afoot, intimating that was a negligible quantity for Cuba. He added the Government's prospects of permanence were bright. Nevertheless, it was learned positively from Yaguajay, Province of Santa Clara, that General Jose Miguel Gomez had left that point at the head of a band of insurgents. Gomez was a candidate for the Presidency, and his influence is feared by Palma. Orders were rushed to the Government of Santa Clara Province to arrest him without delay. Juan Mencia, the General's secretary, was arrested in Guanabacoa, where the police had been watching him since February last on account of the connection he had with a camp of insurgents captured by the rural guards.

Despite O'Farrell's expression of optimism, too, it was noticeable that the Government was busy recruiting for the rural guards. Urgent invitations were issued to young men to enlist in that command, and it was reported that in several instances the Government had not confined its policy to invitations. O'Farrell's alleged confidence was not to be reconciled easily with the manifest anxiety of practically all the other members of the Cabinet. It was said President Palma was resolved to arrest statesmen and soldiers right and left rather than run the smallest risk of having his Government overturned. There was no question that dozens of arrests would be made, and it was rumored the President had sent instructions to police chiefs throughout the island to gather all suspected persons in a dragnet. Praise of President Palma's prompt policy was approved by conservatives.

BOYS TURN BANDITS.

'Frisco Youths Confess to Various Holdup and a Murder.

San Francisco, Cal.—With a coolness and a nonchalance that amazed the police, Fred Peterson, William Meares, Walter Westwood and Frank McAuliffe, four youths still in their teens, confessed that they were the quartet that committed the series of hold-ups which culminated in the killing of Fred Mullineaux on the Ocean Boulevard.

Peterson, who is but seventeen years of age, admitted that he fired the shot which killed Mullineaux when the latter resisted robbery.

Peterson told in detail of the robbery of four persons an hour before the murder of Mullineaux, and a hold-up on the boulevard the night previous.

Westwood, the acknowledged leader of the youthful gang, is but sixteen years of age, and resided with his mother and stepfather, Patrick Ryan.

Get Notable Reception.

Montgomery, Ala.—Two Norwegians, a man and his wife, were given a notable reception here. Though they came as domestics, they were met by J. K. Jackson, private secretary to and representing the governor; A. G Forbes, president of the State Industrial and Commercial Association, and J. C. Haas, representing local business men.

Thorsby, Alabama

Business Directory.

Commercial Club
OF THORSBY
DEFINITE and RELIABLE information furnished to parties who desire to locate in the South.

A. HORN
LICENSED PHARMACIST.
Drugs, Stationery and Toilet Articles.

City Bakery
BREAD, CAKES and PIES
of all kinds, fresh every day.
K. A. EKBLAD

A. M. Johnson
Groceries and Delicatessen

E. H. Adams
General Merchandise.

J. R. PARNELL
General Merchandise.

J. L. FOSS
Meat Market.

Thorsby Winery Co.
Lofthus & Brunberg, Props.

Thorsby Real Estate
(INCORPORATED)
J. M. Barrett, Pres.
G. H. Gerald, Sec.
G. C. Michelson, Treas.

OLAF SCHIV
Watchmaker & Jeweler
FRANZEN, BUIL
Full line of watches
etc. Repair work guara

A. Langville & S
Blacksmith and Horseshoer
—DEALER IN—
WAGONS AND BUGG

P. C. SMITH
Brown Leghorn Fowls
Eggs.
BERKSHIRE PI

The Thorsby
G. C. Michelson, Pr
Good Beds and Meals

J. J. Stanle
General Merchand

MRS. MARY R. RASBE
General Merchandi

J. BICE
Charcoal Ovens

.. The Man with the .. .. Muck Rake ..

By Ellery Sedgwick,
Editor of the American Magazine.

I AM no apologist for the times we live in. They are better times, perhaps, than the world has ever seen before; but they are full of spectacular wickedness in high places, in business and of politics, just as they are full of the meaner sins of smaller men. There is no blinking the fact. Evil is here and we must face it and bear it back. Shall we Americans gulp down the food every scoundrel throws to us and swallow it hook, bait and sinker, and every "exposer" be our prophet? Shall we listen at every ass that brays?

It is time to halt and to think soberly. The last two years have witnessed a political revival in this country such as comes but once in a generation, a revulsion against false leaders, as moral as any religious revival in time of great calamity.

A country which is governed by public opinion is governed by those who spread it. One of the most interesting phenomena of late years is the growth of the influence of magazines in the field formerly monopolized by the daily papers. Magazines entered the province of journalism with great advantages in the work of forming public opinion. They are not bound by party affiliations. They may select the questions which their talents themselves qualified to treat. The intervals which elapse between their publication dates imply a deliberate and dispassionate investigation of facts. With the advent of the magazines into the political and social arena that "new journalism" from which the country has a right to hope, the journalism which deals thoroughly with a question, accepting no opinion only at first hand and sparing neither time nor expense to collect facts. To-day that new journalism, just risen to the fullness of its power, is already in danger. It found the country sick of commercialism and caught the virulent disease.

This is a republic of honest men. The business which earns the butter for most of us is honest business. One by one the gaunt grafters will be hunted down. Even now the pack is thinning out. Our fathers fought their battles and won them. Where are the Whiskey Ring, the Star Route scandals, the Tweed Ring to-day? Those battles were won when honest men can people turned on intrenched rascals and drove them headlong. To-day we are on a flood-tide of our own victories. Spurning the malicious charges made on public confidence, which is alike the basis of business and the foundation of self-government, let us have faith in ourselves, faith in our institutions, faith in the Republic.

* * *

On the Spot.

A New York publisher directed one of his clerks to hang out a sign, "Boy wanted." Five minutes later, says a writer in the New York Sun, a red-headed little "tad" appeared in the office with the sign under his arm.

"Say, mister," he demanded, "did you hang dis out?"

"I did," replied the publisher, sternly. "Why did you tear it down?"

Back of his freckles the boy gazed in wonder at the man's stupidity.

"Why," he replied, "I'm de boy."

Henrik Ibsen's widow has for some time been collecting letters written by her husband and will have them published.

Confided to the Press.

This notice appeared recently in an English newspaper published in a town not far from London:

"Will the girl who helped with a leg down a coal hole one day afternoon between three and four o'clock please call at No. — street."

The mere American reader, used to English ways, will wonder what the "lady" wanted down the coal hole and where her other leg was, and to the latter belong to the owner? The notice is ambiguous.—Weekly.

About two-thirds of all cases of ptomaine poisoning end fatally.

Subscribe for this p

T

VOL IV.

ALABAMA ST

Items of Interest Gath Over the

PLURALITIES INDEFINITE.

Still in the Lead—Apparently Will Be Nominated Over Justice Weakley.

The returns of the Democratic pr are still lacking in definiteness to majorities and pluralities. The ticket known to be nomi as follows:

For Governor—B. B. Comer, of Je

For Lieutenant-Governor—Henry y, of Jefferson.

For Secretary of State—Frank N an, of Colbert.

For Auditor—W. W. Branden caloosa.

For United States Senators—Jo Morgan, of Dallas, and Edmund W us, of Dallas.

For Alternate United States S —John H. Bankhead, of Joseph F. Johnston, of Jefferso

For Superintendent of Education ry C. Gunnels.

For Attorney-General, Alex Garb no opposition.

For Chief Justice of the Supren John R. Tyson, of Montgomer arently will have a majority convention over Samual D. Wea of Jefferson, the present incu

For Associate Justice of the S Court, Mr. Dowdell seems received sufficient votes to his renomination, while T. N. M lan, of is in the lead for the s place.

Mr. Wilkinson leads in the race f missioner of Agriculture.

G. Harris and Charley Henderso perhaps, nominated for Associa Road Commissioners.

Met Death in Cell.

Birmingham.—J. L. Mitchell, a w wn contractor in the employ of t Sheffield Steel and Iron Co y at the Bessie mines, in the we part of Jefferson county, w nd dead in the city prison and a estigation revealed the fact th neck was broken. It is believe he tumbled off the bunk in h to the hard floor and that h was broken in the fall.

The remains were turned over to t oner, who made an investigati the case. The man's wife w graphed to and came to Birmin and made arrangements to sh body out into the county for ment.

It seems that Mitchell came into t Friday with his four little ch n, the oldest being fourteen ye age. It is stated that he bega king Saturday. He sent his ch back to Bessie mines and l ained in the city. It is furth ged that he continued drinking a arrested in one of the pub ts on a charge of intoxication. locked in a cell and the m ning was found dead.

The dead man was about 40 years and was highly respected by pany in whose employ he was. or prevailed that he had be den to death by an officer. re are no bruises about the ma d. The physician summoned ress that death was caused by ken neck.

Solicitor Sawtelle Resigns.

Florence, Ala.—Solicitor W. H. Sa e, of the Eleventh judicial circ tendered his resignation to Jud han, and Hon. R. T. Simpson, Florence, is a candidate for the on. Mr. Simpson is the son of J R. T. Simpson, of the supre rt of Alabama, and is a lawyer gnized ability.

Labor Day Barbecue.

Decatur, Ala.—Labor Day was ed here by a grand barbecue giv the Elks and a dance at night pavilion of the North Alaba ction Company, in South Decat ay of the manufacturing plants a s were closed in honor of the d

To Nullify Certificate.

Gadsden.—The Jefferson Cou vings Bank, of Birmingham, a bill in the chancery court h inst the First National Bank, alla, L. M. Dyke, president, mas M. Horton, receiver of t itution. The suit was instituted ify a certificate of deposit to L. M. Dyke to the amount of $5,0 00, the money being on dep the Birmingham bank. The $5, a loan negotiated by L. M. Dy was secured by stock of the al Bank of Attalla. Since the le made the bank has been clo national bank examiner.

Stylish Clothing For Young Men.

Make up your mind to have the best suit possible this season, it must be smart, the very latest weave and color. You can have all these things if you get an I. & S. Bing Suit.

Latest Ideas in Furnishings

Our line for spring wear is now complete, the styles are decided and we are showing absolutely correct styles. New Dress Goods, New Waist Goods, New Hats, New Shirts, New Neckwear.

Spring Models in Footwear

See our new line of Star Brand Oxfords for men, women and children. Our stock is complete and the prices are right. Let us show you the goods.

J. C. JONES,

Clanton, - - Alabama.

Wouldn't You Like

BETTER WHISKIES FOR LESS MONEY?

Than the kind you've been getting? Then send your orders to us

THE BIG MAIL ORDER HOUSE

The house that sells nothing but the purest goods and guarantees every article it sells. If it's drugs or whiskies you want

WE CUT THE PRICE.

	Our Price.	Regular Price
Buchan's Canada Malt Whiskey	75	1 00
Duff's Pure Malt Whiskey	75	1 00
Mueller's Pure Malt Whiskey	75	1 00
Mason's Old Kentucky Rye	50	75
Dan Patch Virginia Rye	60	1 00
Private Stock Virginia Rye	65	1 00
J. Martin's Five-year-old Virginia Rye	75	1 00
Log Cabin Rye Whiskey	75	1 00
Old Style Country Club Rye Whiskey	85	1 25
Richmond Club Virginia Rye	1 00	1 50
Stewart's Old Virginia Rye	1 25	2 00
Paul Jones Four Star Rye	84	1 50
Murray Hill Club	1 00	1 50
Hunter's Baltimore Rye	1 00	1 50
Golden Cream Rye	1 00	1 50
H. W. Harper Rye	85	1 50
Wilcox Whiskey	1 00	1 50
J. M. Atherton bottled in bond	1 25	1 75
Mammoth Cave bottled in bond	1 50	2 00
Old Jordon bottled in bond	1 00	1 25
Green River, the whiskey without a headache	50	75
Old Shades Mountain Corn	75	1 00
Old Mountain Due Corn	65	1 00
Old Lincoln County	50	75
Old Holland Gin	75	1 00
Old Crown Gin	50	75
Old Peach or Apple Brandy	50	75
California Sherry or Port

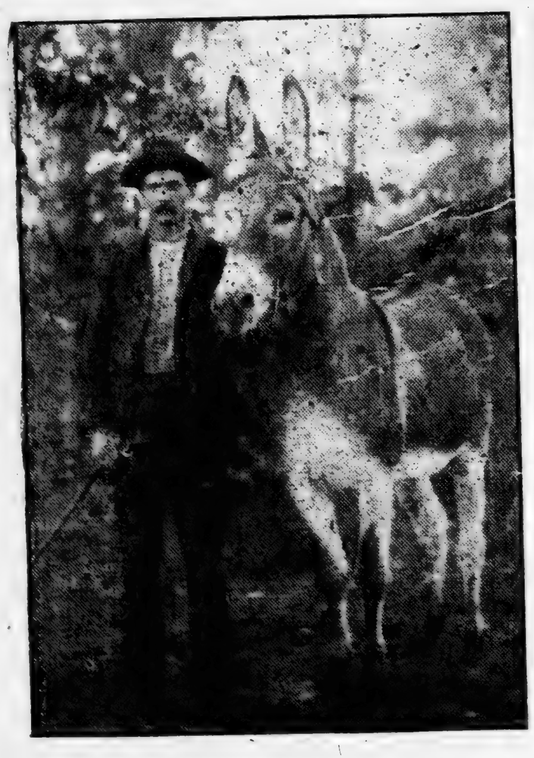
Mellow Old Liquors and Wines by the Gallon in Jugs.

	Per Gallon		Per Gallon
Old Sand Mountain Corn	$2.00	Old Mason's Pure Rye	$2.00
Old Mountain Due	3.00	Private Stock Virginia Rye	2.50
Old Tennessee	2.00	J. Martin's 5-year-old Va. Rye	3.00
Old Holland Gin	2.00	Old Style Country Club	3.40
Old Crown Gin	3.00	Old Lincoln County	2.50
Old Peach or Apple Brandy	2.00	Richmond Club Virginia Rye	4.00
Old California Port or Sherry	1.50	R. A. Stuart's Old Va. Rye	5.00

COLLIER DRUG COMPANY,

The Big Cut Rate Drug Store

2012 FIRST AVENUE, BIRMINGHAM, ALABAMA.



Imported Jack "LIJE"

Fee $8.00, Insured

Stands for service at his owners', JOHN THAMES, 2 mile East of Rocky Mount Church, Beat 1.

COMER NOMINATED.

Grey in the Lead. Bankhead Ahead. Weakely Strong But Tyson Gains.

BOTH CLAIM THE VICTORY.

Indications Show That Comer Has Carried Most Localities of the State. His Majorities Small.

Birmingham.—Returns indicate that B. B. Comer's majority for governor of Alabama over Dr. R. M. Cunningham will be above 10,000. Upon the face of the returns Wednesday morning Cunningham seems certainly to have carried but seven counties in the state, although a number of others are so close that this number can be easily increased.

A notable feature of the returns is the small majority that Comer seems to have received in a number of counties. For instance, he is but 4 votes ahead in Calhoun county. In Russell his majority is 60, in Marengo it is 88, in Walker 75 and in Franklin it is but 25. The largest majority he received was in Marshall county, where ran 1,159 votes ahead of Cunningham. In Barbour county his majority was 1,000, while in DeKalb it was 800.

Henry B. Gray is making a fine race for lieutenant-governor, and his election seems assured, although O'Neal has developed much strength. Meador's majorities in several counties are large.

An important development has been the fact tht Congressman J. H. Bankhead is running ahead of former Governor Johnston, for alternate senator. The nomination of these two men to first and second places, respectively, seems assured. Mr. Knox is very strong in several counties, but his votes will hardly be in sufficient quantity to overcome the lead of the other two men.

The indications from Wednesday morning's returns are that Brandon has been nominated state auditor and that Henderson and Harris will be the successful associate railroad commissioners.

Dowdell and McClellan are still in the lead for associate justice of the supreme court, but it is possible that later returns will change this result.

"Reports received through the press and private sources up to this time indicate that Judge Weakley will have a majority in the state convention, and that he has carried forty-three counties.

Montgomery.—Tyson headquarters here claim thirty-one counties, which will give him a good majority. Judge Tyson said that he was quite sure of success. A number of counties are behind yet, which he says will give him a good vote.

Passes Stopped.

Birmingham.—The Hepburn rate act went into effect at 12 o'clock Monday night. At that time the new law in regard to railroad rates and the posting and filing of tariffs went into effect. It means a revolution in many respects in the railroad world.

Among other things a number of the railroads have shut off entirely all passes and complimentary transportation of every kind. Notices have been issued those holding passes that they would not be honored after midnight Monday night.

These instructions have not been received by the passenger men of all the railroads, but by a majority of the lines entering Birmingham. Several of the railroad officials have been instructed to return their pass books, with complete records of passes which have been issued, to the office of the general passenger agents of the railroads.

In regard to the freight end the interstate tariffs to all points have to be posted in each place from which they are effective, and so placed that they are convenient to the public. This law in regard to tariffs also applied to the passenger department.

Will Devote Time to Fair.

Montgomery.—It is announced that Jesse Adams, for several years chief clerk to the commissioner of agriculture, has resigned, to give his entire time to the business of the Alabama Agricultural Fair Association, of which he is the secretary. The resignation is to take effect at the first of the month. He will be succeeded by Capt. George F. Sadberry, at present one of the examiners of public accounts, whose home is at Wetumpka.

FIGHTING HAS BEGUN BY REBELS IN CUBA

Palma's Party Uneasy at Affairs in Pinar del Rio.

BANDERAS WHIPPED AT HAVANA

Rural Guards Raw and Hardly Able to Cope With the Roving Insurgents—Unrest in Government—Americans Not Molested.

Havana, Cuba.—The rural guards under command of General Acosta had an engagement with a force of insurgents under the negro veteran, General Banderas, near Hoyo Colorado, twenty miles from Havana. After some fighting the rebels shouted "With machetes!" the signal for close fighting. The guards then charged and the rebels fled.

Eleven carloads of troops were detrained at scattered points in Havana, Santa Clara and Matanzas provinces. The fear was expressed that at no point was the force of rural guards large enough to cope with a strong band of insurgents. Furthermore, it was asserted, most of the guards never had been under fire. However, a detachment in Havana province routed a part of Banderas' band, killing one insurgent. On the other hand insurgents occupied Guines, the centre of the American truck farming region, without opposition. They did not molest the Americans.

Friends of the Government said they believed the insurrection in Western Cuba was as big as it would be. They volunteered the view that the insurgents lacked courage to attack posts of importance, no matter how weak the rural guards might be. Yet unofficial reports of fighting in Pinar del Rio poured into the capital. The Government would not or could not confirm them. Neither would it affirm or deny that General Demetrio Castillo's nephew, Rafael Duany, was organizing an insurgent movement in Santiago Province. General Castillo and Senor J. G. Gomez, who were arrested in that city, were brought here and clapped into jail.

Incidents in the capital and elsewhere betrayed an emphatic spirit of unrest on the part of the administration in respect of the insurrectionary movements. Conflicting statements were made about Justice O'Farrell, who not only is Secretary of State, but of late has been Acting Secretary of the Interior. It was announced officially that he had resigned from the Cabinet in a pet because President Palma rebuked him for not knowing what was going on in the disaffected parts of the island.

O'Farrell said only three insurrectionary movements were afoot, intimating that was a negligible quantity for Cuba. He added the Government's prospects of permanence were bright. Nevertheless, it was learned positively from Yaguajay, Province of Santa Clara, that General Jose Miguel Gomez had left that point at the head of a band of insurgents. Gomez was a candidate for the Presidency, and his influence is feared by Palma. Orders were rushed to the Government of Santa Clara Province to arrest him without delay. Juan Mencia, the General's secretary, was arrested in Guanabacoa, where the police had been watching him since February last on account of the connection he had with a camp of insurgents captured by the rural guards.

Despite O'Farrell's expression of optimism, too, it was noticeable that the Government was busy recruiting for the rural guards. Urgent invitations were issued to young men to enlist in that command, and it was reported that in several instances the Government had not confined its policy to invitations. O'Farrell's alleged confidence was not to be reconciled easily with the manifest anxiety of practically all the other members of the Cabinet. It was said President Palma was resolved to arrest statesmen and soldiers right and left rather than run the smallest risk of having his Government overturned. There was no question that dozens of arrests would be made, and it was rumored the President had sent instructions to police chiefs throughout the island to gather all suspected persons in a dragnet. Praise of President Palma's prompt policy was approved by conservatives.

BOYS TURN BANDITS.

'Frisco Youths Confess to Various Holdup and a Murder.

San Francisco, Cal.—With a coolness and a nonchalance that amazed the police, Fred Peterson, William Meares, Walter Westwood and Frank McAuliffe, four youths still in their teens, confessed that they were the quartet that committed the series of hold-ups which culminated in the killing of Fred Mullineaux on the Ocean Boulevard.

Peterson, who is but seventeen years of age, admitted that he fired the shot which killed Mullineaux when the latter resisted robbery.

Peterson told in detail of the robbery of four persons an hour before the murder of Mullineaux, and a hold-up on the boulevard the night previous.

Westwood, the acknowledged leader of the youthful gang, is but sixteen years of age, and resided with his mother and stepfather, Patrick Ryan.

Get Notable Reception.

Montgomery, Ala.—Two Norwegians, a man and his wife, were given a notable reception here. Though they came as domestics, they were met by J. K. Jackson, private secretary to and representing the governor; A. G Forbes, president of the State Industrial and Commercial Association, and J. C. Haas, representing local business men.

Thorsby, Alabama

Business Directory.

Commercial Club
OF THORSBY
DEFINITE and RELIABLE information furnished to parties who desire to locate in the South.

A. HORN
LICENSED PHARMACIST.
Drugs, Stationery and Toilet Articles.

City Bakery
BREAD, CAKES and PIES
of all kinds, fresh every day.
K. A. EKBLAD

A. M. Johnson
Groceries and Delicatessen

E. H. Adams
General Merchandise.

J. R. PARNELL
General Merchandise.

J. L. FOSS
Meat Market.

Thorsby Winery Co.
Lofthus & Brunberg, Props.

Thorsby Real Estate
(INCORPORATED)
J. M. BARRETT, Pres.
G. H. GERALD, Sec.
G. C. MICHELSON, Treas.

OLAF SCHIV
Watchmaker & Jeweler
FRANZEN. BUIL
Full line of watches
etc. Repair work guara

A. Langville & S
Blacksmith and Horseshoer
—DEALER IN—
WAGONS AND BUGG

P. C. SMITH
Brown Leghorn Fowls
Eggs.
BERKSHIRE PI

The Thorsby
G. C. Michelson, Pr
Good Beds and Meals

J. J. Stanle
General Merchand

MRS. MARY R. RASBE
General Merchandi

.. The Man with the .. .. Muck Rake ..

By Ellery Sedgwick,
Editor of the American Magazine.

I AM no apologist for the times we live in. They are better times, perhaps, than the world has ever seen before; but they are full of spectacular wickedness in high business and of politics, just as they are full of the meaner sins of smaller men. There is no blinking the fact. Evil is here and we must face it and beat it back. Shall we Americans gulp down the food every scoundrel throws to us and swallow it hook, bait and sinker, and every "exposer" be our prophet? Shall we run after at every ass that brays?

It is time to halt and to think soberly. The last two years have witnessed a political revival in this country such as comes but once in a generation, a revulsion against false leaders, as moral as any religious movement in time of great calamity.

A country which is governed by public opinion is governed by those who spread it. One of the most interesting phenomena of late years is the growth of the influence of magazines in the field formerly monopolized by the daily papers. Magazines entered the province of journalism with great advantages in the work of forming public opinion. They are not bound by party affiliations. They may select the questions which their editors feel themselves qualified to treat. The intervals which elapse between publication dates imply a deliberate and dispassionate investigation of facts. With the advent of the magazines into the political and social arena came that "new journalism" from which the country has a right to hope much—the journalism which deals thoroughly with a question, accepting no information only at first hand and sparing neither time nor expense to get the facts. To-day that new journalism, just risen to the fullness of its power, is already in danger. It found the country sick of commercialism and has caught the virulent disease.

This is a republic of honest men. The business which earns the bread and butter for most of us is honest business. One by one the gaunt, ugly frauds will be hunted down. Even now the pack is thinning out. Our fathers fought their battles and won them. Where are the Whiskey Ring, the Star Route scandals, the Tweed Ring to-day? Those battles were won when the people turned on intrenched rascals and drove them headlong. To-day we are on a flood-tide of our own victories. Spurning the malicious charges made on public confidence, which is alike the basis of business and the foundation of self-government, let us have faith in ourselves, faith in our institutions, faith in the Republic.

* * *

On the Spot.

A New York publisher directed one of his clerks to hang out a sign, "Boy wanted." Five minutes later, says a writer in the New York Sun, a red-headed little "tad" appeared in the office with the sign under his arm.

"Say, mister," he demanded, "did you hang dis out?"

"I did," replied the publisher, sternly. "Why did you tear it down?"

Back of his freckles the boy gazed in wonder at the man's stupidity.

"Why," he replied, "I'm de boy."

Henrik Ibsen's widow has for some time been collecting letters written by her husband and will have them published.

Confided to the Public.

This notice appeared exactly as follows in an English newspaper published in a town not far from London:

"Will the girl who helped with a leg down a coal hole one day afternoon between three and four o'clock please call at No. — street."

The mere American reader, used to English ways, will wonder what the "lady" wanted down the coal hole and where her other leg was, and if the latter belong to the girl. The notice is ambiguous. Weekly.

About two-thirds of all cases of ptomaine poisoning end fatally.

Subscribe for this p

T

VOL IV.

ALABAMA ST

Items of Interest Gath... Over the ...

PLURALITIES INDEFINITE.

...on Still In the Lead—Apparently Will Be Nominated Over Justice Weakley.

...he returns of the Democratic pri... are still lacking in definiteness as to majorities and pluralities. The ticket known to be nomi... is follows:

For Governor—B. B. Comer, of Je...son.
For Lieutenant-Governor—Henry ... of Jefferson.
For Secretary of State—Frank ... of Colbert.
For Auditor—W. W. Branden, ... caloosa.
For United States Senators—J. ... Morgan, of Dallas, and Edmund ... us, of Dallas.
For Alternate United States Se... —John H. Bankhead, of ... Joseph F. Johnston, of Jefferson.
For Superintendent of Education—... ry C Gunnels.
For Attorney-General, Alex Garb... no opposition.
For Chief Justice of the Supreme ... John R. Tyson, of Montgomery, ... arently will have a majority in ... convention over Samual D. Weakley, of Jefferson, the present incumbent.
For Associate Justice of the S... me Court, Mr. Dowdell seems to have received sufficient votes to assure his renomination, while A. ... Allan, of is in the lead for the second place.
Mr. Wilkinson leads in the race for commissioner of Agriculture.
G. Harris and Charley Henderson, perhaps, nominated for Associate Road Commissioners.

Met Death in Cell.

Birmingham.—J. L. Mitchell, a well known contractor in the employ of the Sheffield Steel and Iron Co... at the Bessie mines, in the west part of Jefferson county, was found dead in the city prison and an investigation revealed the fact that his neck was broken. It is believed he tumbled off the bunk in his cell to the hard floor and that his neck was broken in the fall.

The remains were turned over to the coroner, who made an investigation of the case. The man's wife was telegraphed to and came to Birmingham and made arrangements to ship the body out into the country for interment.

It seems that Mitchell came into the city Friday with his four little children, the eldest being fourteen years of age. It is stated that he began drinking Saturday. He sent his children back to Bessie mines and remained in the city. It is further stated that he continued drinking and was arrested in one of the saloons on a charge of intoxication. He was locked in a cell and the next morning was found dead.

The dead man was about 40 years of age and was highly respected by the company in whose employ he was. It prevailed that he had been beaten to death by an officer, but there are no bruises about the man's head. The physician summoned to the cell that death was caused by a broken neck.

Solicitor Sawtelle Resigns.

Florence, Ala.—Solicitor W. H. Sawtelle, of the Eleventh judicial circuit, tendered his resignation to Judge Callahan, and Hon. R. T. Simpson, of Florence, is a candidate for the position. Mr. Simpson is the son of Judge R. T. Simpson, of the supreme court of Alabama, and is a lawyer of recognized ability.

Labor Day Barbecue.

Decatur, Ala.—Labor Day was celebrated here by a grand barbecue given by the Elks and a dance at night in the pavilion of the North Alabama Traction Company, in South Decatur. Many of the manufacturing plants and stores were closed in honor of the day.

To Nullify Certificate.

Gadsden.—The Jefferson County Savings Bank, of Birmingham, has filed a bill in the chancery court here against the First National Bank, of Attalla, L. M. Dyke, president, and Thomas M. Horton, receiver of the institution. The suit was instituted to nullify a certificate of deposit to L. M. Dyke to the amount of $5,000, the money being on deposit in the Birmingham bank. The $5,000 is a loan negotiated by L. M. Dyke which was secured by stock of the First National Bank of Attalla. Since the loan was made the bank has been closed by a national bank examiner.

Alabam
Directory.

Thorsby Real Estate
(INCORPORATED)
J. M. BARRETT, Pres.
G. H. GERALD, Sec.
G. C. MICHELSON, Treas.

OLAF SCHIV
Watchmaker & Jeweler
FRANZEN, BUILDI
Full line of watches je
etc. Repair work guarante

A. Langville & S
Blacksmith and
Horseshoer
—DEALER IN—
WAGONS AND BUGG

P. C. SMITH
Brown Leghorn Fowls
Eggs.
BERKSHIRE PI

The Thorsby I
G. C. Michelson, Pro
Good Beds and Meals

J. J. Stanle
General Merchandi

MRS. MARY R. RASBE
General Merchandi

J. BICE
Charcoal Ovens

n with the ..
k Rake ..
y Sedgwick, nerican Magazine.

or the times we live in. They a than the world has ever seen befo spectacular wickedness in high pl ities just as they are full of the men. There is no blinking the must face it and beat it back, or down the food every scandal swallow it hook, bait and sinker" our prophet? Shall we prick bo soberly. The last two years ha ntry such as comes but once in a ers, as moral as any religious re public opinion is governed by th teresting phenomena of late years the field formerly monopolized the province of journalism with ming public opinion. They are no ect the questions which they think vals which elapse between their disputassionate investigation of th into the political and social arena the country has a right to hope ghly with a question, accepting neither time nor expense to go just risen to the fulness of its country sick of commercialism and en. The business which earns bo ness. One by one the gaunt, gray pack is thinning out. Our father re are the Whiskey Ring, the Sta

Those battles were won when th scals and drove them headlong out victories. Spurning the malicious s alike the basis of business and ave faith in ourselves, faith in ou

* * *

* * *

Confided to the Pres
This notice appeared exactl
lows in an English newspa lished in a town not far from
"Will the girl who helped with a leg down a coal hole day afternoon between three o'clock please call at No.
street."
The mere American reade to English ways, will wond the "lady" wanted down the and where her other leg w
the latter belong to the other
The notice is ambiguous
Weekly.

About two-thirds of all
ns poisoning end fatally.

for this pa

THE UNION.

EQUAL RIGHTS TO ALL; SPECIAL FAVORS TO NONE.

VOL. IV. CLANTON, ALA., SEPTEMBER 6 1906. NO. 24

ALABAMA STATE EVENTS.

Items of Interest Gathered as They Transpire Over the Entire State.

PLURALITIES INDEFINITE.

Still in the Lead—Apparently Will Be Nominated Over Justice Weakley.

The returns of the Democratic primary are still lacking in definiteness as to majorities and pluralities.

The ticket known to be nominated is as follows:

For Governor—B. B. Comer, of Jefferson.

For Lieutenant-Governor—Henry L. Gray of J[illegible]son.

For Secretary of State—Frank N. Julian, of Colbert.

For Attorney-General—W. W. Brandon, of [illegible].

For United States Senators—John T. Morgan, of Dallas, and Edmund W. [illegible], of [illegible].

For Alternate United States Senator—John H. Bankhead, of Fayette.

For Superintendent of Education—Joseph F. Johnston, of Jefferson.

For Attorney-General, Alex Garber [illegible] no opposition.

For Associate Justice of the Supreme Court, John R. Tyson, of Montgomery.

For Associate Justice of the Supreme Court, Mr. Dowdell seems to have received sufficient votes to assure his renomination, while A. O. McClellan, of [illegible] is in the lead for the second place.

Mr. Wilkinson leads in the race for Commissioner of Agriculture.

J. G. Harris and Charley Henderson will, perhaps, be nominated for Associate Railroad Commissioners.

Met Death in Cell.

Birmingham.—J. L. Mitchell, a well known contractor in the employ of the Sheffield Steel and Iron Company at the Bessie mines, in the west part of Jefferson county, was found dead in the city prison and an investigation revealed the fact that his neck was broken. It is believed he tumbled off the bunk in his cell to the hard floor and that his neck was broken in the fall.

The remains were turned over to the coroner who made an investigation and found the cause. The man's wife was notified to and came to Birmingham and made arrangements to ship the body out into the county for interment.

It seems that Mitchell came into the city Friday with his four little children, the oldest being fourteen years of age. It is stated that he began drinking Saturday. He sent his children back to Bessie mines and he stayed in the city. It is further stated that he continued drinking and was arrested in one of the public houses on a charge of intoxication. He was locked in a cell and the next morning was found dead.

The deceased was about 45 years of age and highly respected by the people in whose employ he was. It was reported that he had been arrested by an officer, but the circumstances about the man's death could not be learned. The physician summoned announced that death was caused by a stroke.

Solicitor Sawtelle Resigns.

Florence, Ala.—Solicitor W. H. Sawtelle of the Eleventh judicial circuit, has tendered his resignation to Judge Pilcher, and Hon. R. T. Simpson, Jr., of Florence, is a candidate for the position. Mr. Simpson is the son of Justice R. T. Simpson of the supreme court of Alabama and is a lawyer of unquestioned ability.

Labor Day Barbecue.

Decatur, Ala.—Labor Day was observed here by a grand barbecue given by the Elks and a dance at night at the pavilion of the North Alabama Traction Company, in South Decatur. Many of the manufacturing plants and shops were closed in honor of the day.

To Nullify Certificate.

Gadsden.—The Jefferson County Savings Bank, of Birmingham, has filed a bill in the chancery court here against the First National Bank, of Attalla, L. M. Dyke, president, and Thomas M. Horton, receiver of the Sterrabloo. The suit was instituted to nullify a certificate of deposit to the order of L. M. Dyke to the amount of $5,000, which, the money being on deposit in the Birmingham bank. The $5,000 was a loan negotiated by L. M. Dyke, and was secured by stock of the National Bank of Attalla. Since the loan was made the bank has been closed by a national bank examiner.

Big Increase in Tax Assessments.

Montgomery, Ala.—Indications so far are that the increase in the tax values of the state for the year 1906 over 1905 will go beyond $20,000,000. Reports to the state auditor show this to be so in the counties that have finished their abstracts. Seventeen counties reporting up to this time show an increase over last year of $10,868,470, an average increase for each county of more than $625,000. The following are the counties:

Autauga, $3,431,550; increase, $42,000

Butler, $4,308,600; increase, $598,100.

Calhoun, $10,654,500; increase, $1,323,327.

Cherokee, $3,067,900; increase, $234,909.

Choctaw, $2,577,500; increase, $604,700.

Dallas, $10,614,300; increase, $268,560.

Escambia, $4,691,250; increase, $354,750.

Fayette, $2,210,400; increase, $729,200.

Henry, $2,099,000; increase, $315,750.

Jefferson, $57,870,000; increase, $4,481,100.

Lawrence, $2,450,600; increase, $208,100.

Lee, $5,567,500; increase, $597,500.

Macon, $3,690,000; increase, $2,298,200.

Madison, $8,258,800; increase $53,800.

Perry, $4,050,500; increase, $421,603.

Pickens, $2,204,500; increase, $156,500.

Talladega, $8,236,800; increase, $636,000.

Total increase, $10,868,470.

First Bale.

Gadsden, Ala.—Irwin Hale, of Phillips beat, brought to Gadsden the first bale of cotton early on Thursday morning gathered from this season's crop. It is not only the first in Gadsden, but the first in North Alabama and the first in the congressional district.

Goes to Seagirt.

Anniston, Ala.—Maj. D. Houston Smith, of the Oxford Rifles, left for Seagirt, N. J., where he will compete with the Alabama team of sharpshooters and expert marksmen in the annual contests here there for the championship of the country.

Three Killed by Lightning.

Troy, Ala.—Newt Graves, a prominent resident of Brundidge, this county, and his two grown sons, John and Bascom Graves, were instantly killed by lightning. The three had sought refuge from a storm in a house they were roofing, and while under shelter lightning struck the house. The other men were seriously, but not fatally, injured by the same stroke.

Another Well Is Begun.

Huntsville, Ala.—The New York-Alabama Oil Company has begun drilling another well in West Huntsville, a quarter of a mile from the gas well that was brought in three weeks ago. The new well is in a depression, and experts believe either an abundance of natural gas or oil in paying quantities will be found.

Fire at Tavern Hotel.

Decatur, Ala.—The Tavern Hotel, in New Decatur, caught fire from the kitchen stove. The fire company's prompt response saved the building. The damage will be slight.

Commits Suicide With Carbolic Acid.

Birmingham, Ala.—Mrs. Charles Holck, 50 years old, committed suicide at her home at Boyles Friday night by taking carbolic acid. She swallowed the poison about 8 o'clock, then told her husband what she had done and threw the empty bottle out of the door. She died two hours later, begging the doctor who had been called in to do nothing for her, as she did not want to live. Her despondency is said to have been caused by poor health.

Wreck in Yards.

Union Springs, Ala.—As the passenger train on the Central of Georgia came into the yards here it had a head-end collision with a freight train that was going out. The wreck was caused by an open switch. The engineers and firemen of both trains jumped and thus escaped injury. Major Wright was the only passenger injured, but all were considerably shaken up.

No Session Monday.

Chicago, Ill.—There was no session of the board of trade Monday, it being Labor Day.

RAILROADS EAGER TO COMPLY WITH RATE LAW

Officers Meet the Interstate Commerce Commissioners.

CHARGES OF SHIFTING TARIFFS

They Ask the New Interstate Commerce Commission For Time—Shippers Protest Against Shifting Classifications.

Washington, D. C.—Five members of the Interstate Commerce Commission, Chairman Knapp and Commissioners Clements, Cockrell, Clark and Lane, were present at the hearing under the new railroad freight rate law recently enacted by Congress, which has become effective.

The Trunk Line, New England and Central railroads were heard, through their representatives, as to some phases of the operation of the new rate law. Thirty-four representatives of these railroads, including traffic officials and counsel, and eight representatives of various shipping organizations were in attendance. Every speaker representing the railroads of the country had no disposition to lay obstacles in the way of its enforcement of the act, and the speakers vied with one another in assuring the commission of their intention to comply with the provisions of the law in every substantial particular.

B. D. Caldwell, a vice-president of the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western road, told the commission that, through conferences with traffic officials and attorneys of various lines of railroad, they had sought to reach an understanding of the new law, to the end that they might be in position properly to observe it.

George V. Massey, general counsel of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, assured the commission that it was the desire of all the roads with which he had conferred to conform absolutely with the law, and he told the commission that such publications as had been made to the contrary were without the shadow of foundation in fact. "We have endeavored," said he, "to find out what the law requires, and we have done our best to meet those requirements as they are operative."

James Maynard, of Knoxville, Tenn., president of the Brookville Mills, a large shipper of cotton goods, expressed his opposition to the mere posting in stations of railroad tariffs. He said that the great trouble was that the railroads shifted the classification on shippers, which enabled them to put up a higher rate. He admonished the commission that if this point were not provided against the effect of the new law would be nullified.

Through Chairman Knapp the commission announced at the close of the hearing that it would take up the question presented for consideration and would make known its decision.

D. B. WESSON'S WILL.

Fortune Divided Among Forty Relatives—Son-in-Law Cut Out.

Springfield, Mass.—By the will of Daniel B. Wesson, filed here, $650,000 is given to the Wesson Memorial and Maternity Hospitals, of Springfield, and the remainder of his fortune of $15,000,000 or more is divided among forty relatives.

Specific bequests totaling $5,000,000 are made, and it is provided that the income from the remainder shall be divided among twenty-four members of Mr. Wesson's family. His son-in-law, George J. Bull, is not provided for, the will expressly making this clear. Among the specific bequests are $1,000,000 to J. H. Wesson and $800,000 to Walter H. Wesson.

TO MOVE WHOLE TOWN A MILE.

Defect in Title of Land Given by Relative of Jay Gould.

Topeka, Kan.—All the houses in Englewood, the county seat of Clark county, will be moved one mile south by its founder, A. J. Gould, who also founded and built Englewood, a Chicago addition. Five big house-moving outfits were shipped there for the purpose.

The removal of the county seat is necessitated by a defect in the title of the town site, which was a gift by Gould out of the centre of his ranch of 21,000 acres. He now gives the 500 inhabitants 240 acres.

The Santa Fe Railway will remove its tracks to the new town. Gould is a relative of the late Jay Gould.

GOVERNOR GOES A-SLUMMING.

Nebraska Executive Orders Omaha Police Board Fired.

Lincoln, Neb. — Governor Mickey made a secret, solitary slumming expedition to Omaha to discover whether the laws are being enforced by his police commissioners.

The Governor is a Methodist deacon, and he was so horrified by what he saw that he has decided on the removal of the police board and the officers who have permitted the things he witnessed.

"It was a mass of corruption," he declared, "Perhaps it is no worse than other cities, but as long as I am Governor such scenes as I witnessed shall not be permitted."

HAPPY HOLLOW.

Editor Union:

Please allow me a small space in your columns.

The health of our community is very good, except Mrs. A. F. Mims, who is very sick.

Mr. J. M. Parker had as guests last Sunday his son, M. H. Parker, and Mr. and Mrs. Henry Hilton, from Wylam, Ala., and Mrs. B. H. Crawford and niece, Allie Mae McCrary, from North Birmingham, Ala.

Cedar Grove and Concord played a game of ball last Saturday, the score being 10 to 12 in favor of Cedar Grove.

Say, boys, you just ought to see Mr. Johnnie in his new buggy. He is a captain. SHORTIE'S PET.

THORSBY.

Bert Bosworth left for Birmingham Saturday evening to resume his work there.

Messrs. O. A. T. Lefstad and I. Husby have gone to Birmingham and expect to be at work there for some time.

G. H. Gerald spent Sunday in Montgomery.

Miss Lucy Hawthorne, of Tuscaloosa, spent a few days here last week with her parents.

Miss Mary Raspberry visited in Calera last Wednesday.

Rev. and Mrs. S. B. Groves and family, of Williamsburg, Ky., arrived here last Wednesday evening. Rev. Groves is to be pastor of the United Protestant church here. A reception was given them by friends of the church at the Thorsby Inn Saturday evening. We are glad to welcome them here and hope their stay among us will be a pleasant one.

Theo. A. Lefstad and Eugene Helland drove to Clanton Monday.

Reuben Foss left Saturday evening for Rock Island, Ill., where he will attend school this winter.

[illegible] Kilo visited in Thorsby over Sunday.

Ernie Hanson made a business (?) trip to Montgomery the first of the week.

Mr. and Mrs. James Bosworth, of Birmingham, are visiting here.

Miss Kate Parker, of Montgomery, is the guest of Mrs. T. O. Swan this week.

J. [illegible] Stanley was in Birmingham Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Matson moved to Calera Monday.

Theo Lefstad is spending part of his vacation in the Capital City.

Mrs. A. Carlson and children left for Eau Claire, Wis., Saturday.

Mesdames Smith and Moss spent Monday and Tuesday in Birmingham.

Verdi Johnson is visiting in Anniston.

Rev. Groves will preach at the Normal Hall Sunday morning and evening.

Albert Peterson and family, Mrs. Malmquist and family, and Miss Selma Larson left Tuesday morning for Jamestown, N. Y., where they expect to make their future home.

Mr. and Mrs. I. E. Barber and Harvey visited in Elmore over Sunday.

ANON.

MARS HILL.

Editor Union:

Here I am again after a short absence. Everybody done pulling fodder. Some are picking cotton. Corn is extra good. Pea vines promise a good yield of peas; also for hay. Cotton is cut short to that extent that there will only be about 50 per cent of a crop, although some have reported the crop at about 90 per cent around Jemison, when they will not average over a half crop. I would like to say to those who made such false reports that it is useless to make such reports in order to bear down the price, for we (especially those of us who are members of the F. E. & C. U. of A.) are intending to store our cotton or hold until the minimum price of 11 cents per pound is received. We know the spinner has to have the cotton, and we have made some arrangements with the spinners to buy our cotton, and we do not intend to sell to the merchant no way, but to our State business agent, to-wit, Bro. Parker. So I hope these false reports which are being sent in will have no effect on the market; also I hope every union man will consider what he has obligated himself to do in the way of standing by the union and its cause, and do not if possible sell below the minimum, and then sell through our State business agent: and then in return let's buy from the same source. We are sorry indeed that we have people in our county whose comprehending faculties do not reach out far enough to know it is against him and his fellow citizens to make such reports on the cotton crop. You are only furnishing the speculator a maul to pound the price of the staple product of the South (cotton) down below the cost of production. So wishing The Union, its editor and its many readers with the entire union much success, I am still THE OLD MAN.

JEMISON.

Jemison, Ala., Sept. 3, 1906.

Editor Union:

As my letter escaped the waste basket I will let you hear from me again.

Jemison Chapter, Order of the Eastern Star, gave a picnic at the Soldiers' Home, Mountain Creek, on Friday, August 31, to celebrate the birthday of Robert Morris, who was the founder of the order. The order is under many obligations to Captain Simpson and Judge Campbell for the many courtesies shown them while there. It was a great pleasure to visit the soldiers in their nice homes and see how well they are taken care of. At 12 o'clock a bountiful dinner was spread under the grove on the tables and all enjoyed it, as all picnickers do. The afternoon was spent in sightseeing. At 4 o'clock p. m. all broke up and wended their way back to the depot to take the train for our homes, having spent a pleasant day and one to be remembered by all.

Miss Mae Honeycutt is at home, to the delight of her many friends, after spending a pleasant visit with her brother in Winfield, Tenn.

Miss Bertha Johnson has returned home after a pleasant visit to Bessemer.

The girls wore their best smiles last Saturday. We can guess why.

Prof. R. E. Sessons was a pleasant visitor in Jemison last week.

Misses Bertha Durham and Maud Tench are on a visit to Birmingham.

The young people enjoyed a croquet party at Dr. Johnson's.

Mrs. J. B. Crysell and daughter are on a visit to Birmingham.

Mr. Ras Langston and Mr. Ewell Shaw made a flying trip to Birmingham.

Mr. Archey Wells made his home folks a pleasant visit.

Rev. Beal went to Montgomery for Sunday.

Mr. W. R. Jackson went to Birmingham on business.

The Ladies' Aid society postponed their ice cream supper till some future date.

Rev. Beal goes to Anniston to visit his parents before going to the seminary.

Mrs. Turnbloom has moved to her new home, with the sad regrets of her many friends.

Judge Reynolds was a pleasant visitor to Jemison Sunday. Come again, Judge.

Success to The Union and its many readers. BILL DOOLEY.

The State of Alabama, Chilton County.
Probate Court, August 22, 1906.

On this, the 22d day of August, 1906, came J. M. Nix, guardian of said minor, and filed his petition in writing and under oath, praying for an order and proceeding to sell certain lands described in said petition, property of the said minor, for reinvestment. It is ordered that said petition be set down for hearing on the 15th day of September, 1906, and that notice of said petition, together with the said day for hearing the same, be given by publication for three successive weeks in The Union, a newspaper published in this county, calling upon all persons interested to appear and contest the same, if they think proper. It is further ordered that said minor also have notice of this proceeding and of the day set for hearing the same, by citation, to be personally served on her ten days before said day appointed for said hearing. It is further ordered that A. C. Smith, who is, in the opinion of the court, a suitable and competent person therefor, and who is not of kin or of counsel to the petitioner, be and he is hereby appointed guardian ad litem to represent and protect the interests of said minor in the matter of said proceeding, and that he have notice of his said appointment.

L. H. REYNOLDS,
8-30-06-3wks Judge of Probate.

Notice No. 20795.

NOTICE FOR PUBLICATION.

Department of the Interior,
Land Office at Montgomery, Ala.,
August 28, 1906.

Notice is hereby given that William F. Armstrong, of Clear Creek, Ala., has filed notice of his intention to make final five years proof in support of his claim, viz., homestead entry No. 33166, made September 6, 1899, for the southeast quarter of the southwest quarter, section 22, township 24 north, range 13 east, and that said proof will be made before clerk of Circuit Court at Clanton, Ala., on November 1, 1906.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of the land, viz.: Joseph M. Broadhead, W. Rufus Holditch, William M. Aldritch, Lee Busby, all of Calera, Ala.

ROBERT D. JOHNSTON,
8-30-06 tf Register.

Indiana had, in 1905, 145,947 miles of telephone.

Professional Cards.

William M. Adams,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW
OFFICE; Room 1, Court House.
"Practices in all Courts
Long time loans negotiated on improved Farm Lands.
CLANTON, - - - ALA.

J. EARLE GOWAN,
DENTIST.
Office in Kicker Building
CLANTON. ALABAMA.

A. C. Smith,
Attorney-at-Law
Practice in All Courts
Office 6th St. opp. Court House
CLANTON, :-: ALABAMA.

N. S. JOHNSON, M. D.
PHYSICIAN & SURGEON
Office at Residence
CLANTON, ALABAMA.

L. V. STABLER, M. D
Physician & Surgeon
Office Over Horn's Drug Store
Thorsby, Alabama

J. Osmond Middleton,
Attorney-at-Law
Practice in all Courts.
Office 6th St. Court House
CLANTON, -:- ALABAMA

DR. E. G. HYMAN
DENTIST
Office in Tipton Mullins' Building
CLANTON

H. C. Junkerman
DENTIST
OFFICE: Franzen Building
Thorsby, Alabama.

G. H. GERALD,
NOTARY PUBLIC
Office at Thorsby Inn.
Deeds, Mortgages, Affidavits and other papers carefully made out.

I. S. Gerald, Notary Public
AT THORSBY SAVINGS BANK.

FREE
to Readers of
THE UNION

To everyone who sends us $1.00 for a year's subscription to THE UNION, new subscriber or renewal, we will give as a premium absolutely FREE,

A Year's Subscription
To
The Southern Ruralist

We have examined the Southern Ruralist and consider it to be the best and most practical farm paper published in the South, and it just suits this locality. Drop by The Union Office when you are in town and see a copy of the Ruralist. It will mean dollars in your pocket to read this paper with The Union for a year. tf.

60 YEARS' EXPERIENCE
PATENTS
TRADE MARKS
DESIGNS
COPYRIGHTS &c.
Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. HANDBOOK on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents.
Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the Scientific American.
A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.
MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York
Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

LAND FOR SALE.

Eighty acres land in Beat 10, close to Cooper's. For sale cheap. Call on or address L. H. GENTRY,
Mt. Creek, Ala.
tf R. F. D. No. 5.

FROM HILL TO HILL.

The sun had cross'd from hill to hill,
Its path we call'd a day;
We saw each other face to face,
Then each one went his way.
Descending darkness supervened,
We term'd its substance night,
And in its folds, save but in thought,
Each vision pass'd from sight.

And yet along the sun's bright trail
We read another's need;
And answer'd it, through brotherhood,
In loving word and deed.
And when the evening hills of life
With gold and crimson burn,
That day in memory proves the best
Which holds some kindly turn.

—I. Mench Chambers, in the Ram's Horn.

THE BOND BETWEEN THEM.

She was forty.

She looked at herself with critical eyes in the large mirror before her. It was a daring thing, perhaps, to wear white chiffon velvet. But the color in her face was still as pure as the color in a pale pink rose, and the yellow hair was still a crown of gold to the small, shapely head. And after some moments of close scrutiny she was quite satisfied that she looked her best.

For twenty years she had ranked among the notably beautiful women in London. Her face had hardened a trifle in that time, the exquisite profile had lost the softness of girlhood and had become a little more finely chiseled. Yet her youth seemed eternal.

She gave a last glance at herself, and was about to turn away from the mirror when a sudden thought struck her. She took from a small, well-worn jewel case a glittering star of diamonds and emeralds, of no great value, perhaps, yet pretty and distinctive in its design. With a little laugh that was half a sigh, she placed it in the meshes of the lace which lay like a cobweb in its fineness upon her breast.

She drew in a tremulous breath; a new sparkle came into her eyes; dimples showed in the rounded cheeks.

It was twenty years since she had last seen him, and they were to meet again that night. Would he be changed? She wondered. She had heard men say that he was altered and hard. He had become rich, had left poverty far behind, and held a foremost place among modern financiers. Yes, such a career would mean a hardening process.

A few moments later she was greeting her hostess, who stood, an imperial figure, at the top of the staircase.

She saw him at once, and knew that her face had crimsoned and that her words had become mere sound, chatter without sense.

He had altered. Yes; the dark hair was gray, and the face was aged by more than twenty years. He had been little more than a lad in those past days, as passionate and as daring as Romeo, a boy who had loved with the strength of a man. Merely to see him, to know that it was he, this one man she had ever loved, moved her like an unexpected strain of perfect music.

Presently her hand was in Edward Vernon's, and they were greeting each other in conventional voices that disguised whatever memories were disturbed by this meeting again with the gulf of twenty years yawning between them.

"How little time has changed you!" he said to her gently.

"It has changed you a great deal!" she answered, with a smile that concealed a pang. His voice was deeper, but it was cold as well. His eyes were steely, the mouth was locked in firm lines.

"Will you lunch with me?" she asked.

"I shall be charmed!" he replied.

"May I expect you the day after to-morrow, then, at 2?"

"I shall be very pleased!"

His eyes rested on the ornament she wore at her breast.

"You recognize it?" she asked. "It—it was the wedding present you sent me!"

"Of course! I wrote to you at the time, offering you my congratulations. I hope you received the letter?"

"Oh, yes. And I had also one other letter from you—the only two you ever wrote—a letter of condolence upon my husband's death."

"You have got over it, I trust?"

She looked up quickly, suspecting satire. But his face was quite impassive, his tone quite casual.

"Yes," she replied. "My—my husband and I were—excellent friends. We shared a number of tastes in common, that is all!"

They were once more interrupted, and a stream of people parted them. Lady Arnington turned away with an absurd feeling of disappointment. However alive in her the old tender feeling might be, in him it was dead. She would have taken up the melody at the point where it was broken off. But to him it was stale—like the song of yesterday.

A drift of conversation reached her from two old dowagers.

"I suppose he will marry her?" one of them remarked. But the other answered that she did not think Edward Vernon a marrying man.

"Besides," she added, "who was the girl? From where did she come? Why was she living at a hotel, without society, in solitude? Brilliantly handsome she might be; but it seemed doubtful that so wise and sober a man as Vernon would marry a girl so young, who suggested a beautiful rebel, a child of nature."

Lady Arnington turned toward them.

"Is Mr. Vernon engaged?" she inquired, lightly.

"I can't say, Lady Arnington," replied gossip No. 2. "But there is a wonderfully handsome girl staying at the Savoy whom he takes about with him a great deal. None of us know anything about her. She isn't in society. But I seem to recollect some one telling me that she is Vernon's ward. I daresay he will marry her in the end."

"Then he'll have to look sharp about it!" responded her companion. "I saw the girl with Wyndham Manners in the park yesterday. And it means something serious, I should judge, when a man as blase as Manners sits by a girl's side in the teeth of a biting east wind and looks as if he liked it!"

"But what right has Wyndham Manners to make love to any girl?" interposed Lady Arnington, coldly. "A man whose life is one infamous record of disreputable episodes! Besides, he is not yet free; the decree between himself and his wife has not yet been made absolute."

The next days seemed long to Lady Arnington. She wondered if he would be punctual. But as 1 o'clock struck a telegram was brought to her.

"Pray accept apologies. Unable to lunch to-day.—Vernon."

She read the pencilled lines with an unutterably desolate feeling. But it passed in a moment, and she smiled.

"He is a man of affairs," she said. "I must remember that."

She lunched alone, and soon afterward went for a drive in Hyde Park, where the first person she met was Edward Vernon. He, too, was driving, and by his side was a brilliantly beautiful girl, whose expression was a mixture of delight and discontent.

She met him that same night at a musicale. He came up to her at once and apologized for his absence that day.

"It was my ward who kept me away," he said, as though he had offered the most natural explanation in the world, and one that she would instantly understand. "She is a most exigent young woman, and holds me as a perfect slave. She insisted upon my taking her out; and, as the poor girl has so little pleasure, I am obliged to indulge her. It is not my wish for her to go into society. I like her to retain her own individuality."

Lady Arnington tightened her lips with indignation. How coolly he offered his reason for failing her! She looked quickly round. They were in a deserted part of the room. She placed her hand on his arm and looked into his eyes.

"Do you love this girl?" she asked, quickly. She saw his face change, the hard lines melt. He seemed almost a boy again—more like the old Vernon.

"Yes," he answered, simply, with a wonderful note of tenderness in his voice. "She is the only being I have in the world to love!"

Lady Arnington felt her heart tighten as if a steel band were closing round it. "And so would you," he added, "if you knew her. She is so willful and yet so lovable, impetuous and yet bewitching in her sudden repentances. I should so much like you to be her friend."

Lady Arnington's lips trembled.

"You will excuse me," she said, slowly, "but I fear that I am not interested in girls."

The man gazed at her with an odd, regretful expression. "How you have changed!" he said, simply.

"When it comes to speak of change," she said, "look at home first!"

Two days later, in a Bond street shop, she saw this girl with Wyndham Manners. Her face wore a subdued look of quiet rapture which Lady Arnington could read as a book. It was plain that she loved this man, and she probably regarded Edward Vernon more in the light of a father.

Lady Arnington's heart rejoiced. What if her love should go unsatisfied? His would also. Presently he would suffer what she was suffering now. When next Lady Arnington spoke to Vernon she mentioned having seen his ward, and in whose company.

"She is beyond my control," he said. "I have tried to do my best for her; but it is a mother's love she lacks, a woman's care she wants.

"I forbade her to know this man when I first discovered that he had forced his acquaintance upon her at a hotel. I am going down to the Midlands—to Birmingham—on business which I cannot put off. But when I return in a few days, I shall take her out of London. She has a chaperon-companion, but her influence evidently counts for nothing."

Again the bitter feeling of jealousy came back to Lady Arnington.

Two mornings later she was at Victoria station. She had decided that she would leave London, and go on the continent before Edward Vernon returned.

Filled with dreary thoughts, she vaguely observed a man's form before her at the booking office. It was not until she heard him ask for two tickets to Paris that she recognized Wyndham Manners.

As she turned away from the station she wondered who would be Wyndham Manners' companion. He had apparently given up his pursuit of Vernon's ward, or——

She caught her breath sharply. Her intuition told her that she had hit upon the truth. Edward Vernon was away, and Wyndham Manners was inducing the girl to elope with him!

She tried to dismiss the idea. Then a feeling of momentary triumph came to her. That girl away, Edward would be free—perhaps to turn to her! She would postpone indefinitely her visit to the continent.

And then a sudden wave of revulsion at her own selfish calculations swept over her. She had heard Wyndham Manners inquire about the night train. There was yet time to save this girl from utter ruin—if she took action at once.

She wondered at which Birmingham hotel Vernon was staying, and decided to wire to the six principal ones, warning Edward that she feared his ward was in peril. An hour later she got a reply:

"Am starting for London at once."

She glanced at the clock. He would be here at 6. That would be time enough.

She stayed quietly at home that night. Somehow she knew that he would come to her. And about 9.30 o'clock he called. The careworn face looked sad and dispirited, yet there was relief upon it. Cecile Arnington went forward to greet him.

"Were you in time?" she asked. "Were my suspicions right?"

He nodded.

"I don't know how you guessed it!" he said. "But I found the girl almost at the point of departure. Thank heaven, I was able to prevent that. I stripped the villain who had stolen her fancy of his heroic guise, and made her shudder at the devil she had wrongly worshiped as a god. And now," he added, looking at her with the old tenderness in his eyes, "I want you in the future to help me guard this difficult charge!"

She glanced up at him with puzzled eyes.

"I!" she exclaimed. "What can I do?—except"—her voice faltered a little—"except urge you to be patient with her still as until now you have been. She will come back to you in heart and soul if you but give her time; the straying fancy will come home to rest, content in your love at last. In days to come, when she is safely your wife, she will look with horror upon the past folly from which you have saved her!"

He looked at Cecile with amazement.

"My wife! I never dreamed that you imagined I cared for her in that way," he answered, slowly. "To me she is no more than a child, the daughter of a man who was my best friend. I love his daughter as I loved him, but not in any other way, not in the one way that a man loves a woman!"

The color had stolen warmly into Cecil Arnington's face.

There was silence between them, which was broken by the man.

"Cecile," he said, "don't you know that a man can be faithful to a woman through many long years? To-night a great understanding seems to have come to me. When I first returned I thought you merely a worldling, with a heart dead to all old feeling. And instead of that a sudden insight has revealed to me that the old ideal still exists in you—my own ideal. But you have worn your mask well, you have smiled bravely, there have been jesting words upon your lips, and you hid from me the love that was in your heart. But now I know, I know!"

He held her to him, and looked deep into her eyes. She answered his look with a radiant smile. In that moment it seemed to them both that time must have slipped back and placed them once more in their self-created Eden, abloom with fadeless flowers.

It was the woman who broke the spell.

"Take me to her to-morrow," she whispered. "For the future we will share the responsibility of this child; and she shall be no longer a barrier parting our lives, but a bond between us."—Modern Society.

Life in Argentina.

At the National is W. S. Blackburn, of New York, a capitalist who recently returned from a business trip to Argentina.

"Because Argentina occupies the same relative position south of the equator that the United States occupies north of the equator, Buenos Ayres has the same climate as Charleston, S. C.," said Mr. Blackburn. "During four months out of the year the million inhabitants of the city amuse themselves at the races. They do not have so good a breed of horses there, but the sport is just as good and is well patronized. Some of the Spanish women I saw there were as beautifully gowned as any women I have ever seen. The national sport is cricket, which has been taught the people of Argentina by the English. They play it a great deal. The hours of work are about the same as ours. The food is very good. The meat is the best in the world."—Washington Post.

She Obeyed Instructions.

Mrs. N. was giving instructions to her new servant: "Before removing the soup plates, Mary, always ask each person if he or she would like any more." "Very good, madam." Next day Mary, respectfully bowing to one of the guests, inquired, "Would the gentleman like some more soup?" "Yes, please." "There isn't any left."—Chicago Journal.

A CHIMNEY-SWIFT'S NEST.

It is Made of Small Twigs Fastened Together With the Bird's Saliva.

One morning late in June I climbed to the top of our house to look around the country. I had not been there long when I felt a rush of air on my head and I saw a chimney-swift, improperly called a chimney-swallow, flying away for another swoop at me. I then realized that I must be near its nest, and, looking down a chimney near by I saw, after my eyes had become used to the light, a nest within three feet of the top with five pure white eggs about a half an inch long in it. It was the first time I had ever known a chimney-swift to build so near the top of a chimney, for usually it builds some few feet down where there is a bend which keeps out the rain that would soften the glue with which the nest is held together.

I thought it would be interesting to take a picture of the nest, and this being such a good chance I did so, much to the dislike of the birds, who kept making swoops at me.

The nest of a chimney-swift is not made, like that of most birds, of hair, leaves or grass, but of small twigs which the swift gathers while flying, and which are stuck together with the bird's saliva, which is glutinous.

It is very interesting to watch a swift, which is a remarkably good flier. It never seems to tire and never rests except when it is on the nest. It is on the wing all day, and is said sometimes to fly a thousand miles in twenty-four hours. Chimney-swifts are good friends of the fire insurance companies because they knock the soot down and make it less easy for the chimneys to catch fire.—Russell M. Coryell, in St. Nicholas.

WISE WORDS.

Too much publicity spoils a good deed.

No man is as good or as bad as he is said to be.

Pessimists and optimists are their own rewards.

Nearly every man thinks he has the boss wife.

Many a manufacturer makes nothing but enemies.

Every woman owes it to herself to be good-looking.

It is never too late to mend, marry or get a divorce.

No man is all right, but some men are nearly all wrong.

And as a rule worthless people have the best dispositions.

What others say of you is the effect; you supply the cause.

Nothing seems to please a gossip so much as a telling situation.

The harder it is to acquire a dollar the harder it is to give it up.

It is far easier to return a compliment than a borrowed umbrella.

Young man, beware of the saucy girl—she will make a saucy wife.

Some women work for their husbands while some others work them.

There is no hope for the man who knowingly persists in acting the fool.

Every knock one man gives another is intended as a boost for himself.

Even the man who expects the unexpected is apt to be surprised when it happens.

More wives would respect their husbands if they were not so well acquainted.

If the north pole is ever discovered it will be by a man who is able to keep cool.

Marrying an heiress is often as unsatisfactory as any other get-rich-quick scheme.

It is perfectly proper for the thin girl to expect her dressmaker to make the most of her.

After a man has passed the critical stage of his illness he begins to worry about his doctor's bill.

When a woman is said to have seen better days it means that she knows cut glass when she sees it.

A horse laugh may be the kind let out by the equine who is drawing a disabled automobile back to town.—Chicago News.

Horse and Dog Meat in Germany.

Germany Government statistics show that 43,421 horses and 2151 dogs were slaughtered for food under Government inspection during the first three months of 1906. This was an increase of 7522 horses and 366 dogs over the number slaughtered during the same time in 1905. And this only accounts for the dogs and horses killed under Government supervision. It is estimated that among the poorer classes, forced to resort to dog and horse meat by the exclusion of American and other foreign meats from the country, the consumption of this sort of meat was much larger than official records show.—National Provisioner.

Lighthouse Foghorns.

A new foghorn signal is being installed at the Needles Lighthouse, says the London Globe. It consists of reed trumpets fed by compressed air. Under favorable conditions the blast will be heard at a distance of ten miles from the lighthouse. This is a distinct advance on the existing fog-bell, the warning note from which does not penetrate more than three miles at the most. When the fog descends the new apparatus can be strated instantaneously from air vessels held in readiness and charged at 100 pounds pressure. The duration of the blast is five seconds in every fifteen.

Ben M. Jacobs & Bros.
Furniture and Rugs.
—SOLE AGENTS—
Globe-Wernicke Elastic Book Cases
Filing Cabinets.
Catalogue for the asking.
BIRMINGHAM, AL

Farmers' Mutual Insurance Associati
OF ALABAMA.
CHARTERED BY SPECIAL ACT OF THE LEGISLATURE
By the People and for the People.
Chilton County Branch
Organized February 3, 1900.
W. M. WILSON, President. WALLACE C. EDLER, Sec'y.-Treas.
INSURES Farmers' dwellings, outbuildings and contents and live stock against loss by fire, wind and lightning. The cheapest, safest and most sensible method of insurance known to man
Average Yearly Cost for Five and a half Years 43-100 of 1 per cent
Full particulars furnished upon application to WALLACE C. EDLER, Clanton, Ala.

A GREAT COMBINATION OFFER
We Will Furnish the "TWICE-A-WEEK" Issue of the
St. Louis Globe-Democrat
With
THE UNION
For
$1.50 Both Papers, one year, only $1.50
The St. Louis Globe-Democrat should not be classed with the many weekly papers. It is a high-grade Semi-Weekly, eight or more pages Tuesday and Friday. It is beyond all comparison the biggest, best and cheapest National News and Home Journal published in the United States. It is Republican in Politics but is above all
A Great Modern Newspaper.
It is not made up indiscriminately from the Daily issue. It is carefully edited with special reference to the needs of the Farmer, the Merchant and the professional man who desires to keep thoroughly posted without sparing the time to read a large Daily Paper. It also contains a great variety of well selected reading matter, making it invaluable to every member of the family.
This Liberal Clubbing Offer
is open to all old or new subscribers, but may be withdrawn at any time, and must receive the cash with order. Address
THE UNION, Clanton, Ala.

PAUL CALAME,
205 21st Street
Birmingham, Ala.
Practical Watchmaker and Optician
Eyes Correctly Fitted
Mail orders promptly filled

SUBSCRIBE FOR THIS PAPER

DO YOU WANT
Letterheads, Noteheads, Billheads, Envelopes,
OR ANYTHING ELSE PRINTED?
Then Call at
THE UNION OFFICE
and See Fine Work at Low Prices.
500 Noteheads 500 Envelopes All For $2.00
Good Work on Good Material, done on Good Machines
Don't forget! THE UNION, Clanton, Alabama

Pure Water Prevents Fevers.
DRILLED WELLS FURNISH PURE WATER
We guarantee water or no charge made. Estimates given. Address
I. E. SARBER CO.
Thorsby, Ala.

EVERYDAY FANCIES.

By Mrs. M. A. Kidder.

The poor should cease from out the land,
And the needy be no more.
Then what would become of the open hand.
And the rich man's borrowed store
Bought his wealth should reach
The azure sky.
The fields would all unfruitful lie
With lack of need, and no mouth to feed.
Men never would plant or sow the seed.

We never should list to the fact'ry bell.
Or the engine's fiery red puff.
Or the lads' tarantas that buy and sell.
If we materials had enough.
The idle ships on a lazy tide,
With white sails folded would ride;
And all self-sighed and no lack of trade would be gone and commerce dead.

Then the rich should cease from the land,
And the Master lead no more.
Then what would become of the working band
That look up for their store?
With no master hand the work to plan.
And no money to pass from man to man.
This world would be in its misery as bad a world as one could see.

Then we'll be contented with our lot
And quarrel with fate no more
For the rich and poor are brothers all.
From the king to the humble serf
Of the world go on in the old way.
With its sunshine bright, and its shadows gray;
With its needy hands, that the generous hands
May be ready to give as the calls demands.

ROSAMOND'S CONQUEST

BY EMMA GARRISON JONES.

"Rosamond!"

"Coming, mamma!" and the girl ran in from the garden, her red fingers all stained, and her basket half filled with ripe cherries.

"My love, I want you to run to the drugstore," said her mother, looking up from the handsome party dress she was trimming. "Poor Edith's fever is coming on again, and I must have his medicine. Ask the druggist to refill this bottle, and——"

"Yes, mamma; give me the money," Mrs. Trevor burst into tears. "Rosamond," she said, "I have been in the wide world, and shall have till this dress is finished. I've worked so hard; but run, my child, and ask the druggist to send Edith's medicine, and tell him he shall have his money early to-morrow morning."

"Yes, mamma!" and away Rosamond, her senstive mouth quivering, her blue eyes full of tears.

"Poor mamma! poor mamma! I wish I could help her!" she murmured.

Meanwhile Mrs. Trevor sat sewing, but her tears often blinded her, and she arose every minute or two to cross the room and peep into her husband's chamber. He was raving, his wan face flushed with fever—her dear, handsome husband, for whose love she had sacrificed much.

She was the daughter and only child of a wealthy banker, the idol of a doting wife. When she reached her eighteenth birthday, her father called her into her library and told her that he had chosen her husband, at the same time displaying before her some set of diamonds, which he said came with Mr. Oglethorpe's proposal.

"Such fine diamonds they are, papa! my dear, Mr. Oglethorpe comes of the best family in the State, and is a millionaire as well.

"But, papa, I cannot marry Mr. Oglethorpe."

"Why not?"

"Because I don't love him."

"Stuff! You'll love him fast enough when you are once his wife. Not another word—you shall marry him or no one. I shall see Mr. Trevor and give him orders not to let Edith?"

"Yes, papa, but if I don't——"

"Then I'll disown you, and never marry under my curse."

And when Edith, as many a weak girl has done, yielded to her lover's persuasions and became his wife, her father kept his word, and to the hour of her marriage never saw his face no more.

She was very happy with her husband of her choice, and did not regret the step she had taken, although the estrangement from the father she loved caused her unceasing grief. At first they managed to live comfortably, but soon Mr. Trevor's health, failed in health. The mortgage debt came upon him and swept away his little all, and a few years after Rosamond's birth they were very poor indeed, and now there was another little one in the family.

For her children's sake Edith swallowed her pride and wrote her father a touching letter, begging him to give her and help her in

cobs & Bros.,
e and Rugs.
E AGENTS—
astic Book Cases
Cabinets.
ng.
MINGHAM, ALA
Insurance Associatio
ALABAMA.
AL ACT OF THE LEGISLATURE
and for the People.
ounty Branch
February 3, 1900.
WALLACE C. EDLER,
Sec'y.-Treas.
ings, outbuildings and conte
oss by fire, wind and lightni
l most sensible method of ins
43-100 of 1 per cen
pon application to
CE C. EDLER, Clanton, A MBINATION OFFER
e "TWICE-A-WEEK" Issue
of the Globe-Democra
—With—
UNION
—For—
s, one year, only $1.
should not be classed with the many ch
emi-Weekly, eight or more pages,
ll comparison the biggest, best and che published in the United States. It is
e all
dern Newspaper.
ely from the Daily issue. It is care needs of the Farmer, the Merchant and ep thoroughly posted without sparing also contains a great variety of well se e to every member of the family.
l Clubbing Offer
, but may be withdrawn at any time, a
Address
THE UNION,
Clanton, Ala
Practical Watchma
and Optician
Eyes Correctly
Fitted
Mail orders promptly fi
RIBE FOR PAPER
U WANT
ds, Noteheads,
s, Envelopes,
G ELSE PRINTED?
hen Call at
ION OFFIC
Work at Low Prices.
All For $2.00
erial, done on Good Machi
NION, Clanton, Alabama.
Prevents Fevers.
FURNISH PURE WAT
ter or no charge made.
Address
SARBER CO.
Ala

EVERYDAY FANCIES.

By Mrs. M. A. Kidder.

[illegible] cease from out our land.
And the [illegible] be no more,
And what would become of the open [illegible]
And the [illegible]'s borrowed store?
And the [illegible] should reach to [illegible]
[illegible] unfruitful lie,
[illegible] reaped, and no mouths [illegible]
[illegible] plant or sow the seed
[illegible] to the factory
[illegible] puff,
[illegible] that buy and [illegible]
[illegible] enough.
[illegible] little,
[illegible] folded would rock [illegible]
[illegible] and no lack of bread,
[illegible] be gone and commerce [illegible]
[illegible] should cease from out the [illegible]
And the Master lead no more,
And what would become of the [illegible]
[illegible] for their modest [illegible]
[illegible] hand the work to [illegible]
[illegible] to pass from man to [illegible]
[illegible] would be in its misery
[illegible] one could see.
[illegible] contented with our call,
[illegible] face no more;
[illegible] and poor are brothers [illegible]
[illegible] to the humble sower,
[illegible] go on in the old time [illegible]
[illegible] bright, and its [illegible]
[illegible] hands, that the gen[illegible]
[illegible] to give as the case de[illegible]

ROSAMOND'S CONQUEST.

BY EMMA GARRISON JONES.

"Rosamond!"

"Coming, mamma!" and the little girl ran in from the garden, her dimpled fingers all stained, and her wicker basket filled with ripe strawberries.

"Mamma, I want you to run to the [illegible]," said her mother, looking up from the handsome party dress she was trimming. "Poor papa's fever is coming on again, and he must have [illegible] medicine. Ask the druggist to put [illegible] bottle, and——"

"Yes, mamma, give me the money."

Mrs. Trevor burst into tears.

"Rosamond," she said, "I haven't a cent in the wide world, and shall not have [illegible] dress is finished, and I've worked so hard; but run, my love, and ask the druggist to send me the [illegible] and tell him he shall have his [illegible] early to-morrow morning."

"Yes, mamma!" and away ran Rosamond, her sensitive mouth quivering, her eyes full of tears.

"Poor mamma! poor mamma! I wish I could help her!" she murmured.

Meanwhile Mrs. Trevor sat at her sewing, but her tears often blinded her and she arose every minute or two to cross the room and peep into her husband's chamber. He was dozing, his face flushed with rising fever, his handsome husband, for whom she had sacrificed so much.

She was the daughter and only child of a wealthy banker, this pale, sorrowful wife. When she reached her eighteenth birthday, her father called her into his library and told her that he had chosen her husband, at the same time displaying a handsome set of diamonds, which had come with Mr. Oglethorpe's proposal.

"Such fine diamonds they are! And, my dear, Mr. Oglethorpe comes of the best family in the State, and he is a millionaire as well."

"But, papa, I cannot marry Mr. Oglethorpe."

"Why, pray?"

"Because I don't love him."

"Stuff! You'll love him soon enough when you are once his wife. Not another word—you shall take him or no one. I shall see young Trevor and give him orders to cease visiting my house. You hear me, Edith?"

"Yes, papa, but if I don't obey?"

"Then I disown you, and you'll marry under my curse."

And when Edith, as many a fond, weak girl has done, yielded to her lover's persuasions and became his wife her father kept his word. From the hour of her marriage she saw his face no more.

She was very happy with the man of her choice, and did not regret the step she had taken, although her estrangement from the father she loved caused her unceasing pain. At first they managed to live quite comfortably, but soon Mr. Trevor, never strong, failed in health. Then a security debt came upon him and swept away his little all, and a couple of years after Rosamond's birth they were very poor indeed, and now there was another little one in the cradle.

For her children's sake Edith swallowed her pride and wrote her father a touching letter, begging him to forgive her and help her in her sore distress. The letter was returned to her unopened.

Then she set to work herself, taking in embroidery and plain sewing; but all her efforts could not keep the gaunt wolf from the door.

She sat at her work now, thinking over her troubles and waiting for Rosamond's return.

It was not long before the little creature came running in, but one glance at her grieved little face told her mother she had failed.

"Well, Rosie darling?" she said, gently.

"Oh, mamma, he wouldn't let me have it!" sobbed the child. "I told him about poor papa, and I begged him, but he said no—the money must come first."

"Well, love, it can't be helped," sighed her mother. "I can finish the dress in an hour, and then we shall get the money. Go and fan poor papa now, and put a cold strawberry in his mouth when he wakes. Mamma must sew."

Rosamond obeyed, taking her place by her father's couch. She fanned him into a sound sleep, and then she went to the open window, and fell to dreaming.

The afternoon sunshine glittered on the little garden plot, with its tufts of pinks and heart's-ease, and its square bed of strawberries. Rosamond built her castles, and meanwhile her mother finished the party dress, and arose to take it home.

"Take good care of papa, Rosie," she called, as she crossed the yard, "and watch baby."

"All right, mamma," answered Rosamond.

The summer afternoon droned away and with the twilight her mother returned. Rosamond had tidied up the sick room, and had made the tea ready for her father's supper, beside rocking her baby brother when he awoke.

"Well, mamma," she cried, joyfully.

Her poor mother fell into a seat, and burst into sobs.

"Oh, Rosamond, the lady can't pay me till next week. There is no hope for us; poor papa must die!"

Rosamond only nodded her curly head, and a curious sparkle lit her eye.

"I'll do it," she whispered, under her breath.

Mr. Trevor had a bad night, and his wife got no sleep, consequently she did not rise early the next morning, but Rosamond was up with the dawn.

She put on her best dress, and her chip hat, and stole downstairs, with her little wicker basket in her hand. Then she ran into the garden, and gathered the largest of the strawberries. When she had filled her basket, she made a little nosegay of her heart's-ease, and another of pinks, and put them on top of the bright berries. Then she hung the little basket on her arm, and dropping on her knees upon the wet grass, she looked up at the opal sky and prayed.

"Oh, dear Lord, please help me to sell my berries, to buy my poor, sick papa some medicine." And never doubting in her sweet, child's faith, but God would hearken to her request, she bounded to her feet and ran off in the direction of the village.

Th early market was just opened, and a dozen or two countrywomen were ranging stalls and along the sidewalk, with their produce in green array before them. Little Rosamond looked about her for a minute, and then established herself in a corner, and stood there like a picture, her hat pushed back, her cheeks flushed, her golden curls in a tumble.

"Who'll buy my ripe strawberries?"

At last a gentleman paused, attracted by the sweet, bird-like voice.

"Please, sir, would you buy my berries?"

"Baskets and all, and yourself in the bargain."

"Not myself, but the basket, sir, and the posies, and only fifty cents."

The gentleman drew out his purse.

"I can't find it in my heart to refuse such a mite of a market-woman as you are," he said, kindly. "Here's a dollar. Now tell me how it comes to pass that such a baby as you are at this occupation?"

Rosamond received the dollar with dancing eyes.

"Oh, sir, how good you are! Thank you a hundred times. Oh! my poor papa can have his medicine now. You see, sir, he's very sick, my poor papa is, and mamma hasn't one cent, and the druggist wouldn't let us have the medicine, and mamma couldn't get the money for the pretty dress she made; and, oh! how she did cry—and—and——"

"And you came here to sell your berries?"

"Yes, sir, that's it, and mamma doesn't know what I have done. Oh, but won't she be glad when she sees this!"

She closed her pink fingers on the crisp bill, and handed her little basket to the gentleman. He took it, and then stood looking down at her with a curious, wistful gaze. Something in the frank, clear, young eyes stirred his heart, and made his lips quiver.

"I must run home now. Good-by, sir; I shall never forget you."

Rosamond held out her chubby hand. He clasped it and held it close.

"You'll tell me your name first, won't you, little woman?"

"Rosamond Trevor, sir."

"What?"

The child eyed his working face in amazement.

"And your mother's name?"

"Edith Trevor, sir."

"Gracious heavens!"

He was silent a minute; but when the child sought to release her hand he only held it the closer.

"Rosamond," he said, presently, in a faltering voice, "did you ever hear of your grandfather?"

"My Grandfather Everleigh?" Oh, yes, indeed, sir! Mamma tells me about him, but I never saw him. He's a rich man, and—and—well, I don't think he cares for us because we are poor!"

"Rosamond, I am your grandfather!"

The child looked at him with incredulous eyes; then all at once she began to clap her hands.

"And you will go home with me and see poor mamma—you will, you will!" she cried.

"Yes," replied the gentleman, in a hoarse voice. "Come along; my carriage is not far off."

They drove up the green lane to the cottage just as the sun was rising. Rosamond's mother was in the garden looking about with much concern for her little girl.

"Here I am, mamma," shouted Rosie, putting forth her golden head. "I ran away to market to sell strawberries; and, oh, mamma, I've got a whole dollar, and I've brought Grandfather Everleigh home with me!"

The meeting between father and daughter was a happy one, and all the past was forgotten and forgiven in the joy of the present. Under the treatment of a good physician, and the restorative power of a contented mind, Mr. Trevor soon regained his health; and Edith's father, to make amends for his former harshness, took him into the firm of which he was the head, and insisted that they should all live together in his mansion, where little Rosie is now his pet and almost constant companion.—New York Weekly.

FRANCE AND THE SAHARA.

Meharistes Slowly Winning the Desert.

France is constantly giving proofs of her mastery over the Sahara. She has won it by her new methods of desert travel, which were adopted only three years ago and proved from the first successful. Her meharistes travel wherever they are sent. At irregular but frequent intevals they raise their flags over some new territory and attach it to one of their organized districts. The meharistes are small troops of camel cavalry mounted on animals specially trained for fast travel, so that they may go lightly laden. They depend on the oases to replenish supplies. Their latest journey is one of the most notable of their achievements. Starting from Timbuctoo they marched north and northwest about 350 miles to Taudeni, arriving there May 8. Captain Cauvin and his men camped in the town for eight days. The natives had never seen a white man before. Their fathers saw one specimen seventy-eight years ago, when Rene Calle crossed the desert. Lenz was in that neighborhood about twenty-five years ago, but passed aroun dthe place because he did not dare to enter it. Captain Cauvin attached Taudeni to the Government of Timbuktu, and his party returned to the Niger. They had met no opposition, but were much fatigued by the heat and the hardships of a desert march nearly as long as the distance between New York and Chicago.

Isolated and miserable as Taudeni is, the place has long been one of the most notable in the Sahara. It occupies a depression only about four hundred feet above sea level. The waters come near the surface here, and many wells are possible. This has made the settlement the converging point for all the caravan routes between Morocco and Timbuctoo. It is the centre of the largest salt industry in Africa. Here are apparently inexhaustible beds of pure rock salt, which the natives hew out in blocks about three feet long, weighing seventy pounds. Four of these make a camel load. The salt is taken to Timbuctoo and distributed throughout the whole Western Soudan. It is sold to the Timbuctoo merchants for a pittance, but increases in value with every day's journey of their camels to the south. Taudeni is described by the people of Timbuctoo as one of the most wretched of desert settlements. The natives are of mixed Arab and Negro blood. They have had no government. Every man is a law unto himself. Often the miners suffer from lack of food, as they are dependent on imports for supplies of all kinds except water and salt. They exact a camel from every caravan replenishing its water skins at their wells, and the animals thus acquired are kept as a food resource. It was because Lenz could not spare a camel that he replenished his water supply at Wady Tell, outside the settlement, and went on without seeing a native. Salt mining is the only industry. The heat is so intense that at times the miners are compelled to quit work and take refuge in caves. Lenz found abundant evidence that this region, some time or other, gave support to people of a culture differing from that of the present inhabitants. He found the ruins of ancient walls, objects of ornament, tools and other articles such as are no longer in use. He learned that many of these relics are scattered over this part of the desert, and specimens of finely worked and polished stone have been carried as curiosities to other Saharan towns. The French expedition may throw more light on this region.

• The population of the United States is estimated to be eighty-five millions, and only twenty-nine millions are connected with any church—Catholic or Protestat.

Does Capital Punishment Tend To Diminish Capital Crime?

By Thomas Speed Mosby.

THE death penalty, as a feature of the penal code, is undergoing a process of evolution which, judging from existing tendencies and those which have characterized the world's jurisprudence during the past fifty years, must result in its complete extinction. It now exists in forty States of the American Union.

In the investigation of this subject, the writer caused inquiries to be addressed to the attorney-generals of these forty States, asking their opinion as to whether capital punishment tended to diminish capital crime.

Eighteen of the forty declined to express an opinion. Only sixteen of the attorney-generals of States which inflict the death penalty declared themselves as clearly of the opinion that capital punishment does tend to diminish capital crime. Two of the forty were positive in their conviction that the death penalty does not tend to diminish capital crimes, and stated their opinion that the death penalty should be abolished, while four of the forty gave qualified answers.

In five States of Kansas, Maine, Michigan, Rhode Island and Wisconsin, where capital punishment does not exist, the attorney-generals have noted no increase in capital crime since the abolition of the death penalty, and generally express themselves as satisfied with the conditions existing in their respective States. In Michigan, Wisconsin, and Rhode Island capital punishment was abolished over fifty years ago, and has not since been re-enacted. Though nominally prescribed by law in Kansas, the death penalty can be executed in that State only upon the Governor's warrant, and the Kansas Governors have persistently declined to issue a death warrant, the condemned persons, meanwhile, remaining in prison. In five other States where the death penalty exists the trial juries have power to commute it to life imprisonment.

The right of the State to take the life of a citizen has always been and doubtless must remain an academic question, although, conceding the soundness of the doctrine of "consent of the governed" as the ultimate basis of governmental authority, it must be admitted that one cannot be morally held to a contract whereby he consents that another may take his life. In our civil jurisprudence no man can give another the right to do him bodily injury. Such contracts are always void as against public policy. But the case against capital punishment is made when it is shown simply that it is unnecessary. It is coming to be understood that the majority of human beings do not refrain from the commission of capital crimes merely through fear of being hanged. Every person who commits a capital crime knows that, in States maintaining capital punishment, the death penalty is affixed to that crime. From a personal study of more than two thousand cases I am convinced that most crimes are committed by persons who either (1) expect to escape all punishment, or (2) who, upon the spur of the moment, are regardless of all punishment, or (3) who are governed by cosmic, social or individual factors which render the prospect of punishment inoperative as a deterrent agency at the time of the commission of the crime.—Harper's Weekly.

Why Socialism Fails.

By Tom Watson.

NO matter how much there may be in the Tomorrow of Socialism, in its Today, when it shall be inaugurated as a system, all things must be owned collectively, and that means that the high and low come to a common level; the good and the bad start even; the idle and the industrious share and share alike; the illiterate and the learned, the capable and the incompetent, the fool and the wise man, the virgin and the troll, the negro and the white, all come to the Universal Brotherhood pot, and ladle out an equal porringerful of pottage.

In the name of Heaven! What a sordid, sickening dead-level! What an enforced equalizing of all men and all women, in a world where God never made two grains of sand, two leaves of the forest, two birds of the air, two fish of the sea, two beasts of the field, exactly equal.

Only in a political sense can any one even dream of two men being equal, for our eyes, our common-sense tell us that such a thing as equality in strength, capacity, character, or in the elements and achievements of manhood has no existence among men.

Socialism proceeds upon the idea that equality is there, or can be put there; and the effort to prove that the idea is correct has been made time and again and again. It was not only among the Ancients, but it has been tried in modern times, and it was tried by the colonists who first settled in North America.

Failure, dismal failure, has been the result of every experiment. Why? Because Human Nature is radically, eternally different from what the Socialist assumes it to be.

If all were equal, and all were good, Socialism would be unnecessary, even from the standpoint of the Socialist.

Give us absolute equality and universal goodness, and we don't need anything but a little time to reach an equal distribution of wealth and an era of Peace on Earth and Good Will to Men.—Watson's Magazine.

Strength in Sorrow.

By Lillie Hamilton French.

WE would not have to strive so for courage if what we vaguely call "things" were more evenly distributed among us, for no one's lot would then seem to him an evil one. If we were all hump-backed, or lame, or blind; if every husband were unfaithful and every child a cross; if we were all poor and no man had more than another; if nobody's son died in his early strength, and nobody was loved while we sat neglected—then who of us would know what sorrows and afflictions were? We would take each of them for granted, as a Chinaman takes his yellow skin and an Indian his red one.

It is because we see our estate differing from that of our fellows that we are tempted to comparisons, and it is in the making of these comparisons that a sense of our sorrows, like the knowledge of our afflictions, is first born. How would we have known that we were poor, unless we had seen some one else who was richer? or that our son was unsuccessful unless the son of somebody else were making a great mark in the world? Would our little children be unhappy with only one dress, had they not seen other children with two?

It comes to this: When we begin to make comparisons we begin to suffer. This may seem to be a hard saying, but it is a true one.—Harper's Bazar.

"Ask the Missus."

John Burns, the English radical and reformer and a prominent member of King Edward's Cabinet, was, during an election meeting, interrogated by a sturdy voter who wanted to know just what John Burns, the Cabinet Minister, at high pay did with the enormous increase of wages over the workman's modest wage. The new Cabinet officer was equal to the occasion.

"How do you spend it, John?" roared the elector.

"Ask the missus," said the honest, self-reliant John, and the crowd roared out its applause. No room there for the microbe of divorce to get foot hold; no focus for the stegmlya of distrust and incompatibility.

"'Ask the missus" is a whole library of martial wisdom. If a man's wife knows where his money goes, it is, in one thousand, minus one case, spent for the best interests of the household. The man that can look his brother squarely in the face and say, "Ask the missus," is no spendrift, no bogus high-roller, no gambler, no cheat. "Ask the missus," and her happy, hopeful, trustful, contented face will be answer enough of the faith she holds in the man who trusts and loves her.

"Ask the missus" would put divorce lawyers out of business. "Ask the missus," would wipe divorce-giving South Dakota off the map. "Ask the missus" would keep the worth less foreign nobleman off the American grass. "Ask the missus" would build homes such only as the founders of the nation knew.

Men of America, take the cue from John Burns. Make it possible to say to every inquirer as to where the money goes, "Ask the missus."—Louisville Herald.

Origin Of "Blackmail."

An authority on the derivation of words says that "blackmail" as used by Coke and Blackstone had an innocent significance meaning simply rent paid in labor or produce instead of in money, rent paid in "white money" (silver) being known as "white mail." The word "mail," meaning rent, comes from the Anglo Saxon "mael," a portion or possibly from the old French "maille," a halfpenny. In the days before England and Scotland were united the freebooters used to make frequent raids on the farmers living along the border and the money paid to secure immunity from these raids came to be known as "blackmail." Once established in that sense it is easy to see how the world came to be used to designate money paid to secure immunity from a raid on one's reputtion.—The Suburbanite.

No Need for Nerve Medicine.

A country doctor, after writing a prescription for a patient told him the druggist would probably charge him sixty cents for filling it. The patient asked the physican to lend him the money. The latter scratched out part of the prescription and handed it back with ten cents, remarking: "You can have that filled for a dime. What I have scratched out was for your nerve."—Washington Star.

WORTH QUOTING

—Canned shark is one of the delicacies on sale in Idia and Japan.

"Do Americans go to Europe to get away from business?" asks the New York Herald. Some of them go to get away from the grand juries.

A dog's bark is generally worse than its bite, but it's different with a mosquito, observes the Philadelphia Record.

Southern progress can almost be measured, declares the Atlanta Constitution, by the number of technical schools in the south.

Perhaps the devil never takes a vacation, but he is apt to leave the cities for the seashore, remarks the Atlanta Journal, when the preachers have to close the city churches.

Former Secretary Long tells Plymouth in so many words that the Pilgrim Fathers had their faults, declares the New York World. In sporting circles this sort of criticism would be described as rocking the rock.

If one could only close one's ears to the cry for help that is going up from every farm in the great Northwest, observes the Chicago Inter-Ocean, one might get more satisfaction out of contemplating the sea of happy, youthful faces at the ball matches.

The present awakening on the subject of pure food—including clean meat, clean milk and medicines without dope or poison, as well as pure food in general—has been largely the work of women, especially of the women's clubs, observes the Boston Transcript. But the most distinctive note of woman in politics is in what she has done as representing the interests and the point of view of the consumer.

"What shall we do with our millions?" is likely to become the heart-cry of the tainted millionaire if this conspiracy of rejection, which seems to have spread from educational and religious institutions to Presidential aspirants and political chairmen, goes on, suggests the New York Press. There would still be left to them, of course, the channel of anonymous giving for worthy causes. But anonymity and tainted millions have never yet been willing yoke-fellows.

The sole reliance of the Czar, his nobility and the bureaucracy is upon the army. If that fails them they are gone and Nicholas will be lucky to escape with his life, declares the New York American. That the army will fail the ruling class is highly probable. The soldiers, like the sailors, are for the most part peasants—and drafted peasants at that. They have the thoughts, the feelings, the prejudices, the interests of their class, and in spite of every precaution revolutionary doctrines have been seductously spread among them.

A monument is to be erected in Pennsylvania to James Buchanan, fifteenth President of the United States. It is tardy honor to a man so long the victim of ignorance and prejudice, observes the Washington Post. He is yet misunderstood by the average American, and in thousands of households he is yet held as little short of a traitor. Even men tolerably well informed as to the general history of our country are defiantly and grossly ignorant of the career and the character of James Buchanan. It is useless to try to impart to most of them knowledge of the subject. Prejudice guards with malicious round the bivouac of the ignorant.

The imputation which has rested upon Massachusetts ever since the federal census of 1900, of producing the smallest number of babies in proportion to the number of women, as compared with other States, is challenged and practically wiped out by our Bureau of Statistics of Labor in the latest bulletin from that department, declares the Boston Post. The United States census credited to Massachusetts 347 children under five years of age to each 1000 women in the State. The Massachusetts bureau shows that, acording to the statistics thus far collected, which represent one-third of the population of the State, for each 1000 mothers 3958 children were born.

A unique and picturesque figure has passed wth the death of Russell Sage, the last of the group conspicuous in Wall street during the civil war and the succeeding exciting era of railway building, railways wrecking, railway merging and astounding legal and financial battles for railway control, remarks the New York Herald. The frugal habits acquired when he worked for four dollars a month were retained after he had acquired millions, and made him the subject of many good natured pleasantries. Mr. Sage never denied himself anything he wanted, but his wants were few, and, possessed of enormous wealth, with his cultivated and estimable wife he led a life which was an example of domesticated and placid simplicity and contributed to prolong his years far beyond the traditional three score and ten.

cobs & Bros.,
e and Rugs.
R AGENTS—
astic Book Cases
Cabinets.
ng.
MINGHAM, ALA
Insurance Associatio
ALABAMA.
L ACT OF THE LEGISLATURE
and for the People.
ounty Branch
February 3, 1900.
WALLACE C. EDLER,
Sec'y.-Treas.
ings, outbuildings and conte
oss by fire, wind and lightni
most sensible method of ins
43-100 of 1 per cen
pon application to
CE C. EDLER, Clanton, A MBINATION OFFER
e "TWICE-A-WEEK" Issue
of the Globe-Democra
—With—
UNION
—For—
s, one year, only $1.
should not be classed with the many
emi-Weekly, eight or more pages,
ll comparison the biggest, best and published in the United States. It
e all
dern Newspaper.
ly from the Daily issue. It is
needs of the Farmer, the Merchant
ep thoroughly posted without sparing also contains a great variety of well
to every member of the family.
l Clubbing Offer
, but may be withdrawn at any time,
Address
THE UNION,
Clanton, Ala
Practical Watchma
and Optician
Eyes Correctly
Fitted
Mail orders promptly
RIBE FOR PAPER
U WANT
ds, Noteheads,
s, Envelopes,
G ELSE PRINTED?
hen Call at
ION OFFIC
Work at Low Prices.
All For $2.00
erial, done on Good Mach
NION, Clanton, Alabama.
Prevents Fevers.
FURNISH PURE WAT
ter or no charge made.
Address
SARBER CO.
Ala

EVERYDAY FANCIES.

By Mrs. M. A. Kidder.

The poor should cease from out our land
And the needy be no more,
Then what would become of the open hand
And the [illegible]'s borrowed store?
And the [illegible] should reach to
[illegible]
For the is a cold and unfruitful lie,
[illegible] need, and no mouths
[illegible]
We never should plant or sow the seed
The [illegible] should list to the factory
[illegible] ruffled puff, [illegible] songs that buy and [illegible] had enough.
If we [illegible] a lazy life,
[illegible] folded would rock
[illegible] and no lack of bread,
[illegible] gone and commerce
[illegible]
For the [illegible] should cease from out the [illegible]
And the Master lead no more,
Then what would become of the world and
That [illegible] up for their modest
store?
With no master hand the work to
[illegible]
And no way to pass from man to
[illegible]
This world would be in its misery
As [illegible] as one could see.
Then [illegible] contented with our call,
[illegible] fare no more;
And rich and poor are brothers
[illegible]
From the [illegible] to the humble sower,
Let [illegible] go on in the old time
way.
With [illegible] bright, and its
[illegible]
With [illegible] hands, that the gen-
[illegible] hands
May [illegible] to give as the case demands.

ROSAMOND'S CONQUEST.

BY EMMA GARRISON JONES.

"Rosamond!"

"Coming, mamma!" and the little girl ran in from the garden, her dimpled hands all stained, and her wicker basket half filled with ripe strawberries.

"My love, I want you to run to the drug store," said her mother, looking up from the handsome party dress she was trimming. "Poor papa's fever is coming on again, and he must have his medicine. Ask the druggist to refill this bottle, and——"

"Yes, mamma; give me the money."

Mrs. Trevor burst into tears.

"Rosamond," she said, "I haven't a cent in the wide world, and shall not have till this dress is finished, and I've worked so hard; but run, my love, and ask the druggist to send me the medicine, and tell him he shall have his money early to-morrow morning."

"Yes, mamma!" and away ran Rosamond, her sensitive mouth quivering, her eyes full of tears.

"Poor mamma! poor mamma! I wish I could help her!" she murmured.

Meanwhile Mrs. Trevor sat at her sewing, but her tears often blinded her and she arose every minute or two to cross the room and peep into her husband's chamber. He was dozing, his pale face flushed with rising fever—her dear, handsome husband, for whose love she had sacrificed so much.

She was the daughter and only child of a wealthy banker, this pale, sorrowful wife. When she reached her seventeenth birthday, her father called her into his library and told her that she had chosen her husband, at the same time displaying a handsome set of diamonds, which had come with Mr. Oglethorpe's proposal.

"Such fine harmonies they are! And, my dear, Mr. Oglethorpe comes of the best family in the State, and he is a millionaire as well."

"But, papa, I cannot marry Mr. Oglethorpe."

"Why not?"

"Because I don't love him."

"Stuff! You'll love him soon enough when you are once his wife. Not another word—you shall take him or no one. I shall see young Trevor and give him orders to cease visiting my house. You hear me, Edith?"

"Yes, papa, but if I don't obey?"

"Then I disown you, and you'll marry under my curse."

And when Edith, as many a fond, weak girl has done, yielded to her lover's persuasions and became his wife, her father kept his word. From the hour of her marriage she saw his face no more.

She was very happy with the man of her choice, and did not regret the step she had taken, although her estrangement from the father she loved caused her unceasing pain. At first they managed to live quite comfortably, but soon Mr. Trevor, never strong, failed in health. Then a security debt came upon him and swept away his little all, and a couple of years after Rosamond's birth they were very poor indeed, and now there was another little one in the cradle.

For her children's sake Edith swallowed her pride and wrote her father a touching letter, begging him to forgive her and help her in her sore distress. The letter was returned to her unopened.

Then she set to work herself, taking in embroidery and plain sewing; but all her efforts could not keep the gaunt wolf from the door.

She sat at her work now, thinking over her troubles and waiting for Rosamond's return.

It was not long before the little creature came running in, but one glance at her grieved little face told her mother she had failed.

"Well, Rosie darling?" she said, gently.

"Oh, mamma, he wouldn't let me have it!" sobbed the child. "I told him about poor papa, and I begged him, but he said no—the money must come first."

"Well, love, it can't be helped," sighed her mother. "I can finish the dress in an hour, and then we shall get the money. Go and fan poor papa now, and put a cold strawberry in his mouth when he wakes. Mamma must sew."

Rosamond obeyed, taking her place by her father's couch. She fanned him into a sound sleep, and then she went to the open window, and fell to dreaming.

The afternoon sunshine glittered on the little garden plot, with its tufts of pinks and heart's-ease, and its square bed of strawberries. Rosamond built her castles, and meanwhile her mother finished the party dress, and arose to take it home.

"Tage good care of papa, Rosie," she called, as she crossed the yard, "and watch baby."

"All right, mamma," answered Rosamond.

The summer afternoon droned away and with the twilight her mother returned. Rosamond had tidied up the sick room, and had made the tea ready for her father's supper, beside rocking her baby brother when he awoke.

"Well, mamma," she cried, joyfully.

Her poor mother fell into a seat, and burst into sobs.

"Oh, Rosamond, the lady can't pay me till next week. There is no hope for us; poor papa must die!"

Rosamond only nodded her curly head, and a curious sparkle lit her eye.

"I'll do it," she whispered, under her breath.

Mr. Trevor had a bad night, and his wife got no sleep, consequently she did not rise early the next morning, but Rosamond was up with the dawn.

She put on her best dress, and her chip hat, and stole downstairs, with her little wicker basket in her hand. Then she ran into the garden, and gathered the largest of the strawberries. When she had filled her basket, she made a little nosegay of her heart's-ease, and another of pinks, and put them on top of the bright berries. Then she hung the little basket on her arm, and dropping on her knees upon the wet grass, she looked up at the opal sky and prayed.

"Oh, dear Lord, please help me to sell my berries, to buy my poor, sick papa some medicine." And never doubting in her sweet, child's faith, but God would hearken to her request, she bounded to her feet and ran off in the direction of the village.

Th early market was just opened, and a dozen or two countrywomen were ranging stalls and along the sidewalk, with their produce in green array before them. Little Rosamond looked about her for a minute, and then established herself in a corner, and stood there like a picture, her hat pushed back, her cheeks flushed, her golden curls in a tumble.

"Who'll buy my ripe strawberries?"

At last a gentleman paused, attracted by the sweet, bird-like voice.

"Please, sir, would you buy my berries?"

"Baskets and all, and yourself in the bargain."

"Not myself, but the basket, sir, and the posies, and only fifty cents."

The gentleman drew out his purse.

"I can't find it in my heart to refuse such a mite of a market-woman as you are," he said, kindly. "Here's a dollar. Now tell me how it comes to pass that such a baby as you are at this occupation?"

Rosamond received the dollar with dancing eyes.

"Oh, sir, how good you are! Thank you a hundred times. Oh! my poor papa can have his medicine now. You see, sir, he's very sick, my poor papa is, and mamma hasn't one cent, and the druggist wouldn't let us have the medicine, and mamma couldn't get the money for the pretty dress she made; and, oh! how she did cry—and—and——"

"And you came here to sell your berries?"

"Yes, sir, that's it, and mamma doesn't know what I have done. Oh, but won't she be glad when she sees this!"

She closed her pink fingers on the crisp bill, and handed her little basket to the gentleman. He took it, and then stood looking down at her with a curious, wistful gaze. Something in the frank, clear, young eyes stirred his heart, and made his lips quiver.

"I must run home now. Good-by, sir; I shall never forget you."

Rosamond held out her chubby hand. He clasped it and held it close.

"You'll tell me your name first, won't you, little woman?"

"Rosamond Trevor, sir."

"What?"

The child eyed his working face in amazement.

"And your mother's name?"

"Edith Trevor, sir."

"Gracious heavens!"

He was silent a minute; but when the child sought to release her hand he only held it the closer.

"Rosamond," he said, presently, in a faltering voice, "did you ever hear of your grandfather?"

"My Grandfather Everleigh?" Oh, yes, indeed, sir! Mamma tells me about him, but I never saw him. He's a rich man, and—and—well, I don't think he cares for us because we are poor!"

"Rosamond, I am your grandfather!"

The child looked at him with incredulous eyes; then all at once she began to clap her hands.

"And you will go home with me and see poor mamma—you will, you will!" she cried.

"Yes," replied the gentleman, in a hoarse voice. "Come along; my carrige is not far off."

They drove up the green lane to the cottage just as the sun was rising. Rosamond's mother was in the garden looking about with much concern for her little girl.

"Here I am, mamma," shouted Rosie, putting forth her golden head. "I ran away to market to sell strawberries; and, oh, mamma, I've got a whole dollar, and I've brought Grandfather Everleigh home with me!"

The meeting between father and daughter was a happy one, and all the past was forgotten and forgiven in the joy of the present. Under the treatment of a good physician, and the restorative power of a contented mind, Mr. Trevor soon regained his health; and Edith's father, to make amends for his former harshness, took him into the firm of which he was the head, and insisted that they should all live together in his mansion, where little Rosie is now his pet and almost constant companion.—New York Weekly.

FRANCE AND THE SAHARA.

Meharistes Slowly Winning the Desert.

France is constantly giving proofs of her mastery over the Sahara. She has won it by her new methods of desert travel, which were adopted only three years ago and proved from the first successful. Her meharistes travel wherever they are sent. At irregular but frequent intevals they raise their flags over some new territory and attach it to one of their organized districts. The meharistes are small troops of camel cavalry mounted on animals specially trained for fast travel, so that they may go lightly laden. They depend on the oases to replenish supplies. Their latest journey is one of the most notable of their achievements. Starting from Timbuctoo they marched north and northwest about 350 miles to Taudeni, arriving there May 8. Captain Cauvin and his men camped in the town for eight days. The natives had never seen a white man before. Their fathers saw one specimen seventy-eight years ago, when Rene Calle crossed the desert. Lenz was in that neighborhood about twenty-five years ago, but passed aroun dthe place because he did not dare to enter it. Captain Cauvin attached Taudeni to the Government of Timbuktu, and his party returned to the Niger. They had met no opposition, but were much fatigued by the heat and the hardships of a desert march nearly as long as the distance between New York and Chicago.

Isolated and miserable as Taudeni is, the place has long been one of the most notable in the Sahara. It occupies a depression only about four hundred feet above sea level. The waters come near the surface here, and many wells are possible. This has made the settlement the converging point for all the caravan routes between Morocco and Timbuctoo. It is the centre of the largest salt industry in Africa. Here are apparently inexhaustible beds of pure rock salt, which the natives hew out in blocks about three feet long, weighing seventy pounds. Four of these make a camel load. The salt is taken to Timbuctoo and distributed throughout the whole Western Soudan. It is sold to the Timbuctoo merchants for a pittance, but increases in value with every day's journey of their camels to the south. Taudeni is described by the people of Timbuctoo as one of the most wretched of desert settlements. The natives are of mixed Arab and Negro blood. They have had no government. Every man is a law unto himself. Often the miners suffer from lack of food, as they are dependent on imports for supplies of all kinds except water and salt. They exact a camel from every caravan replenishing its water skins at their wells, and the animals thus acquired are kept as a food resource. It was because Lenz could not spare a camel that he replenished his water supply at Wady Tell, outside the settlement, and went on without seeing a native. Salt mining is the only industry. The heat is so intense that at times the miners are compelled to quit work and take refuge in caves. Lenz found abundant evidence that this region, some time or other, gave support to people of a culture differing from that of the present inhabitants. He found the ruins of ancient walls, objects of ornament, tools and other articles such as are no longer in use. He learned that many of these relics are scattered over this part of the desert, and specimens of finely worked and polished stone have been carried as curiosities to other Saharan towns. The French expedition may throw more light on this region.

• The population of the United States is estimated to be eighty-five millions, and only twenty-nine millions are connected with any church—Catholic or Protestat.

Does Capital Punishment Tend To Diminish Capital Crime?

By Thomas Speed Mosby.

THE death penalty, as a feature of the penal code, is undergoing a process of evolution which, judging from existing tendencies and those which have characterized the world's jurisprudence during the past fifty years, must result in its complete extinction. It now exists in forty States of the American Union.

In the investigation of this subject, the writer caused inquiries to be addressed to the attorney-generals of these forty States, asking their opinion as to whether capital punishment tended to diminish capital crime.

Eighteen of the forty declined to express an opinion. Only sixteen of the attorney-generals of States which inflict the death penalty declared themselves as clearly of the opinion that capital punishment does tend to diminish capital crime. Two of the forty were positive in their conviction that the death penalty does not tend to diminish capital crimes, and stated their opinion that the death penalty should be abolished, while four of the forty gave qualified answers.

In five States of Kansas, Maine, Michigan, Rhode Island and Wisconsin, where capital punishment does not exist, the attorney-generals have noted no increase in capital crime since the abolition of the death penalty, and generally express themselves as satisfied with the conditions existing in their respective States. In Michigan, Wisconsin, and Rhode Island capital punishment was abolished over fifty years ago, and has not since been re-enacted. Though nominally prescribed by law in Kansas, the death penalty can be executed in that State only upon the Governor's warrant, and the Kansas Governors have persistently declined to issue a death warrant, the condemned persons, meanwhile, remaining in prison. In five other States where the death penalty exists the trial juries have power to commute it to life imprisonment.

The right of the State to take the life of a citizen has always been and doubtless must remain an academic question, although, conceding the soundness of the doctrine of "consent of the governed" as the ultimate basis of governmental authority, it must be admitted that one cannot be morally held to a contract whereby he consents that another may take his life. In our civil jurisprudence no man can give another the right to do him bodily injury. Such contracts are always void as against public policy. But the case against capital punishment is made when it is shown simply that it is unnecessary. It is coming to be understood that the majority of human beings do not refrain from the commission of capital crimes merely through fear of being hanged. Every person who commits a capital crime knows that, in States maintaining capital punishment, the death penalty is affixed to that crime. From a personal study of more than two thousand cases I am convinced that most crimes are committed by persons who either (1) expect to escape all punishment, or (2) who, upon the spur of the moment, are regardless of all punishment, or (3) who are governed by cosmic, social or individual factors which render the prospect of punishment inoperative as a deterrent agency at the time of the commission of the crime.—Harper's Weekly.

Why Socialism Fails.

By Tom Watson.

NO matter how much there may be in the Tomorrow of Socialism, in its Today, when it shall be inaugurated as a system, all things must be owned collectively, and that means that the high and low come to a common level; the good and the bad start even; the idle and the industrious share and share alike; the illiterate and the learned, the capable and the incompetent, the fool and the wise man, the virgin and the troll, the negro and the white, all come to the Universal Brotherhood pot, and ladle out an equal porringerful of pottage.

In the name of Heaven! What a sordid, sickening dead-level! What an enforced equalizing of all men and all women, in a world where God never made two grains of sand, two leaves of the forest, two birds of the air, two fish of the sea, two beasts of the field, exactly equal.

Only in a political sense can any one even dream of two men being equal, for our eyes, our common-sense tell us that such a thing as equality in strength, capacity, character, or in the elements and achievements of manhood has no existence among men.

Socialism proceeds upon the idea that equality is there, or can be put there; and the effort to prove that the idea is correct has been made time and again and again. It was not only among the Ancients, but it has been tried in modern times, and it was tried by the colonists who first settled in North America. . .

Failure, dismal failure, has been the result of every experiment. Why? Because Human Nature is radically, eternally different from what the Socialist assumes it to be.

If all were equal, and all were good, Socialism would be unnecessary, even from the standpoint of the Socialist.

Give us absolute equality and universal goodness, and we don't need anything but a little time to reach an equal distribution of wealth and an era of Peace on Earth and Good Will to Men.—Watson's Magazine.

Strength in Sorrow.

By Lillie Hamilton French.

WE would not have to strive so for courage if what we vaguely call "things" were more evenly distributed among us, for no one's lot would then seem to him an evil one. If we were all hump-backed, or lame, or blind; if every husband were unfaithful and every child a cross; if we were all poor and no man had more than another; if nobody's son died in his early strength, and nobody was loved while we sat neglected—then who of us would know what sorrows and afflictions were? We would take each of them for granted, as a Chinaman takes his yellow skin and an Indian his red one.

It is because we see our estate differing from that of our fellows that we are tempted to comparisons, and it is in the making of these comparisons that a sense of our sorrows, like the knowledge of our afflictions, is first born. How would we have known that we were poor, unless we had seen some one else who was richer? or that our son was unsuccessful unless the son of somebody else were making a great mark in the world? Would our little children be unhappy with only one dress, had they not seen other children with two?

It comes to this: When we begin to make comparisons we begin to suffer. This may seem to be a hard saying, but it is a true one.—Harper's Bazar.

"Ask the Missus."

John Burns, the English radical and reformer and a prominent member of King Edward's Cabinet, was, during an election meeting, interrogated by a sturdy voter who wanted to know just what John Burns, the Cabinet Minister, at high pay did with the enormous increase of wages over the workman's modest wage. The new Cabinet officer was equal to the occasion.

"How do you spend it, John?" roared the elector.

"Ask the missus," said the honest, self-reliant John, and the crowd roared out its applause. No room there for the microbe of divorce to get foot hold; no focus for the stegmlya of distrust and incompatibility.

"Ask the missus" is a whole library of martial wisdom. If a man's wife knows where his money goes, it is, in one thousand, minus one case, spent for the best interests of the household. The man that can look his brother squarely in the face and say, "Ask the missus," is no spendrift, no bogus high-roller, no gambler, no cheat. "Ask the missus," and her happy, hopeful, trustful, contented face will be answer enough of the faith she holds in the man who trusts and loves her.

"Ask the missus" would put divorce lawyers out of business. "Ask the missus," would wipe divorce-giving South Dakota off the map. "Ask the missus" would keep the worth less foreign nobleman off the American grass. "Ask the missus" would build homes such only as the founders of the nation knew.

Men of America, take the cue from John Burns. Make it possible to say to every inquirer as to where the money goes, "Ask the missus."—Louisville Herald.

Origin Of "Blackmail."

An authority on the derivation of words says that "blackmail" as used by Coke and Blackstone had an innocent significance meaning simply rent paid in labor or produce instead of in money, rent paid in "white money" (silver) being known as "white mail." The word "mail," meaning rent, comes from the Anglo Saxon "mael," a portion or possibly from the old French "maille," a halfpenny. In the days before England and Scotland were united the freebooters used to make frequent raids on the farmers living along the border and the money paid to secure immunity from these raids came to be known as "blackmail." Once established in that sense it is easy to see how the world came to be used to designate money paid to secure immunity from a raid on one's reputtion.—The Suburbanite.

No Need for Nerve Medicine.

A country doctor, after writing a prescription for a patient told him the druggist would probably charge him sixty cents for filling it. The patient asked the physican to lend him the money. The latter scratched out part of the prescription and handed it back with ten cents, remarking: "You can have that filled for a dime. What I have scratched out was for your nerve."—Washington Star.

WORTH QUOTING

—Canned shark is one of the delicacies on sale in Idia and Japan.

"Do Americans go to Europe to get away from business?" asks the New York Herald. Some of them go to get away from the grand juries.

A dog's bark is generally worse than its bite, but it's different with a mosquito, observes the Philadelphia Record.

Southern progress can almost be measured, declares the Atlanta Constitution, by the number of technical schools in the south.

Perhaps the devil never takes a vacation, but he is apt to leave the cities for the seashore, remarks the Atlanta Journal, when the preachers have to close the city churches.

Former Secretary Long tells Plymouth in so many words that the Pilgrim Fathers had their faults, declares the New York World. In sporting circles this sort of criticism would be described as rocking the rock.

If one could only close one's ears to the cry for help that is going up from every farm in the great Northwest, observes the Chicago Inter-Ocean, one might get more satisfaction out of contemplating the sea of happy, youthful faces at the ball matches.

The present awakening on the subject of pure food—including clean meat, clean milk and medicines without dope or poison, as well as pure food in general—has been largely the work of women, especially of the women's clubs, observes the Boston Transcript. But the most distinctive note of woman in politics is in what she has done as representing the interests and the point of view of the consumer.

"What shall we do with our millions?" is likely to become the heart-cry of the tainted millionaire if this conspiracy of rejection, which seems to have spread from educational and religious institutions to Presidential aspirants and political chairmen, goes on, suggests the New York Press. There would still be left to them, of course, the channel of anonymous giving for worthy causes. But anonymity and tainted millions have never yet been willing yoke-fellows.

The sole reliance of the Czar, his nobility and the bureaucracy is upon the army. If that fails them they are gone and Nicholas will be lucky to escape with his life, declares the New York American. That the army will fail the ruling class is highly probable. The soldiers, like the sailors, are for the most part peasants—and drafted peasants at that. They have the thoughts, the feelings, the prejudices, the interests of their class, and in spite of every precaution revolutionary doctrines have been sedulously spread among them.

A monument is to be erected in Pennsylvania to James Buchanan, fifteenth President of the United States. It is tardy honor to a man so long the victim of ignorance and prejudice, observes the Washington Post. He is yet misunderstood by the average American, and in thousands of households he is yet held as little short of a traitor. Even men tolerably well informed as to the general history of our country are defiantly and grssly ignorant of the career and the character of James Buchanan. It is useless to try to impart to most of them knowledge of the subject. Prejudice guards with malicious round the bivouac of the ignorant.

The imputation which has rested upon Massachusetts ever since the federal census of 1900, of producing the smallest number of babies in proportion to the number of women, as compared with other States, is challenged and practically wiped out by our Bureau of Statistics of Labor in the latest bulletin from that department, declares the Boston Post. The United States census credited to Massachusetts 347 children under five years of age to each 1000 women in the State. The Massachusetts bureau shows that, acording to the statistics thus far collected, which represent one-third of the population of the State, for each 1000 mothers 3958 children were born.

A unique and picturesque figure has passed with the death of Russell Sage, the last of the group conspicuous in Wall street during the civil war and the succeeding exciting era of railway building, railways wrecking, railway merging and astounding legal and financial battles for railway control, remarks the New York Herald. The frugal habits acquired when he worked for four dollars a month were retained after he had acquired millions, and made him the subject of many good natured pleasantries. Mr. Sage never denied himself anything he wanted, but his wants were few, and, possessed of enormous wealth, with his cultivated and estimable wife he led a life which was an example of domesticated and placid simplicity and contributed to prolong his years far beyond the traditional three score and ten.

THE UNION

Published every Thursday at Clanton, Chilton county, Alabama.

Wallace C. Edler, Ed. and Pub.

Subscription price, in advance, per year, $1.

For advertising rates, call at the office, Seventh street, between First and Second avenues.

Entered April 15, 1903, at Clanton, Ala., as second class matter, under act of congress of March 3, 1879.

NOTICE TO CORRESPONDENTS.

All communications to the Union must be signed by the writer's real name as well as that name which they wish to put in the paper. Letters must reach the editor Tuesday morning to get in the same week. While we will publish any and all communications complying with these requirements that do not contain any improper language, we are not responsible for the opinions expressed. tf.

CLANTON, ALA., Sep. 6, 1906.

Union Clubbing List

THE UNION And Yellow Jacket	$1.05
THE UNION And Southern Ruralist	1.00
THE UNION And Union Educator	1.05
THE UNION And Home and Farm	1.00
THE UNION And Weekly Age-Herald	1.25
THE UNION and Weekly Atlanta Constitution	1.25
THE UNION and Twice-a-Week Globe Democrat	1.00
THE UNION and Tri-W'kly Atlanta Constitution	1.50
THE UNION And Tom Watson's Magazine	1.50
THE UNION and Tri-Weekly N. Y. World	1.50
THE UNION And Rural South	1.50
THE UNION And Weekly Advertiser and Map of Alabama, U. S. and world	1.50

If there are any other papers you want call at THE UNION office, and we will get them for you at the lowest rates. tf

NOMINEES OF THE People's Primary

Held August 6, 1906, under the direction of the Republican and Populist Executive Committees of Chilton County, Ala.

FOR REPRESENTATIVE.
J. Osmond Middleton.

FOR SHERIFF.
Felix J. Fitts.

FOR COMMISSIONER.
First District—W. H. Conway.
Second District—S. E. Waldrup.
tf

THE DEMOCRATIC PRIMARY.

We have often heard the phrase used that "Democrats would vote for a yellow dog if he were on their ticket," but on July 27, in Chilton county, a "yellow dog" could have voted if he had trotted up to the polls, for the managers had no way of telling whether he was "qualified" or not. There was absolutely no attention paid to the ruling of the State Executive Committee as to who could vote, and the clauses of the primary election law in regard to registered voters, etc., were ignored. In spite of all this "laying down the bars" the total vote in the county was only 593, many of whom did not touch the county ticket at all, as, for instance, in Beat 4 there were 10 voters who refused to mark a county ticket. The Rev. Sam M. Adams polled 419 votes, against 164 for his opponents for Commissioner of Agriculture. Next week we expect to give you the figures of the state committee. The Democrats of Chilton county have a delegation to represent them in their state convention of which the majority are consistent representatives of the party.

WHAT GOES WITH THE MONEY?

The town of Clanton claims it is in debt and wants the citizens to vote a $5,000 bond issue so as to pay this debt and (if there is anything left) to put in electric lights and furnish the school house. How many people in Clanton know anything as to what goes with the money they pay into the treasury in the shape of taxes and license fees? Why, in the fore part of this year the council passed an ordinance as to license fees, which, if impartially enforced, should have yielded almost $2,000. This is in addition to the tax on property. What was done with that money? Not since Mayor Van Derveer's time has there been an itemized statement of the receipts and expenditures of the town published. On January 11, 1906, the Union offered to publish, FREE OF CHARGE, an itemized statement of receipts and disbursements of the town IF MADE UNDER OATH BY THE PROPER OFFICIAL. Why was not that offer taken up? The offer disposed of the plaint that "there wasn't any money to pay for publishing. What price are these bonds to be sold for? Does anyone guarantee par value for 5 per cent per year? Turn down any and every request for more money until "you are shown" what has become of what has been paid in. Now is your time to force a showing. Does the county of Chilton have to issue bonds? No, not even to build court houses and jails. The man that votes for that bond issue under present conditions should never open his mouth to kick about taxes and "sich."

RURAL CARRIERS MEET.

Clanton, Ala., Sept. 3, 1906.

The annual meeting of the Chilton county R. F. D. carriers was held at Clanton, September 3, 1906. President Armstrong called the meeting to order and after a few remarks the association proceeded to business in regular order. Twelve members responded to the roll call, after which the minutes of last meeting were read and adopted. On motion, S. D. Culpepper and A. D. Gentry were admitted to the association as members without paying their fees to the county secretary, having paid said fee direct to the state secretary at Birmingham July 4. R. M. Sorrell, A. D. Gentry and E. H. Foshee were appointed by the president as members of the executive committee. On motion the 40 cents overpaid at the first meeting to the organizer was ordered paid into the treasury of the association, and that each regular carrier be assessed $1.50 and each substitute be assessed $1 as annual dues to the association. After a lengthy discussion of the present condition of the public highways, by members and patrons, a committee of three was appointed to secure legal advice in regard to obtaining a road law for Chilton county. The meeting then adjourned to meet at such time and place as suggested by the executive committee.

LETTER TO COMPANY.

Nevada Sets Out Laws for Foreign Insurance Corporations.

Carson City, Nev., Aug. 28.—A letter has been sent to the London and Lancashire Fire Insurance Company by Insurance Commissioner Davis in response to one received from the manager of the company relative to information as to the condition of its business in the State of Nevada, in which Mr. Davis says:

"You ask me relative to the requirevada, with which you will be pleased to comply. I would suggest that your company pay better attention to complying with the laws of California. You are reported in the newspapers as settling in full with your wealthy patrons and squeezing your small policyholders. You have no right to make such discriminations.

"You certainly cannot expect to do business on those lines in California and continue to write policies in this State. I have ordered all policies carried by your company on State property cancelled and will give you two weeks to begin settling dollar for dollar in San Francisco, and if there is still complaint of your business methods in San Francisco your license to do business in this State will be revoked."
—Montgomery Advertiser.

SHELBY COUNTY REPUBLICANS.

The Republicans of Shelby county will not hold a primary in September to nominate officers as provided for by the state committee at a meeting held a few weeks ago in Birmingham.

At a meeting held Thursday in Calera the Republicans of Shelby county adopted resolutions not only declaring the primary plan impracticable, but also condemned the state committee for attempting to prepare such a plan. The leaders on the state committee are charged with political activity and bringing about a scandal by their activity.

Mr. Aldrich Nominated.

W. F. Aldrich, of Aldrich, Ala., one of the most prominent Republicans of this state, was nominated by the Republicans of Shelby county, in convention assembled, for the state legislature. Mr. Aldrich has announced that he will accept the nomination and that he will make an active campaign for election. Mr. Aldrich is a member of the state executive committee, and at the last meeting of that body he lined up with the element who went on record as being opposed to the party policy which has been instituted by Chairman J. O. Thompson and his adherents. Mr. Aldrich strongly opposed the plan of holding a state primary.

While defeated in the committee meeting, it is known that the element in the party headed by Aldrich and Julius Davidson have not ceased in their efforts to have a convention in the place of a primary for the nomination of candidates. The resolution adopted by the Shelby county Republicans at their meeting at Calera is entirely in line with Mr. Aldrich's expressed views.

The Resolution.

This resolution is as follows:

"We, the Republicans of Shelby county, assembled in a delegate convention at Calera, this 30th day of August, 1906, express our regret and disapproval of the action of the state committee in calling a primary election in all the counties of the state for the purpose of nominating candidates for the state officers to be voted for in the election of November next.

"The primary plan is a departure from the long and well established and well liked convention plan, and as all of the counties in the state wherein our party has any strength will have county conventions, which said conventions could select delegates to a state convention, with no additional trouble or expense, while the primary will be expensive and utterly impractical except in a few counties; and,

"Whereas, the innovation of the primary was not called for the benefit of the party, but to prevent the Republicans from adopting a platform on which to make a fight, to prevent them from passing on the leadership of the officeholders' trust now dominating our state organization; therefore, be it

"Resolved, We reject the primary for this county as unsuitable, unnecessary and uselessly expensive."

The following resolution was also adopted:

"Resolved, That as the chairman and a majority of our state committee are federal officials, and they are using their offices to control political movements, and are making themselves unduly prominent in political matters, to the extent that they have created a public scandal by their activity, calls for drastic action by the administration and our just condemnation."

The Republicans and Populists of Shelby county are working together and in addition to the Aldrich nomination H. M. Norris, Populist, was nominated for sheriff; Ollie Cast, Populist for county commissioner, and J. B. Ozaar, Republican, for commissioner.

COMMUNICATED.

Energy, September 1.

Editor The Union:

I ask for the first time a small space in a newspaper.

I notice Mr. Middleton is troubled about Mr. Gulledge's connection with the postoffice at Verbena and the way he got it.

The fact is he never asked for the appointment, except to sign the formal application sent him. I was a patron of the office before, during and since his service as postmaster, and a close neighbor of Mr. Gulledge, and know whereof I write. Mr. Gulledge often expressed regret over the young lady's losing the office. In fact, he allowed her to hold the office for several weeks after he held his commission, and at the time he gave the office up, if it had been left to a question of merit and endorsement, Mr. G. could have gotten a large majority of his patrons on his petition to retain him as the postmaster. I want to say further to Mr. Middleton and the Verbena Kid that Mr. Gulledge's closest supporters and best political friends are those who have dealt with him ever since he went into business.

I want to say also that he has furnished more poor people homes at fair prices on long time than any man I know of. Don't guess Mr. Middleton or the Kid charge anything for what they do. T. J. GRIFFIN.

COMMUNICATED.

Sick Room, Verbena, Ala., Sept. 3, 1906

Mr. J. O. Middleton, Clanton, Ala.:

Dear Sir—Instead of setting forth in your letter of last week, published in the Banner and in the Union, your platform, as requested by me, you have adopted, it seems, as your platform personal abuse of me.

In the outset of the campaign I assured you and the public at large that the campaign would be conducted upon a high plane, without abuse of my opponent, and which I have lived strictly up to. I leave it to the public whether you have maintained a like course.

I do not believe that the people will stand for any such means of campaign as you have adopted.

I propose to meet you on the stump and present the issues squarely and fairly, face to face with my people.

Respectfully,
F. A. GULLEDGE.

CARD FROM M. C. WILLIAMS.

Editor Union:

Please allow me space to express my thanks to my neighbors and friends for their kindness during the illness and death of my wife. I am deeply grateful to all. Respectfully,
M. C. WILLIAMS.

Verbena, Route 1.

CARD FROM MR. C. N. DENNIS.

Clanton, Ala., Sept. 4, 1906.

Mr. Editor:

Please allow me to express my heartfelt thanks to my many friends for their assistance during the illness and at the death of my daughter, Mrs Lula Josephine Gray, the wife of J. W. Gray.

She was a devoted wife and daughter and a consecrated Christian, having received a hope in Christ at 9 years old.

She was born October 17, 1884, and died September 2, 1906, at the home of her father. C. N. DENNIS.

PLEASANT GROVE.

Editor Union:

Here I am again this week with a few words in regard to this community.

Health is good at present and our farmers are all about through with their fodder. Some are picking cotton though it doesn't seem to be very good as most cotton through this section is sorry.

The entertainment at J. M. Cobb's Thursday night was nicely carried out. Music rich and grand was furnished by the Davenport String band.

Miss Mattie Patton's music school closed last Friday and we are very sorry the young lady had to leave, as she will be greatly missed by all.

Prof. H. H. Merchant's school closed last Friday, and we must say he is as good a teacher as we have ever had at this place, and we are sorry to he has to leave us. But we are looking forward for October to come so he can take up his school again

Mrs. D. L. Ward, of Thorsby, visited her parents and friends of this place last week.

Miss Jewell Thomas, of Jemison, was also down visiting her relatives and friends here last week.

Miss Indie and Maggie Freeman spent Saturday night and Sunday with Miss Selma Patterson.

Rev. R. M. Honeycutt filled his regular appointment at Mullins' Hill last Sunday and a large congregation was present, while a great many of our young people attended the baptizing at Mars Hill Church.

Well, as my letter is getting a little lengthy and I haven't much news at present, I will stop and come again in the near future.

SAME GREENHORN.

JEMISON, R. F. D. NO. 3.

Editor Union:

Surely you will allow me a small space in your paper to say a few words in regard to this part of the country.

Everything seems to be progressing nicely. The protracted meeting has closed at Union Grove with success, receiving about ten members. The services were conducted by Revs. Parish, the pastor, and Lucas.

The Rocky Mount school is progressing nicely under the control of Prof. F. B. Williams, and assistant, Miss Nelia Johnson, as teachers. We were glad to entertain Miss Eva Williams, the professor's sister, from Birmingham, Thursday, on her way to New Orleans, La., where she will go to work teaching stenography.

Our series of meetings at Mt. Pleasant will begin September 6 at 11 a. m. (Thursday). Services to be held by our pastor, Rev. A. T. Vandiver, which we hope will close with much success.

Say, what is going to happen? D. B. keeps going over across the field. Well, I guess I had better close before I write too much. Best wishes to The Union and its readers from the

"WEE LASSIE."

The State of Alabama, Chilton County.

J. P. Van Derveer, Plaintiff, vs. National Stamping and Electric Works, a Corporation, Defendant. In the Circuit Court of Chilton County, Alabama.

To National Stamping and Electric Works, a corporation, the defendant in the above stated cause, who resides in the city of Chicago, in the State of Illinois, U. S.A.:

You will take notice that J. P. Van Derveer, plaintiff in said cause, sued out an attachment against you, the said National Stamping and Electric Works, a corporation, on the 24th day of July, 1906, in the said court, to enforce the collection of a debt due him by you in the sum of $750, with interest thereon, at 8 per cent per annum.

You will further take notice that the said attachment was levied upon the following property-towit: Six (6) transformers, two (2) bundles of transformer hangers, one (7) box of electric goods, six (6) boxes of electric fan motors, twenty-five (25) rolls or coils of rubber and weather-proof insulated copper electric wire, as the property of the said National Stamping and Electric Works, a corporation, the defendant, by the sheriff of said Chilton county, on the 25th day of July, 1906, and that on said 25th day of July, 1906, a writ of garnishment was duly served upon the Louisville and Nashville Railroad Company, a corporation, by the said sheriff, in the above stated cause.

Let this notice be published in The Union, a weekly newspaper published in said Chilton county, for three successive weeks next following, and a copy of each issue of the said newspaper containing said notice be sent by mail to said National Stamping and Electric Works, a corporation, the defendant, properly addressed and postage prepaid.

Witness my hand this the 5th day of September, 1906.

SAM W. COLLINS.
Clerk of the Circuit Court, Chilton County, Alabama. 9-6-06-3w

Thorsby Institute

—Opens—

SEPTEMBER 17th, 1906.

A Strong Corps of Teachers.

CURRICULUM:
Sciences, Classics, Modern Languages, Histories, Economics, Music, Elocution, etc.

PREPARES FOR COLLEGE:
Prepares those who care to go no higher. Broad enough for all. Allows for specialization.

BUILDINGS:
Well equipped, modern, up to date in every particular.

EXPENSES:
Tuition low enough to meet the needs of every boy and girl in Alabama.

Particulars Address:

W. J. Lamkie, Ph. B., Principal, Thorsby, Ala.

TAX NOTICE

Tax Assessor's and Collector's First Round.

We will attend at the following times and places for the purpose of collecting the State and County Taxes of Chilton County for the year 1906 and assessing the taxes for the year 1907:

	1906.
Kincheon, Beat 6	Oct. 1
Pletcher, Beat 8	Oct. 2
Stanton, Beat 8	Oct. 3
Shoults, Beat 7	Oct. 4
Maplesville, Beat 7	Oct. 5
Benson, Beat 3	Oct. 6
Macedonia, Beat 3	Oct. 8
Providence, Beat 2	Oct. 9
Jemison, Beat 2	Oct. 10
Mineral Springs, Beat 1	Oct. 11
Flint Hill, Beat 11	Oct. 12
Cane Creek, Beat 4, until 12 m	Oct. 13
Thorsby, Beat 9	Oct. 15
Clanton, Beat 4	Oct. 16
Cooper, Beat 10	Oct. 17
Verbena, Beat 5	Oct. 18

L. B. POUNDS.
Tax Assessor.
T. J. HUBBARD,
Tax Collector.
tf

PROGRAM OF THE DISTRICT SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION

Of the First District of Chilton County, to Be Held at the Jemison Baptist Church on the Fourth Sunday in September, 1906.

9:30 a. m. Devotional exercises, conducted by W. H. Conway.

9:45 a. m. Welcome address, J. A. Caddell.

9:50 a. m. Response, John Bledsoe.

9:55 a. m. Music.

10 a. m. "The Growth of the Sunday School Work," J. H. Anderson and W. H. Conway.

10:30 a. m. Music.

10:40 a. m. "The Sunday School as a Character Builder."

11 a. m. "The Influence of the Sunday School for Good," Judge L. H. Reynolds and others.

11:30 a. m. "Reasons Why Adults Do Not Attend Sunday School," Rev. W. J. Parrish and E. G. Cofer.

2 p. m. Song and prayer; song.

2:10 p. m. "The Ideal Sunday School Teacher." Papers by Miss Nelia Johnson, Miss Delphia Conway and Miss Pearl Meroney.

2:40 p. m. "Problems in My School," J. W. F. Garner, G. W. Gothard, J. A Skaggs and others.

3:10 p. m. Music.

3:20 p. m. "Relation of the Sunday School to the Church," C. L. Glasscock, J. P. Gentry and others.

3:50 p. m. Dismission.

tf COMMITTEE.

THE NEW YORK WORLD

Thrice-a-Week Edition.

Read Wherever the English Language Is Spoken.

The Thrice-a-Week World hopes to be in 1906 a better paper than it has ever been before, and it has made its arrangements accordingly. Its news service covers the entire globe, and it reports everything fully, promptly and accurately. It is the only paper, not a daily, which is as good as a daily, and which will keep you as completely informed of what is happening throughout the world.

The Thrice-a-Week World is fair in its political reports. You can get the truth from its columns, whether you are Republican or Democrat, and that is what you want.

A special feature of the Thrice-a-Week World has always been its serial fiction. It publishes novels by the best authors in the world, novels which in book form sell for $1.50 each, and its high standard in this respect will be maintained in the future as in the past.

The THRICE-A-WEEK WORLD'S regular subscription price is only $1.00 per year, and this pays for 156 papers. We offer this unequaled newspaper and THE UNION together for one year for $1.50.

The regular subscription price of the two papers is $2.00. tf

JACKSON'S CHAPEL SCHOOL HOUSE.

Lomax Local, F. E. & C. U. of A., will be addressed by Rev. M. F. Lett on the second Saturday afternoon in September (8th). Mr. Lett will preach at the chapel that night and the next day (Sunday). tf

MONEY TO LOAN

On real estate. Call or write me at my abiding place with Mr. G. O. Foshee, one mile northeast of Clanton. R. F. D. No. 1. Come during banking hours, as I keep my money in the bank. tf JAMES GLASS.

FOR SALE.

Mare mule, 8 years old; fine animal, and will work anywhere you put her. Price, $150. I live three miles west of Jemison, on R. F. D. No. 1. tf E. M. RAY.

PROGRAM

Chilton County Teachers' Institute To Be Held at Pleasant Grove, Ala., on September 7 and 8, 1906.

Friday.

10 a. m. Devotional exercises, P. G. Maness.

10:30. Welcome address, Prof. A. Haggard.

10:45. Response—Prof. H. A. Harris.

11. Enrolling teachers.

11:15. "Psychology of the Room"—Prof. R. A. Rasco, Miss Lestia Dunlap.

Recess for dinner.

1:30 p. m. "The Needs of the County, Educationally"—Prof. Spear, Mrs. A. G. Dunlap.

2:30. "Unconscious Training"—P. G. Maness.

3:30. "How to Secure Attention During Recitation"—Prof. W. A. Haggard, Mrs. Etta Apperson.

Saturday.

9 a. m. Devotional exercises.

9:30. "Methods and Helps in Teaching Agriculture"—Prof. Thompson.

10:15. "Manual Training"—Robert Jones.

11. Educational address—W. Craig.

This institute will be held in the western part of the county, at Shelby, on the M. & O. R. R. We invite all the teachers of the county to this one, especially those who have not yet attended the county institute this year. This will be the last institute in this scholastic year, and the law requires teachers to attend at least one during each year. Do not let this last opportunity slip.

J. W. MOORE,
J. N. DENNIS,
Committee.
tf

WATSON'S MAGAZINE

The leading exponent of Jeffersonian Democracy, edited by Hon. Thomas E. Watson, of Georgia, the Father of the Free Delivery; author of "The First Napoleon of France," "Life of Napoleon" and Times of Thomas Jefferson," "Bethany" and other books. Mr. Watson was the People's party nominee for Vice-President in 1896, and for President in 1904. He is today heading the middle-class reform movement which is bound to sweep the country in short time.

Watson's Magazine is not a boom publication. It does not stand for collective ownership of all the means of production. Mr. Watson believes in public or government ownership of railroads, telegraphs and telephones, in municipal ownership of street railways, gas electric lights, water works, etc.; and he believes in private ownership of all industries not natural monopolies.

The middle class—the home owners, farmers, small business men and property owners—won Jefferson's victory in 1800; won Jackson's victory over Nick Biddle's money power in 1832; won Lincoln's victory in 1860, and each time after the flush of victory had died away they became careless of their rights and went to sleep. They have slept a good portion of the time since 1865, but—

Watson's Magazine is waking them up. Another great victory is in sight. Keep in touch with the movement.

Fifteen cents a copy at newsstands; $1.50 a year by mail. Sample copy and four 2-cent stamps and four names of reading friends. Address,

TOM WATSON'S MAGAZINE,
121 West Forty-second Street,
New York.

SPECIAL CLUBBING RATE—WATSON'S MAGAZINE AND THE UNION A YEAR FOR ONLY $1.75. WHY NOT SAVE THE 75 CENTS? LEAVE ORDERS AT THIS OFFICE.
tf

NOTICE.

Blank Deeds, Mortgages and all official forms of Justices of the Peace, for sale at The Union Office. Only best approved forms are used. Come in and see us your order

FOR SALE!

A saw mill outfit consisting of engine, boiler, saw mill, Challoner shingle mill, three Challoner shingle machines, one small planer and matcher. All in first class condition. Will sell on easy terms, or exchange for other property, except saw mill outfit.

C. E. Wheelock, Mgr.
Fixico, Ala.

JOHN W. HARRIS
Jemison, Ala.

Photographer. Dealer in all grades of enlargements. Frames made to order. Work done at your home by appointment.

PROGRAM

Chilton County Teachers' Institute To Be Held at Pleasant Grove, Commencing on September 7 and 8, 1906.

Friday.

10 a. m. Devotional exercises—Prof. P. G. Maness.

10:30. Welcome address—Prof. A. Haggard.

10:45. Response—Prof. H. A. Morris.

11. Enrolling teachers.

11:15. "Psychology of the School Room"—Prof. R. A. Rasco, Miss Lestia Dunlap.

Recess for dinner.

1:30 p. m. "The Needs of the County, Educationally"—Prof. G. Spear, Mrs. A. G. Dunlap.

2:30. "Unconscious Training"—Prof. P. G. Maness.

3:30. "How to Secure Attention During Recitation"—Prof. W. A. Haggard, Mrs. Etta Apperson.

Saturday.

9 a. m. Devotional exercises.

9:30. "Methods and Helps in Teaching Agriculture"—Prof. L. Thompson.

10:15. "Manual Training"—Prof. Robert Jones.

11. Educational address—W. Craig.

This institute will be held in the western part of the county, at Stop 60 on the M. & O. R. R. We insist that all the teachers of the county attend this one, especially those who have not yet attended the county institute this year. This will be the last institute in this scholastic year, and the law requires teachers to attend at least one during each year. Do not let this last opportunity slip.

J. W. MOORE,
J. N. DENNIS,
Committee.

tf

WATSON'S MAGAZINE.

The leading exponent of Jeffersonian Democracy, edited by Hon. Thos. E. Watson, of Georgia, the Father of the Rural Free Delivery; author of "The Life of Napoleon," "Life and Times of Thomas Jefferson," "Bethany" and other books. Mr. Watson was the People's party nominee for Vice-President in 1896, and for President in 1904. He is today beading the middle-class reform movement and is bound to sweep the country in a short time.

Watson's Magazine is not a Socialist publication. It does not stand for collective ownership of all the means of production. Mr. Watson believes in public or government ownership of railroads, telegraphs and telephones, in municipal ownership of street railways, gas electric lights, water works, etc.; and he believes in private ownership of all industries not natural monopolies.

The middle class—the home owning farmers, small business men and property owners—won Jefferson's victory in 1800; won Jackson's victory when Nick Biddle's money power in 1832 won Lincoln's victory in 1860. Each time after the flush of victory had died away they became careless of their rights and went to sleep. They have slept a good portion of the time since 1865, but—

Watson's Magazine is waking them up. Another great victory is in the air. Keep in touch with the movement.

Fifteen cents a copy at news stands, $1.50 a year by mail. Sample copy for four 2-cent stamps and four names of reading friends. Address,

TOM WATSON'S MAGAZINE,
121 West Forty-second Street,
New York.

SPECIAL CLUBBING RATE—WATSON'S MAGAZINE AND THE UNION A YEAR FOR ONLY $1.50. WHY NOT SAVE THE 75 CTS. LEAVE ORDERS AT THIS OFFICE.

tf

NOTICE.

Blank Deeds, Mortgages and all official forms of Justices of the Peace, for sale at The Union Office. Only best approved forms are used. Come in and give us your order.

FOR SALE!

A saw mill outfit consisting of engine, boiler, saw mill, Challoner shingle mill, three Challoner shingle presses, one small planer and matcher. All in first class condition. Will sell on easy terms, or exchange for other property, except saw mill outfit.

C. E. Wheelock, Mgr.
Fixico, Ala.

JOHN W. HARRE

Jemison, Ala.

Photographer. Dealer in all grades of enlargements. Frames made to order. Work done at your home by appointment.

CHILTON COUNTY OFFICIALS

Circuit Court.
...—Third Monday in May.
...—Fourth Monday in Nov.

...L. Brewer, Tuskegee.
...W. B. Bowling, Dadeville.
...W. Collins.

Chancery Court.
...—Second Monday in ...
...—Second Monday in Sept.

...—Hon. W. W. Whitesides.
...—Mrs. S. A. Stewart, Clanton.

County Court.
...day in each month.

Commissioners' Court.
...Monday February, first Monday ..., first Monday June, second Monday July, second Monday August, ...day November.

COUNTY OFFICERS.
...of Probate—L. H. Reynolds.
...—W. T. Callen.
...—J. M. Morgan.
...—W. M. Adams.
...sector—L. B. Pounds.
...ector—T. J. Hubbard.

County Commissioners.
...District—W. H. Conway.
...District—Alex Glasscock.
...District—R. P. Kendrick.
...District—Moses Robinson.

Supt. of Education.
...W. Moore, Clanton.

County Surveyor.
...Dahl, Calera.

State Senator.
...R. Oliver, Calera.

COUNTY CHURCHES.

MISSIONARY BAPTIST.
...ANY—Rev. J. L. Neeley, pastor. ... Sunday and Saturday before. ...L. Hand, clerk.

...SALEM—Rev. M. J. Parrish, ...E. B. Popwell, clerk.

...CREEK—Rev. J. L. Busbey, ... First Sunday and Saturday ...W. E. Thomas, clerk.

...NS CHAPEL—Rev. J. H. ... pastor. Third Sunday and ... before. J. D. Collins, clerk.

...HILL—Rev. J. H. Thomas, ... First Sunday and Saturday ...G. W. Scott, clerk.

...DONIA—Rev. J. H. Thomas, ... Fourth Sunday and Saturday ...3:30 p. m. H. H. Armstrong, ...

...RANT GROVE—Rev. J. H. ... pastor. Fourth Sunday and ... before at 11 a. m. D. H. ... clerk.

...DENCE—Rev. W. W. Robinson. ... Second Sunday and Saturday ...fore. Riley Robinson, clerk.

...OOTH (Bibb Co.)—Rev. J. H. ... pastor. Second Sunday and ... before. D. C. Smitherman, ...

PRIMITIVE BAPTIST.
...EL—Elder J. P. Nobles, pastor ... Sunday and Saturday before. ...T. Abernathy, clerk.

METHODIST EPISCOPAL.
...T MOUNT—Rev. A. T. Vanpastor. Second Sunday, Sing... second and fourth Sunday ... Preaching every Wed... Ladies' prayer meeting ... afternoon.

FRATERNAL SOCIETIES.
Masonic.
...R. A. Chapter, No. 116—... Saturday, Clanton.

...Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No. ... 4th Saturday, Cooper.

...Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No. ... 1st Saturday, Clanton.

...Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No. ... 1st Saturday, Billingsley.

...Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No. ... Saturday on or before full ... Marbury.

...Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No. ... Saturday on or before full moon, ...

...Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No. ... Saturday on or before full moon, ...

I. O. O. F.
...Lodge—First and third Sat...

...Lodge, No. 304—Second and ... Saturdays.

Woodmen of the World.
...Jack Camp, No. 190—First and ... Sundays.

I. O. R. M.
...mo Tribe, No. 90—First and ... Mondays sleep. Visiting chiefs ... invited. E. B. Langston, C. ... J. H. Patton, Sachem.

...Tribe No. 48—2nd and 4th ... sleeps. Visiting chiefs cor... invited. J. M. Grant, Sachem; ... Parish, C. of R.

F. E. & C. U. OF A.

Chilton Co. Division Officers.

J. H. Thomas, President, Jemison, Rte. 1.
J. W. Hayes, Vice Pres., Thorsby, Rte 1.
J. N. Dennis, Sec-Treas., Clanton, Rte 6.
G. W. Thomas, Chaplain, Clanton, Rte 2.
J. W. Sorrell, Bus. Agent, Jemison, Rte 4.
C. N. Eiland, Lecturer, Clanton, Rte 4.
N. A. Dobbs, Asst. Lect., Clanton, Rte 3.
W. J. Bean, Conductor, Clanton, Rte 4.
W. F. Culpepper, Doorkeeper, Clanton, Rte 3.
W. A. Barnett, Ex. Committee, Jemison, Rte 2.
E. H. Mims, Ex. Committee, Clanton, Rte 1.
J. Wiley Foshee, Ex. Committee, Clanton, Rte 4.

NOTICE TO SINGERS.

There is to be a called meeting of the old Southern Union Singing Convention, to be held at Corinth Church (five miles east of Verbena) on Saturday before the fifth Sunday in September at 10 a. m. All singers are invited to come and bring your books and baskets. Now, we want it understood that we want all leaders unhampered as to what books we use, leaving it to the leaders to use such books as they see fit. Devotional exercises Saturday at 10 a. m. conducted by E. L. Jones. Welcome address, Rev. E. L. Manning; response, R. T. Grant. Formers officers were W. H. Robinson, president, and Joe Goss, secretary. tf

UNION LECTURES.

I will lecture at Poplar Springs local September 8 at 2 p. m; Stanton September 15 at 1:30 p. m.; Pilgrim's Rest September 15 at 7:30 p. m. Fraternally yours, C. N. EILAND.

tf

NOTICE TO LAND-OWNERS.

I wish to say that I am preparing maps or plats of each land-owner's property, giving a written description of the land, as it should be described in assessments. I am preparing these plats for the purpose of getting all errors corrected, and at the same time furnish every party an easy and correct way to keep their property correct and avoid future mistakes and annoyance, as well as (sometimes) considerable expense. These plats are made of excellent bond paper and will last a lifetime, and only cost 25 cents each, except where plats are very large, when they will cost 50 cents. Every one that has seen the plats I am making pronounce them splendid and worth many times their cost and well calculated to save their cost many times over. Any one wishing a plat can obtain it by coming to my office in Clanton with their deeds, so as to insure an accurate description.

L. B. POUNDS,
tf Tax Assessor.

STRAYED OR STOLEN.

From near my residence on June 25, one iron gray mare colt, one year old; one iron gray horse colt, with star on face, and scar on left hind leg above hock, one and a half years old. Any information leading to their recovery will be liberally rewarded.

C. C. MARTIN,
tf Calera, Ala., Rte 1.

SPECIAL OFFER! !

The Union, Weekly Montgomery Advertiser, and a great white and black map of Alabama, United States and world, three in one, with a picture of every president from Washington to Roosevelt, all for $1.50.

REGISTRATION NOTICE.

Beat No. 4, at Clanton, on Aug. 27, 28, 29, 30, 31 and Sept. 1, 1906, for the purpose of considering the case of each elector whose name it is proposed to strike from the registration list and determine same.

Beat No. 4, at Clanton, on Sept. 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 1906, for the purpose of registering voters.

Beat No. 4, at Clanton, on Friday and Saturday before the election in November, 1906.

R. H. GAINES,
B. L. JONES,
P. M. MOORE,
Board of Registrars Chilton County.

tf

NOTICE.

Jemison, Ala., August 7th, 1906.

Lost—One light clay bank mare, branded on the left shoulder with a heart; the last time heard from she was at Ashby; she weighs about 700 pounds. I will reward any one liberally for information as to where she is, or if returned to me, I will pay well for the trouble.

T. S. DAVENPORT,
tf Jemison, Ala.

CLANTON COTTON MARKET.

Total receipts to Sept. 5, ... 13
Price same date 9.00
Receipts same in 1... 19
Price same date 10.00

PERSONAL AND LOCAL.

M. D. Foshee left for Marion Monday, where he will attend the Military Institute at that place.

H. Z. Barnes was a pleasant visitor Monday.

Nels Anderson was a welcome caller Monday.

L. G. Posey was a pleasant visitor Monday. He was accompanied by his son, M. P., and J. H. Gibbons.

Messrs. Arnie D. Gentry and Columbus W. Scott were pleasant visitors Monday.

G. W. Martin and Isaac L. Waldrup were welcome callers Monday.

J. S. Popwell, G. W. and J. M. Gray were in Clanton Monday.

J. D. Cooper, of Cooper Bros., the general merchants, who has been seriously ill, is now on the mend, and will soon be back in the business, where his services are greatly needed on account of the rush of trade.

Grady Reynolds, eldest son of Judge Reynolds, has gone to Marion to enter the college there. Grady is a student and will no doubt do honor to his county.

The county commissioners were in session the fore part of this week. On Tuesday the board went to the poor farm to receive the bids for keeping the county poor for another year. R. A. Miller was the successful bidder, his past management having been shown to have been very satisfactory, in spite of rumors to the contrary. Messrs. Conway, Glasscock, Robinson and Kendrick were all present.

County Surveyor Dahl was in Clanton on Monday and Tuesday. Messrs. Dahl and Barnett are the surveyors for Chilton county.

J. H. Middleton is back to his home and will no doubt stay here, as he says Chilton county is God's country.

Hon. C. H. Scott, of Montgomery, was a visitor in Clanton Wednesday.

W. R. Jackson was in town Wednesday.

Is there anyone who did not receive the pictures ordered by them at the State Union in Clanton last spring? If so, send word to this office with full particulars, as Mr. Lyon the photographer wishes to fill his orders, which have been delayed by unavoidable circumstances.

We witnessed the marriage of D. W. Barnett and Miss Callie Little in the Probate office Tuesday, and Hon. J. Osmond Middleton, who performed the ceremony as Judge Reynolds' deputy, sure done it up fine. Mr. B. N. Martin, who was a sponsor for the young couple, was highly pleased, and told of the time he got married; he wasn't 20 and his wife was not quite 14.

MARRIAGE LICENSES.

C. R. Mims and Miss Mary Henley; D. W. Barnett and Miss Callie Little.

Colored.

Will Parker and Jane Graim.

PROGRAM

Of Sunday School Convention, Maplesville District, Beats 7 and 8—Will Convene at Mt. Carmel Fifth Sunday in September, 1906.

9:30 a. m. Devotional exercise—J. T. Adams.

10 a. m. Relation of Sunday school to the church.

10:30 a. m. Home Department—S. R. Barnes and W. H. Connell.

11 a. m. Convention recites Sunday school lesson.

12 m. Dinner.

1:30 p. m. Song service.

2 p. m. Reports from Sunday schools.

2:30 p. m. "The Good of Sunday School Convention Work"—H. J. Grooms and P. G. Maness.

3 p. m. "Characteristics of the Good Sunday School Teacher"—Jeff Deason and T. F. Davis.

3:30 p. m. Adjourn.

T. G. MILLING, President.
AL VAN MARTER, Vice-President.
MISS MOLLIE REYNOLDS, Secretary.

tf

TO THE PATRONS OF CLANTON ACADEMY.

The time for the opening of school September 10, is almost here, and those who are interested should be thinking about the importance of being ready for the beginning and should make their arrangements accordingly.

We desire earnestly that our school be as nearly as possible a complete success, and all that we as teachers can do to accomplish this end will be done. But our efforts alone are not sufficient. A hearty co-operation on the part of each patron is necessary, and we hope to be thus aided in the important work in which we are about to engage.

All the children that expect to attend school this session should enter the first day, as that is the time to classify them, and they can best be assisted then. They should also attend as regularly as they can, that the chain of their work may be stronger by having in it as few breaks as possible. In order that this may be done, parents and other members of the family may have to make some sacrifices; but, if need be, let them come, for "without a sacrifice there is no reward." Let whatever happen that will, but give the dear children all that you can of this golden opportunity that is now passing and will soon be gone.

Our object is to keep the pupils working within the limits of their capacity, and at the same time to give them all that they are able to do thoroughly. "Not how much, but how well," is our motto, and we expect to keep it before the entire school as a guide.

Knowledge alone is not sufficient—a fact of which we all ought to be fully aware. We hope to excite in our pupils a desire for knowledge and also a self-activity to strive to obtain it. Then it is ours to give this self-activity proper guidance, that the children may obtain that knowledge which they are seeking, and also a power, without which no one is fully prepared to meet the realities of life. Education is power, and in our efforts to educate we shall endeavor to develop in our pupils those powers which will make them wiser and happier and better, and abler to serve themselves, their country and their God. What nobler work than this could we ever find to do! And how willing it does seem that our patrons ought to be to speak a word of cheer and to lend a helping hand!

All pupils are requested to be present by 8 o'clock on the day of the opening, and also to bring with them the books they used last session.

L. J. TO...
Principal.

TEACHER WANTED.

In Union Point School District No. 44, for a five (5) months school. Apply to JOHN S. DENNIS, J. P.

tf

NEED MORE.

I believe most of the farmers are through pulling fodder, and picking cotton is all the go, and it won't take so awful long to do that, for there is not much cotton for such a fine looking weed. Protracted meeting at Liberty Hill is being well attended. Rev. W. A. Lowery, of Mt. Pleasant, is assisting the pastor, Rev. A. L. Foshee. Mrs. W. F. Maddox, of Birmingham, is visiting friends and relatives here. John Stanfield and children gave us a call Monday. We're sorry to say that old Aunt Polly Childress is very low; we know her time is nearly expired. With best wishes to The Union and its many readers, I am the same

BUTTERFLY.

FOR SHERIFF.

I hereby announce myself a candidate for sheriff of Chilton county, subject to the action of the people at the November election, 1906.

ROLLEFFE BATES.

adv (tf)

FOR SALE.

30 young cockerels. Silver Spangled Hamburgs, Golden Laced Wyandotts, Buff, Brown and White Leghorns. Prices 50c to $1.50. All birds pure bred and of good quality.

J. B. Downs,
tf Clanton, Ala.

GINNING SFASON 1906-7 We have engaged Joe and Walter Maddox to run and operate our gins for the coming season. We have the best machinery and with these men to operate it, we can guarantee entire satisfaction to those who patronize us. Bring us your cotton. Respectfully

Chilton Warehouse & M,f,g. Company. tf.

FOR SALE

At all times, high grade hogs and pigs, Berkshire and Poland China, crossed.

M. J. BARRETT,
tf Thorsby, Ala.

FOR SALE!

300 acres land, 150 acres in cultivation. All in Sec. 6 T., 20, R., 14, 9 miles S. W. of Clanton. Good dwelling house and out buildings and 3 good tenant houses. Good and lasting well of water. This good farming land will be sold at a bargain. Call and see,

tf J. H. CARTER,
Clanton, R. F. D. No.

BUSINESS PROPOSITION

The best whiskey in the country is here. If you don't believe it, try me.

J. M. COLLINS,
Palace Saloon, Calera, Ala.
tf.

E. G. Rollins & Co.

—DEALERS IN—

General Merchandise, Clothing, Shoes and Fancy Groceries.

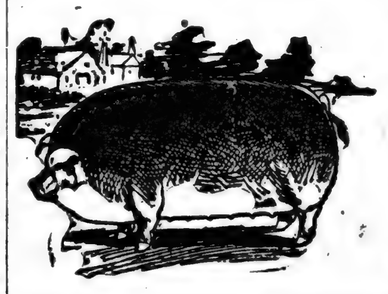
CLANTON, :-: ALABAMA.

WOODLAWN FARM,

Barred Plymouth Rocks

PURE BRED

Setting of 15 fresh eggs for 50c. Packing for shipping 10c extra.



PURE BRED

Duroc Jersey Hogs.

Write us for prices before you buy. Address,

W. Y. NIX,
Maplesville, Alabama.

We Have the Goods
You Have the Money
Let Us Exchange.

Having bought out the stocks of J. W. Smith and J. E. Littlejohn, we are selling them out at prices that will astonish you.

Shoes

Of all kinds to be sold regardless of cost.

New line of General Merchandise also at remarkably low figures. Highest prices paid for Eggs, Chickens and all Country Produce. Come and let us get acquainted.

Cooper Brothers,

At the New Store Next to J. W. Smith's Old Stand

Clanton, Alabama.

A. A. JACKSON

Lomax, Alabama.

General merchandise, corn, hay, shorts, shoes, men's hats, Ladies hats. Best quality and lowest prices in all goods.

Highest Market Price Paid for Chickens and Eggs

Cor. 2nd Ave and 7th St. THE BIG STORE, Cor. 2nd Ave and 7th St.

—Is at The Head of The Procession.—

Dry Goods, Clothing, Hats, Shoes, FURNITURE,

COFFINS AND BURIAL NECESSITIES.

W. I. MULLINS,

Clanton, Alabama

Deer Struck by Trains.

Five deer have been struck by different trains on the Naugatuck and Shehang divisions of the New Haven road and the company has joined the Connecticut farmers in demanding a modification of the law which protects deer until 1920.

Bonds Not to Be Retired.

Leslie M. Shaw, Secretary of the Treasury, denies that he intends to retire any portion of the Government four per cent. bonds of 1907.

Filipino Boys Inferior.

The Filipino boy is inferior physically to the American boy, but the girl of the islands, though of small physique in early years, exceeds at the age of sixteen the stature of the American girl, and is incomparably superior to her native brothers.

Russian Princess Burned to Death.

At Tiflis, Transcaucasia, the country mansion of Prince Palavandoff was set on fire by peasants. The Princess was unable to escape and was burned to death.

TRUE RICHES.

A star that bends above you
With bright stars shining true;
A tender heart to love you,
And who's as rich as you.
—Atlanta Constitution.

Frasquita's Lottery Ticket

Though It Was Never Bought, It Served Its Purpose.

Caramba! Our good friend Jose Bomba was of sanguine temperament. Although he had never bought a lottery ticket in his life he was nevertheless firm in his belief that some day he would win the capital prize in the States Lottery. He had the faculty of always looking at the bright side of things, and his cheerfulness never left him. His vocation was that of barber in the employ of Don Simon Pesetero in the town of Talavera. When there was a lull between the arrival of customers he would sit in a corner and build castles in Spain, imagining himself the possessor of untold wealth. He made no effort to acquire these since he felt convinced that he and his beloved Frasquita would live to see his dreams realized.

So far neither he nor Frasquita looked as if they were on the high road to wealth; at least there seemed to be no sign of a foundation for such having been laid. Both worked for Don Simon, the greatest miser who ever walked this earth: and while Jose assisted in tooth pulling and accompanied his master when he went to cup his patients, Frasquita would lather chins and use curling irons on gay young swells. Each received a yearly wage of 300 francs, besides free board and lodging; "board" meaning a piece of bread, three sardines, and six tomatoes, and the privilege of drinking as much water as they had a mind to.

Jose did not even lose his good humor when he bade good-bye to Frasquita, knowing that his military service would last four years, and while her tears flowed copiously he tried to console her with maxims of this philosophy: "Don't worry, darling. No matter what happens, I am convinced that some day you and I shall be happy and rich. To be sure, I don't know as yet how it is all to come about, but that's no matter. Don't fret, let fate take its course. Up there in heaven there surely sits one more powerful than we are. Why then make trouble and sorrow for ourselves? Should our efforts be in accord with His intentions, then our little help might hasten success; on the other hand, should they be in opposition to His plans you may be sure we gain nothing. Be brave; have confidence, and leave everything to Him above." Still smiling he pressed her closer to his heart, then with a short farewell he left her to join his regiment.

Jose's parting words left a deep impression on Frasquita's heart and mind; and surely she stood in need of support, for the old miser seemed to make it the great business of his life to render existence unbearable for her. He was too close to get a substitute for Jose, and insisted that Frasquita pull teeth and cup patients; but she proved such a failure at this that he was obliged to do the work himself lest he lose some of his customers. He revenged himself by amusing her, calling her vile names, and berating her incompetence. She listened patiently, but as soon as his back was turned she expressed her regard for what he had said by pulling the lobes of her little pink ears, which to a Spaniard means defiance.

As weeks and months passed in their deadly monotony Frasquita almost lost heart. Then one fine morning she came hurriedly into the shop and asked Don Simon to advance her twenty francs on her wages. "Twenty francs, Senor, if you please; I need them, indeed."

"Twenty francs, you trifling spendthrift! And for what object do you ask such a sum?"

"For—for—because I had a dream, senor."

"A dream? What on earth has a dream to do with a twenty-franc gold piece?"

"I will tell you, senor. I dreamt that at the next drawing, which comes off in Mardi Gras (or Carnival), No. 5555 will win the capital prize, and I want twenty francs to buy the ticket."

The old rascal shrugged his shoulders, but as he owed her half a year's wages, he handed her the money, growling and muttering the while. Overjoyed, as if she had the 200,000 francs already in her pocket, Frasquita ran out of the room.

Mardi Gras was a holiday. She was determined to enjoy it to its fullest extent; she whirled around while dancing the tarentella like a top, ate crullers and roasted chestnuts to her heart's content, and finally made a votive offering to St. Roch, the patron saint of the village, by burning three candles on his shrine; for was he not watching over her beloved Jose, in order to bring him safely home?

Three years had passed, and Jose was still serving his country at the northern frontier. At this time a rumor became current in Talavera that Don Simon had lost his mind—a rumor without foundation, as we shall presently see.

The men of the town were wont to congregate at the barber shop, where some would discuss politics, while others would play the guitar. Don Simon sacrificed to his thirst for knowledge, by subscribing to a Madrid paper, and by the light of a sputtering oil lamp and accompanied by the twang of the guitar, he would read the news of the day to his eager listeners. One evening, while thus engaged, leaning back in his oily armchair, he suddenly came to a halt and turned pale.

"Hel! What ails you, Simon? What has happened?" the men cried out simultaneously.

Simon recovered his self-possession in an instant.

"Nothing, nothing at all," he answered. "I got a bit dizzy. At any rate I find nothing more of interest in the papers." He rose, stretched his arms and yawned. Frasquita was standing on the front stoop getting a breath of fresh air. Don Simon stepped up to her and in an almost affectionate tone said: "My dear child, you should go inside; it is too cool out here and you might catch cold."

The bystanders looked aghast; never before was Don Simon known to speak in such terms to an inferior. Frasquita was so frightened she thought she was having a fit of apoplexy. She hurried to her room, but ere she could open the door he had caught up with her. "I have also thought over the matter of your getting up so early in the morning; hereafter you need not be at the shop before 6; young people at your age need sleep." He re-entered the shop and began to fold the newspaper carefully. This was a sign that he now wished to be alone. As they went out they cast significant glances at each other, as if saying: "We are right; he is crazy." Had they seen him a few minutes later as he stepped under the light and unfolded the paper they would have been more than ever convinced that they were right in their suspicions.

"No," he muttered; "it is no error. No. 5555 has won, and Frasquita is now in possession of 200,000 francs. Who would have thought of such a thing?" He walked the room in great agitation, his mind busily at work hatching out a way by which he could get at that fortune.

On entering the shop the following morning he found Frasquita at work polishing the razors. His face was wreathed in smiles. "My dear child," he began, "sit down by me and let us have a chat. Six years have you worked for me faithfully. During that time I may, now and then, have seemed a bit strict and exacting, but this was done intentionally; I wished to put you on probation. But this is over now."

"It lasted a pretty long time," interrupted Frasquita.

"That may be, but since it is past and gone we will no longer talk about it. You see, my dear, during these six years I have had ample opportunities to study your many good qualities. You are young while I count 65; but I am still hale, hearty, and am worth 80,000 francs, safely invested, besides a business which, as you know, is well patronized. In other words, I want to marry you."

Frasquita felt the earth give way under her at this unexpected proposal. To be sure, 80,000 francs seemed a fabulous sum; still there was Jose, who would soon come back. "Will you allow me one week to consider the matter?"

"A whole week? Very well, I consent, but only under one condition, and that is that you speak to no one during that time. I fear outside influence. I would have you consent of your own free will."

She kept her promise and spoke to no one, but, since writing to any one was not included in the agreement, she forthwith dispatched a letter to Jose, which brought the characteristic response: "Leave everything to fate." This she did, and said "Yes," and the wedding followed in a few days. Don Simon insisted on a contract being drawn up by which each make the other sole heir of their respective fortunes. After this transaction Frasquita was fully convinced that she was marrying a lunatic. She smilingly signed the document, and Don Simon affixed his signature. That night, after the wedding guests had departed, Don Simon asked in a sort of careless way:

"Did you not buy a lottery ticket some time ago, a No. 5555? What did you do with it?"

"What did I do with it?" she repeated. "Why, I did nothing with it. I didn't buy it, and, what is more, I never had any intention of buying one. It was only a ruse to get the 20 francs out of you, so I could enjoy the Carnival."

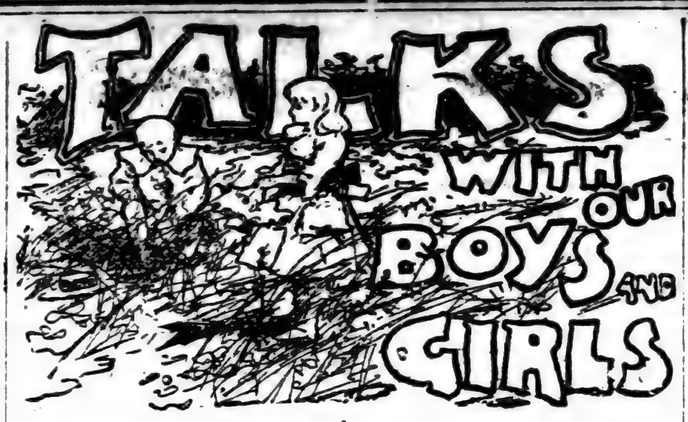
"What! You mean to say you didn't buy the ticket? Thief! Swindler! Liar!"

Don Simon stormed and raged and cursed until he fell in a fit. Being the only barber in Talavera there was no one to come to his assistance with cupping glasses and he soon expired.

Jose was duly informed of Don Simon's demise, and returned to Talavera after Frasquita had put aside her mourning. His abiding faith in Providence had been rewarded, and, with his customary calm and philosophy, he took possession of Don Simon's wife, business and fortune.—Translated from the German, in the New York Evening Post.

About Money.

"Dar ain't any use," said Brother Williams, "ter try ter git money w'en you ain't at de gittin' place; en de trouble is, de jingle of it is so confusin', it's lak' de rattle of a rattlesnake—you dunno whar, en what time, ter jump. It's trouble ter git money en trouble ter keep it; dey despise you ef you ain't got it, en ef you has, dey'll despise you ef you don't give it away."—Atlanta Constitution



WHINEYBOY AND SMILEYBOY.

Little Mr. Whineyboy came to town one day,
Riding on a Growlygrub, screaming all the way,
Howlyberries in his hat,
Screecher leaves atop o' that,
Round his neck a ring o'smiles
Whineywhiners on his heels.
What do you think!—that awful day
Everybody ran away!

Little Mr. Smileyboy came to town one day,
Riding on a Grinnergrif, laughing all the way,
Chuckelberries in his hat,
Jolly leaves atop o' that,
Round his neck a ring o' smiles
All of the "very latest styles."
What do you think?—that happy day
Not a body ran away!
—Charles I. Junkin, in St. Nicholas.

A BOY AND A WOODCHUCK.

Teddy was sick in bed. The doctor had just come. Teddy could hear him talking with mamma in the next room.

"I can't persuade him to touch the milk," his mother was saying. "He never drinks it when he is well. What shall I do?"

Teddy listened eagerly for the answer. Dr. Huntington was such a kind, jolly man.

"Starve him to it!"

Teddy could hardly believe he heard aright. He trusted his ears still less when the doctor walked, smiling, up to the bedside.

"How do you feel this morning?" he asked, taking Teddy's wrist in his cool hand.

"I haven't had anything to eat," whined the little boy. "I can't drink milk."

"You'd better try," said the doctor.

"I can't! Mayn't I have a cookie?"

"No."

"Or some bread and butter?"

"No."

"Why not?"

"Because milk is better for you."

"But I can't drink it!"

The physician was preparing a powder, and did not reply.

Teddy wondered if he had heard.

Did you ever hear the story of the little woodchucks?" Dr. Huntington looked up with merry eyes.

"No sir," said Terry. "What is it?"

"Well, it was this way," and the doctor settled himself comfortably in his chair: "there was once a little woodchuck that lived in a nice, deep hole with his mother. There was nothing he liked to do quite so well as to run around in the sunshine. At the other end of the lot there was a tall tree, and one morning the little woodchuck's mother said, 'Today you must learn to climb that tree! I cannot always be here to protect you, and if a dog should catch you away from home you'd be in a fine plight.'

"But the little woodchuck looked up in the steep trunk, and said, 'Oh, I can't!' and ran away.

"The next morning his mother said to him again, 'To-day you must certainly learn to climb that tree!' But once more the little woodchuck answered, 'I can't!' I can't!' and ran off to play in the sunshine.

"It was not long before the mother went to visit a neighbor. The little woodchuck was having a glorious time, when, all of a sudden, he heard a yelp, and there was a dog rushing towards him! He looked longingly at his home, across the lot, but the dog was between—and he was coming nearer every second! The little woodchuck ran as hard as he could make his feet fly, but the dog ran faster. Just as he thought he couldn't run much farther, he came to the big tree. 'Dear me!' he gasped, 'I can't climb it!' And then, because the dog was almost upon him, and because there wasn't anything else to do, the little woodchuck just scrambled up that tree—up, up, up, till he was out of the dog's reach! You see, he had to, and so he did!

"I hope tomorrow morning I shall find you a great deal better," and the doctor smiled a kind good-bye.

Teddy lay thinking, after his mother and Dr. Huntington had gone out.

"I wonder if I could," he thought—'I'm awfully hungry!' and he reached for the glass of milk on the table by his bed.

When his mother came back, the glass was empty, and Teddy was smiling contentedly among the pillows.—Sunday School Times.

HETTY GREEN ON PROPERTY.

Mrs. Hetty Green, who will now share the title of richest woman in the world with Mrs. Russell Sage, bases her philosophy of life on common sense. She places no trust, financial of other, in any one till he has earned it. In her own words she believes in peace, and a standing army to maintain it. Here are some of her quaint bits of homely wisdom:

"I would advise a person to invest only in the other world."

"I look upon property largely as a trust. I take care of it much on the same principle that you would take care of a valuable animal were it left in your charge. My father had the idea that the money one inherited should be given over undiminished to the next generation. That is the way I have felt."

"I don't know that my fortune is due to any fixed principles. I only use common sense."

"There is no place in the world where woman can be persecuted as here. American heiresses have a worse time than the Indian widows."

"The trouble with most persons is that they want to spend, but they don't want to work."

"Learn how to manage your brains and you will know how to manage your fortune. Intelligence is better than Greek and Latin, and good morals will stand by you better than a fine education."

"I am afraid of two things—lightning and religious lawyers."

"I am a Quaker and I believe in peace and my way is to preserve peace just by being ready, like a standing army."

"Divorce is the saddest thing."

"The women never learn anything about housekeeping, and instead of attending to household matters after marriage they are without interest in them. They princk up and parade around and then men princk up and parade around and trouble follows."

"The young folks of today have not inherited common sense."

"Autos like the giving of tips, are extravagant things. They chug, chug along, wasting money, destroying nerves, breaking down and smashing property. They kick more than mules do."

A FAITHFUL DOG.

An interesting story of a dog has been told by a gentleman who was traveling in France during the war with Germany. He met one day some wounded soldiers returning to their regiments, and observed one of them who had a little dog, an iron-gray terrier, evidently English, following at his heels, but only on three legs.

In an earnest manner the old man told him how the dog had been the means under Providence of saving his master's life.

He had been struck by a ball in the chest when fighting near Ham, and lay on the ground for six hours after the battle was over. He had not lost consciousness, but the blood was flowing freely and he was getting weaker and weaker. There were none but the dead near him, and his only companion was the English terrier, who prowled restlessly around him, with its master's kepi (military cap) in its mouth.

At last the dog set off at a trot, and the wounded soldier felt sure that his only friend had deserted him.

The night grew dark and the cold intense, and he had not even the strength to touch his wounds, which every instant grew more and more painful. His limbs grew cold, and feeling a sickly faintness stealing over him he gave up all hope of life and commended himself to God.

Suddenly, when it had come to the worst, he heard a bark which he knew belonged to only one little dog in the world; he felt something lick his face, and saw the glare of lanterns. The dog had wandered for miles till he reached a roadside inn. The people had heard the cannon all day, and seeing the kepi in the dog's mouth, and noticing his restless movements, followed him. He took them straight to the spot, faster than they could follow him with a little cart, just in time. When the friendly help arrived the man had fainted, but he was saved.

There were tears in the man's eyes while he told the story. The dog had also been touched in the leg by a ball in the same battle, and had since been lame. He had got him when a puppy from a sailor at Dunkirk and called him "Beal."—Young Folk's Catholic Weekly.

BEAUTIFUL SEAMOUSE IS MODEST.

The seamouse has a most gorgeous dress, the beauty of its hair is inconceivable. Every color of the rainbow is reflected from these hairs, and as each individual strand of hair reflects the light differently, it may well be imagined that the appearance of the animal is gratifying. Yet this beautiful creature lives in the place least expected—in the mud holes or under stones in the seabed. This is certainly the reverse of the peacock by hiding its beauty.

How to Die Poor.

If you talk poverty, think poverty and act poverty long enough, you will be convinced that there is nothing but poverty for you.—Success.

THE PULPIT.

A BRILLIANT SUNDAY SERMON BY REV. EDWARD LAWRENCE HUNT

Subject: "That They Might Have Life."

Washington, D. C.—The Rev. Edward Lawrence Hunt, on Sunday preached the following brilliant sermon from the text: "I came that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly."—John 10:10:

Jesus' object was to give men life. His church preaches this through her chief sacrament: "My flesh I give for the life of the world."

"Oh, the wild joys of living! * * * The hunt of the bear"—are these the President's holiday words or Browning's? Even that life is the gift of God through Jesus Christ, "without whom was not anything made that was made."

Physical life is good. There is something better. The "high man" who "would not discount life, as fools do," who would "not live thus, but know" is "still loftier than the world suspects." There is something higher still. "To know" is not eternal life, but to know God—and the gift of God is eternal life, through Jesus Christ. "This is life eternal, that they might know Thee, the only true God, and Jesus Christ whom Thou hast sent."

To give man that life, Jesus must come. "I came that they might have life." Why could not the living Creator give that life by His mere word?

First, because death had passed upon all men, for all sinned. The God of Law, who breathed into man's nostrils the breath of life, when man became a living soul, ordained the law, "The soul that sinneth, it shall die"; or, to put the same truth in other words: The God of Love warned man that "the wages of sin is death." Man scorned love's warning and sinned. Then felt within him that sin is a fatal disease. So came Jesus to put away sin by His death, that as sin reigned unto death, even so might grace reign through righteousness, unto eternal life through Jesus Christ.

"Grace" means He died for our sins that we, set free from sin, made alive unto God, might live. He came, then, to free us from that death which means separation from the living God; to reconcile us to God in one only way, by death, so that here on earth we might live with God. And, further, He came to free us from the fear of that death which is the blowing out of the candle. By rising from the dead, and so bringing life and immortality to light by His Gospel, He inspires the hope of immortality. Hence we do not

Stretch lame hands of faith and grope,
And faintly trust the larger hope,

but we lay strong hold on the hope set before us, as an anchor of the soul, sure and steadfast, entering into that within the veil.

This eternal life must be laid hold of by man, "I came that they might," not must. Man gets it by faith: "He that liveth and believeth on Me shall never die." It is "whosoever believeth" that "need not perish, but have eternal life."

Remember eternal life is not mere duration. Jesus is the quality. How, not how long, we live; and because of quality, endurance: "No one is able to snatch them out of My Father's hand." To know God, to share His life, to walk in love with Him until God is tired of you, means to live with Him forever.

Second, He came because man must have a teacher and an example of the best life. "If when we were enemies we were reconciled to God by the death of His Son, much more, being reconciled, we shall be saved by His life."

Jesus' life is the hope of the race. One man has lived in the fullest healthy exercise of all his powers—no man need despair. The ideal has been realized. He has also given us the secret of success. It is willing surrender to God. It is to learn God's purposes and with loving sympathy work them out with Him. This involves first and always the destruction of selfishness. It means we must follow Christ. And "If any man will come after Me, let him deny himself and take up his cross. For he that will gain his life shall lose it: but he that will lose his life for My sake shall find it."

Except a corn of wheat shall fall into the ground and die, it abideth by itself alone. But if it die it shall live abundantly. What a pitiable time the mean, selfish man must have to abide alone here on earth with the grasping fellow even he himself despises. And if at last, in disgust at himself, he should follow the example of a Judas (whose association with Jesus gave him at least enough conception of a true manhood to be enough disgusted with himself to kill himself)—then? Then he must keep on "abiding by himself alone," forever with a murderer, alone.

Judas—Jesus! Grasping—giving! Which will you follow?

If you would live you must first wish for it. One object of Jesus' life was to awaken your desire for the fullest life. Contrast, then, your life with His, with the life of the best character you know, with the man you hoped in your youth's beset dreams you might some day be.

Note the appalling railroad wreck of the past week. Read its allegory. See two pictures—the freight car loaded with blessing; two cars with dynamite with power for good; the passenger train with its freight of souls. What thrill of the music industry in the song of the whizzing wheels and the whishshsh of the greeting as the two iron steeds of strength and speed, fed with black bread from the heart of the earth, rush past, each on its own track! Few sights are beautiful.

But look again. Some freight cars leave their track, fall across the other's track—and woe!—the sickening, sightless horror of the wreck; the groans of the dying, the ghastly dead unknown.

It's the lesson of our life, with its trains of body and spirit—on their God-laid tracks fraught with blessing. Earth has no picture more beautiful than man, all his powers in fullest play in harmony, soul helping flesh as flesh [illegible] look again. The [illegible] throw both from [illegible] tracks.

Hell has no pictures [illegible]. Oh, man, wrecked [illegible] Jesus came to redeem [illegible] you again on the [illegible] throw open the [illegible] to you. Watch His [illegible] transcendent glory [illegible]. The trains are running [illegible] sylvania system today [illegible] even safer.

Third.—Jesus came [illegible] by Himself becoming [illegible] humanity could God [illegible] man's in a way to [illegible] velop a free manhood [illegible] infusion of Christ's [illegible] man follow Him and [illegible] "I am the vine, ye are [illegible] "Except ye eat the flesh [illegible] of Man and drink His [illegible] no life in you [illegible] bread, the bread [illegible] cometh down from [illegible] giveth life unto the [illegible]

A shallow infidel once called this the "[illegible] church." This is not [illegible] tion. It is as practical [illegible] of the doctor on [illegible] depends. It is more [illegible] cares little about our [illegible] He cares much about [illegible] duct. He cares more [illegible] motives, our inmost [illegible] superficial thought [illegible] any man that we can [illegible] save from the God is [illegible] and move and have our [illegible] furthermore, that we [illegible] His life through the [illegible] own appointing. He [illegible] is the Son of Man. [illegible] Me and My words abide [illegible] shall ask what ye will [illegible] shall be yours. If any [illegible] in Me, he will be a [illegible] and be burned. If we [illegible] God will break forth [illegible] abundant fruit in your [illegible] joy will be full, your [illegible] turbed, a puzzle to men [illegible] of trouble, your strength [illegible] strength of God."

Richard Mansfield's [illegible] sentence is, when as the [illegible] prived of a natural [illegible] youth, with the velocity [illegible] of a mighty stream [illegible] bursts the dam which [illegible] strained its natural flow [illegible] his fellow students [illegible] and we're going to live," [illegible] ger and thrust for life [illegible] Jesus approves. Even [illegible] in their eager infatuation [illegible] choose "the way that [illegible] unto a man, but whose [illegible] Jesus speaks: "I came [illegible] might have life. He [illegible] to Me shall never hunger [illegible] that believeth in Me [illegible] thirst." Come to Jesus [illegible] youth will have all [illegible] heart can crave.

Oh, man about to [illegible] convinced, take a few [illegible] to see the life He lived, [illegible] may live with Him—[illegible] face and hear the [illegible] Prince of Life when [illegible] contemporaries in Palestine [illegible] says to His contemporaries [illegible] ica to-day: "You will [illegible] Me that you might have [illegible]

...THY OLD AGE
...BEST PART OF LIFE

...Passing Through ...ge of Life

...has allotted us each at ...years in which to fulfill ...life, and it is generally ...if we die prematurely.

Mary Koehne

...exhaustion invites disease. ...ent is the positive truth ...rything becomes a burden ...not walk a few blocks with- ...e fatigue, and you break ...spiration easily, and your ... and you grow excited and ...he least provocation, and ...bear to be crossed in any- ...re in danger; your nerves ...out; you need building up ...To build up woman's nerv- ... and during the period of ...life we know of no better ...an Lydia E. Pinkham's Veg- ...pound. Here is an illus- ...rs. Mary L. Koehne, 371 ...enue, Chicago, Ill., writes: ...d Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable ...r years in my family and it ...ints; so when I felt that I was ...ge of life I commenced treat- ... I took in all about six bottles ...a great deal of good. It stopped ...ds, pains in my back and the ...ith which I had suffered for ...e taking the Compound. I feel ...not been for this great medicine ...at I should not have been alive ...endid for women, old or young, ...y cure all female disorders."

...kham, daughter-in-law of ...inkham, of Lynn, Mass., in- ...k and ...alling women to write ...lce. Her great experience ...ervice, free of cost.

...'s Nest in a Mail Box.

...nesting place is that of a ...bejay, who in spite of dis- ...obstacles, has succeeded in ...er nest and raising her ...a certain mail box on the ...oute between Bowdoinham ...ond. Three times did the ...rive her away, during the ...ges of nest building, but ...ed with such persistence ...y it was decided to let her ... see what she would do. ...cess to the box through the ...er, she soon showed that ...best was to be in this un- ... In one corner, as far as ...om the mail, she continued ...g operations, minding not ... frequent visits of the car- ...owner of the box. With ...energy she kept on, and ...ittle birds came they were ... as undisturbed as the ... their strange home among ...—Lewiston (Me.) Journal.

...in Sale in Monuments.

... "reduction sales" do not ... affect the stock on hand ... plain to a man who paid ... ...e native town after an in- ...18 months. On the former ...had noticed a big canvas ...ched across the shop front ...al marble works bearing ...ncement that a reduction ...l the monuments on hand ... on. ...ck consisted, so far as he ...cover, of four memorial ...e of granite and three ...rble. When he struck the ...n last week he saw that the ...s still going on, for the sign ...d, was still in place, and ... four monuments were on ...e yard in front of the shop ...k Press.

...OOD AND HARD

...Excessive Coffee Drinking

...remarkable what sufferings ...ons put up with just to sat- ...ypetite for something. ... woman says: "I had been ...ee since I was old enough to ...p of my own at the table ... It I have suffered agony ... of times in the years past ...ouble first began in the form ...colic, coming on every few ...d almost ending my life ... attack for 8 years I suf- ...his way. I used to pray for ...relieve me from my suffer- ...d also attacks of sick head- ... began to suffer from ca- ...the stomach, and of course ...spepsia. ...bout a year I lived on crack- ...ater. Believing that coffee ...cause of all this suffering ... quit it and began to use ...Food Coffee. It agrees ... stomach, my troubles have ...and I am fast gaining my ...der its use. ...onder I condemn coffee and ...one could be in a much more ...ondition than I was from the ...coffee. Some doctors pro- ...it cancer, others ulceration ... gave me any relief. But ...opped coffee and began Post- ... getting well so fast I can ...recommend it for all who ... I did." Name given by ...Co., Battle Creek, Mich. ...Little book, "The Road to ..." "There's a reason."

Faithful Stewardship.

One of the plainest [illegible] ardship is that we be [illegible] and deliberate consideration [illegible] upon our administration [illegible] world's goods. We are [illegible] stewards, if we spend [illegible] our own whim and [illegible] "charity" depend, as it [illegible] on little better than [illegible]

We are stewards in [illegible] we spend on ourselves [illegible] lies, as well as in what [illegible] purposes beyond ourselves [illegible] sonal and domestic [illegible] savings and our gifts, [illegible] tion between them should [illegible] pass under the inspection [illegible] erate conscience. If [illegible] thoroughly understood [illegible] by us, we should be [illegible] people, and there would [illegible] ferent results from [illegible] that is made to us [illegible] means deliberation, [illegible] consideration, and [illegible] posal and administration [illegible] fund that is not mine [illegible] my hand.—The Rev. [illegible] Laren.

The Livery of Christ.

If you wear the [illegible] you will find Him so [illegible] of heart that you will [illegible] your souls. He is the [illegible] naminous of captains [illegible] was His like among [illegible] princes. He is always [illegible] the thickest part of the [illegible] the wind blows cold [illegible] the bleak side of the [illegible] iest end of the Cross [illegible] shoulders. If He bids [illegible] den, He carries it also.

His service is life. [illegible] that you would enter [illegible] God help you to enlist [illegible] ner of Jesus Christ.—[illegible] the Rev. C. H. Spurgeon.

What Prayer Is.

Prayer gives [illegible] peace, trust, after the [illegible] expectancy, the exaltation [illegible] the agonies of sorrow [illegible] ment. What is prayer [illegible] make us thus tranquil [illegible] thus calm and trustful [illegible] prayer, that it purifies [illegible] helps us to live worthily [illegible] fully? It is an irrepressible [illegible] want seeking supplies [illegible] Infinite Fulness. It is [illegible] ing along the crazy [illegible] Fountain of all joys.—[illegible] George Simmons.

The Spirit-Filled Life.

The Spirit-filled life [illegible] self. When Christ [illegible] out. The two are [illegible] When Jesus begins [illegible] thrones selfishness [illegible] there is to be a new [illegible] be an utter surrender [illegible] with all its ways. [illegible] God in a person's [illegible] a character of unselfish [illegible] vice. It is impossible [illegible] dwell in a selfish [illegible] would be to share as [illegible] Ram's Horn.

PIT.

ERVON BY CE HUN"

light Have

ting flesh as flesh look again. The throw both from tracks.

Hell has no picture
Oh, man, wrecked by Jesus came to redeem
you again on the right throw open the tracks to you. Watch His life transcendent glory and
The trains are running sylvania system to-day
even safer.

Third.—Jesus came,
by Himself becoming humanity could God's man's in a way to
velop a free manhood.
infusion of Christ's man follow Him and
"I am the vine, ye are
"Except ye eat the flesh of Man and drink His no life in you." "I bread, the bread of cometh down from giveth life unto the world
A shallow infidel called this the "cannibal church." This is not a tion. It is as practical of the doctor on depends. It is more cares little about our
He cares much about duct. He cares most motives, our inmost life.
superficial thought any man that we can save from the God in and move and have our furthermore, that we
His life through the own appointing. His
is the Son of Man.
Me and My words abide shall ask what ye will shall be yours. If any in Me, he will be a and be burned. If you God will break forth abundant fruit in your joy will be full, your turbed, a puzzle to men of trouble, your strength of God."

Richard Mansfield's sentence is, when as the prived of a natural youth, with the vehemence of a mighty stream which bursts the dam which strained its natural flow, his fellow students: "We and we're going to live."
ger and thrust for life, as Jesus approves. Even in their eager infatuation choose "the way that unto a man, but whose Jesus speaks: "I came might have life. He to Me shall never hunger that believeth in Me thirst." Come to Jesus youth will have all heart can crave.

Oh, man about to convinced, take a few
to see the life He lived, may live with Him—to face and bear the Prince of Life when He contemporaries in Palestine says to His contemporaries ica to-day: "You will not Me that you might have

Faithful Stewards

One of the plainest ardship is that we bring and deliberate considera upon our administration world's goods. We are stewards if we spend our own whim and fancy charity" depend, as it on little better than accident
We are stewards in we spend on ourselves lies, as well as in what purposes beyond ourselves
sonal and domestic expenses savings and our gifts, and tion between them should pass under the inspection erate conscience. If thoroughly understood by us, we should be people, and there would ferent results from
that is made to us.
means deliberation, and consideration, and conse
posal, and administration fund that is not mine,
my hand.—The Rev. A.
Lareu.

The Livery of C

If you wear the livery
you will find Him so of heart that you will your souls. He is the naminous of captains.
was His like among the princes. He is always to the thickest part of the the wind blows cold
the bleak side of the hill lost end of the Cross shoulders. If He bids
den. He carries it also.
His service is life, peace that you would enter
God help you to enlist
ner of Jesus Christ.—
the Rev. C. H. Spurgeon.

What Prayer G

Prayer gives serenity peace, trust, after the expectancy, the exultation
the agonies of sorrow
ment. What is prayer, make us thus tranquil
thus calm and trustful
prayer, that it purifies helps us to live worthily fully? It is an irrepressible want seeking supplies Infinite Fulness. It is ing along the craggy path
Fountain of all joys
George Simmons.

The Spirit-Filled

The Spirit-filled life
self. When Christ come out. The two are
When Jesus begins to thrones selfishness
there is to be a new
be an utter surrender with all its ways. The God in a person's heart
a character of unselfish vice. It is impossible dwell in a selfish heart, would be to share an Ram's Horn.

LTHY OLD AGE
EST PART OF LIFE

Passing Through Change of Life

has allotted us each at years in which to fulfill life, and it is generally
if we die prematurely.

Mary Koehne

exhaustion invites disease.
is the positive truth anything becomes a burden walk a few blocks with-fatigue, and you break spiration easily, and your and you grow excited and the least provocation, and bear to be crossed in any-are in danger; your nerves
gent; you need building up
To build up woman's nerv-and during the period of life we know of no better than Lydia E. Pinkham's Vege-pound. Here is an illus-Mrs. Mary L. Koehne, 371
reene, Chicago, Ill., writes:
Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable for years in my family and it wonderful; so when I felt that I was change of life I commenced treat-
. I took in all about six bottles a great deal of good. It stopped back pains in my back and the pain which I had suffered for taking the Compound. I feel not been for this great medicine that I should not have been alive splendid for women old or young, cure all female disorders."
Pinkham, daughter-in-law of Pinkham, of Lynn, Mass., inand all ailing women to write
. Her great experience service, free of cost.

...'s Nest in a Mail Box.

nesting place is that of a bird, who in spite of dis-obstacles, has succeeded in her nest and raising her a certain mail box on the route between Bowdoinham
. Three times did the drive her away during the stages of nest building, but with such persistence
it was decided to let her see what she would do.
access to the box through the door, the soon showed their was to be in this un-in one corner, as far as from the mail, she continued operations, minding not frequent visits of the car-of the box. With energy she kept on, and little birds came they were as undisturbed as the their strange home among n-Lewiston (Me.) Journal.

...n Sale in Monuments.

"reduction sales" do not affect the stock on hand plain to a man who paid a native town after an in-months. On the former had noticed a big canvas across the shop front works bearing announcement that a reduction the monuments on hand
.
consisted, so far as he four memorial and three of
. When he struck the he saw that the
. for the sign,
was still in place, and monuments were on yard in front of the shop.

...OD AND HARD
...Excessive Coffee Drinking.

remarkable what suffering puts up with just to sat-appetite for something.
woman says. "I had been since I was old enough to any of my own at the table.
I have suffered agony
times in the years past.
The first began in the form sick coming on every few almost ending my life.
attack for 8 years I suf-this way. I used to pray for relieve me from my suffer-also attacks of sick head-began to suffer from ca-
the stomach, and of course dyspepsia.
about a year I lived on crack-water. Believing that coffee cause of all this suffering, quit it and began to use Food Coffee. It agreed stomach, my troubles have and I am fast gaining my under its use.
wonder I condemn coffee and no one could be in a much more condition than I was from the coffee. Some doctors pro-it cancer, others ulceration, give me any relief. But dropped coffee and began Pos-getting well so fast I can recommend it for all who as I did." Name given by Co., Battle Creek, Mich.
little book, "The Road to
." "There's a reason."

LITTLE THINGS Worth Knowing

Weaving cotton in Africa is slow and difficult work. A skilled workman can weave about three yards a day.

Gramophones are used in English theaters to give "stage shouts," thus saving expense and insuring volume of sound.

A well recently bored in Canada produces sand instead of water. The sand comes up in a fine stream like a fountain.

Robert Jones, a surgeon of Liverpool, advocates that in cases where the patient can not take other anaesthetics the spinal cord be treated with cocaine.

Thus far the opium poppy is found to thrive better in Vermont than in either Texas or California—the other States in which the Department of Agriculture is experimenting with it.

In Germany the man must be eighteen years of age, but the age of the bride-elect is left to popular discretion. In France the man must be eighteen and the woman fifteen, while in Belgium the same standard prevails.

Alexander Herrmann was of German parentage, but Paris was his birthplace. He made his professional debut as a magician at the age of eight years in St. Petersburg, Russia. He died in 1896.

When Italian drivers wish to start their horses they ejaculate "Ah!" explosively. When they wish to stop they cry "E-e-e-e!" soothingly. When they warn foot passengers in the narrow ways they repeat, "A-y-a-a-a!" endlessly.

A long continued diet, consisting largely of pickles and vinegar, in the hope of reducing weight, caused the sudden death of Miss Annie Gross. A postmortem examination revealed that the inner walls of her stomach were eaten away.

About 2400 Roman coins, inclosed in an urn, have been found near the ancient Roman road between Evereux and Chartres, France. They bear the heads of Julius Caesar, Marcus Aurelius, the Empress Faustina and others, and some are medals commemorative of battles.

Lieutenant-Colonel Duff, of the Salvation Army, is a sister of the Duke of Fife and sister-in-law to the princess royal. Her position at the Salvation Army headquarters in London is that of editor of the Young Soldier and the Young People. She wrote some of the Salvation Army's most popular publications.

A new product of the German chemists is "banana essence," a syrup whose taste is at first caustic and then bitter and then sweet. Dr. T. Gigli has found by analysis that it contains fifty-four per cent. of saccharine in a base like pyridine, but a solution of saccharine in pyridine did not yield to the substance.

The Bank of France, the largest hoarder of gold next to the United States Treasury, has in its vaults today nearly $600,000,000 of the precious metal; two years ago it had $465,000,000, and in 1900, when Paris began slowly to forge ahead of London as the centre of largest money supply, the institution held only $375,000,000.—Review of Reviews.

The African elephant has always been held to be inferior in intelligence to the Indian species, and incapable of being trained. The Congo authorities, after failing to acclimatize a herd of imported Indian elephants, are experimenting with the indigenous stock. The experiment seems likely to prove unexpectedly successful. Twenty-eight young elephants are now being trained, and some of them have already been used with success on railway works, though they have apparently none of them been yet educated for as long as twelve months.

A Dissatisfied Subscriber.

"I hereby offer my resignashum as a subscriber to yure papier, it being a pamphlet of such small knonsewuenc as not to beefit my family by takin' it. What you need in youre sheet is brains, and some one to russell up news and rite editorials on live tiopics. No menshun has been made in youre shete of me butchern' a polen china pig weighin' 369 pounds or the gapes in the chickens round here. You ignore that I bot a bran' new bob sled, and that I traded my blind mule, and say nothin' about it. Hi Simpkin's jersey calf breakin' his two frunt legs fallin' in a well, two important chiverees have been utterly ingored by yure shete & a 3 column obitchuary notis rit by me on the death of grandpa Henery was left out of yure shete to say nothin' of the alfabetical poem beginning "A is for And and also for Ark" rit by me darter. This is the reason yure papier is so unpopular in town. If you kant rite eddytorials & ain't going to put no news in yure shete we don't want sade shete. If you print the obitchury in yure next I may sine again for yure shete."—Hudson Republican.

North Dakota Solves the Adulteration Problem.

North Dakota seems to have found the key to the question, "How shall we protect the people from frauds in manufactured products?" a plan which is applicable to foods, beverages, materials used in the arts, etc. A new law has recently gone into effect designed to make it impossible to deceive people into buying inferior and adulterated paint under the impression that they are getting real paint, viz.: pure white lead and linseed oil.

The North Dakota lawmakers did not attempt to absolutely prohibit the inferior pigments, or mixtures of pigments. They adopted the slogan, "Let the label tell," and then left to the people to buy whichever they wished.

Under this plan, if any one wishes to buy a mixture of rock-dust, ground quartz and other cheap elements which are found in many paints and so-called "white leads," no one can object; for they do it with their eyes open. But if they prefer genuine white lead and linseed oil, they can be sure of getting it, for none but the genuine article can bear a label which says "pure white lead."

In all other States mixtures are often sold as pure white lead which contain little—sometimes no—real white lead.

It would seem that were this same principle applied to food, beverages and all other prepared articles, where deception is practiced upon the buyer, the question would be solved. It would leave us free to buy what we pleased, but would protect us from unwittingly buying what we did not want.

ACTIVITY IN OLD AGE.

Instances From the Church—English Woman Busy at 103.

There never were so many old people alive as today. The Church provides several instances of activity in old age. The aged Dean of St. Paul's is 87 years old, but is frequently present at the services in the Cathedral; Prebendary Hutchinson is one of the oldest of living clergymen in the Church of England, having been ordained deacon as long ago as 1833, and is still able to discharge the duties of his office, though over 90 years old.

Bishop Courtenay is not now in active discharge of the duties of a diocese, having retired from the bishopric of Kingston in 1879. He was born in 1813, and had aspirations toward a barrister's career. But, although he was called to the Chancery bar in 1838, he decided to enter the Church, and was ordained three years later. A great part of his life was spent in Jamaica, where he was archdeacon and Bishop successively. For five years afterward he was chaplain at L'Ermitage.

The oldest free church minister in active work is undoubtedly the Rev. Thomas Lord of Horncastle, who is now in his ninety-ninth year, and is the oldest Congregational minister in the United Kingdom. Mr. Lord has held pastorates at Wollaston, Brigstock, Deddington, Great Bridge and Horncastle, but he retired from active ministry in 1878. He resides at Horncastle and takes a keen interest in local affairs, besides frequently preaching in chapels in the district. Last year, when preaching with remarkable vigor from the text, "Thou art near, O Lord," he mentioned that this service concluded the seventy-first year of his ministry, since his ordination.

I had the pleasure of congratulating personally that wonderful old musician Senor Manual Garcia on his 100th birthday. He is now 1$1 years old and in very fair health. He taught Jenny Lind, "the Swedish Nightingale," and up to quite recently imparted his special method of voice training to the younger singers of the day. Senor Garcia can still enjoy a game of chess, and likes to have a story read aloud to him. On his 100th birthday the veteran was invested by King Edward with an order at Buckingham Palace and afterward spoke at a commemoration gathering. He was recently an an interested spectator at a game at pelota.

Miss Mary Alexander will be 103 in September. She is one of three sisters who have survived to an advanced age. They belong to a long lived family. Miss Alexander and her two sisters, who are respectively 93 and 89 this year, reside at Reigate and are the daughters of a London banker. The aged sisters are members of the Society of Friends, which has always had a number of men and women of advanced age, its peaceful principles conducing to long life. All the sisters have been total abstainers for over sixty-five years and they were the first to join the Total Abstinence Society when it was started at Stoke Newington, where they resided many years ago. Miss Mary Alexander, the centenarian, is able to knit and read, though she now requires glasses; her two sisters disdain spectacles and are exceedingly busy.

Needs Legal Remedy.

"I am slightly in doubt," said a physician to a lawyer who was ill, "as to whether yours is a constitutional disease or not." Whereupon the patient exclaimed:

"For heaven's sake, doctor, have I got to go to the expense of appealing to the United States supreme court to find out whether it is or not?"

POSITIVE PROOF

That OXIDINE is the BEST CHILL TONIC on the market is the fact that others are trying to imitate it.

OXIDINE CAME INTO THE FIELD THE FIRST OF ITS KIND—BRAND NEW. NOW YOU ARE OFFERED OTHER THINGS WHICH THEY CLAIM ARE "JUST AS GOOD." WHEN THEY DO THIS, THEY ADMIT THAT IF THEY COULD ONLY MAKE IT JUST LIKE OXIDINE, THEY WOULD HAVE REACHED PERFECTION. By this they acknowledge that OXIDINE IS THE BEST. Let imitations alone. STICK TO THE ORIGINAL. You get it at the same price.

CALL FOR

OXIDINE

THE CHILL TONIC THAT CURES CHILLS AND FEVERS

Read the following analysis made by the state chemist who analyzed three bottles of Oxidine sent to him by the Secretary of the State Pharmaceutical Association (The Texas Retail Druggists Association):

Houston Laboratories
Chemical and Biological

Analysis and Valuation of Cotton Seed and Rice Products a Specialty. Waters, Soils, Oils, Ores, Etc., Carefully Examined and Reported Upon. Reports Made on Economic Geology.

P. S. TILSON, Director, Analytical and Consulting Chemist
215 1-2 MAIN STREET

HOUSTON, TEXAS, June 27, 1906.

Mr. R. H. Walker, Secretary Texas State Pharmaceutical Association, Gonzales, Texas.

DEAR SIR: Herewith I beg to hand you certificate of analysis of the Oxidine you submitted a few days since.

I trust this will be duly received and found entirely satisfactory. I have kept you waiting for a little while, but I appreciate the responsibility which you have seen fit to place upon me; for that reason I have taken my time to be certain and accurate about my results.

If I can serve you in the future please advise me. Thanking you, I beg to remain, Yours very truly,

P. S. TILSON, Chemist.

Houston Laboratories
Chemical and Biological

Analysis and Valuation of Cotton Seed and Rice Products a Specialty. Waters, Soils, Oils, Ores, Etc., Carefully Examined and Reported Upon. Reports Made on Economic Geology.

P. S. TILSON, Director, Analytical and Consulting Chemist
215 1-2 MAIN STREET

CERTIFICATE OF ANALYSIS

Of Three Bottles of Oxidine Submitted by R. H. Walker, of Gonzales, Texas, Secretary of the State Pharmaceutical Association.

HOUSTON, TEXAS, June 27, 1906.

I find this Oxidine to contain absolutely no poisonous or injurious drugs or chemicals and not a trace of Arsenic, Codeine, Morphine, Bucine or Strychnine; nor, in fact, anything that would produce a harmful effect whatever.

Respectfully submitted,

P. S. TILSON, Chemist.

OXIDINE, THE CHILL CURE THAT CURES CHILLS

World's Smallest Armies.

The smallest army is that of Monaco, with 75 guards, 75 carabineers and 80 firemen. Next comes that of Luxemburg, with 135 gendarmes, 170 volunteers and 39 musicians. In the Republic of San Marino they can put in the field nine companies comprising 950 men and 38 officers, commanded by a marshal. On a peace footing the republic can put only one company of 60 men on the parade ground. In Liberia the most striking feature is the proportion of officers to privates. There are 800 of the former and only 700 of the latter. None the less the republic issues proclamations of nuetrality when wars break out between the great powers of Europe.—Chicago Journal.

Lightning Clouds.

Lightning clouds are always near the ground. They are seldom at a greater height than 2,000 feet.

De preacher is allus got room for onemo' nickel, ma son.

WORN TO A SKELETON.

A Wonderful Restoration That Caused a Sensation in a Pennsylvania Town.

Mrs. Charles M. Preston, of Elkland, Pa., says: "Three years ago I found that my housework was becoming a burden. I tired easily, had no ambition and was failing fast. My complexion got yellow, and I lost over 50 pounds. My thirst was terrible, and there was sugar in the kidney secretions. My doctor kept me on a strict diet, but as his medicine was not helping me I began using Doan's Kidney Pills. They helped me at once, and soon all traces of sugar disappeared. I have regained my former weight and am perfectly well."

Sold by all dealers. 50 cents a box. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

"Buffaloed" by the Barber.

"There's a fellow that comes in here now and then with the most extravagant notions," said the boss artist of the barber shop. "After he gets shaved he says to me: 'Now, Looey, rub my hair until the natural oil comes out.' Just let your mind dwell for a moment on the superior nerve of him. But I've got him buffaloed. I puts a little vaseline on my hands and I rubs his hair, well, say a minute or so. Then I give him a glimpse of the natural oil on my hands.

"'Bully; fine,' he says, and recommends it to his friends."—San Francisco Chronicle.

TERRIBLE SCALY ECZEMA.

Eruptions Appeared on Chest, and Face and Neck Were All Broken Out —Cured by Cuticura.

"I had an eruption appear on my chest and body and extend upwards and downwards, so that my neck and face were all broken out; also my arms and the lower limbs as far as the knees. I at first thought it was prickly heat. But soon scales or crusts formed where the breaking out was. Instead of going to a physician I purchased a complete treatment of the Cuticura Remedies, in which I had great faith, and all was satisfactory. A year or two later the eruption appeared again, only a little lower, but before it had time to spread I procured another supply of the Cuticura Remedies, and continued their use until the cure was complete. It is now five years since the last attack, and have not seen any signs of a return. I have more faith in Cuticura Remedies for skin diseases than anything I know of. Emma E. Wilson, Liscomb, Iowa, Oct. 1, 1905."

Biggest Coffee Market.

The largest coffee market in the world is the French city of Havre. The imports in 1904 reached 109,989 tons.

In the Cyclone District.

"I tell you what," said Gotham entertaining his western cousin, "every thing's so high here it's almost up yer job at Biffum and Bangs

"Well," replied the Kansan, "the winds are so high out our way it's almost impossible to keep a house from going."—Philadelphia Press.

Americans in Mexico.

There are 30,000 Americans in Mexico.

France has one university student to every 865 of her population. Great Britain has only one in 2,150.

FITS, St. Vitus' Dance: Nervous Diseases permanently cured by Dr. Kline's Great Nerve Restorer. $2 trial bottle and treatise free. Dr. H. R. Kline, Ld., 931 Arch St., Phila., Pa.

Tar Heel Libraries.

There are 1,258 rural libraries in North Carolina.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup for Children teething, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, allays pain, cures wind colic, 25c a bottle

The Tulane University OF LOUISIANA

NEW ORLEANS.

EDWIN B. CRAIGHEAD, L. L. D., Pres.

The Tulane University of Louisiana, founded in 1845 as the University of Louisiana, is the logical head of the entire system of public educational institutions of the State.

Full courses are offered in Languages, Sciences, Engineering, Law, Medicine. Splendid department for women in Newcomb College, Tulane makes leaders in all vocations. Its facilities for instruction in engineering are unsurpassed. Unexcelled opportunities for the study of Sugar and Industrial Chemistry. Many Scholarships in academic department. Expenses low. Board and accommodations in dormitories at low rates. Next session begins October 1st. Send for catalogue. Address,

R. K. BRUFF, Secretary.

TELEGRAPH, SHORTHAND AND BOOKKEEPING
Bookkeeping, Penmanship, Shorthand, Typewriting, Telegraphy, Railroad Main Line Wires connected to College; from College to position. Positions guaranteed. Write for free catalog. The American Telegraph & Commercial College, Milwaukee, Wis., U. S. A.

Malta, with only 122 square miles has 139,733 people.

CAPUDINE CURES INDIGESTION and ACIDITY It acts immediately—you feel its effects in 10 minutes. You don't have to wait a week to know it's good. It cures HEADACHES ALSO by removing the cause. 10 cents.

YOU CANNOT
CURE

all inflamed, ulcerated and catarrhal conditions of the mucous membrane such as nasal catarrh, uterine catarrh caused by feminine ills, sore throat, sore mouth or inflamed eyes by simply dosing the stomach.

But you surely can cure these stubborn affections by local treatment with

Paxtine Toilet Antiseptic

which destroys the disease germs, checks discharges, stops pain, and heals the inflammation and soreness.

Paxtine represents the most successful local treatment for feminine ills ever produced. Thousands of women testify to this fact. 50 cents at druggists.

Send for Free Trial Box
THE R. PAXTON CO., Boston, Mass.

MONARCH STUMP PULLER
Guaranteed for 12 mos. Catalog & disc., all's, Monarch Rubber Co. Lone Tree, Ia.

Am. 36, 1906.

Wintersmith's CHILL TONIC

CURES CHILLS
AND ALL MALARIAL FEVERS.

Has been a standard household remedy for over 40 years. Pleasant to take; leaves no bad effects like quinine; harmless for children. Guaranteed by all druggists. Put up in 50c and $1 bottles. Sent express paid on receipt of price, if not on sale at the home drug store. Address

ARTHUR PETER & CO., General Agents, Louisville, Ky.

W. L. DOUGLAS $3.50 & $3.00 Shoes

BEST IN THE WORLD

W.L. Douglas $4 Gilt Edge line cannot be equalled at any price

To Shoe Dealers: W. L. Douglas' Jobbing House is the most complete in this country. Send for Catalog

SHOES FOR EVERYBODY AT ALL PRICES.
Men's Shoes, $5 to $1.50. Boys' Shoes, $3 to $1.25. Women's Shoes, $4.00 to $1.50. Misses' & Children's Shoes, $2.25 to $1.00.

Try W. L. Douglas Women's, Misses and Children's shoes; for style, fit and wear they excel other makes.

If I could take you into my large factories at Brockton, Mass., and show you how carefully W. L. Douglas shoes are made, you would then understand why they hold their shape, fit better, wear longer, and are of greater value than any other make.

Wherever you live, you can obtain W. L. Douglas shoes. His name and price is stamped on the bottom, which protects you against high prices and inferior shoes. Take no substitute. Ask your dealer for W. L. Douglas shoes and insist upon having them.

Fast Color Eyelets used; they will not wear brassy.

Write for Illustrated Catalog of Fall Styles.

W. L. DOUGLAS, Dept. 15, Brockton, Mass.

AGE

comes all too quickly to her who suffers from the diseases peculiar to women. Pain, weakness, debility, soon leave you but a wreck of your former womanhood.

WINE OF CARDUI
WOMAN'S RELIEF

relieves female pain, cures female diseases. "I was scanty, had numb feelings, and was terribly nervous every month, but Cardui has made me feel so much better," writes Mrs. J. Brandenburg, of Huntington, W. Va. Try it.

At all Druggists.

WRITE for Free Advice, stating age and describing your symptoms, to Ladies Advisory Dept., Chattanooga Medicine Co., Chattanooga, Tenn.

WINTER Wheat, 60 Bushels per acre. Catalogue and samples free. Salzer Seed Co., Box A. C., La Crosse, Wis.

If afflicted with weak eyes, use Thompson's Eye Water

You Look Prematurely Old

Because of those ugly, grizzly, gray hairs. Use "LA CREOLE" HAIR RESTORER. Price, $1.00, retail.

...PIT.

...ERMON BY
...CE HUN"

...Might Have

...ing flesh as flesh ...look again. The ... throw both from ... tracks.

Hell has no picture ... Oh, man, wrecked ... Jesus came to redeem ... you again on the ... throw open the tracks ... to you. Watch His ... transcendent glory and ... The trains are running ... sylvania system to-day ... even safer.

Third.—Jesus came, ... by Himself becoming ... humanity could God's ... man's in a way to ... velop a free manhood. ... infusion of Christ's ... man follow Him and ... "I am the vine, ye are ... "Except ye eat the flesh ... of Man and drink His ... no life in you." "I ... bread, the bread of ... cometh down from ... giveth life unto the ...

A shallow infidel with ... called this the "cannibal ... church." This is not a ... tion. It is as practical ... of the doctor on which ... depends. It is more ... cares little about our form ... He cares much about our ... duct. He cares most about ... motives, our inmost life. ... superficial thought ... any man that we can ... save from the God in ... and move and have our ... furthermore, that we ... His life through the channels ... own appointing. His ... is the Son of Man. "If ... Me and My words abide ... shall ask what ye will ... shall be yours. If any ... in Me, he will be a withered ... and be burned. If you ... God will break forth ... abundant fruit in your ... joy will be full, your ... turbed, a puzzle to men ... of trouble, your strength ... strength of God."

Richard Mansfield's ... sentence is, when as the ... prived of a natural ... youth, with the vehemence ... of a mighty stream which ... bursts the dam which ... strained its natural flow ... his fellow students: "We ... and we're going to live." ... ger and thrust for life, ... Jesus approves. Even ... in their eager infatuation ... choose "the way that ... unto a man, but whose ... Jesus speaks: "I came ... might have life. He ... to Me shall never hunger ... that believeth in Me ... thirst." Come to Jesus ... youth will have all your ... heart can crave.

Oh, man about to ... convinced, take a few ... to see the life He lived, ... may live with Him—to ... face and bear the ... Prince of Life when He ... contemporaries in Palestine ... says to His contemporaries ... ica to-day: "You will not ... Me that you might have ...

Faithful Stewards

One of the plainest ... ardship is that we bring ... and deliberate considera... upon our administration ... world's goods. We are ... stewards if we spend ... our own whim and fancy ... "charity" depend, as it ... on little better than acci...

We are stewards in re... we spend on ourselves ... lies, as well as in what ... purposes beyond ourselves ... sonal and domestic expe... savings and our gifts, and ... tion between them should ... pass under the inspection ... erate conscience. If the ... thoroughly understood ... by us, we should be ... people, and there would ... ferent results from many ... that is made to us. ... means deliberation, and ... consideration, and consecrated ... posal and administration ... fund that is not mine, but ... my hand.—The Rev. A. ... Laren.

The Livery of C...

If you wear the livery ... you will find Him so meek ... of heart that you will find ... your souls. He is the ... naminous of captains. ... was His like among the ... princes. He is always to ... the thickest part of the battle ... the wind blows cold He ... the bleak side of the hill ... lest end of the Crom ... shoulders. If He bids ... den. He carries it also. ...

His service is life, peace ... that you would enter ... God help you to enlist ... ner of Jesus Christ.—... the Rev. C. H. Spurgeon.

What Prayer G...

Prayer gives serenity ... peace, trust, after the ... expectancy, the exultation ... the agonies of sorrow ... ment. What is prayer ... make us thus tranquil ... thus calm and trustful ... prayer, that it purifies ... helps us to live worthi... fully? It is an irrepressible ... want seeking supplies ... Infinite Fulness. It is ... ing along the craggy path ... Fountain of all joys.—... George Simmons.

The Spirit-Filled Life

The Spirit-filled life ... self. When Christ comes ... out. The two are ... When Jesus begins to ... thrones selfishness and ... there is to be a new life ... be an utter surrender of ... with all its ways. The ... God in a person's heart ... a character of unselfish ... vice. It is impossible ... dwell in a selfish heart. ... would be to share an ...—Ram's Horn.

...THY OLD AGE

...BEST PART OF LIFE

...Women Passing Through ...Change of Life

...has allotted us each at ...years in which to fulfill ...h life, and it is generally ...as if we die prematurely.

...Mary Koehne

...exhaustion invites disease. ...ost is the positive truth ...ything becomes a burden ...not walk a few blocks with... ...fatigue, and you break ...spiration easily, and your ...and you grow excited and ...least provocation, and ...bear to be crossed in any... ...are in danger; your nerves ...ost; you need building up ...To build up woman's nerv... ...and during the period of ...life we know of no better ...than Lydia E. Pinkham's Vege... ...pound. Here is an illus... ...Mrs. Mary L. Koehne, 371 ...venue, Chicago, Ill., writes: ...Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable ...for years in my family and it ...me so when I felt that I was ...change of life I commenced treat... ...I took in all about six bottles ...a great deal of good. It stopped ...pains in my back and the ...which I had suffered for ...taking the Compound. I feel ...not been for this great medicine ...I should not have been alive ...splendid for women old or young, ...cure all female disorders."

...Pinkham, daughter-in-law of ...Pinkham, of Lynn, Mass., in... ...and all women to write ...free. Her great experience ...service, free of cost.

...'s Nest in a Mail Box.

...nesting place is that of a ...bird, who in spite of dis... ...obstacles, has succeeded in ...her nest and raising her ...a certain mail box on the ...route between Bowdoinham ...Richmond. Three times did the ...drive her away during the ...stages of nest building, but ...returned with such persistence ...that it was decided to let her ...and see what she would do. ...Access to the box through the ...door, she soon showed that ...it was to be in this un... ...place. In one corner, as far as ...from the mail, she continued ...her operations, minding not ...the frequent visits of the car... ...owner of the box. With ...energy she kept on, and ...little birds came they were ...not disturbed as the ...left their strange home among ...men.—Lewiston (Me.) Journal.

...ain Sale in Monuments.

...that "reduction sales" do not ...affect the stock on hand ...plain to a man who paid a ...visit to town after an in... ...six months. On the former ...he noticed a big canvas ...stretched across the shop front ...bearing marble works bearing ...announcement that a reduction ...on all the monuments on hand ...was on. ...He consulted, so far as he ...could, of four memorial ...stones and three of ...marble. When he struck the ...last one he saw that the ...sale was going on, for the sign, ...which was still in place, and ...the monuments were on ...the yard in front of the shop. ...—Boston Press.

...GOOD AND HARD

...of Excessive Coffee Drinking.

...remarkable what suffering ...comes put up with just to sat... ...appetite for something.

...woman says: "I had been ...ick since I was old enough to ...help of my own at the table, ...but I have suffered agony ...lots of times in the years past. ...The trouble first began in the form ...of bile, coming on every few ...days, almost ending my life. ...Each attack for 8 years I suf... ...this way. I used to pray for ...relief, relief from my suffer... ...and also attacks of sick head... ...began to suffer from ca... ...the stomach, and of course ...dyspepsia.

...about a year I lived on crack... ...water. Believing that coffee ...was the cause of all this suffering, ...I quit it and began to use ...Postum Food Coffee. It agreed ...with my stomach, my troubles have ...left me, and I am fast gaining my ...health. Since I quit using coffee and ...began the use of Postum I could be in a much more ...comfortable condition than I was from the ...use of coffee. Some doctors pro... ...nounced it cancer, others ulceration, ...but it gave me any relief. But ...after I stopped coffee and began Postum ...I am getting well so fast I can ...hardly recommend it for all who ...use it did." Name given by ...Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. ...Read the little book, "The Road to ...Wellville." "There's a reason."

LITTLE THINGS Worth Knowing

Weaving cotton in Africa is slow and difficult work. A skilled workman can weave about three yards a day.

Gramophones are used in English theaters to give "stage shouts," thus saving expense and insuring volume of sound.

A well recently bored in Canada produces sand instead of water. The sand comes up in a fine stream like a fountain.

Robert Jones, a surgeon of Liverpool, advocates that in cases where the patient can not take other anaesthetics the spinal cord be treated with cocaine.

Thus far the opium poppy is found to thrive better in Vermont than in either Texas or California—the other States in which the Department of Agriculture is experimenting with it.

In Germany the man must be eighteen years of age, but the age of the bride-elect is left to popular discretion. In France the man must be eighteen and the woman fifteen, while in Belgium the same standard prevails.

Alexander Herrmann was of German parentage, but Paris was his birthplace. He made his professional debut as a magician at the age of eight years in St. Petersburg, Russia. He died in 1896.

When Italian drivers wish to start their horses they ejaculate "Ah!" explosively. When they wish to stop they cry "E-e-e-e!" soothingly. When they warn foot passengers in the narrow ways they repeat, "A-y-a-a-a!" endlessly.

A long continued diet, consisting largely of pickles and vinegar, in the hope of reducing weight, caused the sudden death of Miss Annie Gross. A postmortem examination revealed that the inner walls of her stomach were eaten away.

About 2400 Roman coins, inclosed in an urn, have been found near the ancient Roman road between Evereux and Chartres, France. They bear the heads of Julius Caesar, Marcus Aurelius, the Empress Faustina and others, and some are medals commemorative of battles.

Lieutenant-Colonel Duff, of the Salvation Army, is a sister of the Duke of Fife and sister-in-law to the princess royal. Her position at the Salvation Army headquarters in London is that of editor of the Young Soldier and the Young People. She wrote some of the Salvation Army's most popular publications.

A new product of the German chemists is "banana essence," a syrup whose taste is at first caustic and then bitter and then sweet. Dr. T. Gigli has found by analysis that it contains fifty-four per cent. of saccharine in a base like pyridine, but a solution of saccharine in pyridine did not yield to the substance.

The Bank of France, the largest hoarder of gold next to the United States Treasury, has in its vaults today nearly $600,000,000 of the precious metal; two years ago it had $465,000,000, and in 1900, when Paris began slowly to forge ahead of London as the centre of largest money supply, the institution held only $375,000,000.—Review of Reviews.

The African elephant has always been held to be inferior in intelligence to the Indian species, and incapable of being trained. The Congo authorities, after failing to acclimatize a herd of imported Indian elephants, are experimenting with the indigenous stock. The experiment seems likely to prove unexpectedly successful. Twenty-eight young elephants are how being trained, and some of them have already been used with success on railway works, though they have apparently none of them been yet educated for as long as twelve months.

A Dissatisfied Subscriber.

"I hereby offer my resignashum as a subscriber to yure papier, it being a pamphlet of such small knonsewuenc as not to beefit my family by takin' it. What you need in youre sheet is brains, and some one to russell up news and rite editorials on live tiopics. No menshun has been made in youre shete of me butchern' a polen china pig weighin' 369 pounds or the gapes in the chickens round here. You ignore that I bot a bran' new bob sled, and that I traded my blind mule, and say nothin' about it. Hi Simpkin's jersey calf breakin' his two frunt legs fallin' in a well, two important chiverees have been utterly ingored by yure shete & a 3 column obitchuary notis rit by me on the death of grandpa Henery was left out of yure shete to say nothin' of the alfabetical poem beginning "A is for And and also for Ark" rit by me darter. This is the reason yure papier is so unpopular in town. If you kant rite eddytorials & ain't going to put no news in yure shete we don't want sade shete. If you print the obitchury in yure next I may sine again for yure shete."—Hudson Republican.

North Dakota Solves the Adulteration Problem.

North Dakota seems to have found the key to the question, "How shall we protect the people from frauds in manufactured products?" a plan which is applicable to foods, beverages, materials used in the arts, etc. A new law has recently gone into effect designed to make it impossible to deceive people into buying inferior and adulterated paint under the impression that they are getting real paint, viz.: pure white lead and linseed oil.

The North Dakota lawmakers did not attempt to absolutely prohibit the inferior pigments, or mixtures of pigments. They adopted the slogan, "Let the label tell," and then left to the people to buy whichever they wished.

Under this plan, if any one wishes to buy a mixture of rock-dust, ground quartz and other cheap elements which are found in many paints and so-called "white leads," no one can object; for they do it with their eyes open. But if they prefer genuine white lead and linseed oil, they can be sure of getting it, for none but the genuine article can bear a label which says "pure white lead."

In all other States mixtures are often sold as pure white lead which contain little—sometimes no—real white lead.

It would seem that were this same principle applied to food, beverages and all other prepared articles, where deception is practiced upon the buyer, the question would be solved. It would leave us free to buy what we pleased, but would protect us from unwittingly buying what we did not want.

ACTIVITY IN OLD AGE.

Instances From the Church—English Woman Busy at 103.

There never were so many old people alive as today. The Church provides several instances of activity in old age. The aged Dean of St. Paul's is 87 years old, but is frequently present at the services in the Cathedral; Prebendary Hutchinson is one of the oldest of living clergymen in the Church of England, having been ordained deacon as long ago as 1833, and is still able to discharge the duties of his office, though over 90 years old.

Bishop Courtenay is not now in active discharge of the duties of a diocese, having retired from the bishopric of Kingston in 1879. He was born in 1813, and had aspirations toward a barrister's career. But, although he was called to the Chancery bar in 1838, he decided to enter the Church, and was ordained three years later. A great part of his life was spent in Jamaica, where he was archdeacon and Bishop successively. For five years afterward he was chaplain at L'Ermitage.

The oldest free church minister in active work is undoubtedly the Rev. Thomas Lord of Horncastle, who is now in his ninety-ninth year, and is the oldest Congregational minister in the United Kingdom. Mr. Lord has held pastorates at Wollaston, Brigstock, Deddington, Great Bridge and Horncastle, but he retired from active ministry in 1878. He resides at Horncastle and takes a keen interest in local affairs, besides frequently preaching in chapels in the district. Last year, when preaching with remarkable vigor from the text, "Thou art near, O Lord," he mentioned that this service concluded the seventy-first year of his ministry, since his ordination.

I had the pleasure of congratulating personally that wonderful old musician Senor Manual Garcia on his 100th birthday. He is now 1$1 years old and in very fair health. He taught Jenny Lind, "the Swedish Nightingale," and up to quite recently imparted his special method of voice training to the younger singers of the day. Senor Garcia can still enjoy a game of chess, and likes to have a story read aloud to him. On his 100th birthday the veteran was invested by King Edward with an order at Buckingham Palace and afterward spoke at a commemoration gathering. He was recently an an interested spectator at a game at pelota.

Miss Mary Alexander will be 103 in September. She is one of three sisters who have survived to an advanced age. They belong to a long lived family. Miss Alexander and her two sisters, who are respectively 93 and 89 this year, reside at Reigate and are the daughters of a London banker. The aged sisters are members of the Society of Friends, which has always had a number of men and women of advanced age, its peaceful principles conducing to long life. All the sisters have been total abstainers for over sixty-five years and they were the first to join the Total Abstinence Society when it was started at Stoke Newington, where they resided many years ago. Miss Mary Alexander, the centenarian, is able to knit and read, though she now requires glasses; her two sisters disdain spectacles and are exceedingly busy.

Needs Legal Remedy.

"I am slightly in doubt," said a physician to a lawyer who was ill, "as to whether yours is a constitutional disease or not." Whereupon the patient exclaimed:

"For heaven's sake, doctor, have I got to go to the expense of appealing to the United States supreme court to find out whether it is or not?"

POSITIVE PROOF

That OXIDINE is the BEST CHILL TONIC on the market is the fact that others are trying to imitate it.

OXIDINE CAME INTO THE FIELD THE FIRST OF ITS KIND—BRAND NEW. NOW YOU ARE OFFERED OTHER THINGS WHICH THEY CLAIM ARE "JUST AS GOOD." WHEN THEY DO THIS, THEY ADMIT THAT IF THEY COULD ONLY MAKE IT JUST LIKE OXIDINE, THEY WOULD HAVE REACHED PERFECTION. By this they acknowledge that OXIDINE IS THE BEST. Let imitations alone. STICK TO THE ORIGINAL. You get it at the same price.

CALL FOR

OXIDINE

THE CHILL TONIC THAT CURES CHILLS AND FEVERS

Read the following analysis made by the state chemist who analyzed three bottles of Oxidine sent to him by the Secretary of the State Pharmaceutical Association (The Texas Retail Druggists Association):

Houston Laboratories
Chemical and Biological
Analysis and Valuation of Cotton Seed and Rice Products a Specialty. Waters, Soils, Oils, Ores, Etc., Carefully Examined and Reported Upon. Reports Made on Economic Geology.
P. S. TILSON, Director, Analytical and Consulting Chemist
215 1-2 MAIN STREET

HOUSTON, TEXAS, June 27, 1906.

Mr. R. H. Walker, Secretary Texas State Pharmaceutical Association, Gonzales, Texas.

DEAR SIR: Herewith I beg to hand you certificate of analysis of the Oxidine you submitted a few days since.

I trust this will be duly received and found entirely satisfactory. I have kept you waiting for a little while, but I appreciate the responsibility which you have seen fit to place upon me; for that reason I have taken my time to be certain and accurate about my results.

If I can serve you in the future please advise me. Thanking you, I beg to remain, Yours very truly,

P. S. TILSON, Chemist.

Houston Laboratories
Chemical and Biological
Analysis and Valuation of Cotton Seed and Rice Products a Specialty. Waters, Soils, Oils, Ores, Etc., Carefully Examined and Reported Upon. Reports Made on Economic Geology.
P. S. TILSON, Director, Analytical and Consulting Chemist
215 1-2 MAIN STREET

CERTIFICATE OF ANALYSIS

Of Three Bottles of Oxidine Submitted by R. H. Walker, of Gonzales, Texas, Secretary of the State Pharmaceutical Association.

HOUSTON, TEXAS, June 27, 1906.

I find this Oxidine to contain absolutely no poisonous or injurious drugs or chemicals and not a trace of Arsenic, Codeine, Morphine, Euclase or Strychnine; nor, in fact, anything that would produce a harmful effect whatever.

Respectfully submitted,
P. S. TILSON, Chemist.

OXIDINE, THE CHILL CURE THAT CURES CHILLS

World's Smallest Armies.

The smallest army is that of Monaco, with 75 guards, 75 carabineers and 80 firemen. Next comes that of Luxemburg, with 135 gendarmes, 170 volunteers and 39 musicians. In the Republic of San Marino they can put in the field nine companies comprising 950 men and 38 officers, commanded by a marshal. On a peace footing the republic can put only one company of 60 men on the parade ground. In Liberia the most striking feature is the proportion of officers to privates. There are 800 of the former and only 700 of the latter. None the less the republic issues proclamations of nuetrality when wars break out between the great powers of Europe.—Chicago Journal.

Lightning Clouds.

Lightning clouds are always near the ground. They are seldom at a greater height than 2,000 feet.

De preacher is allus got room for onemo' nickel, ma son.

WORN TO A SKELETON.

A Wonderful Restoration That Caused a Sensation in a Pennsylvania Town.

Mrs. Charles M. Preston, of Elkland, Pa., says: "Three years ago I found that my housework was becoming a burden. I tired easily, had no ambition and was failing fast. My complexion got yellow, and I lost over 50 pounds. My thirst was terrible, and there was sugar in the kidney secretions. My doctor kept me on a strict diet, but as his medicine was not helping me I began using Doan's Kidney Pills. They helped me at once, and soon all traces of sugar disappeared. I have regained my former weight and am perfectly well."

Sold by all dealers. 50 cents a box. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

"Buffaloed" by the Barber.

"There's a fellow that comes in here now and then with the most extravagant notions," said the boss artist of the barber shop. "After he gets shaved he says to me: 'Now, Looey, rub my hair until the natural oil comes out.' Just let your mind dwell for a moment on the superior nerve of him. But I've got him buffaloed. I puts a little vaseline on my hands and I rubs his hair, well, say a minute or so. Then I give him a glimpse of the natural oil on my hands.

"'Bully; fine,' he says, and recommends it to his friends."—San Francisco Chronicle.

TERRIBLE SCALY ECZEMA.

Eruptions Appeared on Chest, and Face and Neck Were All Broken Out —Cured by Cuticura.

"I had an eruption appear on my chest and body and extend upwards and downwards, so that my neck and face were all broken out; also my arms and the lower limbs as far as the knees. I at first thought it was prickly heat. But soon scales or crusts formed where the breaking out was. Instead of going to a physician I purchased a complete treatment of the Cuticura Remedies, in which I had great faith, and all was satisfactory. A year or two later the eruption appeared again, only a little lower, but before it had time to spread I procured another supply of the Cuticura Remedies, and continued their use until the cure was complete. It is now five years since the last attack, and have not seen any signs of a return. I have more faith in Cuticura Remedies for skin diseases than anything I know of. Emma E. Wilson, Liscomb, Iowa, Oct. 1, 1905."

Biggest Coffee Market.

The largest coffee market in the world is the French city of Havre. The imports in 1904 reached 109,989 tons.

In the Cyclone District.

"I tell you what," said Gotham entertaining his western cousin, "everything's so high here it's almost up yer job at Biffum and Bangs

"Well," replied the Kansan, "the winds are so high out our way it's almost impossible to keep a house from going."—Philadelphia Press.

Americans in Mexico.

There are 30,000 Americans in Mexico.

France has one university student to every 865 of her population. Great Britain has only one in 2,150.

FITS, St. Vitus' Dance: Nervous Diseases permanently cured by Dr. Kline's Great Nerve Restorer. $2 trial bottle and treatise free. Dr. H. R. Kline, Ld., 931 Arch St., Phila., Pa.

Tar Heel Libraries.

There are 1,258 rural libraries in North Carolina.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup for Children teething, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, allays pain, cures wind colic, 25c a bottle

A man whut's too lazy ter evah git mad ain't wuthde rope it 'ud take ter hang him.

The Tulane University OF LOUISIANA
NEW ORLEANS.
EDWIN B. CRAIGHEAD, L. L. D., Pres.

The Tulane University of Louisiana, founded in 1845 as the University of Louisiana, is the logical head of the entire system of public educational institutions of the State.

Full courses are offered in Languages, Sciences, Engineering, Law, Medicine. Splendid department for women in Newcomb College. Tulane makes leaders in all vocations. Its facilities for instruction in engineering are unsurpassed. Unexcelled opportunities for the study of Sugar and Industrial Chemistry. Many Scholarships in academic department. Expenses low. Board and accommodations in dormitories at low rates. Next session begins October 1st. Send for catalogue. Address

R. K. BRUFF, Secretary.

TELEGRAPH, SHORTHAND AND BOOKKEEPING
Bookkeeping, Penmanship, Shorthand, Typewriting, Telegraphy, Railroad Main Line Wires connected to College; from College to position. Positions guaranteed. Write for free catalog. The American Telegraph & Commercial College, Milwaukee, Wis., Box 836

Malta, with only 122 square miles has 139,733 people.

CAPUDINE
CURES It acts immediately—you feel its effects in ten minutes. You don't have to wait a week to know its good. It cures HEADACHES ALSO by removing the cause. 10 cents.
INDIGESTION and ACIDITY

YOU CANNOT

CURE

all inflamed, ulcerated and catarrhal conditions of the mucous membrane such as nasal catarrh, uterine catarrh caused by feminine ills, sore throat, sore mouth or inflamed eyes by simply dosing the stomach.

But you surely can cure these stubborn affections by local treatment with

Paxtine Toilet Antiseptic

which destroys the disease germs, checks discharges, stops pain, and heals the inflammation and soreness.

Paxtine represents the most successful local treatment for feminine ills ever produced. Thousands of women testify to this fact. 50 cents at druggists.

Send for Free Trial Box
THE R. PAXTON CO., Boston, Mass.

MONARCH STUMP PULLER Will Pull Stumps 7 Feet in Diameter. Guaranteed for 12 Mos. Catalog & Misc., ad'r's, Monarch Rubber Co. Lone Tree, Ia.

Am. 36, 1906.

Wintersmith's CHILL TONIC

CURES CHILLS
AND ALL MALARIAL FEVERS.
Has been a standard household remedy for over 40 years. Pleasant to take; leaves no bad effects like quinine; harmless for children. Guaranteed by all druggists. Put up in 50c and $1 bottles. Sent express paid on receipt of price, if not on sale at the home drug store. Address
ARTHUR PETER & CO., General Agents, Louisville, Ky.

W. L. DOUGLAS $3.50 & $3.00 Shoes
BEST IN THE WORLD
W. L. Douglas $4 Gilt Edge line cannot be equalled at any price

SHOES FOR EVERYBODY AT ALL PRICES.
Men's Shoes, $5 to $1.50. Boys' Shoes, $3 to $1.25. Women's Shoes, $4.00 to $1.50. Misses' & Children's Shoes, $2.25 to $1.00.
Try W. L. Douglas Women's, Misses and Children's shoes; for style, fit and wear they excel other makes.
If I could take you into my large factories at Brockton, Mass., and show you how carefully W. L. Douglas shoes are made, you would then understand why they hold their shape, fit better, wear longer, and are of greater value than any other make.
Wherever you live, you can obtain W. L. Douglas shoes. His name and price is stamped on the bottom, which protects you against high prices and inferior shoes. Take no substitute. Ask your dealer for W. L. Douglas shoes and insist upon having them.
Fast Color Eyelets used; they will not wear brassy.
Write for Illustrated Catalog of Fall Styles.
W. L. DOUGLAS, Dept. 15, Brockton, Mass.

AGE

comes all too quickly to her who suffers from the diseases peculiar to women. Pain, weakness, debility, soon leave you but a wreck of your former womanhood.

WINE OF CARDUI
WOMAN'S RELIEF

relieves female pain, cures female diseases. "I was scanty, had numb feelings, and was terribly nervous every month, but Cardui has made me feel so much better," writes Mrs. J. Brandenburg, of Huntington, W. Va. Try it.

At all Druggists.

WRITE for Free Advice, stating age and describing your symptoms, to Ladies Advisory Dept., Chattanooga Medicine Co., Chattanooga, Tenn.

WINTER Wheat, 60 Bushels per acre. Catalogue and samples free. Salzer Seed Co., Box A. C., La Crosse, Wis.

If afflicted with weak eyes, use Thompson's Eye Water

You Look Prematurely Old

Because of those ugly, grizzly, gray hairs. Use "LA CREOLE" HAIR RESTORER. Price, $1.00, retail.

Stylish Clothing For Young Men.

Make up your mind to have the best suit possible this season, it must be smart, the very latest weave and color. You can have all these things if you get an I. & S. Bing suit.

Latest Ideas in Furnishings

Our line for spring wear is now complete, the styles are decided and we are showing absolutely correct styles. New Dress Goods, New Waist Goods, New Hats, New Shirts, New Neckwear.

Spring Models in Footwear

See our new line of Star Brand Oxfords for men, women and children. Our stock is complete and the prices are right. Let us show you the goods.

J. C. JONES,

Clanton, - - Alabama.

Wouldn't You Like

BETTER WHISKIES FOR LESS MONEY?

than the kind youvl been getting? Then send your orders to us

THE BIG MAIL ORDER HOUSE

The house that sells nothing but the purest goods and guarantees every article it sells. If it's drugs or whiskies you want

WE CUT THE PRICE,

	Our Price.	Regular Price
Shehan's Canada Malt Whiskey	75	1 00
Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey	75	1 00
Wellner's Pure Malt Whiskey	75	1 00
Mason's Old Kentucky Rye	50	75
Dan Patch Virginia Rye	60	1 00
Private Stock Virginia Rye	65	1 00
J. Martin's Five-year-old Virginia Rye	75	1 00
Dan Holt Rye Whiskey	75	1 00
Old Style Country Club Rye Whiskey	85	1 25
Richmond Club Virginia Rye	1 00	1 50
Stewart's Old Virginia Rye	1 25	2 00
Paul Jones Four Star Rye	84	1 50
Murray Hill Club	1 00	1 50
Hunter's Baltimore Rye	1 00	1 50
Golden Cream Rye	1 00	1 50
J. W. Harper Rye	1 00	1 50
Wilson Whiskey	85	1 50
J. M. Atherton bottled in bond	1 00	1 50
Mammoth Cave bottled in bond	1 25	1 75
Old Jordon bottled in bond	1 50	2 00
Green River, the whiskey without a headache	1 00	1 25
Old Shades Mountain Corn	50	75
Old Mountain Due Corn	75	1 00
Old Lincoln County	65	1 00
Old Holland Gin	50	75
Old Crown Gin	75	1 00
Old Peach or Apple Brandy	50	75
California Sherry or Port	50	75

Mellow Old Liquors and Wines by the Gallon in Jugs.

	Per Gallon		Per Gallon
Old Sand Mountain Corn	$2.00	Old Mason's Pure Rye	$2.00
Old Mountain Due	3.00	Private Stock Virginia Rye	2.50
Old Tennessee	2.00	J. Martin's 5-year-old Va. Rye	3.00
Old Holland Gin	2.00	Old Style Country Club	3.40
Old Crown Gin	3.00	Old Lincoln County	2.50
Old Peach or Apple Brandy	2.00	Richmond Club Virginia Rye	4.00
Old California Port or Sherry	1.50	R. A. Stuart's Old Va. Rye	5.00

COLLIER DRUG COMPANY,

The Big Cut Rate Drug Store

2012 FIRST AVENUE, BIRMINGHAM, ALABAMA.

Imported Jack "LIJE"

Fee $8.00, Insured

Stands for service at his owners', JOHN THAMES, ½ mile East of Rocky Mount Church, Beat 1.

President Roosevelt Converted to the New-Style Spelling

List of 300 Words That Hereafter in All Messages and Documents From the White House Will Be Printed According to the Recommendation of the Matthews Committee.

President Roosevelt announced his conversion to the spelling reform movement. He has issued orders to Public Printer Stillings that all messages from the President and all other documents coming from the White House shall be printed in accordance with the recommendations of the spelling reform committee headed by Professor Brander Matthews, of Columbia, and backed by Andrew Carnegie.

Spelling reform had its greatest impetus when Andrew Carnegie made an offer to finance it. For many years professors and others have been laboring to have the public accept reforms in the spelling of certain words. The public, while admitting that the existing spelling is a philological monstrosity, refused to take kindly to the suggested changes.

When Andrew Carnegie announced himself as a convert to the reform the matter was discussed more than at any time within the past 100 years. Mark Twain promised to take it up after Mr. Carnegie had announced his conversion and had agreed to finance the organization of reformers calling themselves the Simplified Spelling Board, of which Brander Matthews is the president of the Executive Board:

This board announced at the beginning that it did not propose any radical or revolutionary scheme of reform, but simply wanted to make easy the spelling of certain words. It selected 300 words which it asked the public to accept.

Following is the list of 300 words already given out by the Simplified Spelling Board in which changes are proposed:

NEW FORM.	OLD FORM.
abridgment	abridgement
accounter	accoutre
accurst	accursed
acknowledgment	acknowledgement
addrest	addressed
adz	adze
affixt	affixed
altho	although
anapest	anapæst
anemia	anæmia
anesthesia	anæsthesia
anesthetic	anæsthetic
antipyrin	antipyrine
antitoxin	antitoxine
apothem	apothegm
apprize	apprise
arbor	arbour
archeology	archæology
ardor	ardour
armor	armour
artizan	artisan
assize	assise
ax	axe
bans	banns
bark	barque
behavior	behaviour
blest	blessed
blusht	blushed
brazen	brasen
brazier	brasier
bun	bunn
bur	burr
caliber	calibre
caliper	calliper
candor	candour
carest	caressed
catalog	catalogue
catechize	catechise
center	centre
chapt	chapped
check	cheque
checker	chequer
chimera	chimæra
civilize	civilise
clamor	clamour
clangor	clangour
clapt	clapped
clasp	clasped
clipt	clipped
clue	clew
coeval	coeval
color	colour
coiter	coulter
commixt	commixed
compress	compressed
comprize	comprise
confest	confessed
controller	comptroller
coquet	coquette
criticize	criticise
crost	croppel
cross	crossed
crusht	crushed
cue	queue
curst	cursed
cutlas	cutlass
cyclopedia	cyclopædia
dactyl	dactyle
dasht	dashed
decalog	decalogue
defense	defence
demagog	demagogue
demeanor	demeanour
deposit	deposite
depress	depressed
develop	develope
dieresis	diæresis, dieresis
dike	dyke
dipt	dipped
discust	discussed
dispatch	despatch
distil	distill
distrest	distressed
dolor	dolour
domicil	domicile
draft	draught
dram	drachm
drest	dressed
dript	dripped
droopt	drooped
dropt	dropped
dulness	dullness
ecumenical	œcumenical
edile	ædile
egis	ægis
enamor	enamour
encyclopedia	encyclopædia
endeavor	endeavour
envelop	envelope
Eolian	Aeolian
eon	æon
epaulet	epaulette
eponym	eponyme
era	æra
esophagus	œsophagus
esthetic	æsthetic
esthetics	æsthetics
estivate	æstivate
ether	æther
etiology	aetiology
exorcize	exorcise
exprest	expressed
fagot	faggot
fantasm	phantasm
fantasy	phantasy
fantom	phantom
favor	favour
favorite	favourite
fervor	fervour
fiber	fibre
fixt	fixed
flavor	flavour
fulfil	fulfill
fulness	fullness
gage	gauge
gazel	gazelle
gelatin	gelatine
guild	guilt
gipsy	gypsy
gloze	glose
glycerin	glycerine
good-by	good-bye
gram	gramme
gript	gripped
harbor	harbour
harken	hearken
heapt	heaped
hematin	haematin
hiccup	hiccough
hock	hough
homeopathy	homœopathy
homonym	homonyme
honor	honour
humor	humour
husht	hushed
hypotenuse	hypothenuse
idolize	idolise
impresst	impressed
instil	instill
jail	gaol
judgment	judgement
kist	kissed
labor	labour
lacrimal	lachrymal
lapt	lapped
lasht	lashed
leapt	leaped
legalize	legalise
license	licence
licorice	liquorice
liter	litre
lodgment	lodgement
lookt	looked
lopt	lopped
luster	lustre
mama	mamma
maneuver	manœuver
materialize	materialise
meager	meagre
medieval	mediæval
meter	metre
mist	missed
miter	mitre
mixt	mixed
mold	mould
molder	moulder
molding	moulding
moldy	mouldy
molt	moult
mullen	mullein
naturalize	naturalise
neighbor	neighbour
niter	nitre
nipt	nipped
ocher	ochre
oder	odour
offense	offence
omelet	omelette
oppress	oppressed
orthopedic	orthopædic
paleography	palæography
paleolithic	palæolithic
paleontology	palæontology
paleozoic	palæozoic
paraffin	paraffin
parlor	parlour
partizan	partisan
past	passed
patronize	patronise
pedagog	pedagogue
pedobaptist	paedobaptist
phenix	phœnix
phenomenon	phænomenon
pigmy	pygmy
plow	plough
polyp	polype
possest	possessed
practize	practice
prefixt	prefixed
prenomen	prænomen
prest	pressed
pretense	pretence
preterit	preterite
pretermit	praetermit
primeval	primæval
profest	professed
program	programme
prolog	prologue
propt	propped
pur	purr
quartet	quartette
questor	quæstor
quintet	quintette
rancor	rancour
rapt	rapped
rase	raise
recognize	recognise
reconnoiter	reconnoitre
rigor	rigour
rime	rhyme
ript	ripped
rumor	rumour
saber	sabre
saltpeter	saltpetre
savior	saviour
savor	savour
scepter	sceptre
septet	septette
sepulcher	sepulchre
sextet	sextette
sylvan	silvan
simitar	cimeter, scimitar, etc.
sipt	sipped
skilful	skillful
sithe	scythe
skipt	skipped
slipt	slipped
smolder	smoulder
snapt	snapped
somber	sombre
specter	spectre
splendor	splendour
stedfast	steadfast
stept	stepped
stopt	stopped
strest	stressed
stript	stripped
subpena	subpoena
succor	succour
suffixt	suffixed
sulfate	sulphate
sulfur	sulphur
sumac	sumach
supprest	suppressed
surprize	surprise
synonym	synonyme
tabor	tabour
tapt	tapped
teazel	teasel
tenor	tenour
theater	theatre
tho	though
thoro	thorough
thoroly	thoroughly
thru	through
thruout	throughout
tipt	tipped
topt	topped
tost	tossed
transgrest	transgressed
trapt	trapped
tript	tripped
tumor	tumour
valor	valour
vapor	vapour
vext	vexed
vigor	vigour
vizor	visor
wagon	waggon
washt	washed
whipt	whipped
whisky	whiskey
wilful	willful
winkt	winked
wisht	wished
wo	woe
woful	woeful
woolen	woollen
wrapt	wrapped

Thorsby, Alaba

Business Directory.

Commercial Club
OF THORSBY
DEFINITE and RELIABLE information furnished to parties who desire to locate in the South.

A. HORN
LICENSED PHARMACIST.
Drugs, Stationery and Toilet Articles.

City Bakery
BREAD, CAKES and PIES
of all kinds, fresh every day.
K. A. EKBLAD

A. M. Johnson
Groceries and Delicatessen

E. H. Adams
General Merchandise.

J. R. PARNELL
General Merchandise.

J. L. FOSS
Meat Market.

Thorsby Winery Co.
Lofthus & Brunberg, Props.

Thorsby Real Es (INCORPORATE
J. M. BARRETT
G. H. GERALD
G. C. MI

OLAF SC
Watchmaker &
FRANZEN,
Full line of watch
etc. Repair work

A. Langville
Blacksmith a
Horseshoe
—DEALER IN—
WAGONS AND BU

P. C. SMI
Brown Leghorn F
Eggs.
BERKSHIRE

The Thorsby
G. C. Michelson,
Good Beds and

J. J. Stan
General Merch

MRS. MARY R. R
General Merch

J. BIC
Charcoal O

The Army and Navy Kill Capaci

By Leslie M. Shaw, Secretary of the Treasury.

IF you serve the government for life work is naturally drudgery, but the best and best work are those who do it.

The man who works only for the work eight hours a day, but the one plish things is good for 16 hours, and

There is one thing, however, young men of. There is nothing capacity out of a man as quickly as employment in or navy. If I wanted to make a fine preacher out of him to West Point, for it is the best school on earth.

In one branch of the government service—I has a good idea they court martial him. After two or three years no more propose themselves The army and navy have lots of men whose ideas

I want to sympathize with you young men on one I sympathize also. You have certainly succeeded in You officers of the revenue department are not the world as men who are lying around all the time an opportunity to do some fighting.

Something about all of the government departments I appeal to some of you, however, is that you are not like I would willingly go one thousand miles to see died from overwork, but I am sure I would not find employ of the United States government.

I am disposed to think that the American boy is Don't misunderstand me; I did not say self-conceit acteristic there is nothing to speak on, because of in such quantities as to do its own talking.

If you work to accomplish something and let the pen along incidentally you will get to the top. invitation to another job. The only rule for you to standard by that of the American people, which is

The National Flag

No Possession of a Country More Lo ly Loved and More Deeply Revered

By Capt. Harold Hammond.

THERE is no possession of a country which is revered, more consistently loved, or more than its national flag. In our country is this for in that one emblem are embodied all the our forefathers upheld, all the benefits of a quarter of enlightened progress, and all the ance of a promising future.

The stripes of alternate red and white pro inal union of thirteen states to maintain the its stars, white on a field of blue, proclaim states constituting our national constellation which receives every state. Thus, the stars and stripes signify union and is strength."

The very colors have a significance. White stands for valor, and blue for justice, together forming a combination inherited privilege to honor and uphold.

It is not the flag of a king, or an emperor, or a president of the people, brought into being by their will, defended when their patriotism, and to which they turn for protection in time matter into what parties our people may be divided, due to leanings, they all stand united under one flag. It is the safety and faith.—St. Nicholas.

y, Alaba
ess Directory.
Club LIABLE parties
e South.
ACIST.
Toilet
ery and y day.
AD son tessen s ndise.
LL
iso.
S
y Co.
Props.
Thorsby Real Est
(INCORPORATED)
J. M. BARRETT, P
G. H. GERALD, Se
G. C. MICHELSON,
OLAF SCH
Watchmaker & Je
FRANZEN, Bu
Full line of watches
etc. Repair work gua
A. Langville
Blacksmith a
Horseshoer
—DEALER IN—
WAGONS AND BU
P. C. SMI
Brown Leghorn Fo
Eggs.
BERKSHIRE
The Thorsby
G. C. Michelson,
Good Beds and M
J. J. Stan
General Mercha
MRS. MARY R. RA
General Mercha
J. BICE
Charcoal Ov

ny and Navy,
Kill Capaci

Leslie M. Shaw,
ary of the Treasury.

the government for hire you are no rally drudgery, but the men who d won't are those who do not know the n who works only for the pay he ge hours a day, but the one who works is good for 16 hours, and is a pitch s can take, however, which I want t on. There is nothing that will take ckly its employment in any branch o a boy preacher out of a young man

the best school on earth.
verance of service—I won't say whic ment to him. If he has succeeded ge to increase, and he becomes a of men whose ideas have been supe men on one point, and w them in getting into an important is t
are not all the time, supposedly,

ment departments which are not likely to die from as to see the grave of a ma would not find that he had ing is lacking in w say a comment. About the on because of the fact that it ing and let the government to be top. Better still, you only rule for you to go by is to ment people, which is "greatness."

National Flag
of a Country More Lov
More Deeply Revered.
t. Harold Hammond.

possession of a country which is are consistently loved, or more lov tional flag. In our country is this ne emblem are embodied all the ers upheld, all the benefits of a nlightened progress, and all the hop oming future.
ipes of alternate red and white proclo of thirteen states to maintain the hite on a field of blue, proclaim nal constellation which receives a rs and stripes signify union and "

significance. White stands for p together forming a combination and uphold.
ng, or an emperor, or a president. A being by their will, defended when h they turn for protection in time people may be divided, due to ted under one flag. It is the us.

THE UNION.

EQUAL RIGHTS TO ALL; SPECIAL FAVORS TO NONE.

VOL IV. CLANTON, ALA., SEPTEMBER 13 1906. NO. 25

BACK TO THE LAND, SAYS JAMES J. HILL

Wealth of Nation Menaced by Rush From Farms to Cities.

SEES OUT DANGER SIGNALS

Address at Minnesota State Fair on Present-Day Conditions —Serious Labor Famine—Farmers Seek Help in Vain.

St. Paul, Minn.—James J. Hill, president of the Great Northern Railway, at the Minnesota State Fair told the American people, in an address that may be memorable, that they must get back to the land, and make better economic use of it if they would prevent a great crisis and the starvation of millions of Americans from fundamental want. There was a great deal of what people call pessimism in Mr. Hill's speech.

The menacing conditions which, Mr. Hill pointed out, the country is rapidly approaching by reason of the strong tendency of population from the farms to the already congested cities, attracted a great deal of attention from a vast audience. Mr. Hill's speech, in part, follows:

"Notwithstanding the addition of more than 1,000,000 people a year from abroad, nearly all of them men and women who must work for a living, labor outside of the cities was never so scarce or wages as high as at the present time. Immigration crowds in the great centres and adds to the difficulties attending employment. The farms stretch out their hands in vain. Railroads in making extensions have to get help at the labor market price, and find a large percentage of those whom they employ mere hobos, who desert as soon as they have succeeded in getting transportation from one part of the country to another.

"Farmers besiege the employment offices in vain, and offer the lazy hobo a sum for a day's work in the harvest field in any other country in the world. The situation grows more embarrassing yearly. Hours of labor have been reduced in some of the cities for farm as well as shop work. Men are scarcer as the movement of population to the cities grows more pronounced. A considerable portion of this year's magnificent crop will be either reduced in quality or altogether lost by reason of the impossibility of getting labor to handle it properly.

"The country needs more workers on the soil. Not to turn the stranger within our gates, but to direct him to the farm instead of the city; not to watch and wait for a possible increase of the food supply, but to use every means to induce the boys on the farm and to the mouths from the city to swell the depleted ranks of agricultural industry is the necessary task of a wise and advised political economy and an intelligent patriotism.

"Within twenty years we must feed and employ in some fashion 40,000,000 additional population, and before the middle of this century there will be approximately two and a half times as many people in the United States as there are to-day.

"Our one resource, looking at husbandry as something more than the earning of a day, is the productivity of the soil. The reckless distribution of the public land, its division among the greedy who choose to ask for it, the appropriation of large areas for grazing purposes, have absorbed a part of the national heritage.

"Certain it is that the time has come for setting our household in order and creating a serious study of agricultural activity and economy according to a truer insight and a more rational mood.

"Let us be warned in time. On one side there is menace if our national activity be not reorganized on the basis of the old-fashioned commerce. The safety valve for oldcountries has been found in emigration. Their very relief has contributed to our danger. The United States cannot follow their example.

"The conclusion reached points out and emphasizes a national duty so urgent and imperative that it must take precedence of all else. The foe that has overthrown civilizations as proud, as prosperous, and far more strongly fortified than ours. Nothing can stop the onward march of nature's laws, or close the jaws of her necessities when they open to crush their victims.

"How we are to walk safely in the path of wisdom there is much to be said. It is time to begin. There must be, first, a return to conservative and economic methods; a readjustment of national ideas such as to agriculture, and its claims to honor intelligence and the highest duty that the country affords, in the forefront. There must be a national revolt against the worship of manufacture and trade as the only marks of progressive activity, and the false notion that wealth built upon and at the sacrifice of the fundamental form of wealth production, agriculture. A clear recognition on the part of the whole people, from highest down to the lowest, that tillage of the soil is the natural and most desirable occupation for man, to which every other is subsidiary and to which all else must in the end yield, is the first requisite. The country, in mere self-preservation, must give serious attention to the practical occupation of restoring agriculture to its due position in the nation."

THREE ARRESTS IN REAL ESTATE TRUST CRASH

Promoter Segal and Two Officials Placed Under Heavy Bonds.

HIPPLE STAR BANK THIEF

Conspiracy, Embezzlement, Forgery and Perjury Among Charges—District Attorney After Directors —Presbyterians' Loss $100,000.

Philadelphia.—On warrants charging conspiracy, embezzlement and perjury, Adolph Segal, the Austrian promoter, who, with the late President Hipple and a coterie of directors, it is charged, wrecked the Real Estate Trust Company; William F. North, treasurer of the company, who, it is alleged, was party to most of Hipple's illegal acts, and William J. Collingwood, assistant treasurer, were placed under arrest by District Attorney Bell.

Segal, who has aged five years in two weeks and with all his old jauntiness gone, was held in $25,000 bail. The charges against him are conspiracy and accessory to embezzlement.

North and Collingwood were held in $10,000 bail each on charges of conspiracy, embezzlement, perjury, etc.

An angry and muttering crowd of more than a thousand persons mobbed the office of Magistrate Eisenbrown, who issued the warrants upon which Segal, North and Collingwood were arrested. It was composed principally of victims of the frenzied financiering of Hipple and his associates, and members of their families.

"Hang them, every one!" screamed one woman, who was red-eyed from weeping. "I am a widow and they stole every cent I have in the world!"

Scores of women proclaimed themselves in a similar plight. The temper of the crowd was most bitter against Segal.

Horace Hill, the auditor, who is seventy-five years old and broken in health, will not be arrested. District Attorney Bell says he was merely a figurehead and a tool used by the looters.

Evidence of actual partnership between Hipple, Segal and a clique of directors in the wrecked company has been found by the District Attorney.

These men sank millions in their wildcat ventures and the great part of the millions, it has been discovered by the District Attorney, went into suburban trolley schemes in which they were interested as promoters or stockholders.

As for the speculations of Hipple himself revelations already made indicate that before the investigation of the looted bank is finished he probably will be written down as the star bank thief of the century.

Out of many instances the following are the most sensational:

An estate was left by Joseph Detro in which Hipple was named as sole executor without bonds by will dated in 1894. His estate possessed $250,000 in Metropolitan Traction Company stock. Inquiries since Hipple's death resulted in the information that the books showed no stock held either by the Detro estate or Hipple as trustee. It is feared that this quarter of a million has vanished as completely as the $7,000,000 of deposits.

The theft of $30,000 of the bonds of the trustees of the Presbyterian General Assembly was also fastened upon Hipple by the examination of their $965,000 of securities by the committee of auditors. This makes approximately $100,000 missing to date from the Presbyterian funds.

District Attorney Bell made public a letter left by Hipple, and found on his bureau. It simply said:

"Segal got it all. I alone am to blame. Was fooled."

This confession is distinct from that found at the bank.

Atlantic City.—One hundred invalid women were turned out of the Mercer Memorial Home, Pacific avenue and Park place. All the money the home had, some $50,000, was in the Real Estate Trust, wrecked by Hipple's stealings. The people turned out are poor and have no means of support.

NO GAMING IN SYDNEY, N. S. W.

Drastic Law Passed by Parliament—Publishing of Odds Prohibited.

Sydney, N. S. W.—Parliament has passed a drastic anti-gambling law. It prohibits betting on grounds where all sports are held, except under special circumstances on race courses, and places restrictions on gambling in private houses and clubs. Race meetings in the metropolitan area of Sydney are limited to Wednesdays, Saturdays and public holidays. The newspapers are prohibited from publishing racing odds.

KILLED LOOKING FOR BALL.

It Falls in Coal Bin and Match of Searchers Causes Explosion of Gas.

Stellarton, N. S.—While four boys were searching for a ball in an unused coal bin here, one of them lighted a match which ignited gas, and all four were instantly killed.

Two were sons of Neil Gunn and the others were sons of Joseph Frew and Neil Patterson.

THE SEPTEMBER ELECTIONS

Proctor Chosen Governor of Vermont by Large Plurality.

Democrats Win in Arkansas—La-Follette Gets a Setback—Georgia Democrats Convene.

White River Junction, Vt.—Complete returns from the Vermont State election show that Fletcher D. Proctor (Rep.) was elected Governor by 15,676 over Percival W. Clement, Independent and Democrat. The vote: Proctor, 42,150; Clement, 26,474; scattering, 1000.

The remainder of the Republican State ticket was successful by pluralities about equal to that received by Proctor.

The Republicans carried all the counties in the State except Bennington, which Clement won by sixty-one votes. Clement carried the city of Burlington, 1651 to 1444. In Rutland, Clement's home, he received 1654 votes and Proctor 1307. In Montpelier, the capital, the fusion candidate polled 874 votes to 671 for Proctor.

Representative David J. Foster, of Burlington (Rep.), was re-elected in the First Congressional District over Edwin D. Clift (Dem.), and in the Second District Representative Kittredge Haskins (Rep.) defeated John H. Senter (Dem.).

An analysis of the voting shows that the Republicans gained 10,000 votes over the number four years ago and that Clement lost 1800. The Prohibition loss was proportionately greater.

The Republicans will have an overwhelming majority in the House and the Senate will have only one Democratic member. The issues of the campaigns have been largely personal.

Defeat of La Follette.

Milwaukee, Wis.—The latest returns from the primary elections in Wisconsin indicate that Governor James O. Davidson, Republican, swept the State, despite the active opposition of Senator La Follette, winning from his opponent, Speaker Irvine L. Lenroot, in the race for nomination for Governor, by a majority of 40,000 votes.

John A. Alyward, Democrat, of Madison, for Governor, received the nomination over Ernst Merten, of Waukesha, by a safe majority.

Nearly Unanimous in Arkansas.

Little Rock, Ark.—As the result of the election the Democrats will have thirty-four of the thirty-five members of the State Senate and ninety-five of the 100 members of the House and will elect Governor Jeff Davis United States Senator. John S. Little is elected Governor by a plurality of about 55,000. At least fifty-three of the fifty-five counties voted against liquor license under the local option laws.

Georgia Democrats in Convention.

Macon, Ga. — The Democratic State Convention unanimously nominated Hoke Smith for Governor and indorsed William J. Bryan for President in 1908. The names of other candidates for Governor were not placed before the convention.

The platform recommends the substitution of the majority vote in primaries for nominating conventions in Gubernatorial contests, two-cent railroad fares, State railroad control, lower freight rates, negro disfranchisement and increase in the size of the State Senate.

$35,000,000 WASTED IN WATER.

Excessive Irrigation Causes Enormous Loss to Western Farmers.

Boise, Idaho.—At the National Irrigation Congress Dr. Elwood Mead, of the Government Reclamation Service, spoke of "The Evolution of Irrigation Institutions," dealing with the steady development from absolute private ownership of small water rights into a great system of community and Government ownership.

Some startling statistics were presented by Professor Samuel Fortier, of the University of California, in an address dealing with the loss of water through waste. He made the assertion that in the Western States $50,000,000 were expended annually in securing and distributing water for irrigation, and that of this water thus distributed fully seventy-five per cent. was wasted, causing a net loss to the people of the Western States of more than $35,000,000. He expressed the opinion, however, that while all of this loss could not be stopped, he believed that fully ten per cent. of it could be.

PREPARING MEAL, BRIDE DIES.

Used Gasoline to Hasten Fire For Her Husband's Breakfast.

Pittsburg, Pa.—A bride of five days, Mrs. Rosie Kamp, twenty years old, died at the Braddock General Hospital from burns she received while starting a fire with gasolene.

Mrs. Kamp had just returned from her honeymoon and was preparing the first breakfast for her husband. The fire was slow in burning and she used gasolene to hasten the flames.

Chief Justice Torrance Dead.

Judge David Torrance, Chief Justice of the Connecticut Supreme Court, died at his home, in Derby, from an attack of heart trouble.

ROOSEVELT ON RELIGION

President Discusses Practical Christianity at Oyster Bay.

Tells Clergymen and Laymen He Regards Belief as an Essential Part of Good Citizenship.

Oyster Bay, N. Y.—President Roosevelt participated in the two hundredth anniversary celebration of Christ Episcopal Church, which he attends during his summer stay at Oyster Bay.

The keynote of the President's speech, which occupied half an hour, and concluded a series of four addresses, was that the wealth of the nation must not be disregarded, but looked upon as the basis for spiritual development, clean living and civic virtues.

The celebration was held in the church edifice, which bears the date 1705 on its cornerstone. Admission was by card and limited to the church membership and the clergy. It was followed by a collation in the parish hall, of which the President partook, and where he chatted freely with the visiting clergy and church members.

The speakers preceding the President, and to whom he made frequent reference, were the Rev. H. H. Washburn, pastor of the church, who gave a historical sketch of the organization; the Right Rev. Frederick Burgess, D.D., Bishop of Long Island, who predicted one church for future generations in America, and that the Episcopal; the Rev. W. Montague Geer, of Manhattan; the Rev. George R. Vandewater, of Manhattan.

The President said, in part:

"I cannot understand any American citizen, who has the faintest feeling of patriotism and devotion to his country, failing to appreciate the absolute essential need of religion in its broadest sense to the welfare of this country.

"If it were not that in our villages and towns as they have grown up the churches have grown in them, symbolizing the fact that there were among their foremost workers men whose work was not for the things of the body, but for the things of the soul, this would not be a nation today, because this country would not be an abode fit for civilized men.

"It is the conduct of the average Christian, not on Sunday, but on week days; not in the church alone, but in his family and in his relations to his neighbor and to the State, that will more than anything else determine in the eyes of the general public the worth of the creed that man professes. If a man treats going to church or mere devotion in word to his creed or to the outward forms of his creed, not as an incentive to decent action, but as a substitute for decent action, he is in very truth an enemy to the creed he professes; he is a drawback and not a help to the church.

"Whenever we read in the newspapers that some man, esteemed to be a pillar of the church, has been guilty of business dishonesty, or political dishonesty, of offences against the moral law in any shape or way, all who are members of the churches should feel a far greater disappointment, should feel a greater regret by far than those who are not.

"The nominal Christian, the man who has attended to all the outward observances of Christianity, with no matter what scrupulous care, who nevertheless embezzles trust funds, who is a disgrace in business, in politics, or in home life, has sinned against the light, and is more, not less, blameworthy than if he had never made profession of belief. Each of us, layman and clergyman alike, must strive in our actual conduct day by day with the people among whom we live to make them understand that what we expect from Christian folk, if they are sincere in their devotion to Christianity, is the highest standard of conduct.

"All men in public life come in contact with much that is base, with much that is venal or cowardly, or dishonest, and if they have in their hearts any appreciation of what is really not necessary to true national greatness they must feel the need of every force for good in this country being multiplied and strengthened to the utmost possible extent. We cannot continue as a Republic, we cannot rise to any true level of greatness, unless that greatness is based upon and conditioned by a high and brave type of spiritual life.

"Men of wealth generally are not a harm but a good to the community, if they appreciate that they are trustees for that wealth, that the use of it must also be a use which tells for decency in private life, for honesty and courage in business and in public life. No man is going to be of any real use to others until first of all he is able to carry his own weight, and if a man entirely disregards the things of the body it means that some one else has to regard them for him.

"He cannot be a factor for good in the community at large unless he is first able to support himself and those dependent upon him. That is a fundamental, a basic duty for every man, and if he does not fulfil it he is not only doing wrong to those who are near him, but he is depriving himself of the chance to do decent work for outsiders. So we need material well being in this nation as a foundation without which no superstructure can be raised."

HARVARD LOSES BOAT RACE

Cambridge Crew Had Advantage From the Start.

Greatest Crowd Ever Gathered to Witness Struggle on Thames Between Americans and Britons.

Putney, England.—Calmly, as if they were sure of the result, the oarsmen of the Cambridge eight gave Harvard's rowers a stern chase over the four and three-eighths miles of the historic Putney-Mortlake course on the Thames and, sticking to their steady stroke most of the way, won by more than two lengths in nineteen minutes sixteen seconds—twenty-nine seconds worse than Oxford's record of thirteen years ago. Harvard not only lost the toss for position, but got off badly, and practically never had a chance.

Nevertheless the crimson galleymen made more than one good spurt, and when shooting Hammersmith bridge almost broke the composure of the Cantabs by making a cut of a length in the British boat's lead. But in addition to their other handicaps the visitors had the disadvantage of bad steering in an important part of the course, their coxswain, M. B. Blagden, not having familiarized himself with all the tricks of the tide. The Englishmen's triumph was due not only to their superiority in starting and their better knowledge of the going, but to superb steadiness on the part of their stroke, Stuart, who declined to be worried by the Americans' gallant efforts to overtake the pacemakers. In a word, the better crew won, although it is to be said that the Cantabs were worn out at the finish, while the Crimsons were fresh and lively.

DOUKHOBORS FORCED TO EAT.

Liquid Food Pumped Down the Throats of Fanatics in Jail.

Montreal, Quebec. — Fourteen Doukhobors incarcerated in the jail at Regina absolutely refuse to partake of food. Nourishment has to be forced through their teeth by scientific means. These men are leaders of the famous band that braved the prickly cactus with naked feet while they wandered nude over the prairies.

They have resolved that if the police authorities will not allow them to turn Saskatchewan into a veritable garden of Eden they will starve their bodies. It was not long ago that several Doukhobor fanatics who were imprisoned in the same jail refused to eat unless they were fed on California peaches, unwashed potatoes and peanuts. These fourteen will not even eat the rawest of vegetables or the most tempting fruit.

The authorities realized that extraordinary measures had to be adopted. A physician was summoned. Each Doukhobor was laid on his back, pinned to the floor and liquid nourishment pumped into him. This proved so successful that it was resolved to repeat the operation three times a day until the fanatics should come to their senses. The Doukhobors have got to live, whether they like it or not.

BEHEADS HER TWO CHILDREN.

Mother Then Summons Neighbor to Observe the Bodies.

Columbus Grove, Ohio. — Mrs. Henry Knippen, wife of a farmer living near Cloverdale, Putnam County, decapitated her two children, a boy three years old and a girl one and a half years old. Mrs. Knippen then went to the home of a neighbor and told what she had done. She asked the neighbor to go and see the children. The crime was committed with a carving knife. The woman was discharged recently from the Toledo State Hospital for Insane.

INDIA URGED TO REBEL.

Natives Issue Call to Revolt — Famine Conditions Worse.

Calcutta, India.—It is reported that a secret society called the Golden Bengal has been formed at Chinsura, a part of the city of Hugli, on the Hugli River. A document signed by the members say that 50,000 men are required to die for their country, and adds: "Why any more? Beat the sahibs; drive them away."

The rice famine is becoming worse. Prices are abnormal, and crowds are looting the shops.

No Check on Progress.

No check to commercial progress can be discerned, while the outlook becomes brighter each week through most encouraging crop reports.

Lower Prices, Liberal Exports.

Lower prices for farm staples testify to the certainty of ample crops, which in turn give promise of more liberal exports.

Mexican Cocoa Corner.

Dealers in Mexican cocoa have bought up all the available supply of that product in Mexico, and have advanced the price twenty-five per cent.

England Launches Battleship.

The British battleship Lord Nelson, sister ship of the Agamemnon and second in size and armament to the Dreadnaught, was successfully launched at Jarrow-on-Tyne.

Professional Cards.

William M. Adams,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW
OFFICE; Room 1, Court House.
"Practices in all Courts
Long time loans negotiated on improved Farm Lands.
CLANTON, - - - ALA.

J. EARLE GOWAN,
DENTIST.
Office in Kicker Building
CLANTON, ALABAMA.

A. C. Smith,
Attorney-at-Law
Practice in All Courts
Office 6th St. opp. Court House
CLANTON, :-: ALABAMA.

N. S. JOHNSON, M. D.
PHYSICIAN & SURGEON
Office at Residence
CLANTON, ALABAMA.

L. V. STABLER, M. D
Physician & Surgeon
Office Over Horn's Drug Store
Thorsby, Alabama

J. Osmond Middleton,
Attorney-at-Law
Practice in all Courts.
Office 6th St. Court House
CLANTON, -:- ALABAMA

DR. E. G. HYMAN
DENTIST
Office in Tipton Mullins' Building
Office Hours: 9 a. m. to 5 p. m.
CLANTON

H. C. Junkerman
DENTIST
OFFICE: Franzen Building
Thorsby, Alabama.

G. H. GERALD,
NOTARY PUBLIC
Office at Thorsby Inn.
Deeds, Mortgages, Affidavits and other papers carefully made out.
I. S. Gerald, Notary Public
AT THORSBY SAVINGS BANK.

FREE
to Readers of
THE UNION

To everyone who sends us $1.00 for a year's subscription to THE UNION, new subscriber or renewal, we will give as a premium absolutely FREE,

A Year's Subscription
to
The Southern Ruralist

We have examined the Southern Ruralist and consider it to be the best and most practical farm paper published in the South, and it just suits this locality. Drop by The Union Office when you are in town and see a copy of the Ruralist. It will mean dollars in your pocket to read this paper with The Union for a year. tf.

50 YEARS' EXPERIENCE
PATENTS
TRADE MARKS
DESIGNS
COPYRIGHTS &c.
Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. HANDBOOK on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents. Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the Scientific American.
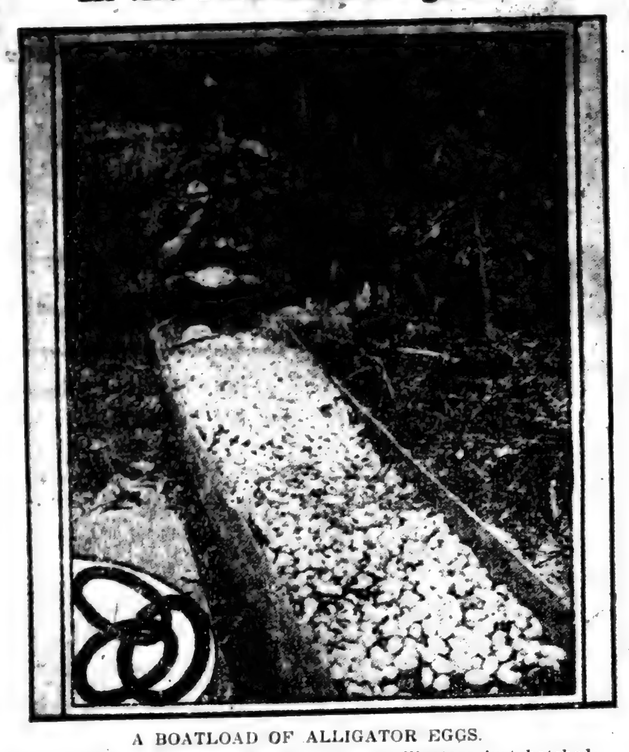
A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.
MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York
Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

LAND FOR SALE.
Eighty acres land in Beat 10, close to Cooper's. For sale cheap. Call on or address L. H. GENTRY,
Mt. Creek, Ala.
R. F. D. No. 6.

In the Florida Everglades.



A BOATLOAD OF ALLIGATOR EGGS.
In the centre of the boat there are young alligators just hatched.

THE SERPENT MOUND.

Strange Construction by Prehistoric People in Ohio.

One of the races that occupied this country before its settlement by the white man was known as the mound builders, on account of the huge heaps of earth they left in the region where they dwelt, and which were in many cases (if not always) places of burial. Practically all of these mounds were round, or nearly so. Something highly exceptional, however, was left in Adams County, Ohio, where it still exists, the land on which it stands having been purchased and reserved on account of its historical interest.

This strange object is a mound which was evidently intended to represent a serpent. At one end there is what looks like a pair of widely distended jaws, just beyond which is an elliptical wing, probably signifying an egg. At the other end is a tail, loosely coiled in three rings. The body also is bent in several not ungraceful loops. It extends in a generally north and south direction. The air line distance from the extreme end of the oval ring to the outermost ring of the tail is about 500 feet, but if the figure could be pulled out straight its length (including the oval object near the head) would be 1335 feet, or fully a quarter of a mile! At the largest part of the body the width is twenty feet, but the tail is only four or five feet wide. The height varies from four to six feet. The oval embankment measures 120 feet in length the longest way, from outside edge to outside edge. The interior dimensions are eighty-six by thirty feet.

The site of this singular construction is the top of a plateau that rises abruptly to a height of at least 100 feet at the north end (where the head is), and the difference in elevation above the surrounding country is nearly the same on the sides. There is evidence that streams existing either now or at some time in the past carved out this colossal altar.

The serpent mound of Ohio was first discovered by Squier and Davis in 1845, who described it in a report to the Smithsonian Institution. Its preservation is due to the activity of Professor F. W. Putnam, of Boston, and the generosity of Miss Alice Fletcher, of the same city, who furnished the money to purchase the land and create a park. The place was not properly cared for, however, and at the suggestion of E. O. Randall, secretary of the Ohio State Archaeological and Historical Society, the custody of the park was wisely intrusted to that organization. Mr. Randall has recently written a book on the subject, and it is from that publication that the accompanying illustration is taken.

Another effigy of the same kind was discovered years ago in Canada, not far from Toronto. It is called the Otonabee serpent mound, because it is situated in Otonabee County. Professor David Boyle, of Toronto, says that excavation in the Canadian mound revealed two skeletons in a sitting posture, besides extra arm and leg bones, a skull and the teeth of dogs or wolves. The head of the Otonabee serpent points to the eastward, and there is a representation of an egg opposite the open mouth. Similar formations (but possibly without the egg) are known to exist at Mayville, Green Lake, Madison, Potosi and other places in Wisconsin, and at least one has been found in Illinois.

Mr. Randall discusses at much length the possible significance of the form of these mounds. The serpent was an object of worship by many ancient nations, though it is not easy to understand how such ideas could have been imported into America in the days when ocean transportation was dangerous. Yet there seems to be a probability that they did get here, and had some influence on the usages of the early inhabitants of the continent.—New York Tribune.

Folding Truck.

A truck designed to be used in factories and other manufacturing places is illustrated below. Its object is to support various articles, such as pieces of metal or wood which can be laid with the V-shaped cross section of the truck.

Improved Truck.

Screws, nails or bolts could be placed in the receptable, and the truck loaded or unloaded without the necessity of stooping down. It would be particularly convenient for carrying materials to be used by workmen either in connection with tools or in connection with a bench. By crossing the side bars of the frame a rigid structure is formed, the bars being pivoted at the crossing point. The truck can thus be folded up to occupy a very small space, and in large establishments, where hundreds of trucks are in constant demand, they could readily be stored in an unused corner until needed.

Labor World.

The elevator men in New York are forming a union.

The strike in the Russian naphtha industry is spreading.

San Francisco, Cal., is to have a building trades temple.

The cutlery forces of Southbridge, Mass., formed a union recently.

Garment workers, the majority Italians, are on [illegible] at Utica, N. Y.

Minor Mention.

Navy chaplains want more pay.

One person in every 1200 is blind.

Spain is enjoying a business boom.

Over 32,000 autos are registered in New York.

Persia is to have a Constitution and a Parliament.

Japan is determined to construct a large mercantile navy.

Demoralization is spreading in the Russian army and navy.

Last of Florida's Seminoles.

A GROUP OF SEMINOLE INDIANS WHO INHABIT THE EVERGLADES

How One Tree Can Grow Within Another.

I enclose herewith a singular proof of your opinion as expressed in the accompanying cutting concerning the possibility of one tree growing inside another.

My wife and I discovered this phenomenon while making a walking tour in Japan in 1895. As is usual with natural curiosities in Japan, there was a small shrine with stone Trunk said to be sixty-five Japanese feet in circumference and the trunk of the inner tree to be nine feet in circumference. The outer trunk is about thirty feet high. The outer tree was destroyed by the eruption of Osama Yama 130 years ago. The inner tree is about 110 years old.

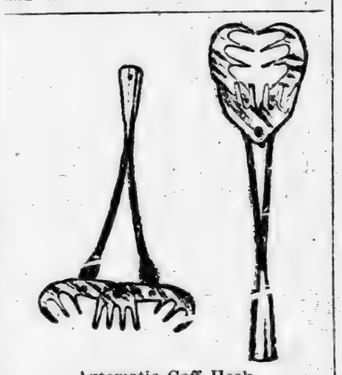
lanterns, and across the road a tea house for pilgrims. The trees were so curious that we stopped and had a cup of tea and a gossip with the voluble old landlady, while I made the accompanying sketch from a point of view from which it would have been difficult to have obtained a photograph on account of bad light.

I obtained a photograph from the old woman, and I wrote up the data she gave me on the back of the photograph. I do not remember now the difference between a Japanese foot and an English foot, but it is very small, and to the eye the dimensions would correspond to English measure.—F. M. Barber, Commander U. S. N. rtd., late Naval Attache at Tokio, in the Scientific American.

Automatic Gaff Hook.

Among the novelties of the season that will assist the angler to keep what belongs to him is the Lion gaff, which an angler of Williamsport has devised and which seems to merit its name.



Automatic Gaff Hook.

The three parts or blades are so attached to the frame that when the centre one is touched by so much as the weight of a finger, the jaws close together with a snap and firmly hold the fish or frog or other captive.

Reservoir Breaks.

Durango, Mex.—The breaking of a great irrigation reservoir on the Santa Catalina Del Alamo plantation killed one man, washed away four houses and caused damage to crops and property which is estimated at $500,000. But for the prompt action of the manager of the plantation, who warned all of the probable danger, the loss of life would have been great, as a large number of laborers are employed on the plantation.

Lawn Sprinkler.

The advent of spring turns the thoughts of the amateur gardner to the rake and the hoe and other garden accessories. A recent invention in the latter class is a lawn sprinkler, designed along practical lines. Most lawn sprinklers eject a solid stream that often damages the delicate plants; this sprinkler by a unique arrangement, breaks the stream as it leaves the nozzle into a fine spray. The frame is a tubular standard open at both ends and supported on ornamental legs. At the top is a cap shaped into a nozzle, the hose being attached to the end of the standard, the stream finding its way out through the nozzle. As the water leaves the nozzle it strikes a disc, supported by arms to the cap. On one side of the disc are a number of paddles, the force of the water against the paddles turning the disc. Connecting with the disc is a beveled ring extending around the sprinkler, grooves in the disc corresponding to the bevels on the ring. As the disc is turned by the stream it travels around on the ring, carrying the nozzle and cap with it. It will be readily apparent that the water, by contacting with the disc, will be broken into a fine spray, causing no damage to the finest plants or flowers.

Sprays the Flowers.

Ugliest of Idols.

This is a photograph of an East African idol which, according to connoisseurs, has the proud distinction of being the ugliest in existence. Among the negro tribes the more hideous the idol the more sacred it is. The image portrayed in the accompanying illustration is one of the holiest and most valuable in all Africa and is credited with many miraculous powers.

Killed by Lightning.

Birmingham, Ala.—During the course of a thunder storm Clarence McLay Gill, 18 years of age, was struck by a bolt of lightning in the yard at his residence, 908 Thirty-ninth street, East Birmingham. Death was almost instantaneous.

It seems that the young man was putting up an outdoor punching bag at the time the storm came up and that he continued to work on the apparatus, with the result above mentioned.

Ben M. Jacobs & Bro
Furniture and Rugs.
—SOLE AGENTS—
Globe-Wernicke Elastic Book
Filing Cabinets.
Catalogue for the asking.
BIRMINGHAM, AL

Farmers' Mutual Insurance Associa
OF ALABAMA.
CHARTERED BY SPECIAL ACT OF THE LEGISLATURE
By the People and for the People.
Chilton County Branch
Organized February 3, 1900.
W. M. WILSON, President. WALLACE C. EDLER, Sec'y.-Treas.
INSURES Farmers' dwellings, outbuildings and [illegible] and live stock against loss by fire, wind and [illegible] The cheapest, safest and most sensible method of [illegible] ance known to man
Average Yearly Cost for Five and a half Years 43-100 of 1 per ce
Full particulars furnished upon application to
WALLACE C. EDLER, Clanton, A

A GREAT COMBINATION OFFER
We Will Furnish the "TWICE-A-WEEK" Issue
—of the—
St. Louis Globe-Democr
—With—
THE UNION
—For—
$1.50 Both Papers, one year, only $1
The St. Louis Globe Democrat should not be classed with the many weekly papers. It is a high-grade Semi-Weekly, eight or more pages Tuesday and Friday. It is beyond all comparison the biggest, best and National News and Home Journal published in the United States. It is Republican in Politics but is above all
A Great Modern Newspaper.
It is not made up indiscriminately from the Daily issue. It is edited with special reference to the needs of the Farmer, the Merchant professional man who desires to keep thoroughly posted without spar time to read a large Daily Paper. It also contains a great variety of well reading matter, making it invaluable to every member of the family.
This Liberal Clubbing Offer
is open to all old or new subscribers, but may be withdrawn at any time must receive the cash with order. Address
THE UNION,
Clanton, Ala

PAUL CALAME,
205 21st Street
Birmingham, Ala.
Practical Watchm and Optician
Eyes Correct
Fitted
Mail orders promptly

SUBSCRIBE FOR THIS PAPER

DO YOU WANT
Letterheads, Noteheads, Billheads, Envelopes,
OR ANYTHING ELSE PRINTED?
Then Call at
THE UNION OFFIC
and See Fine Work at Low Prices.
500 Noteheads 500 Envelopes All For $2.00
Good Work on Good Material, done on Good Mach
Don't forget! THE UNION, Clanton, Alabama

Pure Water Prevents Fevers.
DRILLED WELLS FURNISH PURE WA
We guarantee water or no charge made.
Estimates given. Address
I. E. SARBER CO.
Thorsby, Ala

ERYDAY FANCIES.
By Mrs. M. A. Kidder.

should cease from out on
be no more,
become of the ope
land.
the rich man's borrowed store that his wealth should reach
the azure sky.
fields would all unfruitful lie,
with lack of need, and no mouth to feed,
never would plant or sow seed.
never should list to the fact bell,
the engine's labored puff,
the busy throngs that sell,
we markets had outreach idle ships on a lazy white sails furled would and ride;
all self-fed and no lack of
we would be gone and commer dead.
the rich should cease from
the land,
and the Master lead no more,
what would become of working band that look up for their mod
store?
no master hand the work
plan,
no money to pass from man
man,
world would be in its misery
had a world as one could see.
we'll be contented with our
and quarrel with fate no more the rich and poor are broth
all.
from the king to the humble sow the world go on in the old way.
its sunshine bright, and shadows gray;
its needy hands, that the erous hands
be ready to give as the case
mands.

ROSAMOND'S CONQUEST
BY EMMA GARRISON JONES.

"Rosamond!"
"Coming, mamma!" and the ran in from the garden, her fingers all stained, and her basket half filled with ripe st ries.
"My love, I want you to run to ugstore," said her mother, loo from the handsome party d was trimming. "Poor pa er is coming on again, and he ve his medcine. Ask the dru refill this bottle, and——"
"Yes, mamma; give me the mo
Mrs. Trevor burst into tears.
"Rosamond," she said, "I have nt in the wide world, and shal ve till this dress is finished, e worked so hard; but run, my d ask the druggist to send me edicine, and tell him he shall e money early to-morrow morn
"Yes, mamma!" and away
osamond, her senstive mouth ing, her blue eyes full of tears
"Poor mamma! poor mamma ish I could help her!" she ured.
Meanwhile Mrs. Trevor sat a wing, but her tears often bli
r, and she arose every minu
o to cross the room and peep r husband's chamber. He was g, his wan face flushed with ver—her dear, handsome hus
r whose love she had sacrific uch.
She was the daughter and ild of a wealthy banker, this rrowing wife. When she re
r eighteenth birthday, her lled her into her library and er that he had chosen her hu the same time displaying a me set of diamonds, which me with Mr. Oglethorpe's pro
"Such fine diamonds they are!
y dear, Mr. Oglethorpe comes est family in the State, and h illionaire as well.
"But, papa, I cannot marry glethorpe."
"Why not?"
"Because I don't love him."
"Stuff! You'll love him ough when you are once his ot another word—you shall im or no one. I shall see revor and give him orders to isiting my house. You hea dith?"
"Yes, papa, but if I don't ob
"Then I'll disown you, and arry under my curse."
And when Edith, as many a eak girl has done, yielded over's persuasions and becam ife, her father kept his word he hour of her marriage sh is face no more.
She was very happy with th
f her choice, and did not reg ep she had taken, althoug estrangement from the fathe oved caused her unceasing pa irst they managed to live omfily, but soon Mr. Trevor, trong, failed in health. The urity debt came upon him and way his little all, and a co years after Rosamond's birth ere very poor indeed, and no as another little one in the
For her children's sake Edit oved her pride and wrote her touching letter, begging him ive her and help her in h

acobs & Bro
re and Rugs.
OLE AGENTS—lastic Book C
g Cabinets.
king.
MINGHAM, AL
Insurance Associati
ALABAMA.
AL ACT OF THE LEGISLATURE
le and for the People.
County Branch
February 3, 1900.
WALLACE C. EDLER,
Sec'y.-Treas.
llings, outbuildings and cont
loss by fire, wind and lightn d most sensible method of in st 43-100 of 1 per ce rs
upon application to CE C. EDLER, Clanton, A MBINATION OFFER
he "TWICE-A-WEEK" Issue
of the
Globe-Democr
With UNION
For
rs, one year, only $1
t should not be classed with the many Semi-Weekly, eight or more pages, all comparison the biggest, best and published in the United States. It is ve all
dern Newspaper.
tely from the Daily issue. It is needs of the Farmer, the Merchant a ep thoroughly posted without sparing
t also contains a great variety of well le to every member of the family.
l Clubbing Offer
s, but may be withdrawn at any time,
Address
THE UNION,
Clanton, Al
Practical Watchm
and Optician
Eyes Correctly
Fitted
Mail orders promptly f
RIBE FOR PAPER
U WANT
ds, Noteheads,
, Envelopes,
G ELSE PRINTED?
en Call at
ON OFFIC
Work at Low Prices.
All For $2.00
erial, done on Good Machi
NION, Clanton, Alabama.
Prevents Fevers.
FURNISH PURE WAT
ter or no charge made.
Address
SARBER CO.
Ala

EVERYDAY FANCIES.

By Mrs. M. A. Kidder.

[illegible] should cease from out our [illegible] be no more,
[illegible] become of the open
[illegible]
[illegible] borrowed store?
[illegible] should reach to
[illegible]
[illegible] unfruitful lie,
[illegible] and no mouths
[illegible] plant or sow the
[illegible]
[illegible] to the factory
[illegible]
[illegible] reel puff,
[illegible]
[illegible] enough.
[illegible] would rock
[illegible]
[illegible] and no lack of bread,
[illegible] come and commerce
[illegible]
[illegible] should cease from out
[illegible]
the Master lead no more,
[illegible] would become of the
[illegible]
[illegible] for their modest
[illegible]
[illegible] hand the work to
[illegible]
[illegible] to pass from man to
[illegible]
world would be in its misery
[illegible] as one could see.
[illegible]
[illegible] be contented with our call,
[illegible] with fate no more;
[illegible] rich and poor are brothers
[illegible]
[illegible] to the humble sower.
[illegible] go on in the old time
[illegible]
[illegible] bright, and its [illegible] gray;
[illegible] ready hands, that the gen-
[illegible] hands
[illegible] ready to give as the case demands.

ROSAMOND'S CONQUEST.

BY EMMA GARRISON JONES.

"Rosamond!"

"Coming, mamma!" and the little [illegible] in from the garden, her dimpled fingers all stained, and her wicker basket half filled with ripe strawberries.

"Now, I want you to run to the [illegible]," said her mother, looking [illegible] handsome party dress [illegible] trimming. "Poor papa's [illegible] coming on again, and he must [illegible] his medicine. Ask the druggist [illegible] bottle, and——"

"Yes, mamma; give me the money," Mrs. Trevor burst into tears.

"Rosamond," she said, "I haven't a [illegible] in the wide world, and shall not [illegible] this dress is finished, and [illegible] worked so hard; but run, my love, [illegible] ask the druggist to send me the [illegible], and tell him he shall have [illegible] early to-morrow morning."

"Yes, mamma!" and away ran Rosamond, her sensitive mouth quivering, her blue eyes full of tears.

"Poor mamma! poor mamma! I [illegible] I could help her!" she murmured.

Meanwhile Mrs. Trevor sat at her [illegible], but her tears often blinded her, and she arose every minute or two to cross the room and peep into her husband's chamber. He was dozing, his wan face flushed with rising fever—her dear, handsome husband, for whose love she had sacrificed so much.

She was the daughter and only child of a wealthy banker, this pale, [illegible] woman. When she reached her eighteenth birthday, her father called her into her library and told her that he had chosen her husband, at the same time displaying a handsome set of diamonds, which had come with Mr. Oglethorpe's proposal.

"Such fine diamonds they are! And, my dear, Mr. Oglethorpe comes of the best family in the State, and he is a gentleman as well."

"But, papa, I cannot marry Mr. Oglethorpe——"

"Why not?"

"Because I don't love him."

"Pish! You'll love him soon enough when you are once his wife. Not another word—you shall take him or no one. I shall see young Trevor and give him orders to cease visiting my house. You hear me, Edith?"

"Yes, papa, but if I don't obey?"

"Then I'll disown you, and you'll never more be under my curse."

And when Edith, as many a fond, weak girl has done, yielded to her father's persuasions and became his wife, her father kept his word. From the hour of her marriage she saw his face no more.

She was very happy with the man of her choice, and did not regret the step she had taken, although her estrangement from the father she loved caused her unceasing pain. At first they managed to live quite easily, but soon Mr. Trevor, never strong, failed in health. Then a severe [illegible] came upon him and swept away his little all, and a couple of years after Rosamond's birth they were very poor indeed, and now there was another little one in the cradle.

For her children's sake Edith swallowed her pride and wrote her father a touching letter, begging him to forgive her and help her in her sore distress. The letter was returned to her unopened.

Then she set to work herself, taking in embroidery and plain sewing; but all her efforts could not keep the gaunt wolf from the door.

She sat at her work now, thinking over her troubles and waiting for Rosamond's return.

It was not long before the little creature came running in, but one glance at her grieved little face told her mother she had failed.

"Well, Rosie darling?" she said, gently.

"Oh, mamma, he wouldn't let me have it!" sobbed the child. "I told him about poor papa, and I begged him, but he said no—the money must come first."

"Well, love, it can't be helped," stilled her mother. "I canfinish the dress in an hour, and then we shall get the money. Go and fan poor papa now, and put a cold strawberry in his mouth when he wakes. Mamma must sew."

Rosamond obeyed, taking her place by her father's couch. She fanned him into a sound sleep, and then she went to the open window, and fell to dreaming.

The afternoon sunshine glittered on the little garden plot, with its tufts of pinks and heart's-ease, and its square bed of strawberries. Rosamond built her castles, and meanwhile her mother finished the party dress, and arose to take it home.

"Take good care of papa, Rosie," she called, as she crossed the yard, "and watch baby."

"All right, mamma," answered Rosamond.

The summer afternoon droned away and with the twilight her mother returned. Rosamond had tidied up the sick room, and had made the tea ready for her father's supper, beside rocking her baby brother when he awoke.

"Well, mamma," she cried, joyfully.

Her poor mother fell into a seat, and burst into sobs.

"Oh, Rosamond, the lady can't pay me till next week. There is no hope for us; poor papa must die!"

Rosamond only nodded her curly head, and a curious sparkle lit her eye.

"I'll do it," she whispered, under her breath.

Mr. Trevor had a bad night, and his wife got no sleep, consequently she did not rise early the next morning, but Rosamond was up with the dawn.

She put on her best dress, and her chip hat, and stole downstairs, with her little wicker basket in her hand. Then she ran into the garden, and gathered the largest of the strawberries. When she had filled her basket, she made a little nosegay of her heart's-ease, and another of pinks, and put them on top of the bright berries. Then she hung the little basket on her arm, and dropping on her knees upon the wet grass, she looked up at the opal sky and prayed.

"Oh, dear Lord, please help me to sell my berries, to buy my poor, sick papa some medicine." And never doubting in her sweet, child's faith, but God would hearken to her request, she bounded to her feet and ran off in the direction of the village.

Th early market was just opened, and a dozen or two countrywomen were ranging stalls and along the sidewalk, with their produce in green array before them. Little Rosamond looked about her for a minute, and then established herself in a corner, and stood there like a picture, her hat pushed back, her cheeks flushed, her golden curls in a tumble.

"Who'll buy my ripe strawberries?"

At last a gentleman paused, attracted by the sweet, bird-like voice.

"Please, sir, would you buy my berries?"

"Baskets and all, and yourself in the bargain."

"Not myself, but the basket, sir, and the posies, and only fifty cents."

The gentleman drew out his purse.

"I can't find it in my heart to refuse such a mite of a market-woman as you are," he said, kindly. "Here's a dollar. Now tell me how it comes to pass that such a baby as you are at this occupation?"

Rosamond received the dollar with dancing eyes.

"Oh, sir, how good you are! Thank you a hundred times. Oh! my poor papa can have his medicine now. You see, sir, he's very sick, my poor papa is, and mamma hasn't one cent, and the druggist wouldn't let us have the medicine, and mamma couldn't get the money for the pretty dress she made; and, oh! how she did cry—and—and——"

"And, you came here to sell your berries?"

"Yes, sir, that's it, and mamma doesn't know what I have done. Oh, but won't she be glad when she sees this!"

She closed her pink fingers on the crisp bill, and handed her little basket to the gentleman. He took it, and then stood looking down at her with a curious, wistful gaze. Something in the frank, clear, young eyes stirred his heart, and made his lips quiver.

"I must run home now. Good-by, sir; I shall never forget you."

Rosamond held out her chubby hand. He clasped it and held it close.

"You'll tell me your name first, won't you, little woman?"

"Rosamond Trevor, sir."

"What?"

The child eyed his working face in amazement.

"And your mother's name?"

"Edith Trevor, sir."

"Gracious heavens!"

He was silent a minute; but when the child sought to release her hand he only held it the closer.

"Rosamond," he said, presently, in a faltering voice, "did you ever hear of your grandfather?"

"My Grandfather Everleigh?" Oh, yes, indeed, sir! Mamma tells me about him, but I never saw him. He's a rich man, and—and—well, I don't think he cares for us because we are poor!"

"Rosamond, I am your grandfather!"

The child looked at him with incredulous eyes; then all at once she began to clap her hands.

"And you will go home with me and see poor mamma—you will, you will!" she cried.

"Yes," replied the gentleman, in a hoarse voice. "Come along; my carriage is not far off."

They drove up the green lane to the cottage just as the sun was rising. Rosamond's mother was in the garden looking about with much concern for her little girl.

"Here I am, mamma," shouted Rosie, putting forth her golden head. "I ran away to market to sell strawberries; and, oh, mamma, I've got a whole dollar, and I've brought Grandfather Everleigh home with me!"

The meeting between father and daughter was a happy one, and all the past was forgotten and forgiven in the joy of the present. Under the treatment of a good physician, and the restorative power of a contented mind, Mr. Trevor soon regained his health; and Edith's father, to make amends for his former harshness, took him into the firm of which he was the head, and insisted that they should all live together in his mansion, where little Rosie is now his pet and almost constant companion.—New York Weekly.

FRANCE AND THE SAHARA.

Meharistes Slowly Winning the Desert.

France is constantly giving proofs of her mastery over the Sahara. She has won it by her new methods of desert travel, which were adopted only three years ago and proved from the first successful. Her meharistes travel wherever they are sent. At irregular but frequent intevals they raise their flags over some new terrl tory and attach it to one of their organized districts. The meharistes are small troops of camel cavalry mounted on animals specially trained for fast travel, so that they may go lightly laden. They depend on the oases to replenish supplies. Their latest journey is one of the most notable of their achievements. Starting from Timbuctoo they marched north and northwest about 350 miles to Taudeni, arriving there May 8. Captain Cauvin and his men camped in the town for eight days. The natives had never seen a white man before. Their fathers saw one specimen seventy-eight years ago, when Rene Calle crossed the desert. Lenz was in that neighborhood about twenty-five years ago, but passed aroun dthe place because he did not dare to enter it. Captain Cauvin attached Taudeni to the Government of Timbuktu, and his party returned to the Niger. They had met no opposition, but were much fatigued by the heat and the hardships of a desert march nearly as long as the distance between New York and Chicago.

Isolated and miserable as Taudeni is, the place has long been one of the most notable in the Sahara. It occupies a depression only about four hundred feet above sea level. The waters come near the surface here, and many wells are possible. This has made the settlement the converging point for all the caravan routes between Morocco and Timbuctoo. It is the centre of the largest salt industry in Africa. Here are apparently inexhaustible beds of pure rock salt, which the natives hew out in blocks about three feet long, weighing seventy pounds. Four of these make a camel load. The salt is taken to Timbuctoo and distributed throughout the whole Western Soudan. It is sold to the Timbuctoo merchants for a pittance, but increases in value with every day's journey of their camels to the south. Taudeni is described by the people of Timbuctoo as one of the most wretched of desert settlements. The natives are of mixed Arab and Negro blood. They have had no government. Every man is a law unto himself. Often the miners suffer from lack of food, as they are dependent on imports for supplies of all kinds except water and salt. They exact a camel from every caravan replenishing its water skins at their wells, and the animals thus acquired are kept as a food resource. It was because Lenz could not spare a camel that he replenished his water supply at Wady Tell, outside the settlement, and went on without seeing a native. Salt mining is the only industry. The heat is so intense that at times the miners are compelled to quit work and take refuge in caves. Lenz found abundant evidence that this region, some time or other, gave support to people of a culture differing from that of the present inhabitants. He found the ruins of ancient walls, objects of ornament, tools and other articles such as are no longer in use. He learned that many of these relics are scattered over this part of the desert, and specimens of finely worked and polished stone have been carried as curiosities to other Saharan towns. The French expedition may throw more light on this region.

The population of the United States is estimated to be eighty-five millions, and only twenty-nine millions are connected with any church—Catholic or Protestat.

THE PULPIT.

AN ELOQUENT SUNDAY SERMON BY THE REV. EARL E. CLEELAND.

Subject: Christ in Gethsemane.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—Sunday morning, in the Classon Avenue Presbyterian Church, the assistant pastor, Rev. Earl E. Cleeland, preached on "Christ in Gethsemane." Among other things he said:

The text to which I ask your attention is found in the twenty-sixth chapter of Matthew, at the thirty-ninth verse: "My Father, if it be possible, let this cup pass away from Me; nevertheless, not as I will, but as Thou wilt," which are the words, as Matthew has recorded them, of the thrice repeated prayer of our Lord in the place called Gethsemane. You recall the account of the Last Supper of the Lord with His disciples, and the dark scene in Gethsemane which immediately followed. Telling the disciples to "sit ye here while I go yonder and pray," Jesus "took with him Peter and the two sons of Zebedee" (James and John), "and began to be sorrowful and sore troubled. Then saith He unto them, 'My soul is exceeding sorrowful, even unto death; abide ye here and watch with Me.' And He went forward a little and fell on His face and prayed, saying: 'My Father, if it be possible let this cup pass away from Me; nevertheless, not as I will, but as Thou wilt.'" The gospel according to Luke goes on to tell us that then "there appeared unto Him an angel from heaven, strengthening Him, and being in an agony He prayed more earnestly, and His sweat became as it were great drops of blood falling down upon the ground."

I choose this text to-day as the result of a conversation some ten days ago, with one of the members of this church, and at the outset I want to acknowledge my indebtedness to him for the suggestion of this sermon.

Many passages, in Scripture, are variously interpreted and differently understood by Christian people, and students of the Bible especially, and often one will find that the great commentators themselves are almost diametrically opposed to each other in the interpretations which they make. I find that our text to-day is one of those disputed passages. Several of the authorities which I have consulted in the study of this prayer of Christ in Gethsemane took the view that Jesus feared and recoiled at the thought of His approaching death on the cross, and thus prayed to God, His Father, trying, if it were possible, to bend His will, and have the end accomplished by some other way than the cross. Only one commentator, as I recall now, took the view that our Lord's agonized prayer was instigated by the overwhelming thought that He feared His life would be crushed out underneath the strain of mental suffering He was undergoing, before He reached the cross, and thus He prayed that this cup pass away from Him.

The majority of Christian people, I believe, and as I find, more of the commentators do, attribute Christ's suffering in Gethsemane to the weakness of His flesh, or humanity, to face the death that was before Him, and they interpret our text in this light.

I am inclined, however, to cast my lot with the minority, and interpret Christ's prayer as a plea to God for strength, that His life would not be crushed out underneath His terrible agony before the time appointed through all the ages of prophecy before Him—that of His atonement on the cross for the sins of men. And in treating this passage let it be understood that anything I may say has doubtless been said hundreds of times before. I only wish to try to show, from Scripture, my position, and therefore make no claims. I see no necessity of exercising our imaginations in endeavoring to show mysterious causes for our Lord's state of mind in this prayer, when the reason for His agitation is plainly given in the Scriptural account itself.

But now about this prayer of our Lord in the garden of Gethsemane.

It seems incredible almost to think that Christian people will attribute less courage to the Son of God than they have seen in hundreds of examples of fearlessness through all the centuries past. Think of the thousands of people who have unflinchingly faced death and died a martyr's death with scarcely a quiver. And it would be almost irreverent in us at such a time as this to think of the numerous cases of criminals who walk with unfaltering steps to the electric chair or ascend the gallows with all appearance of calmness.

Some commentators, as has already been said, interpret this prayer as a revolting or halting of Christ at the thought of the approaching crucifixion, and the horrors which preceded it, and attendant to it; the betrayal of Judas; Peter's denial, and the desertion of His disciples and all His followers; the humiliating trial, and insults of the rabble, and the lingering death on the cross. That it was because of the horrors of all these things that Christ here meant to ask God if there was not some other way of atoning for the sins of men, and that Christ only yielded to the cross to fulfill His Father's will. Those who advocate this view would thus make it out that our Lord forgot for the moment, by reason of His suffering, the prophecies, and the plan of God in His redemption of the world, throughout the history of Israel; or if Christ did not forget that He tried to bend His Father's will to an atonement by some other way, and that Christ finally, after three unsuccessful attempts to bend God's will, yielded to the cross.

Why Christian people try to explain away this prayer in any such a weak way is difficult to understand. What does Christianity want with a weak Christ who feared a martyr's death? Our Lord was "a man of sorrows and acquainted with grief," and had been for three years preparing for the cross, and had on several occasions before this told His disciples of the manner of His death, and they could not understand at the time.

To my mind, this prayer of Jesus shows, on the contrary, the bravery of our Lord, and does not show any weakness. I am inclined to think that Christ had no thought of the cross during the time in which He made this prayer, save in His remote consciousness; but He was, just at that moment, fearful that His mortal body would succumb to the terrible strain He was passing through, during this awful hour in Gethsemane. He felt that His life would be crushed out by this terrible agony, before He reached the cross, for does not one of the accounts tell us Christ's own words, "My soul is exceeding sorrowful, even unto death," and another that, "being in agony, He prayed more earnestly; and His sweat became as it were great drops of blood falling down upon the ground." And God heard and answered His prayer by sending an angel from heaven, strengthening Him.

Jesus was not, here, seeking to bend His Father's will, but asking God for strength to reach the cross, and God sent an angel in answer to that prayer. This is the scriptural account of why our Lord was in agony. This cup, which Christ was drinking to the dregs, was the cup of God's wrath upon the sins of men. Christ was drinking the bitterness of the cup in our stead. His bloody sweat was a sprinkling, an anticipated atonement, upon the very ground which had been "cursed" because of man's sin. No imagination can feel, no words can describe the agony that Christ had to bear in Gethsemane.

So why need we search our imaginations and try to manufacture mysterious explanations why Christ made this prayer when the answer and reason for the prayer, is given in the very account itself, in the necessity of the angel's appearance?

When Jesus said, "not My will, but Thine, be done,'" He resigned Himself to God's will. If He should die of agony, it was God's will, but He prayed that this cup should pass from Him. But His atoning death was not to be there in Gethsemane, in the night, but He was to be lifted upon the cross of Calvary in order that all men would be drawn unto Him.

We know that Christ's was a sensitive nature but this is not saying that He was not brave. And there is no reason to believe that He, in anticipation of His death, would yield to the thought any more than an ordinary man. So, therefore, because He suffered "even unto death," as He did, in the Garden of Gethsemane, is in itself an argument that He was bearing more than the anticipation.

So, therefore, let us not confound Christ's suffering in Gethsemane to lack of fortitude or bravery. Our Lord was no stoic. He here felt that His physical body was giving way under an agony which no language can describe.

Throughout the whole Old Testament period God, under the Levitical code of laws, educated His chosen people to the fact that without the shedding of blood there was no remission of sins. All these forms of sacrificial atonement of the sins of Israel were typical of Christ, the Lamb of God. And can it be supposed for one moment that our Lord did not fully realize this in Gethsemane? And throughout the whole New Testament gospel, it is plainly stated everywhere that our peace is through the blood of the cross. Surely then that great Paschal Lamb of God that was to take away the sins of the world did not hesitate nor falter at the approoach of the atonement by the shedding of His blood upon the cross. It was for the joy that was set before Him that He endured the cross and despised shame, and He won thereby His seat at the right hand of the throne of God.

The staggering of Christ's physical body underneath this tremendous burden must not be mistaken for a faltering of His will.

The Bible.

This Book unfolds Jehovah's mind.
This Voice salutes in accents kind.
This Fountain has its source on high.
This Friend will all you need supply.
This Mine affords us boundless wealth.
This Good Physician gives us health.
This Sun renews and warms the soul.
This Sword both wounds and makes us whole.
This Letter shows our sins forgiven.
This Guide conducts us safe to heaven.
This Charter has been sealed with blood.
This Volume is the Word of God.

God's Best.

It is impossible to rush into God's presence, catch up anything we fancy, and run off with it. To attempt this will end in mere delusion and disappointment. Nature will not unveil her rarest beauty to the chance tourist. Pictures which are the result of a life work do not disclose their secret loveliness to the saunterer down a gallery. No character can be read at a glance. And God's best cannot be ours apart from patient waiting in His holy presence, writes the Rev. F. B. Meyer. The superficial may be put off with a parable, a pretty story, but it is not given to such to know the mysteries of the Kingdom of Heaven.—Ram's Horn.

Work on Your Knees.

A clergyman, walking on the public highway, observed a poor man breaking stones, and kneeling the while so that he might be able to do it more effectually. Passing him and saluting him, he remarked:

"Ah, John, I wish I could break the stony hearts of my hearers as easily as you are breaking those stones."

"Perhaps, master," he said, "you do not work on your knees."

Prayer brings down the power that can break the flintiest heart.—Christian Commonwealth.

Revealed by Love Alone.

Intellect may give keenness of discernment. Love alone gives largeness to the nature, some share in the comprehensiveness of God. — John Hamilton Thom.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

INTERNATIONAL LESSON COMMENTS FOR SEPTEMBER 16.

Subject: Jesus Silences the Pharisees and Sadducees, Mark xii., 13-27—Golden Text, Mark xii., 17—Memory Verse, 27.

1. A deputation comes to Christ (v. 13). 13. "They." The Pharisees as a whole appointed certain ones to visit Jesus for the purpose of inducing Him to say something that would refute His claims as the Messiah or that would give ground for an accusation against Him before the government. "Certain—Pharisees." Matthew says "their disciples." Probably young and zealous scholars. "Herodians." The Herodians were a political party rather than a religious sect. "To catch Him." Matthew says "entangle Him." A metaphor drawn from catching wild birds. It was their purpose to ensnare Him in His talk so they could expose His ignorance of the Jewish law or religion, or find grounds for legal proceedings against Him.

II. A question concerning our duty as citizens (vs. 14-17). 14. "Master, we know," etc. This was a hypocritical compliment. They hope by their treacherous flattery to induce Him to commit Himself to some rebellious sentiment. "Is it lawful?" etc. Caesar was a name common to all the emperors, derived originally from Julius Caesar, the proper founder of Roman imperialism in the place of the old republic. The present emperor was Tiberius. The tribute was a poll tax, or levy of a denarius upon every person, imposed by the Roman Government ever since Judea had become a province. The Jews detested this tax, but its legality was supported by the Herodians. Their question was so framed that it seemed impossible for Him to escape. 15. "Knowing their hypocrisy." Jesus, who knows the hearts of all men, saw that they were mere flattering spies, and their question only a crafty device of hypocrites. "Why tempt?" Why do you seek to ensnare Me by a question that is asked, not for information, but to get Me into trouble? "Bring Me a penny." Literally, a denarius.

16. "They brought it." By requiring them to bring Him the coin He compels them to answer, tacitly, their own question; for the Jewish rabbis taught that, "wheresoever the money of any king is current, there the inhabitants acknowledge that king for their lord." "Whose—image." The image was probably the likeness of the Roman emperor, Tiberius Caesar. "Superscription." The name and motto on the coin. "They said — Caesar's." Thus acknowledging that they were submitting to Caesar's authority.

17. "Render." The word render implies the notion of moral duty toward Caesar quite as much as toward God. "To Caesar." Rather, here, give back to Caesar. They ask, Is it lawful to give? He replies, give back. Since they accepted in the coinage of Caesar the benefits of his government, they were bound to give back a recompense in tribute. So long as the citizen accepts the benefit of a government, he owes it allegiance and obedience.

III. A question concerning our relations in the future state (vs. 18-27). 18. "Sadducees." They were the materialists of their time. "No resurrection." They also denied the immortality of the soul and the existence of angels (see Acts 23:8). "They asked Him." Their question was full of scorn and ridicule. They intended to show from Moses' teaching that the doctrine of the resurrection was absurd. 19. "Moses wrote." In Deut. 25:5, 6. "Should take his wife," etc. The children were to be reckoned with in the genealogy of the deceased brother.

20. "Seven brethren." This was no doubt an imaginary case. The Sadducees assume that the resurrection includes the revival of the relations now existing. 23. "In the resurrection." Which of the seven husbands should have the risen wife.

24. "Do ye not—err." To err means to wander. They do not merely make a mistake, but they wander in ignorance of the Scriptures. "Ye know not." You err because you do not know (1) the Scriptures, which affirm this doctrine; nor (2) the power of God, which is able to effect the resurrection, and after the resurrection to create a new order of things in the new world. "Power of God." The Bible rests the doctrine of the resurrection on the exercise of divine power (Acts 26:8; Rom. 1:4; 1 Cor. 6:14). 25. "When they shall rise." That is, after they have risen from the dead—in the future state. "Nor are given." This has reference to the Jewish custom by which the female members of the family were given in marriage by the father. "Are as angels." This answer strikes at another error of the Sadducees—a denial of the existence of angels.

26. "Book of Moses." The Sadducees had appealed to Moses as authority and now Jesus turns to the same source to prove His point. "In the bush." See Exod. 3:5, 15. "I am," etc. Notice that the present tense is used. He cannot be the God of non-entities, non-existences. If He is their God they are His people, and, of course, must be in existence, and not out of existence. So the whole Sadducean doctrine broke down. 27. "Not the God of the dead." Our Lord here uses the word dead in the sense of these Sadducees with whom He is conversing, to signify extinct.

$6000 DAMAGES FOR BOYCOTT.

Racine (Wis.) Baker Wins Suit Against Labor Union.

Fond du Lac, Wis.—Judge Fowler, in the Circuit Court of Fond du Lac awarded Otto R. Schulz, a prominent baker, of Racine, $6000 damages, in his suit against some eighty members of the Trades and Labor Council for boycotting Schulz's business, and placing his name on the unfair list two years ago because Schulz refused to put the union label on his products.

THE UNION

Published every Thursday at Clanton, Chilton county, Alabama.

Wallace C. Edlor, Ed. and Pub.

Subscription price, in advance, per year, $1.

For advertising rates, call at the office, Seventh street, between First and Second avenues.

Entered April 15, 1903, at Clanton, Ala., as second class matter, under act of congress of March 3, 1879.

NOTICE TO CORRESPONDENTS.

All communications to the Union must be signed by the writer's real name as well as that name which they wish to put in the paper. Letters must reach the editor Tuesday morning to get in the same week. While we will publish any and all communications complying with these requirements that do not contain any improper language, we are not responsible for the opinions expressed. tf.

CLANTON, ALA., Sep. 13, 1906.

Union Clubbing List

THE UNION And Yellow Jacket	$1.05
THE UNION And Southern Ruralist	1.00
THE UNION And Union Educator	1.00
THE UNION And Home and Farm	1.00
THE UNION And Weekly Age-Herald	1.35
THE UNION and Weekly Atlanta Constitution	1.35
THE UNION and Twice-a-Week Globe Democrat	1.50
THE UNION and Tri-W'klyAtlanta Constitution	1.50
THE UNION And Tom Watson's Magazine	1.50
THE UNION and Tri-Weekly N. Y. World	1.50
THE UNION And Rural South	1.50
THE UNION And Weekly Advertiser and Map of Alabama, U. S. and world	1.50

If there are any other papers you want call at THE UNION office, and we will get them for you at the lowest rates. tf

NOMINEES OF THE People's Primary

Held August 6, 1906, under the direction of the Republican and Populist Executive Committees of Chilton County, Ala.

FOR REPRESENTATIVE.
J. Osmond Middleton.

FOR SHERIFF.
Felix J. Fitts.

FOR COMMISSIONER.
First District—W. H. Conway.
Second District—S. E. Waldrup.
tf

NOTICE OF CITIZENS' MEETING.

In order that there may be a full open and free discussion, and an understanding of the proposed five thousand dollar bond issue by the town of Clanton, a meeting of the citizens of the town of Clanton is hereby called to convene at the court house on Friday, the 14th day of September, 1906, at 7:30 p. m.

N. A. KICKER,
Mayor.

TO THE PEOPLE OF CHILTON COUNTY.

The times and places for the joint discussion of the political issues of the day between Messrs. J. O. Middleton and F. A. Gulledge will be arranged and published in the next week's issue of The Union and The Banner.

A. C. SMITH,
Chairman County Republican Campaign Committee.

WM. M. ADAMS.
Chairman County Democratic Campaign Committee.

NOTICE.

The Republican Executive Committee of Chilton county is hereby called to meet at Thorsby Sepember 19th (Wednesday), at 10 a. m., for the transaction of necessary business.

W. R. JACKSON,
Chairman Republican Executive Committee, Chilton Co., Ala.
A. C. SMITH, Secretary.

MASS MEETING.

A mass meeting is hereby called of all those who are opposed to organized Democracy to meet at Thorsby September 19, 1906 (Wednesday), at 10 a. m., for the purpose of electing delegates to the 15th Senatorial district Convention, to be held at Thorsby on the same day. Hon. Chas. H. Scott, Alabama member of the Republican National Committee, and other prominent men will be present and will address the convention on the issues of the day.

W. R. JACKSON,
Chairman Republican Executive Committee.
A. C. SMITH, Secretary.

SENATORIAL CONVENTION.

The Republican Senatorial Convention of the 15th Senatorial District of Alabama, composed of the counties of Autauga, Chilton and Shelby, is hereby called to meet at Thorsby on September 19, 1906, at 11 a. m., for the purpose of nominating a candidate for State Senator.

SENATORIAL DIST. COM.

TO FARMERS.

The agricultural and live stock display at the Alabama State Fair at Birmingham this year will be the finest exhibit yet given in this state. The fair management has offered liberal premiums and will charge no entrance fee nor make any charge for stalls or pens. Every farmer who has a horse or a pair of mules, or sheep or cattle or hogs or poultry, or anything he has raised on his farm of which he is proud, ought to ship them to the fair. You may get a premium well worth your trouble. Besides, you will be helping make your state fair a big success.

ALABAMA STATE FAIR.

The educational value of a state fair cannot be overestimated. It enables the farmer, the merchant, the stock raiser and those engaged in other lines to meet, to witness the results of the work of others, to be better informed as to the best methods of accomplishing the results desired; to come in contact with those who wish to buy or sell, and also to spend a pleasant week in viewing the attractions usually provided at an exhibition of this kind.

A fair demonstrates the possibilities of earnest effort and encourages men to greater exertions; it acquaints them with the latest improved agricultural implements and machinery; it advertises the state's resources and induces homeseekers to settle here and help build up enterprises.

The people of Alabama should show their appreciation of the State Fair to be held at Birmingham October 15-20. The men who are managing it are some of the best known and most public-spirited men in the state, who are contributing generously of their time and money to build up Alabama and improve conditions in our state. A state fair is an epitome of a state's progress, and a comprehensive fair shows us to ourselves, lets us see what our brethren are doing in every field of endeavor, rekindles and increases our patriotism and gives us a keener appreciation of home, of the state we live in.

Let everybody work for the success of the Alabama State Fair. Birmingham is the great railroad center of the state and easily accessible. Let us go to the fair, patronize it, contribute to its success, see what we can learn.

Our Birmingham friends have provided royal entertainment for us. The great home-coming week for Alabamians will be a happy event. Fifty thousand of our former citizens who have strayed away into other states are coming back home, and Bryan is coming, and Dan Patch is coming, and a big Horse Show every night, and fireworks, and other fine attractions, and they are going to have one of the greatest bands in the world there to play for us. So let's all go to the fair. Talk for it, think of it, work for it. It will do much to build up Alabama, and that's what we are all trying to do.

CONGREGATIONAL H. M. SOCIETY.

Fort Payne, Ala., Sept. 8, 1906.

Editor Union:

I purpose to visit churches of the Clanton conference as follows:

Fourth Sunday, September 23, Mountain Springs church, of Clanton, in the morning; Shady Grove church, of Verbena, at night.

Fifth Sunday, September 30, at Kingston.

First Sunday, October 7, Lightwood, in the morning; Marbury at night.

Second Sunday, October 14, Pine Grove church, of Deatsville, in the morning; South Calera at night.

Yours truly,
A. T. CLARKE.
tf

THORSBY, ROUTE 1.

Mr. Editor:

Just a few words to the people of Beat 3. I notice that a petition is being circulated to see how many are in favor of passing a stock law in Beat 3. I think a stock law would be bad enough in the entire county, but much worse in just one beat. Think what trouble we would put our citizens to just across the line in other beats; they would have to fix their pastures and also fence their farms. Do you think that would be right or following the golden rule of "Do unto others," etc? I say not. If the majority of the people of the county want stock law in our county let us have it, but don't put the law into force in scattering beats, for no man wants to fence against everybody's stock and make a pasture to keep his own stock in. The Lord put the grass and herbs here for the poor cattle; let them have it. Success to The Union and its many readers.

HUCKIDARA.

DIED.

O. C. Kicker, aged 32 years, a son of J. W. G. Kicker of Clanton, Ala., died at his home in Bentonville, Ark., on September 5 of typhoid fever. He leaves a widow and two children.

SOUTH BESSIE.

Quiet September is here, with its profusion of yellow butterflies, harbingers of the days of autumn. While the days are hot, the nights are growing pleasant. The lonesome chirping of the cricket is heard, the fields look brown and sear, and many are the signs of the approaching fall time in the Southland. While we think of it, did you all read Prof. Beeson's sermon, published in The Union of August 23? If not hunt up your papers and read it. It being published by request of our own people at Rocky Mount, adds to its interest. Baptismal service at Mars Hill the first Sunday. Mr. J. N. Thomas, administrator. Well, Middleton's letter in the last Union shows some of his ability. Nothing like being backed by the truth. Osmond seems eminently qualified to defend his people against the enemy. Truth today, both political and religious, is doing its noble work in showing up the false. Happy are those who are on the side of truth. What has become of Observer? Has he folded his tent and gone over to Democracy? So we have a county singing convention using the old books. We think it a good move. By so doing we will preserve the memory of Walker, White, King, Mason, Hastings and other authors of the long ago. Why all this ado on the other side about one little typographical error in The Union? While both Democratic and Republican printers make them, our experience justifies the statement. The old adage is, "Those who live in glass houses should not throw stones." Everything in South Bessie is moving on quietly. We have no educational, political or ecclesiastical rows on hand. Let all the boys and girls of our large union circle continue to give us the news. Prof. Walker went home to Plantersville Friday evening. The ticket the people gave us on August 6 is a good one, and in reviewing that contest we pause to consider who were the real victors. The answer stands out in bold relief: Goodgame, Hayes, Gentry and Pate. Men who bravely disregard self for the people are always the victors, and we raise our hat to them. H. H. Armstrong's little daughter, Eva, is on the sick list. Prof. Walker and Miss Lily Henry attended church services at Randolph last week. Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Armstrong visited relatives near Randolph Saturday. Henry Bros. are preparing to run a grist mill in connection with their saw mill. Mr. L. G. Posey was the first one to carry a bale of new cotton to the Bessie gin. Mr. Posey is one of our most enterprising citizens, true as steel to the people's cause. Miss Ursula Jones visited friends in Randolph Saturday. N. B. Posey's children have the whooping cough. Mr. Hugh Henry is having a new residence built at the saw mill. Health to The Union.

"ONE OF THE BOYS."

JEMISON.

Editor Union:

Jemison school opened Monday with 70 pupils enrolled. Prof. Rasco ,principal; Miss Fite, assistant. Several talks on education were made by Prof. Rasco, Sessions and Rev. Thomas.

Miss Anna Lowery gave her Sunday school class a picnic last Friday at Jemison Park. The children all came home with smiling faces, as if they had spent a happy day.

The Rebekah lodge gave an ice cream supper Saturday night for the benefit of the I. O. O. F. Orphan's Home, netting about $20.

Prof. R. E. Sessions was shaking hands with friends again. Say, girls why is the professor coming so often?

Miss Nannie Sessions, of Montevallo, was a pleasant visitor at the home of W. A. Reynolds.

Mrs. Jas. Honeycutt has returned to Jemison with her daughter, Miss Beulah, and Master Jim, to enter school.

Mrs. Ida Gentry gave an entertainment Monday night in honor of her cousins, Misses Jetta and Coral Glausier, of Georgia.

Mr. S. P. Shaw has returned home from Baldwin county, and somebody is all smiles.

Laten Ratenbury and his sister, Miss Hermie, has gone to Troy to enter the Normal School of that place.

Miss Ethel Toland, of Oxford, is teaching the music school.

Come again, One of the Boys; your letters are so nice.

With best wishes to Union and its many readers,

BILL DOOLEY.

TEACHERS' INSTITUTE AT SHOULTS.

The Institute was called to order Friday morning, September 7, 1906, by Rev. P. G. Maness, who conducted the devotional exercises.

Prof. Haggard was on hand and gave the teachers a hearty welcome into the community. Mr. H. A. Harris, for the response, was absent, so Mr. J. O. Williams was appointed to respond. After the response Rev. J. D. Martin and Mr. Lathram made short talks in behalf of the Institute.

Then came the enrolling of teachers. At this time and during the Institute the following teachers were enrolled: Messrs. P. G. Maness, J. T. Williams, J. O. Williams, W. A. Haggard, R. E. R. Hicks, Howard Roper, J. W. Moore, A. R. Jones, J. J. Mims, L. R. Sawyer and F. B. Williams, and Misses Maud McGraw, Nelia Johnson and Agnes McCreeless.

The speakers for the first subject, "Psychology of the Schoolroom," were not present. Prof. R. E. R. Hicks gave a thorough discussion of the subject. Rev. Martin followed with some cheerful thoughts on the subject.

The next subject was one of much interest to all and was enjoyed very much.

Dinner.

Promptly at 1:30 the Institute was called to order by Superintendent J. W. Moore. Those teachers to whom the first subject in the afternoon was assigned failed to put in their appearance. Prof. Jones very ably discussed the subject and defined clearly some of the needs of our county educationally, some of which were better school houses, better education for the little ones, a higher standard of education, and "to educate some of the parents as we go along."

Prof. Moore said: "Get the children in school. There are 7,000 children of school age in the county and reports show only 4,500 in school. Let parents and teachers be wide awake in the work of getting them in school."

Rev. P. G. Maness, in his simple and forceful manner, gave an address that could scarcely be excelled on "Unconscious Training."

Prof. Haggard made an excellent take on "How to Secure Attention During Recitation."

Institute adjourned until Saturday morning.

The Institute opened at 9:15 Saturday morning. Rev. J. D. Martin conducted devotional exercises. Speakers for the first subject were at home or somewhere else. The subject, "Methods and Helps in Teaching Agriculture," was opened by J. T. Williams. Prof. Moore and several others spoke on the subject.

The subject was left in the background, and the tide of argument was turned into an experience meeting on farming, which was very profitable and intensely interesting to teachers and patrons.

The subject of "Manual Training" was passed without discussion.

On account of urgent business, Hon. W. B. Craig could not address the Institute, so Prof. Jones kindly consented to make the educational address. An interesting and profitable one it was.

The committee on resolutions, which had been appointed at the beginning of the session, made the following report:

We, your committee to draft resolutions pertaining to the Institute held at Pleasant Grove, submit the following report:

Resolved, first, That we, the teachers of the Institute, tender our sincere thanks to the citizens and patrons of the Institute for their liberal hospitality and kindness shown to us during our stay.

Resolved, second, That we fully appreciate the aid rendered us by each visitor from adjacent counties.

Resolved, third, That the proceedings of the Institute be sent to the county papers for publication.

R. E. R. HICKS,
F. B. WILLIAMS,
AGNES M'CREELESS
Committee.

J. W. MOORE, President.
J. T. WILLIAMS, Secretary.

FARMERS' INSTITUTE.

Clanton, Sept. 11, 1906.

Pursuant to the third article of the objects and aims of the F. E. and C. U. of A., the last County Union agreed to meet in delegated form at Cedar Grove and give one day to the science of crop diversification and scientific agriculture, or to farmers' institute work.

Dr. C. A. Cary, of Auburn, director of Farmers' Institutes of Alabama, and Col. J. M. Thornton, of Talladega, have agreed to lecture for us on that day. Also State Business Agent P. F. Parker has been invited to make us a speech on that day. The date has been fixed on Friday, October 12, 1906. Everybody is invited to come. Yours respectfully,

J. N. DENNIS.
County Secretary.

CHILTON COUNTY'S NEW SCHOOL

On Monday, June 4, 1906, at a meeting of citizens of Thorsby and others interested, there was duly constituted a board of trustees to conduct a school to be known as the Thorsby Institute. The purpose stated therein is to conduct a preparatory school of high grade on Christian, but non-sectarian, principles. The trustees will work in co-operation with the common public schools of the county and state in providing educational privileges for those who wish to pursue their studies farther than the public school, at a low cost and under Christian supervision and instruction.

There is great need of such an institution in this community, and, in fact, all over the state of Alabama. Chilton county should feel highly honored, and it is her duty to give the school all the encouragement possible. This school will be the only real high school between Birmingham and Montgomery; thus it should draw from a wide radius, and should become a blessing to the countless numbers now deprived of a thorough education because of the necessary expense. This school does not depend upon the local support financially, so that the tuition is very low.

The school is for young men and women of good minds and high aims. It is designed for those who have already conceived a serious purpose in life; for those who desire to secure a useful education. Vicious and idle students are not wanted. The school aims to offer the best preparatory edcation to every boy and girl in Alabama at a very moderate cost.

The teachers are thoroughly experienced. William J. Lamkie, Ph. B., the principal, is a graduate of Brown University in Providence, R. I. He comes to Thorsby after having a practical experience at the head of educational work in New York state. Rev. Samuel B. Groves, M. A., and wife taught last year in Greensburg College, in Kentucky. Together with the strong board of trustees, the school promises well.

PROGRAM

Of Sunday School Convention, Maplesville District, Beats 7 and 8—Will Convene at Mt. Carmel Fifth Sunday in September, 1906.

9:30 a. m. Devotional exercise—J. T. Adams.

10 a. m. Relation of Sunday school to the church.

10:30 a. m. Home Department—S. R. Barnes and W. H. Connell.

11 a. m. Convention recites Sunday school lesson.

12 m. Dinner.

1:30 p. m. Song service.

2 p. m. Reports from Sunday schools.

2:30 p. m. "The Good of Sunday School Convention Work"—H. J. Grooms and P. G. Maness.

3 p. m. "Characteristics of the Good Sunday School Teacher"—Jeff Deason and T. F. Davis.

3:30 p. m. Adjourn.

T. G. MILLING, President.
AI. VAN MARTER,
Vice-President.
MISS MOLLIE REYNOLDS,
tf Secretary.

MONEY TO LOAN

On real estate. Call or write me at my abiding place with Mr. G. G. Foshee, one mile northeast of Clanton, R. F. D. No. 1. Come during banking hours, as I keep my money in the bank.
tf JAMES GLASS.

FOR SHERIFF.

I hereby announce myself a candidate for sheriff of Chilton county, subject to the action of the people at the November election, 1906.

ROLLEFFE BATES.
adv (tf)

FOR SALE.

Mare mule, 8 years old; fine animal, and will work anywhere you put her. Price, $150. I live three miles west of Jemison, on R. F. D. No. 1.
tf E. M. RAY.

NOTICE.

Blank Deeds, Mortgages, and all official forms for Justices of the Peace, etc., for sale at The Union Office. Only best approved forms are used. Come in and give us your order tf.

FOR SALE.

30 young cockerels. Silver Spangled Hamburgs, Golden Laced Wyandotts, Buff, Brown and White Leghorns. Prices 50c to $1.50. All birds pure bred and of good quality.

J. B. Downs,
tf Clanton, Ala.

GINNING SFASON 1906-7
We have engaged Joe and Walter Maddox to run and operate our gins for the coming season. We have the best machinery and with these men to operate it, we can guarantee entire satisfaction to those who patronize us. Bring us your cotton.
Respectfully
Chilton Warehouse & M,f,g. Company. tf.

FOR SALE

At all times, high grade hogs and pigs, Berkshire and Poland China, crossed.

M. J. BARRETT,
tf Thorsby, Ala.

FOR SALE!

300 acres land, 150 acres in cultivation. All in Sec. 6 T., 20, R., 14, 9 miles S. W. of Clanton. Good dwelling house and out buildings and 3 good tenant houses. Good and lasting well of water. This good farming land will be sold at a bargain. Call and see,

tf J. H. CARTER,
Clanton, R. F. D. No.

WATSON'S MAGAZ...

The leading exponent of ... Democracy, edited by Hon. ... Watson, of Georgia, the Father ... Free Delivery; author of "... of France," "Life of Napo... and Times of Thomas ... "Bethany" and other ... son was the People's pa... Vice-President in 1896, and ... dent in 1904. He is today ... middle-class reform move... is bound to sweep the coun... short time.

Watson's Magazine is not a ... publication. It does not stand ... lective ownership of all the ... production. Mr. Watson be... public or government owner... railroads, telegraphs and ... in municipal ownership of ... ways, gas electric lights, ... etc.; and he believes in private ... ship of all industries not ... nopolies.

The middle class—the home ... farmers, small business men and ... erty owners—won Jefferson's ... in 1800; won Jackson's victory ... Nick Biddle's money power ... won Lincoln's victory in 186... each time after the flush of ... had died away they became ... of their rights and went to sleep ... have slept a good portion of the ... since 1865, but—

Watson's Magazine is waking ... up. Another great victory is in ... Keep in touch with the move...

Fifteen cents a copy at news ... $1.50 a year by mail. Sample ... four 2-cent stamps and four ... reading friends. Address,

TOM WATSON'S MAGAZINE
121 West Forty second St...
New York

SPECIAL CLUBBING RATE:
WATSON'S MAGAZINE AND ... UNION A YEAR FOR ONLY ...
WHY NOT SAVE THE 75 CE...
LEAVE ORDERS AT THIS OFFI...
tf

PROGRAM OF THE DISTRICT SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENT...

Of the First District of Chilton C... ty, to Be Held at the Jemison ... tist Church on the Fourth ... in September, 1906.

9:30 a. m. Devotional exercises ... ducted by W. H. Conway.

9:45 a. m. Welcome address ... Caddell.

9:50 a. m. Response, John ...

9:55 a. m. Music.

10 a. m. "The Growth of the ... School Work," J. H. Anderson ... H. Conway.

10:30 a. m. Music.

10:40 a. m. "The Sunday Scho... a Character Builder."

11 a. m. "The Influence of the ... day School for Good." Judge ... Reynolds and others.

11:30 a. m. "Reasons Why ... Do Not Attend Sunday School," ... W. J. Parrish and E. G. Cofer.

2 p. m. Song and prayer; song.

2:10 p. m. "The Ideal ... School Teacher." Papers by ... Nelia Johnson, Miss Delphia ... and Miss Pearl Meroney.

2:40 p. m. "Problems in My Sc... J. W. F. Garner, G. W. Gothard ... Skaggs and others.

3:10 p. m. Music.

3:20 p. m. "Relation of the Su... School to the Church." C. L. ... cock, J. P. Gentry and others.

3:50 p. m. Dismission.

tf COMMITTEE.

THE NEW YORK WORLD

Thrice-a-Week Edition.

Read Wherever the English Lan... Is Spoken.

The Thrice-a-Week World hop... be in 1906 a better paper than ... ever been before, and it has made ... arrangements accordingly. Its ... service covers the entire globe ... reports everything fully, promptly ... accurately. It is the only paper ... daily, which is as good as a daily ... which will keep you as completely ... formed of what is happening thr... out the world.

The Thrice-a-Week World is fa... its political reports. You can get ... truth from its columns, whether ... are Republican or Democrat, and ... as what you want.

A special feature of the Thrice-... Week World has always been ... rial fiction. It publishes novels ... the best authors in the world, ... which in book form sell for $1.50 ... and its high standard in this re... will be maintained in the future as ... the past.

The THRICE-A-WEEK WORLD ... regular subscription price is only $1 ... per year, and this pays for 156 pa... We offer this unequaled newspa... and THE UNION together for one ... for $1.50.

The regular subscription price of ... two papers is $2.00.

JOHN W. HARRELL

Jemison, Ala.

Photographer. Dealer ... all grades of enlarg... Frames made to or... Work done at your ... home by appointment

WATSON'S MAGA

The leading exponent of ... Democracy, edited by Hon. ... Watson, of Georgia, the Father ... Free Delivery; author of "The ... of France," "Life of Napoleon," ... and Times of Thomas ..., "Bethany" and other ... son was the People's pa... Vice-President in 1896, and for ... dent in 1904. He is today ... middle-class reform movement ... is bound to sweep the country ... short time.

Watson's Magazine is not a ... publication. It does not stand ... lective ownership of all the ... production. Mr. Watson believes ... public or government ownership ... railroads, telegraphs and telephones ... in municipal ownership of street ... ways, gas electric lights, water ... etc.; and he believes in private ... ship of all industries not natural ... nopolies.

The middle class—the home ... farmers, small business men and ... erty owners—won Jefferson's victory ... in 1800; won Jackson's victory ... Nick Biddle's money power in ... won Lincoln's victory in 1860, ... each time after the flush of victory ... had died away they became careless ... of their rights and went to sleep. ... have slept a good portion of the time ... since 1865, but—

Watson's Magazine is waking ... up. Another great victory is in the ... Keep in touch with the movement.

Fifteen cents a copy at news stands. ... $1.50 a year by mail. Sample copy ... four 2-cent stamps and four names of ... reading friends. Address,

TOM WATSON'S MAGAZINE,
121 West Forty-second Street,
New York City.

SPECIAL CLUBBING RATE.
WATSON'S MAGAZINE AND THE ... UNION A YEAR FOR ONLY $1.50. ... WHY NOT SAVE THE 75 CENTS? ... LEAVE ORDERS AT THIS OFFICE.
tf

PROGRAM OF THE DISTRICT SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION

Of the First District of Chilton County, to Be Held at the Jemison Baptist Church on the Fourth Sunday in September, 1906.

9:30 a. m. Devotional exercises, conducted by W. H. Conway.
9:45 a. m. Welcome address, J. ... Caddell.
9:50 a. m. Response, John Bl...
9:55 a. m. Music.
10 a. m. "The Growth of the Sunday School Work," J. H. Anderson and H. Conway.
10:30 a. m. Music.
10:40 a. m. "The Sunday School a Character Builder."
11 a. m. "The Influence of the Sunday School for Good," Judge L. Reynolds and others.
11:30 a. m. "Reasons Why Adults Do Not Attend Sunday School," ... W. J. Parrish and E. G. Cofer.
2 p. m. Song and prayer; song.
2:10 p. m. "The Ideal Sunday School Teacher." Papers by ... Nella Johnson, Miss Delphia Cox and Miss Pearl Meroney.
2:40 p. m. "Problems in My School." J. W. F. Garner, G. W. Gothard, J. ... Skaggs and others.
3:10 p. m. Music.
3:20 p. m. "Relation of the Sunday School to the Church," C. L. Glo... cock, J. P. Gentry and others.
3:50 p. m. Dismission.
tf COMMITTEE.

THE NEW YORK WORLD

Thrice-a-Week Edition.

Read Wherever the English Language Is Spoken.

The Thrice-a-Week World hopes ... be in 1906 a better paper than it ... ever been before, and it has made ... arrangements accordingly. Its ... service covers the entire globe, and ... reports everything fully, promptly ... accurately. It is the only paper, ... daily, which is as good as a daily, ... which will keep you as completely ... formed of what is happening thro... out the world.

The Thrice-a-Week World is fair ... its political reports. You can get ... truth from its columns, whether ... are Republican or Democrat, and ... as what you want.

A special feature of the Thrice-a-Week World has always been its ... rial fiction. It publishes novels ... the best authors in the world, now ... which in book form sell for $1.00 ... and its high standard in this re... will be maintained in the future as ... the past.

The THRICE-A-WEEK WORLD ... regular subscription price is only $1 ... per year, and this pays for 156 pap... We offer this unequaled newspa... and THE UNION together for one ... for $1.50.

The regular subscription price of ... two papers is $2.00.

JOHN W. HARRELL

Jemison, Ala.

Photographer. Dealer in ... all grades of enlarge... Frames made to ord... Work done at your ... home by appointment.

COUNTY AND COUNTY OFFICIALS

Circuit Court.
... Term—Third Monday in May.
... Term—Fourth Monday in Nov.
... L. Brewer, Tuskegee.
... B. Bowling, Dadeville.
... Collins.

Chancery Court.
... Term—Second Monday in ...
... Term—Second Monday in Sept...
...ellor—Hon. W. W. Whitehead, ...
...—Mrs. S. A. Stewart, Clanton.

County Court.
... Monday in each month.

Commissioners' Court.
... Monday February, first Monday April, first Monday June, second Monday July, second Monday August, first Monday November.

COUNTY OFFICERS.
... of Probate—L. H. Reynolds.
...—W. T. Callen.
...—J. M. Morgan.
...—W. M. Adams.
... Assessor—L. B. Pounds.
... Collector—T. J. Hubbard.

County Commissioners.
... District—W. H. Conway.
... District—Alex Glasscock.
... District—R. P. Kendrick.
... District—Moses Robinson.

Supt. of Education.
... J. W. Moore, Clanton.

County Surveyor.
... R. Dahl, Calera.

State Senator.
... W. R. Oliver, Calera.

COUNTY CHURCHES.

MISSIONARY BAPTIST.

...THANY—Rev. J. L. Neeley, pas... First Sunday and Saturday be... D. L. Hand, clerk.

...TH-SALEM—Rev. M. J. Parrish, ... E. B. Popwell, clerk.

...E CREEK—Rev. J. L. Busbey, ... First Sunday and Saturday ... W. E. Thomas, clerk.

...LINS CHAPEL—Rev. J. H. ..., pastor. Third Sunday and ...day before. J. D. Collins, clerk.

...ARS HILL—Rev. J. H. Thomas, ... First Sunday and Saturday ... G. W. Scott, clerk.

...ACEDONIA—Rev. J. H. Thomas, ... Fourth Sunday and Saturday ...at 3:30 p. m. H. H. Armstrong, ...

...LEASANT GROVE—Rev. J. H. ..., pastor. Fourth Sunday and ...day before at 11 a. m. D. H. ..., clerk.

...OVIDENCE—Rev. W. W. Robin... ...pastor. Second Sunday and Sat... ...before. Riley Robinson, clerk.

...HOBOTH (Bibb Co.)—Rev. J. H. ..., pastor. Second Sunday and ...day before. D. C. Smitherman, ...

PRIMITIVE BAPTIST.

...HEL—Elder J. P. Mobles, pas... Second Sunday and Saturday be... J. T. Abernathy, clerk.

METHODIST EPISCOPAL.

...OWY MOUNT—Rev. A. T. Van... ...pastor. Second Sunday. Sing... ...every second and fourth Sunday ...noon. Prayer meeting every Wed... ...night. Ladies' prayer meeting ...Saturday afternoon.

FRATERNAL SOCIETIES.

Masonic.

...on R. A. Chapter, No. 116—... ...Saturday, Clanton.

...ade Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No. ...Fourth Saturday, Cooper.

...ton Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No. ...First Saturday, Clanton.

...ory Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No. ...First Saturday, Billingsley.

...an Lodge, A. F. and A. M., ...—Saturday on or before full ... Marbury.

...ton Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No. ...Saturday on or before full moon, ...

...ton Lodge, A. F. and A. M., No. ...Tuesday on or before full moon, ...

I. O. O. F.

...ton Lodge—First and third Sat... ...

...ton Lodge, No. 364—Second and ... Saturdays.

Woodmen of the World.

...h Jack Camp, No. 190—First and ... Mondays.

I. O. R. M.

...erse Tribe, No. 90—First and ... Mondays sleep. Visiting chiefs ...ly invited. E. B. Langston, C. ... J. M. Patton, Sachem.

...ton Tribe No. 43—2nd and 4th ...ys sleep. Visiting chiefs cor... ...invited. J. M. Grant, Sachem; ...Parish, C. of R.

F. E. & C. U. OF A.

Chilton Co. Division Officers.

J. H. Thomas, President, Jemison, Rte. 1.
J. W. Hayes, Vice Pres., Thorsby, Rte 1.
J. N. Dennis, Sec-Treas., Clanton, Rte 6.
G. W. Thomas, Chaplain, Clanton, Rte 2.
J. W. Sorrell, Bus. Agent, Jemison, Rte 4.
C. N. Eiland, Lecturer, Clanton, Rte 4.
N. A. Bobbs, Asst. Lect., Clanton, Rte 3.
W. J. Bean, Conductor, Clanton, Rte 4.
W. F. Culpepper, Doorkeeper, Clanton, Rte 3.
W. A. Barnett, Ex. Committee, Jemison, Rte 2.
E. H. Mims, Ex. Committee, Clanton, Rte 1.
J. Wiley Foshee, Ex. Committee, Clanton, Rte 4.

NOTICE TO SINGERS.

There is to be a called meeting of the old Southern Union Singing Convention, to be held at Corinth Church (five miles east of Verbena) on Saturday before the fifth Sunday in September at 10 a. m. All singers are invited to come and bring your books and baskets. Now, we want it understood that we want all leaders unhampered as to what books we use, leaving it to the leaders to use such books as they see fit. Devotional exercises Saturday at 10 a. m. conducted by E. L. Jones. Welcome address, Rev. E. L. Manning; response, R. T. Grant. Formers officers were W. H. Robinson, president, and Joe Goss, secretary. tf

NOTICE TO LAND-OWNERS.

I wish to say that I am preparing maps or plats of each land-owner's property, giving a written description of the land, as it should be described in assessments. I am preparing these plats for the purpose of getting all errors corrected, and at the same time furnish every party an easy and correct way to keep their property correct and avoid future mistakes and annoyance, as well as (sometimes) considerable expense. These plats are made of excellent bond paper and will last a lifetime, and only cost 25 cents each, except where plats are very large, when they will cost 50 cents. Every one that has seen the plats I am making pronounce them splendid and worth many times their cost and well calculated to save their cost many times over. Any one wishing a plat can obtain it by coming to my office in Clanton with their deeds, so as to insure an accurate description.

L. B. POUNDS,
tf Tax Assessor.

TEACHER WANTED.

In Union Point School District No. 44, for a five (5) months school. Apply to JOHN S. DENNIS, J. P.
tf.

UNION LECTURES.

I will lecture at Poplar Springs local September 8 at 2 p. m; Stanton September 15 at 1:30 p. m.; Pilgrim's Rest September 15 at 7:30 p. m. Fraternally yours, C. N. EILAND.
tf

STRAYED OR STOLEN.

From near my residence on June 25, one iron gray mare colt, one year old; one iron gray horse colt, with star on face, and scar on left hind leg above hock, one and a half years old. Any information leading to their recovery will be liberally rewarded.

C. C. MARTIN,
tf Calera, Ala., Rte 1.

SPECIAL OFFER! !

The Union, Weekly Montgomery Advertiser, and a great white and black map of Alabama, United States and world, three in one, with a picture of every president from Washington to Roosevelt, all for $1.50.

REGISTRATION NOTICE.

Beat No. 4, at Clanton, on Sept. 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 1906, for the purpose of registering voters.

Beat No. 4, at Clanton, on Friday and Saturday before the election in November, 1906.

R. H. GAINES,
B. L. JONES,
P. M. MOORE,
Board of Registrars Chilton County.
tf

NOTICE.

Jemison, Ala., August 7th, 1906.

Lost—One light clay bank mare, branded on the left shoulder with a heart; the last time heard from she was at Ashby; she weighs about 700 pounds. I will reware any one liberally for information as to where she is, or if returned to me, I will pay well for the trouble.

T. S. DAVENPORT,
tf Jemison, Ala.

CLANTON COTTON MARKET.

Total Receipts to Sept. 12, 1906..	76
Price same date	9 1-8
Receipts same time in 1905.....	602
Price same date	9 7-8

Speaking.

Judge Reynolds and Hon. J. Osmond Middleton will address the People at Bethel (Beat 10) at 7:30 p. m. Saturday, September 15th. Everybody is invited, especially the ladies.

PERSONAL AND LOCAL.

Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Wheelock, of Fixico, were guests at the Hotel Wilson over Sunday. Monday morning Mrs. Wheelock returned to Talladega Springs, where she has a cottage for the summer, and Mr. Wheelock went back to his graphite mine at Fixico. Mrs. Wheelock is the daughter of Capt. H. W. Pond, of Coosa county, well known for his staunch Republicanism. Mr. and Mrs. Wheelock are desirous of securing better school facilities for their children and are now comparing the merits of Clanton and Thorsby as to schools.

The hardware store run by Messrs Spigener & Jones calls your attention to their "ad." in The Union, which mentions a few of the many desirable articles they have to sell you. Mr. "Jim" Middleton is with this firm and our people can feel assured that they will be well attended to when they call at the store.

R. E. L. Ward and M. O. Culp were Clanton visitors Saturday.

J. W. Patterson and son, L. B., were in town Saturday. Mr. Patterson says his sister-in-law, Mrs. Laura Patterson, is quite ill.

W. R. Taylor, A. M., and A. P. Payton were in Clanton Saturday.

John Parrish was a pleasant visitor Saturday.

J. M. Maddox went to Birmingham last week and adopted a little boy about 5 years old. This makes two children that Mr. Maddox has given a good home to, he having adopted a girl about 11 years of age some three weeks ago. This is true philanthropy and beats "talk" all to bits. We congratulate you, J. M.

L. B. Pounds went to Talladega last week and placed his son, Lewis (who is a deaf mute) in the deaf mute school at that town.

G. H. Gerald and Prof. W. J. Lamkie, principal of Thorsby Institute, were in Clanton Monday. The institute will open Monday, the 17th, under very flattering auspices, and bids fair to be a great success in the line of education.

Clanton High School opened Monday, the 10th, with 112 pupils as a starter. More are expected.

J. M. Grant, who has been very ill with fever, is said to be improving slowly, and we trust he will soon be out and about again.

Judge Reynolds spent Monday and Monday night in Montgomery, watching the Democratic convention circus.

W. J. Williams, of Billingsley, was in town Tuesday.

N. W. Wilson, of Birmingham, a nephew of W. M. and P. D. Wilson was killed by the cars on the Louisville and Nashville railroad, where he was employed, Monday. His remains were brought to Clanton Tuesday and interred in the cemetery Wednesday morning. Mr. Wilson was about 35 years of age and leaves a widow and two little daughters. Mrs. Wilson was formerly a Miss Watts a sister of Mrs. W. H. Sarter, of Clanton.

W. M. Wilson, proprietor of the Hotel Wilson, who has been quite ill, is convalescing very rapidly, and is again on hand to welcome his numerous guests.

John W. Hays and Frank Price left Thorsby Wednesday morning with Mack Price, taking him to Tuscaloosa for treatment.

On Monday two prominent citizens of Thorsby died, viz., Messrs. Langville and Hawthorne. Mr. Axel Langville has been a resident of Thorsby for ten years, and as head of the firm of A. Langville & Son had a large acquaintance among our people. He was an industrious man and a good citizen. Mr. Hawthorne was a comparatively new comer to our county, but was much esteemed by many people. May they both "rest in peace."

MARRIAGE LICENSES.

C. B. Owen and Miss Maudie Rainwater; David Curlee and Miss Lillie Nix.

Colored.

Abram Harris and Mellee Herd.

MT. PLEASANT (BEAT 1).

Editor Union:

Just a few words about our meeting. We had an old-time meeting last night; some of the congregation laughed and talked while the preacher tried to preach to them about their souls. Look out, Judge Reynolds, have your pen ready, for some of the boys are acting bad around the church house.

ONE OF THE BOYS.

TAX NOTICE

Tax Assessor's and Collector's First Round.

We will attend at the following times and places for the purpose of collecting the State and County Taxes of Chilton County for the year 1906 and assessing the taxes for the year 1907:

	1906.
Kincheon, Beat 6	Oct. 1
Pletcher, Beat 8	Oct. 2
Stanton, Beat 8	Oct. 3
Shoults, Beat 7	Oct. 4
Maplesville, Beat 7	Oct. 5
Benson, Beat 3	Oct. 6
Macedonia, Beat 3	Oct. 8
Providence, Beat 2	Oct. 9
Jemison, Beat 2	Oct. 10
Mineral Springs, Beat 1.....	Oct. 11
Flint Hill, Beat 11.....	Oct. 12
Cane Creek, Beat 4, until 12 m	Oct. 13
Thorsby, Beat 9.....	Oct. 15
Clanton, Beat 4	Oct. 16
Cooper, Beat 10	Oct. 17
Verbena, Beat 5.....	Oct. 18

L. B. POUNDS,
Tax Assessor.
T. J. HUBBARD,
tf Tax Collector.

The State of Alabama, Chilton County.

J. P. Van Derveer, Plaintiff, vs. National Stamping and Electric Works, a Corporation, Defendant. In the Circuit Court of Chilton County, Alabama.

To National Stamping and Electric Works, a corporation, the defendant in the above stated cause, who resides in the city of Chicago, in the State of Illinois, U. S.A.:

You will take notice that J. P. Van Derveer, plaintiff in said cause, sued out an attachment against you, the said National Stamping and Electric Works, a corporation, on the 24th day of July, 1906, in the said court, to enforce the collection of a debt due him by you in the sum of $750, with interest thereon at 8 per cent per annum.

You will further take notice that the said attachment was levied upon the following property-towit: Six (6) transformers, two (2) bundles of transformer hangers, one (7) box of electric goods, six (6) boxes of electric fan motors, twenty-five (25) rolls or coils of rubber and weather-proof insulated copper electric wire, as the property of the said National Stamping and Electric Works, a corporation, the defendant, by the sheriff of said Chilton county, on the 25th day of July, 1906, and that on said 25th day of July, 1906, a writ of garnishment was duly served upon the Louisville and Nashville Railroad Company, a corporation, by the said sheriff, in the above stated cause.

Let this notice be published in The Union, a weekly newspaper published in said Chilton county, for three successive weeks next following, and a copy of each issue of the said newspaper containing said notice be sent by mail to said National Stamping and Electric Works, a corporation, the defendant, properly addressed and postage prepaid.

Witness my hand this the 5th day of September, 1906.

SAM W. COLLINS,
Clerk of the Circuit Court, Chilton County, Alabama. 9-6-06-3w

BUSINESS PROPOSITION

The best whiskey in the country is here. If you don't believe it, try me.

J. M. COLLINS,
Palace Saloon, Calera, Ala.
tf,

JACKSON'S CHAPEL SCHOOL HOUSE.

Lomax Local, F. E. & C. U. of A., will be addressed by Rev. M. F. Lett on the second Saturday afternoon in September (8th). Mr. Lett will preach at the chapel that night and the next day (Sunday). tf

Thorsby Institute

—Opens—

SEPTEMBER 17th, 1906.

A Strong Corps of Teachers.

CURRICULUM:

Sciences, Classics, Modern Languages, Histories, Economics, Music, Elocution, etc.

PREPARES FOR COLLEGE:

Prepares those who care to go no higher. Broad enough for all. Allows for specialization.

BUILDINGS:

Well equipped, modern, up to date in every particular.

EXPENSES:

Tuition low enough to meet the needs of every boy and girl in Alabama.

Particulars Address:

W. J. Lamkie, Ph. B., Principal,
Thorsby, Ala.

Fall and Winter Hardware

Heating Stoves, Coal Hods, Tongs, Pokers, Coal Vases, Fire Guards, Window Panes and Putty, PIPE AND FITTING.

Can secure repairs for machinery from us much cheaper and in less time than from Birmingham or Montgomery. We carry Inspirators, Lubricators, Glass Oil Cups, Check and Globe Valves, Jets, Packing, Rubber Belting and Gandy Stitched Belt, Engine and Cylinder Oil, Axle Oil and Axle Grease.

ROOFING.

We have in stock Galvanized and Iron Roofing, and our price will make this roofing cheaper for you than shingles, and is much easier to put in use.

PAINTS.

The Hammar Paint and Sun Proof Paint are as good as any on the market. We have pure Linseed Oil and Lead, and if you prefer to do your own mixing, we are prepared to furnish you the necessary coloring.

BUILDERS' HARDWARE.

We can save you money on this line. Have a full stock of Sash, Doors and Blinds, Locks, Hinges and Sash Cord. Call on us for prices before placing your order.

SPIGENER & JONES

HARDWARE STORE

Clanton, Alabama.

E. G. Rollins & Co.

—DEALERS IN—

General Merchandise, Clothing, Shoes and Fancy Groceries.

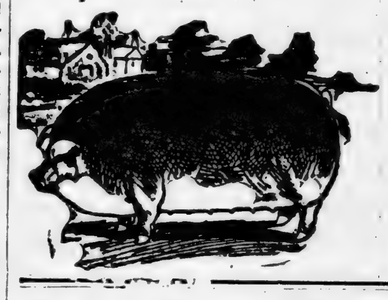
CLANTON, :-: ALABAMA.

WOODLAWN FARM.

Barred Plymouth Rocks

PURE BRED

Setting of 15 fresh eggs for 50c. Packing for shipping 10c extra.



PURE BRED

Duroc Jersey Hogs.

Write us for prices before you buy. Address,

W. Y. NIX,
Maplesville, Alabama.

A. A. JACKSON

Lomax, Alabama.

General merchandise, corn, hay, shorts, shoes, men's hats, Ladies hats. Best quality and lowest prices in all goods.

Highest Market Price Paid for Chickens and Eggs

Cor. 2nd Ave and 7th St. THE BIG STORE, Cor. 2nd Ave and 7th St.

—Is at The Head of The Procession.—

Dry Goods, Clothing, Hats, Shoes, FURNITURE,

COFFINS AND BURIAL NECESSITIES.

W. I. MULLINS,

Clanton, Alabama

Bank Saloon

CALERA, ALA.

Fine Wines, Whiskies, Brandies, Beer, Cigars and Tobacco

THE CANDY HEART.

From out her little dinner pail
She took a cookie plump and brown;
She slipped it underneath my desk—
And I, a humpkin and a clown,
Forthwith proceeded to excite
My appetite and dull its smart;
But ere I got it out of sight
I saw it was a candy heart

Ah! Worn [illegible] curl
Made [illegible]
She [illegible]
To [illegible]
At [illegible]
And [illegible]
Broke [illegible]
And [illegible]

And when the daily lessons were
All said and done and put away,
And we strolled hand in hand along
The maple lane at close of day—
We leaned upon the rustic rail
To watch the rivulets below
Scatter their bubbles in the trail
Of the pale moonlight's silver glow.

To-night the little candy heart
I find among my treasures;
A something sacred, ah! it seems
To me a kiss from paradise.
A candy heart, a golden tress.
Ah! as my fingers gently twine
The silken curl with soft caress,
My lips trace sigh: "Sweetheart of mine."
—Horace Seymour Keller.

"LOST AND FOUND."

(By HERO STRONG.)

She sat on the shore of the sea and idly threw pebbles into the surf, as it beat up the rocks and almost washed her feet.

The sun was going down in a mass of lurid red clouds; the eastern breeze was freshening along the bluffs, and now and then a stray drop of rain fell on her.

Geraldine Vane drew her shawl closer around her, with an involuntary shiver. Something there was in the night closing around which reminded her of a dead day.

Her mind went back to the time with a throb of pain. She would gladly have avoided the retrospect—but who can control thought?

Eleven years ago she was sixteen. What an old, old woman she must be going now! She stretched out her hand through the shadows and looked at it earnestly, half expecting to see it wrinkled and withered like old Grandmother Hoit's, and she was upward of ninety.

Eleven years ago she had walked these very sands, just as golden now as then—just so the summer waves had broken their hearts in music on the shore, just so the salt sea-breeze had kissed her cheek and tossed the rocks outside the harbor.

But then Thane Richmond was beside her, and youth, and hope, and love were hers, to say nothing of a world which was perfect. What more could a woman ask for?

They were a pair of lovers just betrothed, loving each other as no other lovers had ever loved before—so they said and thought, and it was very real to them, and wondrous sweet, as it always is when the dream is new.

But, after all, there was some cause of sadness; and when would love be love if there were not? Richmond was to leave her in a week for China, to be absent three years; for his future was yet to make, and he was too proud a lad to accept a wife whose possessions were greater than his own. Geraldine was an heiress, so it was out of the question to marry nothing, and live on cheese-parings and kisses in a vine-cottage, as both the young people would have been glad to do.

Colonel Varley, Geraldine's father, was a high-bred old fellow, and he had said to audacious young Thane Richmond, when he had asked him for his daughter:

"See here, young man! Money is the thing needed nowadays, and my daughter has always worn her diamonds and ridden in her carriage. She must not marry beneath her. When you can come to me with a fortune sufficient to support a wife and keep her in the gewgaws that a woman finds necessary now, Geraldine is yours; that is, if she has not changed her mind and married somebody with a fortune ready-made."

All of which was very cruel in the unsympathetic parent, but the parents of heroines have always been made of stern stuff, you know.

So it was decreed that Thane Richmond should go out and seek his fortune among the Celestials, and Geraldine was to go to Paris and finish her education.

Far they were to write—so very often—twice or thrice a week, which was very moderate for lovers; and, beside the sea, with the dim light of the stars around them, one night in June, they said their farewells and vowed to be true.

The lonely woman sitting there to-night on the shore, and going back over the ways she had traveled, drew a sigh—something of the tenderness of that olden time lingered with her still, and flushed her pale cheek with a soft, bright crimson.

But to return.

For two years after Thane's departure his letters had been regular, and they had satisfied the heart of the woman who had loved him, and not one man in a hundred, no matter how loyal and tender, can write a letter of love which will just meet the requirements of a loving woman's nature without being silly.

At the end of this time the letters stopped. No word of explanation—nothing to break the dull suspense which is always so hard to bear.

Geraldine, proud though she was, wrote to Thane to ask the cause of his strange silence. She received in return a few brief lines: he was weary of a youthful folly, asked her to forget him, and volunteered the information that he was soon to be married to the daughter of an attache of the American legation at Pekin.

Well, such breaks as this are happening all the time around us; they are common as births and deaths, and excite about as much attention. The world does not suffer the anguish of heart which sometimes comes of these to people so unfortunate as to be possessed of feelings; and so the world wags on as ever.

Geraldine was one of those wretched women who cannot transfer their affections as one would transfer a house or other piece of property, and in consequence she suffered deeply.

Loving once with her was loving for all time, and though she had suitors by the score—as what beautiful and wealthy woman has not?—she turned from them all in quiet coldness?

After a while Colonel Varley took the matter in hand. No daughter of his should pine her life away for a beggarly rascal like Thane Richmond, he said, and Geraldine was commanded to marry Archibald Vane, at that time the wealthiest and most devoted of her admirers. She demurred. She told Vane plainly that she should never love again; but he was deeply infatuated, and would risk anything for the sake of possessing her.

So they were married.

Mr. Vane's wife was the envy and admiration of all the country round about Templemore. Her house was a palace—everything about it was superb in its appointments; she had not a wish ungratified, and her husband was as devoted as a lover.

But Geraldine never varied from the cold stateliness, which had fallen on her like a mantle at the altar.

Often and often the kind, honest heart of her husband ached for one loving word from the cold lips whose kisses he would have died for; but he was true to his agreement—he never complained, and he did not try to force her love.

When her child—her beautiful little Annie—was born, she softened toward her husband in some slight degree. The new and wonderful happiness which motherhood brought her made her kinder to the father of her child. And poor Vane was raised to a felicity altogether unknown to him when she put the little girl in his arms and suffered him to kiss the white cheek he had dared draw to rest against his shoulder.

As Annie lived and developed character, she was the strangest of all children. Old far beyond her years, lovely in face and gentle in temper, full of quaint sayings, and caring for no playmate but her mother.

As Geraldine sat there on the seashore, thinking over these things I have told you, something crept up beneath her shawl, in the timid, coaxing way one sees sometimes in a pet animal.

Mrs. Vane folded her arms around the little creature, and kissed the upturned white forehead.

"What is it, my darling?" looking down at the serious, questioning face lifted to hers.

"Mamma, tell me truly, is there anything in dreams?"

"My love, do not bother your little head with such idle things. Why do you ask?"

"Because, when you left me asleep, mamma, I dreamed of sinking ships, and sharp rocks that tore the great timbers apart, and then they went down, down, down; and, oh! mamma, I heard the cries of the drowning men, and I saw their dead, pale faces, and papa's among them! And I screamed, and nurse woke me and told me I had only been dreaming!"

In spite of herself, Geraldine shuddered. She was not in any degree superstitious, but there was always something about this child's weird fancies which impressed one. She held the slight form closer to her side, and even as she did so, far off over the waters came the dull boom of a gun!

"It is the ship! And they will be drowned!" cried Annie, starting up. "See, see! It is on fire, and it is floating in on the rocks below Eggstone light!"

The child spoke truly. A great ship—an ocean steamer—wrapped in flame and smoke, was drifting shoreward. A projecting point of land just then hid the steamer partially from view.

Annie sprang forward down the rocks like a cat, from one rock to another, until she was yards from the shore, and the incoming tide, now growing fierce and angry, was beating around her. Geraldine followed with terror in her heart.

Drenched with spray, the child was clinging to a pointed rock, leaning over with wild, fascinated eyes fixed on the burning ship.

"It is my dream over again!" she said, solemnly.

Geraldine gathered the child in her arms, and all unmindful that the tide was cutting them hopelessly off from the shore, she watched the fated ship.

One mass of lurid flame, her scorching sides hung with fated human beings; even there she could hear their vain cries for assistance.

Suddenly the blazing hulk reeled and shuddered; for an instant the flames seemed to die away, and the smoke lowered its blood-red banner; then all waters for fathoms around seemed to scintillate with liquid fire! One fearful plunge forward the ship gave, one cry of mortal despair went up to the black heavens, and the tide rushed in like squadrons of white horses, each eager to win the race!

It was all over and the waters were full of despairing, dying men fighting vainly for that which was lost to them forever—life!

Toward the rock where Geraldine and her child still clung, drifted one of the ill-starred vessel's passengers. One arm disabled by a blow from some of the burning rigging, he was fast losing strength to battle with the waves, and death was very near him. The woman tore off her silken scarf and flung it toward him. Fate permitted him to catch it, and she drew him to the rock!

It was yet light enough to see, and on that narrow shelf of rock, growing narrower every moment, for the first time in eleven years Thane Richmond and Geraldine Vane stood face to face!

Both were pale—both were deadly calm. He held out his right hand, and she touched it lightly with hers.

"Geraldine," he said, as if they had been parted only a day, "we shall perish here. Let us have no pride between us. You thought me false, and so married another man?"

"Yes."

"You were deceived. I know you will believe what I say. An English lady of rank did me the honor to prefer me; and she it was who, learning of my love for you, intercepted our letters, wrote the cruel note of renunciation which you received, and showed me the notice of your marriage. Seven weeks ago she died, confessing all her duplicity, and that day I left China to seek you and tell you the truth."

"I am married!"

"Yes, I know it; but now it matters little. Another moment, and we shall be washed from the rocks. It cannot be wrong now! Surely not! Look in my eyes Geraldine, and tell me that in all these years your heart has been mine, as mine has been yours!"

She looked in his eyes, and bowed her head slowly, her face crimsoning even there, with death so near her.

A sharp voice at her side brought her back to herself. She saw her husband by the side of the rock, balancing himself in a frail boat, which it seemed every dash of the waves would break in twain.

One glance at his pale, set face showed Geraldine that he recognized her old love. But Richmond gave no word of salutation. His injured arm was bleeding fast, his strength was ebbing; his head fell on his breast, and but for the frenzied hand of Geraldine, he would have been swept away by the tide, which now beat over the rock.

Archibald Vane's voice was cool, calm, and distinct.

"I saw you from the shore, Geraldine," he said, "and came to the rescue. My boat will hold but two. You have never loved me, but I have lived in loving you. I will prove it!"

He reached over and lifted the limp body into the boat. Then he put Geraldine beside him, and gave her the oars.

"You can steer," he said. "You will be saved—you and he! I will save our little Annie if it lies in man's power. If not, Heaven's will be done!"

He leaned over and kissed the white hand his wife stretched out to toward him in wild entreaty.

The boat shot away on the tide; the words she uttered were all unheard by Archibald Vane, as, clasping his child to his breast, he dared the fury of the waves!

They found him a mile further down the coast, in the early morning, a smile on his white face, and little Annie lying against his heart. They had died together.

Geraldine's boat reached the shore, and both she and Thane Richmond were saved.

It was weeks before she knew of aught passing around her, for the shock of Annie's death had been too much for her.

When she remembered it all, perhaps she was nearer to loving Archibald Vane than she had ever been before.

Richmond went away, and was gone two years. He owed that much to the memory of the man who had saved his life in preference to his own.

And when he came back, could the world blame Thane and Geraldine if they made each other's life happy?—New York Weekly.

Diamonds.

The output of the De Beers consolidated diamond mines in the last thirty years, is valued at the enormous sum of $450,000,000, but it is explained that this is a restricted output and may represent but a small part of the productive capacity of the mines under full operation. However, it is known that in 1901 the De Beers company realized more than $23,000,000 from the sale of rough diamonds, and in that year the value of diamonds imported into the United States was something more than $18,000,000. It is claimed that most of the South American diamonds find a market in this country, which has contributed more than any other to the colossal estate left by Alfred Beit. A few months ago one of the officials of the Treasury Department at Washington estimated that the United States purchases at least three-fourths of the world's production of cut diamonds, and at the present time we are buying these stones at the rate of $26,000,000 a year.—New Orleans States.

THE BLACK AMISH OF INDIANA

A Settlement That Bars the Modern—Why the People of Adams County Hate the Threshing Machine—A Stern, Strait Sect That Frowns on Art, But Practices Charity.

The steam thrasher "Trusts" have no hold on the conservative "black" Amish settlements of Indiana, in which, it is asserted, says the Fort Wayne correspondent of the Indianapolis News, that the world is flat instead of round; that man has no right to work God's winds by the use of windmills, and where the devil is said to be in steam and in man's modern devices. The thrashing season has just begun in this section of the State, and in the conservative "black" Amish settlements, which are strung in spots from Troy, O., to Elkhart, Ind., one can witness the sights of several decades ago—thrashing by horsepower.

The harvest of the grain in these settlements was equally as interesting. The wheat was all cut by machines that were free from the self-binding improvements of recent years and it was bound by hand. The men are so firmly grounded in their religious convictions against the new, quick, "devilish" order of things wear long beards and long hair that have not been profaned by the use of shears or clippers, and they dress in coarse garments of black or work garments of a yellowish brown cast. These garments are made without the use of the sewing machine—are, if possible, they are made of cloth that has not been woven in a steam loom. Indiana has many interesting queer religious sects, but probably the "black" Amish people are the queerest, and one can see them at this season of the year in their most interesting phases.

They began cutting their wheat two weeks ago, and carefully avoided all of the modern labor-saving machines. They brought out of hiding some of the old-time implements the country at large in its rapid march of progress discarded about six generations ago—those old machines that let the wheat fall on a bed from which, at intervals, it is raked by hand and carefully bound by hand, wheat itself instead of twine being used for the binding.

Now that the thrashing season is on, the conservative "black" Amish as carefully avoids the steam thrasher and is proceeding along equally antiquated lines. He is thrashing by the use of hand and horsepower. He says that the devil himself is in the new devices of man to eliminate work, and the conservative "black" Amish will not be the devil's patron.

Berne, located in Adams County, might be said to be the capital of the "black" Amish belt, and it is around that locality that the most interesting of the old customs and prejudices of the queer lot of people can be observed. They fight anything that in their opinion encourages slothfulness, and, of course, find Biblical support for every one of their firmly grounded convictions against modern methods. They believe that the sewing machine is an invention of the evil powers to tempt women to laziness. They prohibit wind pumps because they believe it wrong for man to have God pump the water for him.

"Devil in Them."

The steam engine and the electric dynamo, both of the great labor savers, are considered the climax of the devil's efforts to commit the flesh to weakness, and no "black" Amish farmer will use a binder, thrasher, or any of the other modern farm implements because "the devil is in them."

They do not believe in a paid ministry, for it is held to be another device of the devil; they do not believe in churches, but like the apostles of old they gather in their upper chambers and worship with the spirit. Whenever the "black" Amish builds a house, he provides at least one big room for Sunday services. Every Sabbath, the "black" Amish of a community gather at the home of one of their number for religious service. Of course, no musical instrument—and certainly not an organ—is used. The singing is all in a nasal tone. The women sit on one side of the room and the men on the other. The host of the day feeds the worshippers and their horses. Beer and wine are used freely, but temperately.

The homes of the "black" Amish are good, substantial ones, and are free from gewgaws or flashy paint—in fact, most of them are either painted a plain white or are not painted at all. They religiously avoid all worldly ostentation and personal glorification.

The men dress in either black or the coarse brownish-yellow cloth in which they work, and the women and children ordinarily dress in blue gingham or calico, or in black. The women wear Quaker bonnets. Even buttons are considered ornamental, and are tabooed, and hooks and eyes are used in their stead. When they ride, they jog along behind animals that are as fat as they can be made, and as "slow as sin," and they will not ride on any wagon or buggy that has easy springs, though some have, in recent years, adopted half-springs that are about equal to no springs.

Though they denounce the steam engine, they will—probably with mental protest—patronize the railroads when going on a long journey. For a short journey they use their springless wagons. Their homes are as severely plain as their garments. They carefully remove all nickel decorations from the stoves that they buy, and most of them use rag carpets.

They refuse to stop work by proclaiming the dinner hour by the means of the good old reliable dinner bell. It is another invention of the evil one to entangle man in the meshes of slothfulness and uselessness. They are all farmers, most of them holding that business and town life are sinful. All of the older ones believe implicitly in a full fraternal hood of mankind, and when one has urgent need of something he does not possess, he goes to his brother's barn or larder, and gets it without asking.

Opposed to Pictures.

They stand out resolutely against the photographer's art—a protest against "graven images"—and pictures of them can be made only when they do not know it. They do not believe in swearing or affirming, and several years ago the State of Indiana had to proceed against some of them at Berne for refusing to make tax returns. Suits were also brought against certain of them for failing to make marriage returns. They read nothing but the Bible, and, most of them being of German or French descent, they hold to the German language. In fact, as soon as the winter public school is over, the schoolhouses are opened again for German school, which lasts through the summer.

Last spring a big public sale was held near Berne, and it was attended by several of the conservative "black" Amish. A photographer was present, and he took several pictures, all of which revealed the conservative Amish in the act of "ducking"—getting out of range of the camera.

It is not known exactly why these conservative churchmen are called "black" Amish. Some say it is because of the monotonous black clothes that men, women, and children wear when they are not at work. Others insist that they are called "black" because their leader is Joseph Schwarts, and Schwartz is the German for black. They were called Schwartz Amish until the word black was substituted for the Schwartz.

The "black" Amish are an offshoot from the Mennonite church. They are, in fact, the last remaining landmark of the old Mennonite church. All of the others seem to have passed on and after a succession of splits, which has resulted in eight or nine various Mennonite churches, the majority of the membership of the Mennonite church is at last thoroughly up to date.

The "black" Amish is that faction which has stood most resolutely against any progressive movement. There are probably less than 2000 of them left, and they are strongest around Berne. The Amish in this country, as a rule, are more progressive and they have windmills and thrash and harvest with modern equipment.

Charitable and Kind.

Queer as they may be, the "black" Amish—as well as all Amish—have many good points. They are frugal, upright, and honest. They are very charitable and kind, except to those who break off from their particular beliefs, and to them they are most relentless—fathers even refusing shelter to children who differ from them. Though men, women and children in their severe costumes look most forbidding and gloomy, they are after all, a happy, contented lot, and are rather free-hearted. They are seen in their lighter moods at marriages, which are celebrated in true old German and French style. A great deal of wine and beer is imbibed.

The great period of festivities is at Christmas, and at that season one again catches a glimpse of old Germany. All kinds of fancy cakes, great supplies of candy and lighted candles make it the great festival of the children. While modern religious revolution may be against medicine, this old conservative people hold firmly to the patent medicine bottle and the doctor seems to be the patron saint.

It is said that some of their physical shortcomings are due now to the fact that intermarriages are tending to weaken the stock of what was once a sturdy race. They have lived aloof from the world around them and of necessity their marriages, which largely are "arranged," as in the old country, by the parents and religious advisers, have been among themselves.

Though this sort of life seems to be monotonous it is surprising to see the hold that the older people have on their offspring. Few of them break away from the stiff poke bonnets that the girls get in infancy; few seem to long for their "graven images" being struck off by the photograph man, and all seem to be very well satisfied with the hooks and eyes, three good meals a day and the peaceful life. There now seems to be no great tendency shown on the part of the young of these people to get into the strenuous life, though when there was a break a few years ago and a crowd of young men at Berne did lay aside their cloaks of seclusion and clipped one another's hair they were almost suffocated by the harvest that fell around the shingling chair and that nearly filled up the room.

Saratov.—The police [illegible] M. Kutanganoff, a member [illegible] parliament. Letters [illegible] scribe the privations of [illegible] telegraphers, railroad [illegible] logical scholars [illegible] They say they are [illegible] $1 for living expenses and [illegible] the clothing of the [illegible] their shoes destroyed [illegible] famishing.

AWFUL PSORIASIS 35 [illegible]

Terrible Scaly Humor in [illegible] Over Body—Skin Cracked [illegible] Bleeding—Cured by Cuticura

"I was afflicted with [illegible] five years. It was [illegible] body. I used [illegible] Soap, six boxes [illegible] tles of Resolvent. In [illegible] completely cured, and I [illegible] ly, as it was about five [illegible] psoriasis first made its [illegible] spots, generally forming [illegible] in the centre a spot about [illegible] silver dollar of sound flesh. [illegible] time the affected circle was [illegible] heavy dry scale of white [illegible] ance, and would gradually [illegible] remove the entire scales by using oil to soften them [illegible] be perfectly raw, and a slight bloody substance would ooze [illegible] scaly crust would form again [illegible] four hours. It was worse on my limbs, although it was in spots my body, also on my scalp. [illegible] scales remain too long without by bath or otherwise, the [illegible] crack and bleed. I suffered [illegible] ing, worse at nights after [illegible] in bed, or blood warm by [illegible] it would be almost unbearable. Chidester, Hutchinson, Kan., Apr. [illegible]

Give the Baby a Chance.

Love isn't a sickening succession. Love is firm. Love has good, red blood in its veins. Looking ever to the ultimate its object, love frequently causes suffering and anguish of spirit.

And I tell you what, my dear madam: Some day, for his bad temper, impudence, you are going to spank that child you are now under hearted to let cry. You will just as sure as you are born you won't slap him in love. If you do not want to submit to it, [illegible] Think of the shame of it, going to beat the child for qualities that you yourself gave him. You are going to punish in anger, thereby making [illegible] sion that your mean, petty nature has not enough moral force which to rule him. Shame!

Give the baby a chance for a healthy brain and nerves. Do you realize that his brain grows more during his first year than his others years combined? By means don't ever play with your baby his first year, or let anyone else play with him. "Kitchee-coo" to the visitor. "Oh, oo sweet, pretty dear!" And poor baby may have a pain in the ribs and tossed up and down. Very bad. Baby may laugh and grow; but by and by comes the inevitable wail and [illegible] to tell of the overstimulated brain and the severe tax on the delicate system.—Outing Magazine.

A Great Lumber Co[illegible]

The lumber interests of Maine are enormous, notwithstanding the ravages of fire and the lumbermen. In the district of the Kennebec system alone the forest crop estimates nearly seven billion feet of spruce, besides hundreds of millions of pine and nearly two billion hemlock. The fertility of the soil, moisture, very rapidly producing [illegible] The spruce accessible to [illegible] tion having been somewhat [illegible] the poplar is being drawn upon. The poplar land quickly recovers by sprouts and grows [illegible] Along the line of the railroad [illegible] seen many poplar lands [illegible] placing these. Spruce [illegible] burned over, also reseeds [illegible] well, and burned areas, if [illegible] too deep, are soon covered [illegible] growth.

HOW MANY OF [illegible]

Fail to Select Food Nature to Ward Off Ailments.

A Ky. lady, speaking [illegible] says: "I was accustomed [illegible] all kinds of ordinary food [illegible] some reason, indigestion [illegible] prostration set in.

"After I had run down [illegible] my attention was called to [illegible] sity of some change in my [illegible] discontinued my ordinary [illegible] and began using Grape-Nuts [illegible] good quantity of rich cream [illegible]

"In a few days I [illegible] changed in a remarkable [illegible] began to have a strength [illegible] never been possessed [illegible] vigor of body and a [illegible] that amazed me. It was [illegible] in my experience.

"My former attacks of [illegible] had been accompanied by [illegible] and many times my [illegible] distressing with blind [illegible] ness, rush of blood to the [illegible] neuralgic pains in the [illegible]

"Since using Grape-Nuts [illegible] breakfast I have been free [illegible] troubles, except at times [illegible] indulged in rich, [illegible] quantity, then I would [illegible] a pain under the left [illegible] and unless I heeded the [illegible] old trouble would [illegible] when I finally got to [illegible] these troubles originated [illegible] to my Grape-Nuts and [illegible] pain and disturbance left [illegible] ly.

"I am now in prime [illegible] result of my use of [illegible] Name given by Postum [illegible] Creek, Mich.

TOP, W[illegible]

CONSIDER THE [illegible]

L-IMPORTAN[illegible]

FACT

[illegible] addressing Mrs. Pinkham your private ills to a woman whose experience with [illegible] esses covers twenty-five years, [illegible] present Mrs. Pinkham is [illegible] law of Lydia E. Pinkham, many years under her direction, [illegible] her decease has advised [illegible] from to sick women.

[illegible] women suffer in silence and [illegible] it to worse, know as well as [illegible] have immediate assistance, [illegible] impels them to submit to [illegible] to the questions and profit [illegible] their family physician. It [illegible] money or price [illegible] knowledge from actual experience

Pinkham's Standing In[illegible]

[illegible] suffering from any form of [illegible] invited to promptly communicate [illegible] at Lynn, Mass. All letters [illegible] read and answered by [illegible] can freely talk of her private [illegible] thus has been established [illegible] ce between Mrs. Pinkham and [illegible] rice which has never been [illegible] vast volume of experience [illegible] draw from, it is more than [illegible] has gained the very knowledge [illegible] help your case. She asks [illegible] return except your good-will, [illegible] ice has relieved thousands. [illegible] man, rich or poor, is very foolish [illegible] not take advantage of this [illegible] fer of assistance.—Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass.

[illegible] owing we publish two letters [illegible] om a woman who accepted [illegible] his invitation. Note the [illegible]

[illegible] letter.

[illegible] Pinkham:—

[illegible] ight years I have suffered something every month. The pains are excruciating and I can hardly stand them. Many days I have a severe female trouble [illegible] go through an operation if I can [illegible] it. I do not want to submit to it if [illegible] ibly help it. Please tell me what [illegible] I hope you can relieve me."—Mrs. [illegible] mmick, 59th and E. Capitol Streets, [illegible] ton, D. C.

[illegible] d letter.

[illegible] n. Pinkham:—

[illegible] r following carefully your advice [illegible] ing Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable [illegible] d, I am very anxious to send you [illegible] monial, that others may know the [illegible] d what you have done for me.

Winte[illegible] CAU[illegible] AND [illegible]

A BOTTLE [illegible] ALL BREAK[illegible]

Has been a st[illegible] Pleasant to take [illegible] for children. [illegible] and $1 bottles. [illegible] sale [illegible]

YOUR CHILLS [illegible] ARTHUR PETE[illegible]

As They Understand.

Edith, five years old, [illegible] resentment when her elder [illegible] became the wife of an elig[illegible] man and left the parental roof [illegible] in another city. Some time [illegible] he marriage she was taken [illegible] he bride in her new home [illegible] s a flat in a somewhat crowded [illegible] idential section. Here she [illegible] a conversation about an [illegible] nce of her sister's who had [illegible] divorce. Her infantile mind [illegible] g the fact that a divorce was [illegible] ing that separated husband [illegible] e, and left the latter free to [illegible] her parents, conceived an idea [illegible] ed by grief and anger over the [illegible] her beloved sister. Sudden[illegible] ke up:

[illegible] er Carrie, why don't you get [illegible] ? Then you could come home [illegible]

[illegible], I have no grounds," mild[illegible] the sister, amazed and [illegible] nothing else to say just then [illegible] t's so," replied the [illegible] ter thoughtfully, at the same [illegible] ooking out of a rear window [illegible] aven't got any ground at [illegible] ut do you have to have a [illegible] o get a divorce in?"—Albany [illegible]

[illegible] has by no means made [illegible] sels obsolete. The total [illegible] them in the world is still [illegible] against only 30,561 steamers.

[illegible] ICK FOR TEN YEARS.

[illegible] at Backache, Dropsy, and [illegible] were Bladder Trouble.

[illegible] W. Harris, of Chestnut [illegible] on, Ohio, says: "For over [illegible] suffered from kidney disease. The third year [illegible] feet and hands would [illegible] swell and remain [illegible] puffed up for days at [illegible] a time. I seemed to [illegible] have a constant back[illegible] ache. Finally I got so [illegible] bad that I was laid up [illegible] in bed with several [illegible] doctors in attendance. [illegible] I thought surely I [illegible] die. I changed medicine and [illegible] using Doan's Kidney Pills. [illegible] I was still in bed. The relief [illegible] was so great that I kept on [illegible] I had taken about ten boxes [illegible] idney secretions became natural [illegible] er years of misery I was cured, [illegible] increased in weight and [illegible] ymptoms of my former trouble [illegible] by all dealers. 50 cents [illegible] Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo.

TOP, WOMAN!

CONSIDER THE

L-IMPORTANT

FACT

...addressing Mrs. Pinkham you ... ills to woman ... experience with wo... twenty-five years. ... Pinkham is the ... of Lydia E. Pinkham, ... her direction, ... advice has been ... silence and drift along ... well that they ... a mistake, but a natural ... from exposing them... and probable examinations ... physician. It is unnecessary, ... you can consult a woman ... from actual experience is great.

Pinkham's Standing Invitation:

...suffering from any form of female weak... promptly communicate with Mrs. ... Mass. All letters are received, ... and answered by women only. A ... talk of her private illness to a ... has been established the eternal ... Mrs Pinkham and the women ... which has never been broken. Out ... volume of experience which she ... from, it is more than possible ... gained the very knowledge ... your case. She asks noth... except your good-will, and ... relieved thousands. Surely ... rich or poor, is very foolish if ... take advantage of this gen... assistance.—Lydia E. Pink... Co., Lynn, Mass.

...wing we publish two let... a woman who accep... this invitation. Note the ...

...letter.

...Pinkham:—

...eight years I have suffered something ... every month. The pains are excru... and I can hardly stand them. My ... I have a severe female trouble, ... through an operation if I want ... I do not want to submit to it if ... help it. Please tell me what ... you can relieve me."—Mrs. ... 50th and E. Capitol Streets, ...ton, D. C.

...d letter.

...Pinkham:—

...following carefully your advice, ...g Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable ... I am very anxious to send you ...al that others may know their ... what you have done for me.

"As you know, I wrote you that my doctor said I must have an operation or I could not live. I then wrote you, telling you my ailments. I followed your advice and am entirely well. I can walk miles without an ache or a pain, and I owe my life to you and to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I wish every suffering woman would read this testimonial and realize the value of writing to you and your remedy."—Mrs. Mary Dimmick, 50th and E. Capitol Streets, Washington, D. C.

When a medicine has been successful in restoring to health so many women whose testimony is so unquestionable, you cannot well say, without trying it, "I do not believe it will help me." If you are ill, don't hesitate to get a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound at once, and write Mrs Pinkham, Lynn, Mass., for special advice—it is free and always helpful.

Wintersmith's CHILL TONIC

CURES CHILLS

AND ALL MALARIAL FEVERS.

Has been a standard household remedy for over 40 years. Pleasant to take; leaves no bad effects like quinine; harmless for children. Guaranteed by all druggists. Put up in 50c and $1 bottles. Sent express paid on receipt of price, if not on sale at the home drug store. Address

ARTHUR PETER & CO., General Agents. Louisville, Ky.

A BOTTLE WILL BREAK YOUR CHILLS

As They Understand.

...Edith, five years old, felt ... resentment when her elder ... became the wife of an eligible ... man and left the parental roof ... in another city. Some time ... the marriage she was taken to ... the bride in her new home, ... a flat in a somewhat crowd... residential section. Here she ov... a conversation about an ac... of her sister's who had ... Her infantile mind, ... the fact that a divorce was ... that separated husband ... and left the latter free to re... other patients, conceived an idea ... by grief and anger over the ... her beloved sister. Suddenly ...

"...tarnie, why don't you get a ... Then you could come home ...

"...I have no grounds," mildly ... sister, amazed and think... ...ering case to say just then. ... replied the terrible ... thoughtfully, at the same ... out of a rear window. ... got any ground at all ... do you have to have a back ... get a divorce in?"—Albany ...

Dude "Sportsmen."

"A good many things have occurred of late years to depress the true sportsman," observed a true sportsman who has just returned from what are called the wilds for want of a better name. "In the first place, fashionable society, with all that means, has invaded most of the old haunts. You go out in order to get away from the collars and cuffs and the starched and pressed abominations of civilization and find yourself surrounded by dudes in dinner coats. And if you don't conform to the proprieties you have to eat at the third tables and keep off the front porches of the enormous hotels that have sprung up in a night. In the second place, the interest of every other man you meet in the woods or on the lakes is centered in full bags and overflowing creels. They'll chloroform game nowadays to get it and use scoop-nets and snares on trout. Up in the region I've been visiting nobody was fishing with flies and light rods. A majority of them had tautog tackle and seemed to be proud of it. But the most discouraging feature of the whole business," he added after a moment's pause, "is the incredulity of the home guard. There's been so much senseless and inexcusable exaggeration that a person who sticks to the truth can't get a respectful audience when he lands back in town. I've reached a pass where I won't say a word about my luck and adventures. If I'm asked what I shot or caught, I say 'nothing.' I'd rather do that than be made to feel that nobody is believing the stories I'm telling."—Providence Journal.

Diving For a Wife.

In many of the Greek islands diving for sponges forms a considerable part of the occupation of the inhabitants. The natives make it a trade to gather these, and their income from this source is far from contemptible.

In one of the islands a girl is not permitted to marry until she has brought up a certain number of sponges and given proof of her skill by taking them from a certain depth; but in some of the islands this custom is reversed. The father of a marriageable daughter bestows her on the best diver among her suitors. He who can stay longest in the water and bring up the biggest cargo of sponges marries the maid.—London World.

A gale blowing 80 miles an hour exerts a pressure of nearly 32 pounds to the square inch.

The Age of Lead.

We are wont to speak of this era as the "age of iron," and there is no gainsaying that, industrially speaking, iron is a "precious metal."

Nevertheless, few people realize how useful, if not absolutely necessary, to modern civilization, is that other metal, lead. Soft, yielding, pliable, it is not much like its sister metal, but those distinguishing qualities are what give it such a prominent place in the arts and industries.

Modern plumbing, requiring many turnings and twistings, but withal tight joints, would be almost impossible without lead pipe. The greatest civilizing agent in the world—the printing art—is absolutely dependent on lead. Hand-set type, linotype "slugs," monotype type—all are made of compositions of which lead is the chief component—to say nothing of the bearings in the presses as well as all other kinds of machinery in which "babbitt" metal is used.

Solder is another lead product—what a field of usefulness that one form opens up.

Then there is the most important use of all to which lead is put—paint, that necessary material which keeps our houses looking pretty—inside and out—and preserves them from decay.

How many of us thank metalic lead for the comforts of paint? Yet the best house paint is nothing but metalic lead corroded by acid to a white powder known as "white lead." Of course, there are many imitations of "white lead," some of which are sold as white lead and some which are offered by the name of ready-prepared paint under the familiar pretense that they are "just as good" as white lead. But all good paint is made of the metal, lead, corroded and ground to a fine white powder and mixed with linseed oil.

White lead is also used in the coating of fine oil cloths and for many purposes besides paint.

"Red lead" is another product of metalic lead and is what is known as an oxide of lead, being produced by burning the metal. Red lead is the best paint known to preserve iron, steel or tin, and is used largely in painting metal structures, such as skyscraper skeletons, mills and bridges.

There are many other products of the metal lead, such as litharge, orange mineral, etc., which are essential to many of the arts in which we never imagine that lead would be of the least use.

Verily, we live in an age of lead as well as of iron.

Condemned to Slavery.

Two hundred years ago, when men and women were condemned to death for trivial offences, it was the custom in Scotland to commute the death sentence into perpetual servitude to specified masters—in other words, the condemned person became a slave. It was further ordained that he should wear a metal collar round his neck recording his sentence and punishment.

The society of Scottish Antiquaries owns one of these collars, fished out of the Forth above Alloa. It is of brass, with this inscription: "Alexander Stewart, found guilty of death for theft at Perth, 5th December, 1701, and gifted by the Justiciars as a perpetual servant to Sir John Aresken of Alva."—Collectors' Magazine.

TYNER'S DYSPEPSIA REMEDY.

A Guaranteed Cure—Many Have Dyspepsia and Don't Know It.

If you suffer from Dyspepsia or Indigestion in any form, such as gas, belching, bitter taste, offensive spells, sour stomach breath, dizzy ach, heart flutter, nausea, gastritis, loathing of food, pains or swellings in the stomach, back or side, deep-seated kidney or liver troubles, then they will disappear in a short time after taking Tyner's Dyspepsia Remedy, made especially to cure Dyspepsia, Indigestion and all Stomach Troubles, even of the worst cases. Tyner's Dyspepsia Remedy expels the gases and sweetens the breath. It cures Sick Headache, Colic and Constipation at once. Druggists or by express 50 cents a bottle. Money refunded if it fails to cure. Medical advice and circular free by writing to Tyner Remedy Co., Augusta, Ga.

Just a Few Remarks.

It is hard on a man after being bankrupted by courtship to find marriage a failure.

A lady can bridge over a gap in the conversation with an arch smile.

The trouble with servants is, some of them take on so and some take off so.

Knowing what men are, one might think that the woman who drives a man to drink would be exceedingly popular.—Boston Transcript.

The only venomous bird known is the "death bird" of New Guinea. The bite of this bird causes intense pain in every part of the body, loss of sight, convulsions, and finally death.

A few mo' merlasses kin be dreened even outen er empty kaig.

How to Win Her.

Elmer House, who is an authority lays down these rules for lovers:

1—Don't try to create a monopoly. Give the other fellows all the rope they want, but insist on being "it."

2—If you have a keen rival, give him five nights in the week if he wants them, but never take the siding for him. Ask for but little, but insist upon getting it, and if you don't get it, jump the game.

3—Let the girl do most of the chasing. She likes to do it, and will like you all the better if you force her to tag. Also, you will like her better. If she won't chase, there's nothing doing for you, anyway.

4—Don't show jealousy of anybody. Be especially indifferent to the fellow who is giving you the hardest race. Never for a minute assume that anybody can beat you out.

5—Don't be a hypocrite. Don't give up anything for the girl's sake that you wouldn't give up for the sake of your own self-respect.

